CANON WHO QUIT DOPE MEET DIES

Rev. W. H. Bliss of Seattle Passes of Heart Ill in New York Hospital

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Canon W. H. Bliss, of Seattle, who was among the American clergymen bolting the recent narcotic conference at Geneva, died early tonight at St. Luke's Hospital of endocarditis and complications. He was stricken while en route home from Europe late last month and entered St. Luke's upon his arrival here, but small hope was held out from the first for his recovery.

Canon Bliss returned with the American delegation headed by Bishop Charles F. Brent of Buffalo, which quit the conference, composed of the eight nations in which opium smoking is temporarily allowed under the Hague Convention, after the conferees had reached an agreement which the American delegates declared was a travesty and a "degradation of the very principle of international compacts."

Canon Bliss was removed from the United States liner Leviathan in an ambulance on December 21, and Mrs. Bliss, who was with him when the end came tonight, was sent for. A blood transfusion operation was performed early in January and for a time thereafter the patient rallied, but secondary anemia and kidney complications, which later made inadvisable further blood transfusions, combined with the heart affliction, caused his death. He was 49 years of age.

SAVINGS GO FOR BONDS

Working Classes Now Investors

Speculation Feature Absent in Recent Phenomenal Stock-Market Boom

Holdings in Industries Being Distributed Among Small Income Earners

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The character of the stock-market boom that has developed since the Presidential election is regarded by economic authorities as the most extraordinary financial phenomenon in our history.

The fact that there was no profit taking during the first two months of the boom on a scale sufficient to produce a general setback is accepted as an indication that the bulk of the public buying has been for investment rather than speculative.

Never before has there appeared to be so enormous a volume of savings seeking investment. Specially significant are the indications that the investment of wage earners are growing by leaps and bounds. The workers are buying corporation stocks with savings increased by the higher wages prevailing during and since the war, and according to some commentors, still further increased by the radical reduction of the expenditures on drink by the workingmen under the prohibition regime.

WAGES INVESTED

Wage earners are now receiving a rapidly increasing percentage of the total volume of dividends paid out annually, while the percentage of dividends received by the rich is decreasing. Herein is noted a trend of corporation ownership from the rich few to the many of meager means, a trend denoting an economic revolution, thinks Prof. T. N. Carver, head of the economics department of Harvard University.

"The only economic revolution anywhere in the world that amounts to a hill of beans," he says, "is taking place in this country right now."

Members of the Federal Reserve Board are inclined to believe that the United States may now be entering upon an era of investment by persons of small means that will bring about very striking shifts in the ownership of the great corporations during the next few years.

It was expected by the board

HOUSE PASSES DEBT BILL

COOLIDGE SAYS AMERICAN PAPERS BEST IN WORLD

Urges Editors to Continue Their Appeals to Ideals of People; Commercialism Not Feared

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The pathway to success in American journalism lies in the avoidance of propaganda, the separation of news policies from business motives and continued appeal to the idealism of the American people, President Coolidge declared tonight in speaking to the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Avoiding for the most part reference to governmental problems, Mr. Coolidge "talked shop" with the editors, speaking from the viewpoint of one not in the newspaper business as was his predecessor, but as one who has watched the growth and development of the American press. This growth, he declared, had given the United States "the best newspapers in the world."

HAS NO FEARS

Mr. Coolidge made it plain that he entertained no fears as to the influences of what is sometimes called a "capitalistic press."

"Some people feel concerned about the commercialism of the press," he said. "They note that great newspapers are great business enterprises earning large profits and controlled by men of wealth. So they fear that in such control the press may tend to support the private interests of those who own the papers, rather than the general interest of the whole people. It seems to me, however, that the real test is not whether the newspapers are controlled by men of wealth, but whether they are sincerely trying to serve the public interests. There will be little occasion to worry about who owns a newspaper so long as its attitudes on public questions are such as to promote the general welfare. A press which is actuated by the purpose of genuine usefulness to the public interest can never be strong financially so long as its strength is used for the support of popular government."

Advising the editors as to their greatest opportunity for aiding the government, the President said he unhesitatingly placed it in the direction of keeping alive American idealism.

"It is only those who do not understand our people, who believe that our national life is entirely absorbed by material motives," he added. "We make no concealment of the fact that we want wealth, but there are many other things that we want very much more. We want peace and honor and that charity which is so strong an element of all civilization. The chief ideal of the American people is idealism. I cannot repeat too often that America is a nation of idealists. That is the only motive to which they ever give any strong and lasting reaction. No newspaper can be a success which fails to appeal to that element of our national life. It is in this direction that the public press can lend its strongest support to our government.

"The public press under an autocracy is necessarily a true agency of propaganda," he continued. "Under a free government it must be the very reverse. Propaganda seeks to present a part of the facts to distort their relations and to force conclusions which could not be drawn from a complete and candid survey of all the facts.

FACE DIFFICULTIES

"This has become one of the dangers of the present day. The great difficulty in combatting unfair propaganda, or even in recognizing it arising from the fact that at the present time we confront so many new and technical problems that it is an enormous task to keep ourselves accurately informed concerning them. In this respect you gentlemen of the press

MEXICO PLANS SEA-AIR LINE

Will Use Fleet of Twenty Dirigibles to Carry Mail and Passengers to London

BY JACK STARR-HUNT
[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 17.—A fleet of twenty gigantic dirigibles of the latest type are to be placed in trans-Atlantic air mail and passenger service with London as the eastern terminus and Mexico City as the western terminus, according to a report received by the government today from the Mexican Consul at Boston.

The report is widely published in local newspapers. It declares that the great airships in this service will be modeled after the dirigible Los Angeles and will operate on regular schedule with Los Angeles as one of the airports at which they will touch.

Other cities on this air line will be Boston and San Francisco, the report says. The project is being financed, according to the report, by a group of Boston capitalists who have already formed a $50,000,000 company to promote the line.

Each of the great ships will have a carrying capacity of from 100 to 150 passengers and eight tons of freight. They will be equipped in the fashion of the great trans-Atlantic liners and will follow a regular route in their flight.

The report was received from the Mexican Consul at Boston by the Department of Industry, Commerce and Labor. It has not been verified and government officials are awaiting further word from the Consul.

The report is taken seriously in government circles as the flight across the Atlantic of the dirigible ZR-3, now the Los Angeles, has demonstrated the feasibility of such a service.

WILD PITCH SAVES GEMS FROM OCEAN

Man Arrested on Liner Attempts to Hurl Jewels Into Sea; Aim Poor

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

HAVRE (France) Jan. 17.—Poor control by an asserted thief in missing an open porthole with a wild pitch of a small jewel case is the only reason why 300,000 francs worth of jewelry is now resting snugly in the safe of the Havre Chief of Police instead of lying at the bottom of the harbor.

A few minutes previous to the "all ashore" cry sounded on board the liner Paris as she was about to sail for New York today, detectives rushed into the cabin occupied by a Mexican calling himself Beromen and a Frenchman sailing under the name of Quarante. Emphasizing the order with drawn revolvers the detectives shouted "hands up!" Both men obeyed but Beromen's movement was only a wind-up preparatory to flinging out of the porthole the case he held in his hand.

The jewel receptacle struck the side of the cabin and was recovered by the police who say it held jewels stolen from the Princess De Broglieb in Paris some days ago which the alleged thieves intended to sell in the United States.

LOSS TOTAL IN TIA JUANA FIRE $50,000

Six Buildings Destroyed, One Revenue Office; Home of Governor in Danger

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 17.—Fire of undetermined origin tonight destroyed six buildings in Tia Juana, Lower California. One of them was the Mexican government's revenue office. The Governor's residence was threatened before the flames were put out. All of the buildings were comparatively new, having been built to replace structures destroyed by fire abkout a year ago.

The loss was estimated at about $50,000.

KIN TO AID JAZZ GIRL

Father, Brother Visit Cell

Man Who Denounced Her Says Spirit of Mother Urged Reconciliation

Relative's Kindness Causes Murderer to Break Down; Calm at Inquest

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—Dorothy Ellingson's father and brother have at last gone to her aid. This afternoon, after four days of bitterly expressed hatred for the girl who shot her mother dead, the two men went to her cell and there, in one of the most dramatic scenes that has ever taken place in the city prison, took Dorothy back into their hearts.

"Last night," the brother whispered, "she came to me—mother came to me. I know it was she, Dorothy, and she told me to stand by you. It was mother's message to me."

And Dorothy, for three nerve-racking days a marvel of stoicism, broke down utterly. Gone was the hard child of the night; her's was nothing but a grief-stricken, terrified youngster, sobbing bitterly at the feet of the brother who had at last taken her back.

Policewoman Kathlyn Sullivan—she had seen heart-tearing scenes in her days on the force—cried with Dorothy in her long-delayed moment of forgiveness and family love.

"I've never seen a more touching scene," said the policewoman later.

The reconciliation came in early afternoon, after Dorothy had gone through the most severe trial that has come to her since her arrest early Thursday morning—the Coroner's inquest into the death of her mother.

CALM UNDER TRIAL

Before hundreds of staring eyes she had to sit through all the horribly cold testimony, telling in detail of her crime. She had to listen while they read her own statement of how she took her brother's gun and shot her mother dead; she had to sit there while on the screen were flashed the sickening pictures of the scene in the Ellingson flat—of the dead mother; she had to stand up there before all that throng so that detectives might compare her height with her slain mother's.

Through it all she went bravely. An occasional muffled sob and an almost continuous trickle of tears the only outward evidence of the strain she was undergoing.

At the close of it, she was near collapse. She leaned heavily on the arm of Policewoman Sullivan as she went back to her cell. There was no ray of light for her—even her brother there at the inquest, and her father, had taken the stand and bitterly denounced her as a jazz-mad thing who had for no conceivable reason slain her mother.

PRAYER ANSWERED

And then there was the step of her brother at her cell door. Dorothy did not "know that at the inquest," the brother, Earl had gone to Mrs. Sullivan and said:

"I'm coming up to see Dorothy afterward."

Nor did the brother know that all the night before, at intervals, Dorothy had prayed aloud:

"Oh, brother, please come to me."

He came. Before the girl's tear-swollen eyes he stood, unsmiling.

"Dorothy, it's a terrible thing you've done," he began. The girl hung her head—she expected another tirade like that last Thursday. Then he went on—

"—but all last night, she was with me. I know it was mother. She wants me to stand by you. It's her message to me. So now, little sister, here I am, just your own brother again. And we're going to do everything we can for you—father and I."

A moment Dorothy hesitated, as

CITY BOARD CRITICISED

Aqueduct Report to Governor

Owens Valley Stand in Water Dispute is Upheld by State Engineer

Recommends Neutral Agency to Sift Controversy; Hints Bad Faith

BY KYLE D. PALMER
"Times" Staff Correspondent

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 17.—Strong criticism of the policy of the Board of Public Service Commissioners of Los Angeles in its treatment of the ranchers and landowners in the Owens Valley and a recommendation that some "neutral agency" make further examination of the Aqueduct controversy is made by State Engineer W. F. McClure in an official report handed to Gov. Richardson today.

Finding that "the people of Owens Valley have a real grievance against the city of Los Angeles," McClure explains, "it is to be understood that reference is made to the Public Service Commission representing the city, and not, of course, to the city at large."

The State Engineer's report is based on an extensive investigation requested by Gov. Richardson following the action of Owens Valley residents in first dynamiting part of the Aqueduct and later opening the Alabama Hills waste gates of the Los Angeles Aqueduct last November. The report comprises more than 200 typewritten pages and covers all phases of the situation.

DEFENDS RESIDENTS

"The people of the valley," comments McClure, "are not anarchists, criminals or thieves, as has been stated, but, on the contrary, are ordinary, industrious American citizens."

Speculating on the possible action to be taken by Los Angeles against those who opened the gates, McClure asserts that inasmuch as he believes the action of the ranchers was extremely popular in Owens Valley, all persons connected with the affair would take part in the defense of those specifically accused.

"If 100 or more men came before the presiding judge," he comments, "and confessed to participation in the act and they were all given prison sentences at once, it is interesting to anticipate what might be the net result affecting the city.

"With over 200 miles of conduit in desert, uninhabited country, a whole community antagonistic—some injury occasioned in May last to the Aqueduct by explosion—the opening of waste gates in November—both acts in protest against the policy of the city—what may come next?

LOSS OF CONFIDENCE

"No penalty that may be imposed upon any two men or upon any 200 men can in any way compensate the city for the loss of confidence and friendship of the people of the valley. If harsh measures be resorted to by the city, then may we not anticipate a backwash of action of such character that would occasion some substantial inconvenience to the city.

"The opening of the gates was a most popular move, if we are to gauge it by the number of valley people who visited the place during the four days the gates were open."

Inquiring "Is it consistent upon the part of the city to refuse the proposal of the valley to refer their differences to a neutral tribunal?" Engineer McClure seems to imply an act of bad faith on the part of W. B. Mathews, special counsel for the Board of Public Service Commissioners, in connection with the organization of an irrigation district in 1923.

ACTIONS CRITICISED

The district was [illegible] with the encouragement [illegible] Mathews, asserts McClure, who [illegible]

DUKE STOPS SHIP BATTLE

Black Eyes Are Distributed in Wine Party on Steamer Olympic Bearing Nobles

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—The Olympic arrived today with Grand Duke Boris of Russia and as fine a crop of black eyes as was ever brought into this port in the first cabin of a first-class ocean liner. Between Boris and the shiners decorating the features of two of the passengers there is a decided connection. In the episode of the darkened orbs Boris acted as peacemaker.

It all occurred at a little party on the high seas given in honor of the grand duke and the grand duchess on the eve of the Russian new year, which fell on the 13th inst. There were forty guests, including George Gordon Battle, New York attorney, who retired early.

Titles were forgotten in the freely flowing champagne. One male guest slapped the grand duchess on her back (she wore a stunning decollette gown of nile green) and called her "Dutchy." The women in the party mounted the long dinning table and danced what was described as a "cross between the can-can and the fandango."

A Polish prince—the ship was fairly crowded with nobility—obliged with a violin solo. At the end of the piece, he was greeted with boos and hisses, and the remark that nothing better could be expected from a Pole.

The men had all been imbibing liberally and several were in an ugly mood. The women retired. Some one suggested a toast to Boris, and it was drunk standing.

Another toast was proposed to William K. Halligan, a vaudeville actor and member of the Friars'

Petitions Seek to Prevent City From Renting Ocean Frontage

To prevent the city from ever leasing any of its ocean frontage to private individuals for private gain is the purpose of an initiative ordinance petitions for which were placed in circulation yesterday by Attorneys Arthur W. Eckman and William B. Himrod, and John Steele, petition circulator. Steele said that the ordinance which will be placed on the ballot, probably the May primaries, will "save to the city for all time the bathing-beach frontage now owned or which may be acquired in the future." The ordinance would prevent the leasing, for example, of the mile of ocean frontage between Playa Del Rey and Manhattan Beach, which the Council was preparing to lease last year to Titus Alexander for a recreation beach for colored people, when halted by a court injunction. The city also owns bathing beach frontage near Point Firmin and adjoining Santa Monica.

BRITISHERS PLAN REUNION

The British Adventurers' Club has arranged a reunion for British men and women in the Southland at room 376, 212 South Spring street, tonight. The organization has more than 100 members, including British subjects in all parts of California.

"BILLY" MOORE IS RETIRED

Patrolman With Thirty Years' Service Completes Active Career; Distinguished Record

"Billy" Moore retired from the police department yesterday. At exactly 6 o'clock at night thirty years ago yesterday, Capt. W. C. Roberts, who was at that time the only captain on the force, pinned "Billy's" first "cauliflower" on his uniform.

For the last twenty-one years Moore has been a member of the personnel of the Detective Bureau. During that period, besides working as an active member of the bureau at all times, he performed the arduous and important duty of instructor to many new men who were then above him in rank on paper. And yet, due to a mystery that his fellow-workers were never able to solve, "Billy" left as he had arrived, a patrolman in salary.

When Moore was appointed, January 16, 1895, the detective force consisted of but six men. He was for sometime in charge of a temporary jail at New High and Alpine streets, as a result of the present City Jail then being overcrowded with vagrants. Following this duty he was given a beat in what was then the "toughest" part of the city, a district north of First street, now known as Sonora town.

After nine years duty on the streets, "Billy" was promoted to work out of the Detective Bureau as a plain clothes man. Two years after his promotion, the police records show, Moore with his partner, Frank Carroll, now long since retired, made 1500 arrests on charges ranging from vagrancy to murder. This was and is still a record which has seldom been broken by any team of detectives, police records show.

Moore was considered by such men as Inspector of Detectives Moffatt, the oldest member of the Detective Bureau, as one of the most successful men with juvenile criminals. At the present time, according to Capt. Moffatt, Moore numbers a score of local families as his friends as a result of his having placed some member of those families on the right path. During his entire time with the police department the records show that he was never "called on the carpet." For the last five years Moore has been a member of the pawnshop detail in the Detective Bureau.

Moore states that he will sojourn from now on, on his ranch not far from the city.

RISE IN PAY GIVEN CITY EMPLOYEES

Increase for 202 Totals $80,000 Per Year; Fire Officers Named

Increases in pay of 202 city employees out of 15,000 amounting to $80,000 a year were authorized by City Council yesterday.

Included in those who will receive boosts in pay are 179 fire lieutenants and captains, whose pay is raised to $225 a month; Assistant City Attorney Whitehead, who will receive $500 a month, Assistant City Attorneys Green and Leach, $475 each; Chief Building Inspector Backus, $500 a month; Minute Clerk Carroll to $400 a month.

Councilman Allan declared the list as recommended ignored many worthy cases, while Councilman Mallard and President Workman urged that all increases be held up until the budget for the next fiscal year is adopted in May. Workman said that, in his opinion, the pay of fire lieutenants and captains should be adjusted at once.

Charles Treat Cross-Examined in Malibu Suit

Charles H. Treat, former chairman of the Los Angeles Board of Public Works, was subjected to a cross-examination during both sessions yesterday of the trial of the suit brought by the county to condemn a State highway right of way through the Malibu ranch, north of Santa Monica.

Treat, summoned as a witness for the Marblehead Land Company, owners of the ranch, said his estimate of the value of the 182 acres the county is seeking was in excess of $2,000,000. Treat based his estimate on the asserted fact that a great part of the land sought occupies a strategic position in the possible future development of Los Angeles.

The trial will be resumed before Judge Frederick H. Valentine Monday morning.

Last Rites for Mrs. Hindman Set for Monday

Funeral services for Mrs. Tollie M. Hindman, widow of the late William H. Hindman, will be conducted Monday at 2 p.m. from the Ruppe Mortuary, 842 South Figueroa street.

Mrs. Hindman died early yesterday morning at the home of her sister, Mrs. Callie M. Davis, 4724 South Figueroa street. She was 75 years of age, and had lived in this city for the last ten years. Her husband was at one time a member of the Oregon State Legislature. Besides Mrs. Davis she leaves a sister, Mrs. J. W. Bradbury of Baker City, Or.; a brother, D. D. Mounts of this city, and two stepsons, Jessie and W. W. Hindman. The body will be placed in the Inglewood Mausoleum.

BEATEN, ARRESTED

Summary Punishment by Father on Man Charged with Attack

Physical chastisement and arrest were visited yesterday upon H. M. Oswald of 268 South Verdugo Road, Burbank, said to be a photographer at Universal City, by Grover C. Swarts of 837 Frederick street, Burbank, according to the Burbank police. Oswald was arraigned before Recorder Crawford at Burbank and released in $2000 bail for appearance in Superior Court the 29th inst. Swarts charged Oswald, the police said, with an offense against his daughter.

The offense is asserted to have taken place Thursday. Yesterday morning, the Burbank officers declared, Swarts gave Oswald a severe beating and then placed him under arrest and turned him over to the police.

FREED OF SLAYING CHARGE

Manslaughter charges against Clifton Collier were dismissed yesterday by Judge Hardy of the Superior Court at the request of the District Attorney's office. Collier ran down and killed D. D. Brown on April 30, last, at Thirtieth street and Santa Fe avenue. Brown had just stepped from a street car when Collier's machine crashed into him.

CITY BODIES ASK AID FOR VAN NORMAN

Engineer's Request for More Employees to Allot Street Fund Approved

A special staff of engineers and assistants to be added to the staff of City Engineer Van Norman to prepare plans showing how best the $5,000,000 street bond issue, authorized at the November 4 election, may be allocated, will be asked in a resolution to be presented to the City Council next Monday.

This was the decision last night at a conference in the Council chambers, at which members of the Board of Public Works, the Traffic Commission, the City Planning Commission and the Public Works Committee of the City Council attended. City Councilman Wheeler, chairman of the Public Works Committee, will present the resolution.

The conference was held in an attempt to decide how the $5,000,000 should be allocated over the fourteen main traffic arteries included in the major traffic plan. The concensus of opinion favored the plan to create the addition to Van Norman's staff at an expense estimated at $32,000.

The City Engineer declared that within two months he could have the complete plans for any one project and believed the special staff could cover all fourteen within six months.

Four streets stand out in the traffic plan, as discussed by the conference last night, and plans of these will probably be prepared in order, as follows:

(1.) Figueroa street north from First eventually to Broadway.

(2.) Macey street from Howard to Sunset Boulevard.

(3.) West Third street from Figueroa to Vermont.

(4.) East Fourth street from the Los Angeles River to Indiana street.

The $5,000,000 is to be used to pay the city's share in the proposed street widenings and paving, the remainder to be borne by assessment districts of abutting property.

MORS GEMS CENTER OF LEGAL ROW

Misfortune which has stalked the possessors of the Mors's jewels, mentioned prominently in the affairs of Teresa and Albert A. Mors and in the murder trial of Kid McCoy, were again heard of in an action in the Superior Court yesterday afternoon.

A hearing before Judge J. Perry Wood of a bill of discovery to determine to whom Mrs. Mors had turned over gems valued in excess of $20,000, was continued yesterday to Tuesday. The action was filed by Albert A. Mors against Victor C. Emden, former business manager of Mors, Inc., the antique shop owned by Mrs. Mors, the purpose being to recover the jewels.

Martin L. Haines, attorney for Mors, declared that the gems were claimed by the latter by right of Mrs. Mors's will made to him. He offered no objection to the postponement.

Emden, who was ill yesterday, asserted through his attorney that he is the owner of the property through purchase from Mrs. Mors prior to her death, on August 13, 1924, when she was found with a bullet through her brain. Kid McCoy, former prize-ring idol, was convicted of manslaughter in connection with her murder.

EBELL CLUB TO GIVE BUILDING FUND PARTY

A "piggly wiggly" party will be given by the South Side Ebell Club of Los Angeles at the South Gate Masonic Temple, Thirty-third and Main streets, next Friday from 12 m. to 4 p.m. Funds raised at the party will go into the building fund for the proposed new South Side Ebell Club building. Luncheon will be served and 500 prizes distributed to those present.

LICENSE HEARING PLANNED

Investigation to determine whether the application for renewal of his 1924 broker's license should be granted M. A. Leach, president of the Leach-Biltwell Motor Car Company and other concerns, is to be made by the State Corporation Department. A public hearing has been called for next Monday at 10 a.m.

COUNCIL GIVES CLOGSTON POST

Five-to-Four Vote Confirms Park Board Nominee

Charge Against Mrs. McCan Refuted by Clubs

Quiz Ordered on Salary Paid Commissioner Griffith

The appointment by Mayor Cryer of Bert L. Clogston to succeed Mrs. Martha Nelson McCan on the park board, which has aroused a storm of protests by women's organizations, was confirmed by the City Council yesterday by a 5-to-4 vote.

In voting to confirm the Mayor's appointment, President Workman, Councilmen Allan, Criswell, Mallard and Wheeler stated, in effect, that the responsibility for the failure to reappoint Mrs. McCan was the Mayor's. Councilmen Baker, Gregory Mushet and Sanborn voted against confirmation.

CHARGES REFUTED

Since Mayor Cryer announced the appointment of Clogston, members of the Friday Morning Club, of which Mrs. McCan formerly was president, the District and California Federation of Women's Clubs have been urging him to reappoint Mrs. McCan and have appeared before the Council, seeking to stop confirmation.

Mayor Cryer explained his action in failing to reappoint Mrs. McCan yesterday in a communication sent to the Council, charging in effect that she was a trouble maker on the board and that she had not given "the respect and courtesy" to Park Commissioner Van M. Griffith" due to a fellow-commissioner. These charges were contradicted last week by Mrs. Gertrude Barnum of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, who declared park board records show that Mrs. McCan and Maj. Warren Bovard, another member, voted together on all important projects.

POLITICS FLAYED

Before the vote on confirmation was taken yesterday the Council was addressed by Rosamonde Rae Wright, who said:

"There is a vital principal at stake. It is this: Are you going to approve of the Mayor's personal political program and 'personal politics,' or are you going to take a stand in favor of faithful, efficient public servants being rewarded for their services? It is a difficult matter to secure men and women to accept places, without pay, in the city government which require hard work and the Mayor should be broad and big enough to recognize the efficiency of the commissioners who are working for the best interests of the entire city."

"You are right," said Councilman Mushet, one of the four who voted against confirmation, "but you can't tell what this Mayor will do. The women of this city are entitled to representation on the park board and all other Mayors have recognized this."

After Clogston was confirmed, Councilman Gregory obtained passage of a motion to ask the City Attorney if it is legal for Park Commissioner Griffith to act as a member of the board and at the same time draw a salary of $160 a month as an investigator for the City Prosecutor's office.

Deputy Fights Suspects; Gets Smashed Nose

A large crowd at Seventh street and Broadway got an unusual treat yesterday when Deputy Sheriff Frank Dewar had a hard struggle with two men he attempted to take prisoner. One of them escaped after giving the Deputy Sheriff a smash in the nose. A traffic policeman had hard work dispersing the crowd. Dewar's nose was treated at Receiving Hospital, after which he booked his prisoner at the County Jail for investigation. He gave his name as Edward Shannon.

Shannon will be charged today, according to Dep. Dist.-Atty. Fitts, with extortion and his escaped companion with extortion and assault. Shannon made a statement to Capt. Peoples according to the latter, in which he said he and the other man had planned to hijack forty gallons of liquor that was in possession of C. R. Phillips at Lennox.

"The stuff was so bad," Shannon said, according to Peoples, "we decided it wasn't worth taking and we told Phillips we were investigators from the District Attorney's office and he could square it for $500."

Phillips paid over $300, it is asserted, and agreed to pay $200 more at Seventh and Broadway. He is said to have pointed out Shannon and the other man to Dewar.

Chief Justice of Utah Lauds Trial Methods

Chief Justice Frick of the Supreme Court of Utah, in Los Angeles seeking a respite from the rigorous winter in his bailiwick, learned yesterday that in other ways than climate California is different from the Mormon State.

Sitting with Judge Guerin in the latter's department of Superior Court yesterday, Justice Frick noted that an attorney was allowed to call an adverse witness and not be bound by his testimony.

"It seems to me to be a very well-founded variance from the practice in other States," observed Justice Frick.

"We think it is of valuable assistance to the court in arriving at the truth," said Judge Guerin, explaining that such procedure is permitted by the California code.

CLEVER DANCING COMING

La Bernicia, queen of the dance, who comes to the Hillstreet next week, is unlike the usual dancer. She does not confine her efforts to any one particular style of dancing. She does, however, interpret the classic with the grace of Pavlowa and the eccentric with the cleverness of Bessie Clayton. La Bernicia is assisted by Olga Morsellie, who masters the violin as La Bernicia masters her toes.

FATALITY SUSPECT GIVES UP

Man Freed on Bail in Auto Death Case in Which Capt. McClary is Accused of Laxity

L. A. Duncan, whose indictment on a manslaughter charge by the county grand jury Wednesday was accompanied by a letter to Chief of Police Heath requesting an investigation of the asserted failure of Police Captain L. L. McClary to co-operate with the District Attorney's office in the case, surrendered yesterday and the date of his hearing was set by Judge Keetch for the 19th inst. Duncan was released on $2500 bail.

Chief Heath announced yesterday that he had instructed First Deputy Chief Jackson to make a complete investigation of Capt. McClary's connection with the case, which grew out of the death in an automobile accident on November 26, last, of Mrs. Winona Spencer Spear. Mrs. Spear was riding in an automobile, driven by Duncan, that was in collision with a truck on Ventura Boulevard.

All police reports in the case, a transcript of proceedings before the jury that indicted Duncan, and evidence at the Coroner's inquest will be gone into, by Jackson, he said, and his report regarding Capt. McClary conduct will be based on these facts. Criticism of Capt. McMcClary's conduct will be based on on his asserted refusal to take Duncan into custody and his refusal to allow one of his police officers to sign a manslaughter complaint against Duncan, as requested by the District Attorney's office. McClary is said to have told the District Attorney's representative that there was not sufficient evidence to convict Duncan of a manslaughter charge.

KATZ JEWELS ARE FOUND

Gems Worth $250,000 Located in Safety Deposit Vault; Spurs Hunt for Murderer

Discovery of unset jewels worth $250,000 in a safety deposit vault in a local bank that had been rented under an assumed name by Harry I. Katz, murdered diamond broker, was announced yesterday by Dep. Dist.-Atty. Harold L. Davis, who has opened a new investigation into the slaying of the diamond merchant.

Claude Morton, attorney for the Katz estate, after conference with Davis yesterday, said he would conduct an investigation to ascertain whether the jewelry was owned by Katz at the time of his death or had simply been consigned to the murdered broker for resale. If the jewelry belongs to the estate, Mr. Morton said he would file a formal claim for the entire contents of the deposit box.

The discovery of the missing jewelry was made by Davis, who has conducted an exhaustive investigation since Katz was murdered in his flat in the Wilshire district, several months ago. More than 100 witnesses have been examined by the District Attorney's office and from the mass of testimony collected, Davis hopes to name the man who fired the fatal shots.

Two theories have received equal weight by investigators. First, that Katz, known to have carried large quantities of valuable jewelry on his person, might have been murdered by a bandit who hoped in this way to rob him of precious stones. The second theory credited by the police is that Katz may have been the representative of a huge smuggling ring and may have been killed when he attempted to double-cross some of his companions. At the time of his death police received many tips that numerous diamonds and other precious stones known to have been in Katz's possession were not discovered among his effects.

Deputy Davis admitted yesterday that he also was working on several new clews that have been unearthed recently. A mysterious Russian, thought to have knowledge of Katz's death, has been under surveillance for several weeks, Davis said.

T. E. NEWLIN HONORED BY BANK STAFF

Retiring Vice-President Gets Watch and Letter from Associates

On his retirement yesterday after twenty-two years' service as vice-president of the Farmers' and Merchants' National Bank, T. E. Newlin was presented with a resolution expressing the good wishes and affection of officers, directors and employees of the bank. Mr. Newlin also was presented with a gold watch by the employees. He will remain a director on the loan committee.

A copy of the resolution, signed by each officer, director and employee, follows:

"As on this date you have decided to retire from your long and active participation in the administration of the affairs of the Farmers' and Merchants' National Bank of Los Angeles, we, your associates, take occasion to express to you the high regard and esteem in which we hold you.

"You have endeared yourself to us through your kind and gentle demeanor and your ever readiness and willingness to advise and bear with us in our field of mutual endeavor and this tie of relationship not even the passing of time can efface.

"You have set an example by your courteous and gentlemanly attitude which cannot help but be conducive to the upbuilding of high character and integrity of all of us who have had contact with you.

"With the accompanying token and this subscription we want to record our best wishes for a life as long as you yourself may elect with attendant good health and happiness, and to enjoy to the fullest extent those years, surrounded by all of your dear ones, which reward you have so justly earned through your long years of business activity."

More Cash for Catching Rats Wins Approval

The City Council yesterday approved an increase in the personnel of the rodent-extermination bureau of the health department, to be financed from the $250,000 appropriated for the war on rodents by the Council.

Dr. Hugh Cumming, head of the United States Health Service, will leave Washington tomorrow for Los Angeles to inspect the work being done here and in other Pacific Coast cities to exterminate rats and other carriers of contagious diseases.

President George Ebright of the California State Board of Health has reported to Dr. Cumming that he had recently inspected, the prevention work here and was most pleased at the results being secured.

By the Council's action yesterday two additional physicians and fifty rat catchers will be added to the force of the local bureau.

TWO HURT IN WRECK

Automobile Turns Over Five Times With Couple Inside

An automobile accident in which their car turned over five times with them inside, yesterday failed to hurt seriously Mr. and Mrs. William R. McGee of 218 East Eighty-fifth street. They were returning to Los Angeles on the Ridge Route. A short distance south of National Forest Inn their car skidded on a turn and went over the steep hillside, being stopped 150 feet down by a scrub oak, which saved them from another roll of 250 feet. McGee had scratches and bruises and his wife a sprained hip and bruises. They were taken to Receiving Hospital by J. Newman, a passing motorist. McGee was formerly a deputy sheriff and is now a salesman.

Jackson Asks Exoneration by Commission

F. C. Jackson, who was discharged November 29, 1924, as superintendent of the harbor department rock quarry at Catalina Island by Acting Harbor Engineer Ludlow, appeared before the Board of Harbor Commissioners yesterday and asked that the board exonerate him from "the imputation of dishonesty and graft" given at the time as reasons for his dismissal.

Jackson, in a letter filed with the board, declared the District Attorney had found no basis for these charges.

Commissioner Allen moved that Jackson be exonerated and reinstated, but no action was taken pending a report from Controller Edwards on his investigation into Jackson's purchases of supplies for the quarry. The controller said that so far he had found no evidence of any dishonesty by Jackson.

Woman Judge Gives Culprits Severe Terms

The iron hand in the silken glove was in evidence yesterday in the court of Police Judge Bullock when she sentenced Mrs. Ida Hazzard to pay a fine of $500 or spend 180 days in the City Jail for shoplifting, and sentenced Stella Rhodes to thirty days straight in jail for being drunk.

Mrs. Hazzard, court records show, was in court on a petty larceny charge for the third time. Mrs. Bullock stated this was one of her reasons for passing such a heavy sentence. Stella Rhodes, it was shown, had also been in before on a similar charge.

Mrs. Hazzard was found guilty of stealing a dress worth $23 from a local department store.

SURVEYS YEAR'S WORK

Fairbanks, Morse Coast Manager, Conducts Branch Meeting

The first of a series of Pacific Coast organization meetings was held yesterday at the Los Angeles Athletic Club by Fairbanks, Morse & Co., under the supervision of the Pacific Coast manager, S. F. Forbes, and presided over by Stan E. Forbes, Los Angeles branch manager. Included as guests were S. T. Scofield, advertising director from the headquarters office of the institution and N. F. Sammons of the Chicago office of Henri, Hurst & McDonald Agency.

Eight Western States and the west coast of Mexico are controlled under Pacific Coast branch management, the Los Angeles branch territory being Southern California from San Luis Obispo south, the States of Utah, Idaho, Montana, Arizona and Western Mexico.

Meetings of the organization will also be held at San Francisco, Portland and Seattle during the next few weeks.

ZONE CHANGE REFUSED

Business Buildings on Eighth Street are Opposed

Pending establishment by ordinance of the new street lines for the widened Eighth street, as recommended in the major street traffic plan, the City Council yesterday refused to grant a petition for a change of zone on Eighth street from Vermont avenue to Irolo street to permit business buildings to be built there.

This section of Eighth street is now zoned for residences, flats and apartment-houses. Bert L. Farmer, representing those who desired the new zoning, said that a $2,000,000 business building program for Eighth street was being postponed by failure of the Council to rezone the street. Councilman Wheeler, though voting to deny the present petition, said that with the widened street, business zoning must come eventually.

CLEAR FOREIGN HORIZON PERMITS CABINET SHIFT

[illegible] Affairs in Best Shape Since 1920; British Know America Not Tied by Claims Pact

CANON WHO QUIT DOPE MEET DIES

Rev. W. H. Bliss of Seattle Passes of Heart Ill in New York Hospital

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Canon W. H. Bliss, of Seattle, who was among the American clergymen bolting the recent narcotic conference at Geneva, died early tonight at St. Luke's Hospital of endocarditis and complications. He was stricken while en route home from Europe late last month and entered St. Luke's upon his arrival here, but small hope was held out from the first for his recovery.

Canon Bliss returned with the American delegation headed by Bishop Charles F. Brent of Buffalo, which quit the conference, composed of the eight nations in which opium smoking is temporarily allowed under the Hague Convention, after the conferees had reached an agreement which the American delegates declared was a travesty and a "degradation of the very principle of international compacts."

Canon Bliss was removed from the United States liner Leviathan in an ambulance on December 21, and Mrs. Bliss, who was with him when the end came tonight, was sent for. A blood transfusion operation was performed early in January and for a time thereafter the patient rallied, but secondary anemia and kidney complications, which later made inadvisable further blood transfusions, combined with the heart affliction, caused his death. He was 49 years of age.

SAVINGS GO FOR BONDS

Working Classes Now Investors

Speculation Feature Absent in Recent Phenomenal Stock-Market Boom

Holdings in Industries Being Distributed Among Small Income Earners

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The character of the stock-market boom that has developed since the Presidential election is regarded by economic authorities as the most extraordinary financial phenomenon in our history.

The fact that there was no profit taking during the first two months of the boom on a scale sufficient to produce a general setback is accepted as an indication that the bulk of the public buying has been for investment rather than speculative.

Never before has there appeared to be so enormous a volume of savings seeking investment. Specially significant are the indications that the investment of wage earners are growing by leaps and bounds. The workers are buying corporation stocks with savings increased by the higher wages prevailing during and since the war, and according to some commentors, still further increased by the radical reduction of the expenditures on drink by the workingmen under the prohibition regime.

WAGES INVESTED

Wage earners are now receiving a rapidly increasing percentage of the total volume of dividends paid out annually, while the percentage of dividends received by the rich is decreasing. Herein is noted a trend of corporation ownership from the rich few to the many of meager means, a trend denoting an economic revolution, thinks Prof. T. N. Carver, head of the economics department of Harvard University.

"The only economic revolution anywhere in the world that amounts to a hill of beans," he says, "is taking place in this country right now."

Members of the Federal Reserve Board are inclined to believe that the United States may now be entering upon an era of investment by persons of small means that will bring about very striking shifts in the ownership of the great corporations during the next few years.

It was expected by the board

KIN TO AID JAZZ GIRL

Father, Brother Visit Cell

Man Who Denounced Her Says Spirit of Mother Urged Reconciliation

Relative's Kindness Causes Murderer to Break Down; Calm at Inquest

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—Dorothy Ellingson's father and brother have at last gone to her aid. This afternoon, after four days of bitterly expressed hatred for the girl who shot her mother dead, the two men went to her cell and there, in one of the most dramatic scenes that has ever taken place in the city prison, took Dorothy back into their hearts.

"Last night," the brother whispered, "she came to me—mother came to me. I know it was she, Dorothy, and she told me to stand by you. It was mother's message to me."

And Dorothy, for three nerve-racking days a marvel of stoicism, broke down utterly. Gone was the hard child of the night; her's was nothing but a grief-stricken, terrified youngster, sobbing bitterly at the feet of the brother who had at last taken her back.

Policewoman Kathlyn Sullivan—she had seen heart-tearing scenes in her days on the force—cried with Dorothy in her long-delayed moment of forgiveness and family love.

"I've never seen a more touching scene," said the policewoman later.

The reconciliation came in early afternoon, after Dorothy had gone through the most severe trial that has come to her since her arrest early Thursday morning—the Coroner's inquest into the death of her mother.

CALM UNDER TRIAL

Before hundreds of staring eyes, she had to sit through all the horribly cold testimony, telling in detail of her crime. She had to listen while they read her own statement of how she took her brother's gun and shot her mother dead; she had to sit there while on the screen were flashed the sickening pictures of the scene in the Ellingson flat—of the dead mother; she had to stand up there before all that throng so that detectives might compare her height with her slain mother's.

Through it all she went bravely. An occasional muffled sob and an almost continuous trickle of tears the only outward evidence of the strain she was undergoing.

At the close of it, she was near collapse. She leaned heavily on the arm of Policewoman Sullivan as she went back to her cell. There was no ray of light for her—even her brother there at the inquest, and her father, had taken the stand and bitterly denounced her as a jazz-mad thing who had for no conceivable reason slain her mother.

PRAYER ANSWERED

And then there was the step of her brother at her cell door. Dorothy did not "know that at the inquest," the brother, Earl had gone to Mrs. Sullivan and said:

"I'm coming up to see Dorothy afterward."

Nor did the brother know that all the night before, at intervals, Dorothy had prayed aloud:

"Oh, brother, please come to me."

He came. Before the girl's tear-swollen eyes he stood, unsmiling.

"Dorothy, it's a terrible thing you've done," he began. The girl hung her head—she expected another tirade like that last Thursday. Then he went on—

"—but all last night, she was with me. I know it was mother. She wants me to stand by you. It's her message to me. So now, little sister, here I am, just your own brother again. And we're going to do everything we can for you—father and I."

A moment Dorothy hesitated, as

CITY BOARD CRITICISED

Aqueduct Report to Governor

Owens Valley Stand in Water Dispute is Upheld by State Engineer

Recommends Neutral Agency to Sift Controversy; Hints Bad Faith

BY KYLE D. PALMER
"Times" Staff Correspondent

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 17.—Strong criticism of the policy of the Board of Public Service Commissioners of Los Angeles in its treatment of the ranchers and landowners in the Owens Valley and a recommendation that some "neutral agency" make further examination of the Aqueduct controversy is made by State Engineer W. F. McClure in an official report handed to Gov. Richardson today.

Finding that "the people of Owens Valley have a real grievance against the city of Los Angeles," McClure explains, "it is to be understood that reference is made to the Public Service Commission representing the city, and not, of course, to the city at large."

The State Engineer's report is based on an extensive investigation requested by Gov. Richardson following the action of Owens Valley residents in first dynamiting part of the Aqueduct and later opening the Alabama Hills waste gates of the Los Angeles Aqueduct last November. The report comprises more than 200 typewritten pages and covers all phases of the situation.

DEFENDS RESIDENTS

"The people of the valley," comments McClure, "are not anarchists, criminals or thieves, as has been stated, but, on the contrary, are ordinary, industrious American citizens."

Speculating on the possible action to be taken by Los Angeles against those who opened the gates, McClure asserts that inasmuch as he believes the action of the ranchers was extremely popular in Owens Valley, all persons connected with the affair would take part in the defense of those specifically accused.

"If 100 or more men came before the presiding judge," he comments, "and confessed to participation in the act and they were all given prison sentence or fine, it is interesting to anticipate what might be the net result affecting the city.

"With over 200 miles of conduit in desert, uninhabited country, a whole community antagonistic—some injury occasioned in May last to the Aqueduct by explosion—the opening of waste gates in November—both acts in protest against the policy of the city—what may come next?

LOSS OF CONFIDENCE

"No penalty that may be imposed upon any two men or upon any 200 men can in any way compensate the city for the loss of confidence and friendship of the people of the valley. If harsh measures be resorted to by the city, then may we not anticipate a backwash of action of such character that would occasion some substantial inconvenience to the city.

"The opening of the gates was a most popular move, if we are to gauge it by the number of valley people who visited the place during the four days the gates were open."

Inquiring, "Is it [illegible] upon the part of the city to refuse the proposal of the valley to refer their differences to a neutral tribunal?" Engineer McClure seems to imply an act of bad faith on the part of W. B. Mathews special counsel for the Board of Public Service Commissioners, in connection with the organization of an irrigation district in 1922.

COOLIDGE SAYS AMERICAN PAPERS BEST IN WORLD

Urges Editors to Continue Their Appeals to Ideals of People; Commercialism Not Feared

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The pathway to success in American journalism lies in the avoidance of propaganda, the separation of news policies from business motives and continued appeal to the idealism of the American people, President Coolidge declared tonight in speaking to the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Avoiding for the most part reference to governmental problems, Mr. Coolidge "talked shop" with the editors, speaking from the viewpoint of one not in the newspaper business as was his predecessor, but as one who has watched the growth and development of the American press. This growth, he declared, had given the United States "the best newspapers in the world."

HAS NO FEARS

Mr. Coolidge made it plain that he entertained no fears as to the influences of what is sometimes called a "capitalistic press."

"Some people feel concerned about the commercialism of the press," he said. "They note that great newspapers are great business enterprises earning large profits and controlled by men of wealth. So they fear that in such control the press may tend to support the private interests of those who own the papers, rather than the general interest of the whole people. It seems to me, however, that the real test is not whether the newspapers are controlled by men of wealth, but whether they are sincerely trying to serve the public interests. There will be little occasion to worry about who owns a newspaper so long as its attitudes on public questions are such as to promote the general welfare. A press which is actuated by the purpose of genuine usefulness to the public interest can never be strong financially so long as its strength is used for the support of popular government."

Advising the editors as to their greatest opportunity for aiding the government, the President said he unhesitatingly placed it in the direction of keeping alive American idealism.

"It is only those who do not understand our people, who believe that our national life is entirely absorbed by material motives," he added. "We make no concealment of the fact that we want wealth, but there are many other things that we want very much more. We want peace and honor and that charity which is so strong an element of all civilization. The chief ideal of the American people is idealism. I cannot repeat too often that America is a nation of idealists. That is the only motive to which they ever give any strong and lasting reaction. No newspaper can be a success which fails to appeal to that element of our national life. It is in this direction that the public press can lend its strongest support to our government.

"The public press under an autocracy is necessarily a true agency of propaganda," he continued. "Under a free government it must be the very reverse. Propaganda seeks to present a part of the facts to distort their relations and to force conclusions which could not be drawn from a complete and candid survey of all the facts.

FACE DIFFICULTIES

"This has become one of the dangers of the present day. The great difficulty in combatting unfair propaganda, or even in recognizing it arising from the fact that at the present time we confront so many new and technical problems that it is an enormous task to keep ourselves accurately informed concerning them. In this respect you gentlemen of the press

WILD PITCH SAVES GEMS FROM OCEAN

Man Arrested on Liner Attempts to Hurl Jewels Into Sea; Aim Poor

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

HAVRE (France) Jan. 17.—Poor control by an asserted thief in missing an open porthole with a wild pitch of a small jewel case is the only reason why 300,000 francs worth of jewelry is now resting snugly in the safe of the Havre Chief of Police instead of lying at the bottom of the harbor.

A few minutes previous to the "all ashore" cry sounded on board the liner Paris as she was about to sail for New York today, detectives rushed into the cabin occupied by a Mexican calling himself Beromen and a Frenchman sailing under the name of Quarante. Emphasizing the order with drawn revolvers the detectives shouted "hands up!" Both men obeyed but Beromen's movement was only a wind-up preparatory to flinging out of the porthole the case he held in his hand.

The jewel receptacle struck the side of the cabin and was recovered by the police who say it held jewels stolen from the Princess De Broglieb in Paris some days ago which the alleged thieves intended to sell in the United States.

MEXICO PLANS SEA-AIR LINE

Will Use Fleet of Twenty Dirigibles to Carry Mail and Passengers to London

BY JACK STARR-HUNT
[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 17.—A fleet of twenty gigantic dirigibles of the latest type are to be placed in trans-Atlantic air mail and passenger service with London as the eastern terminus and Mexico City as the western terminus, according to a report received by the government today from the Mexican Consul at Boston.

The report is widely published in local newspapers. It declares that the great airships in this service will be modeled after the dirigible Los Angeles and will operate on regular schedule with Los Angeles as one of the airports at which they will touch.

Other cities on this air line will be Boston and San Francisco, the report says. The project is being financed, according to the report, by a group of Boston capitalists who have already formed a $50,000,000 company to promote the line.

Each of the great ships will have a carrying capacity of from 100 to 150 passengers and eight tons of freight. They will be equipped in the fashion of the great trans-Atlantic liners and will follow a regular route in their flight.

The report was received from the Mexican Consul at Boston by the Department of Industry, Commerce and Labor. It has not been verified and government officials are awaiting further word from the Consul.

The report is taken seriously in government circles as the flight across the Atlantic of the dirigible ZR-3, now the Los Angeles, has demonstrated the feasibility of such a service.

LOSS TOTAL IN TIA JUANA FIRE $50,000

Six Buildings Destroyed, One Revenue Office; Home of Governor in Danger

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 17.—Fire of undetermined origin tonight destroyed six buildings in Tia Juana, Lower California. One of them was the Mexican government's revenue office. The Governor's residence was threatened before the flames were put out. All of the buildings were comparatively new, having been built to replace structures destroyed by fire abkout a year ago.

The loss was estimated at about $50,000.

DUKE STOPS SHIP BATTLE

Black Eyes Are Distributed in Wine Party on Steamer Olympic Bearing Nobles

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—The Olympic arrived today with Grand Duke Boris of Russia and as fine a crop of black eyes as was ever brought into this port in the first cabin of a first-class ocean liner. Between Boris and the shiners decorating the features of two of the passengers there is a decided connection. In the episode of the darkened orbs Boris acted as peacemaker.

It all occurred at a little party on the high seas given in honor of the grand duke and the grand duchess on the eve of the Russian new year, which fell on the 13th inst. There were forty guests, including George Gordon Battle, New York attorney, who retired early.

Titles were forgotten in the freely flowing champagne. One male guest slapped the grand duchess on her back (she wore a stunning decollette gown of nile green) and called her "Dutchy." The women in the party mounted the long dinning table and danced what was described as a "cross between the can-can and the fandango."

A Polish prince—the ship was fairly crowded with nobility—obliged with a violin solo. At the end of this piece, he was greeted with boos and hisses, and the remark that nothing better could be expected from a Pole.

The men had all been imbibing liberally and several were in an ugly mood. The women retired. Some one suggested a toast to Boris, and it was drunk standing.

Another toast was proposed to William K. Halligan, a vaudeville actor and member of the Friars' when the unusual activity began that New York member banks would be rediscounting in increased volume to finance the borrowings which professional traders are accustomed to make in periods of stock-market activity. The rediscount demand failed to develop, however, in any volume approaching a normal ratio to the volume of sales.

LOANS NOT NEEDED

This, coupled with the heavy movement of remittances to New York as disclosed by the clearing-house operations of the Federal Reserve system, has been taken as an indication that persons from all sections of the country are actually making outright purchases of securities. Remittances to pay in full for securities purchased provided the New York banks with ample funds to meet loan demands, making recourse to the Federal Reserve Bank unnecessary. These circumstances have satisfied the board that the stock market boom has been due to the purchase of securities for investment rather than professional speculation.

The tendency toward wider distribution of corporation stocks is shown by the increase in the number of stockholders in the country from 4,400,000 in 1900, to 14,400,000 in 1923, while the average number of $100 shares per stockholder decreased from 140 to fifty.

Great significance attaches to the large increase in the amount and the proportion of the total dividends received by the class with incomes of $1000 to $5000. This class includes the overwhelming majority of the wage earners of the country.

In 1917, the dividends reported by this class amounted to 9.5 per cent of the total, and in 1918 to 14.1 per cent of all dividends reported. There was a slight decline in 1919 and a small gain in 1920, followed by a spectacular advance to 23.7 in 1921. There was a decline in 1922 from the high point of the preceding year, but the amount of dividends received approximated $500,000,000, which was higher than for any year with the exception of 1921.

SMALL INCOMES GROW

The proportion of the total dividends received by the classes with incomes from $5000 to $20,000 remained relatively stable from 1917 to 1923. Starting at 25.8 per cent in 1917, the first year for which comparable figures are available, it advanced to 31.5 per cent in 1920 and declined to 29.1 per cent in 1922.

It is evident therefore, that the largest increases in numbers of stockholders have occurred in the group with incomes below $5000, which includes the wage-earning class. This suggests a tendency for the ownership of corporations to pass into the hands of large groups of persons with small means.

The proportion of total dividends received by persons with incomes over $20,000 declined from 64.7 per cent in 1917 to 52.5 per cent in 1922.

The largest increases in numbers of stockholders since the formation of the great industrial combinations appear to have taken place in two periods; the first from 1900 to 1910 and the second from 1917 to 1920. The conditions which produced these increases, however, were entirely different and the classes among which the widest distribution occurred in the two periods were not the same.

During the first decade of the present century the financial interests that promoted the industrial and railroad combinations of the '90s were unloading the large blocks of common stock they received as a reward for their efforts upon the general public. Conditions were not such as to favor the general distribution of this stock at the time it was received.

After 1900, however, the process of distribution was facilitated by increasing property and a return of public confidence. When the common stocks of the trusts were placed upon a dividend paying basis, they became attractive to the small investor, and the process of unloading went forward at an accelerated rate, bringing about steady increases in numbers of stockholders. Only a relatively small proportion of these stocks were taken up, however, by the wage-earning classes.

LEARN TO INVEST

The large increases in numbers of stockholders in the period from 1917 to 1920 appear to have been due principally to the emergency of the wage earners as a new class of investors. The funds with which to invest were given by increased wages and savings and the will to invest was given by the campaigns of financial education carried on by the government in connection with the war-bond drives.

The proportionate decline in the stockholders of the wealthier classes, with incomes about $20,000, which accompanied the increase in the holdings of the $1000 to $500 class down to the end of 1921, has been attributed to the fact that wealthy taxpayers found it to their advantage to invest their funds in tax-exempt securities, thus leaving the field of taxable securities to persons of small income who have no surtaxes to pay. Tax-exempt securities increased from $4,030,000,000 in 1912 to over $15,000,000,000 by the end of 1924, the bulk of the increase coming after an imposition of the high surtaxes in which Congress has thus far refused to make any considerable reductions.

During the last year $1,120,000,200 of foreign bonds were floated in the American market and still larger flotations are expected during the immediate ensuing years. This class of securities is regarded as being more attractive to the wealthier classes than to the small investor, particularly the working class investor. Flotations of State and municipal bonds during the last year amounted to $1,400,000,000, eclipsing all previous records.

Another important factor in the increasing diffusion of corporate ownership is the adoption by many corporations in recent years of plans for the distribution of stock among their employees for the purpose of reducing labor turnover.

The effect made by many corporations particularly public utility companies, during recent years to interest consumers of their products as stockholders is another factor of importance. This effort has gone along with the movement for distribution of stock among employees. It is similarly designed to produce a better attitude toward the companies among those upon whom their welfare depends.

face the same perplexities that are encounterd by legislators and government administrators. Whoever deals with current public questions is compelled to rely greatly upon information and judgments of experts and specialists. Unfortunately, not all experts are to be trusted as entirely disinterested. Not all specialists are completely without guile. In our increasing dependence on specialized authority we tend to become easier victims for the propagandists and need to cultivate sedulously the habit of the open mind."

Discussing the old question of "what is news?" the President said it seemed to him that quite obviously the news-giving function of a newspaper can not possibly require that it give a photographic presentation of everything that happens in the community.

MAKES COMPARISON

The proper presentation of the news on the other hand "bears about the same relation to the whole field of happenings that a painting does to a photograph," explaining that a photograph might give the more accurate presentation of details, but in so doing it might sacrifice the opportunity to delineate character

Touching on the adjustments of business and educational policy of American newspapers, Mr. Coolidge said it was another evidence that American newspapers were peculiarly representative of the country's practical idealism.

"Quite recently the construction of a revenue statute resulted in giving publicity to some highly interesting facts about incomes," he remarked. "It must have been observed that nearly all the newspapers published these interesting facts in their news columns, while very many of them protested in their editorial columns that such publicity was a bad policy. Yet this was not inconsistent. As practical news men they printed the facts. As editorial idealists they protested that there ought to be no such facts available."

PRESS PRAISED

The President, after describing American newspapers as the best in the world, continued his commendation by saying:

"I believe that they print more real news and more reliable and characteristic news than any other newspapers. I believe their editorial opinions are less colored in influence by mere partisanship or selfish interest than are those of any other country. Moreover, I believe that our American press is more independent, more reliable and less partisan today than at any other time in its history."

SIX DAYS LEFT FOR NEW BILLS

State Legislature Votes to Adjourn 24th Inst.

Reapportionment Act Still Matter of Doubt

Golden Gate Bridge Measure Passes Unanimously

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 17.—With only six days remaining in which bills may be introduced except under the understanding that each member may introduce two bills each in the second part of the bifurcated session, and more with unanimous consent, the remaining days of the first part of the Forty-sixth session of the California Legislature are expected to bring forth scores and scores of proposed new laws. Both houses of the Legislature voted yesterday to adjourn at noon on Saturday, January 24.

As it stands now nearly 800 bills for new laws or amendments have been introduced and the flood of bills is yet to come. The pleas of the presiding officers of both branches for fewer and better bills seem likely to bear fruit, for the number of bills introduced this session is considerably under the number introduced at previous sessions upon a similar date. This is the slogan painted in large letters above the desks of the presiding officers:

"Legislatorum est justas leges condere" which spells in English, "It is the duty of legislators to make just laws."

SIX DAYS REMAIN

But almost every section of the political code has been proposed for amendment and six days remain in which bills may be presented. The past week of the Legislature developed two things of outstanding interest: The introduction of a bill which its sponsors hope will be accepted as a compromise of the reapportionment issue as between Northern and Southern California and the city and suburban district; and the formation of a bloc which has as its primary purpose the opposing of any proposal to increase taxation, either direct or indirect under the guise of fees and licenses.

One legislative day this week was devoted to expressing formal approval of the proposal to construct a bridge between San Francisco and Marin county which, if it materializes, will bring into being the greatest bridge construction that the world has ever known—a bridge with a single span 4000 feet in length and the roadway of the structure more than 200 feet above the water. It would result in the construction of a highway for automobiles and street cars, and pedestrians, hanging to two towers surpassing in height the famous Eiffel Tower in Paris. The California Legislature in formal manner thanked the War Department for its having given general approval to the plans and called upon the Supervisors of counties in the affected district to lend sympathetic ear to the scheme of forming an improvement district to finance the construction of the huge project.

REAPPORTIONMENT

In the vote on the bridge resolution there was not a dissenting voice and no evidence on the traditional feeling between north and south, except the bantering protest of a northern member that he would more gladly support the proposal if he had any assurance that as soon as the bridge was completed Los Angeles wouldn't take it away from San Francisco by annexation.

The reapportionment issue remains unsolved. Many of the Southern California legislators will not support the compromise proposal to make effective the so-called three-eighths, five-eighths plan of the farm organizations wherein the rural districts are to control the Senate and the cities to have predominating numbers in the Assembly. Under this plan the three most populous counties, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Alameda, would have fifteen Senators combined and the remaining twenty-five Senators would be chosen from the other fifty-five counties. The Assembly would be constituted on a strict Federal census basis.

Northern county members are saying that reapportionment is dead, but the Southland delegates have not given up the fight and determination of the issue remains for the second half of the session.

Two Bandits Get $20,000 From Seattle Cashier

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SEATTLE, Jan. 18.—Two men held up Claus Seltz, assistant cashier of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, today and obtained $8000 in cash and $12,000 in checks which he was going to deposit in a bank. The two men fled in an automobile.

REPORT SCORES COMMISSIONERS

"Soon after the organization had been completed, agents of the city appeared on the scene and succeeded by purchase of ditch stock and lands to seriously cripple the operation of the district, and by their methods of dealing to encounter the bitter enmity of some of those from whom they were purchasing.

"The people of the valley, after some nineteen years of uncertainty as to the future, have been insistently and consistently urging the city to state frankly just what action the city proposes to take. They are accepting the situation with a fair degree of forebearance and it is but fair to them that some definite agreement be entered into at an early date."

McClure explains that "no attempt is made to pronounce judgment" concerning the motives of those causing the waste of aqueduct water, saying, "whatever notions of justification, censure or excuse that may be formed by readers are to be gathered from a statement of facts and a reading of valley history during the past eighteen or nineteen years.

GOVERNMENT PROJECT

"To grasp any fair idea of present conditions and troubles," he asserts, "we must go back some nineteen or more years to the time when the United States Reclamation Service gave serious consideration to plans looking to a project of irrigating some 100,000 or more acres, the major portions of which lands are near the town of Bishop and south toward and near the town of Big Pine.

"No one need argue with the Owens Valley people that such improvement would not have been made but for the coming of Los Angeles into the valley for additional water. They are confident such projects would have been fostered and that there would have been before this time some 75,000 to 100,000 acres of highly improved territory in the valley because of such improvement, and some two or three times the present population.

"During the attempt of the city of Los Angeles to secure the passage of the proper measure by Congress approving and consenting on behalf of the Federal government to the conditions of a measure outlining the desires of the city to secure water from the valley, criticism was made by the valley people on the action of President Roosevelt in striking out of the Aqueduct bill all limitations regarding the use to which the waters of the valley might be put by the city.

ROOSEVELT LETTER

"The valley people claimed that the language used would permit the municipality of Los Angeles to use the surplus of the water thus acquired beyond the amount actually used for drinking purposes, for some irrigation scheme.'—Quotation from letter from President Roosevelt to the Secretary of the Interior. Mr. Roosevelt desired to assist the city in securing additional water, but did not want such action to, incidentally, open a way for any scheme of water use that would give the valley people cause for complaint. The irony of the situation is that that is just what has been done."

McClure asserts that one of the principal causes of discontent in the Owen's Valley is the use of Aqueduct water for irrigation in the San Fernando Valley, which, he says, "before 1912 was as arid as Owens Valley."

He asserts that the Board of Public Service Commissioners is determined to put into operation the plan submitted to the Owens landowners last October, which would permit the irrigation of 30,000 valley acres.

"This suggested 30,000 acres," he reports, "is a less area by some 10,000 or 15,000 acres than have heretofore been irrigated. The valley people object to having their producing territory restricted: the commission insists that it be restricted and that the entrance of the city has been of great advantage to the valley.

BIG BROTHER IDEA

"The commission's attitude seems to be that of playing the part of Big Brother to the valley. The valley does not desire to be Big Brothered, but go its own way and insists that if the parental idea plan is to be insisted upon, the would-be Big Brother should be willing to pay well for the privilege of exercising such domination."

Asserting that purchase by the city of more than 24,000 acres in the valley irrigation district has mutilated the district "so as to make operation impracticable," McClure concedes that the city needs additional water and infers that "such need will be emphasized very soon unless we have two or three years of generous rainfall."

McClure, for the purpose of comparison, assumes that, prior to irrigation in the San Fernando Valley, the value of land there may be fairly compared with the value of Owens Valley land, and upon this assumption he concludes that the value of Owens Valley land at this time would have approximated $25,000,000 if Los Angeles had not taken part of the water for its own use.

Declining to express an opinion as to the merits of the controversy relating to land values, he says that "favorable sites for impounding and conserving water have a greater value than equal area not so shaped and suited," and he adds in this connection, that Los Angeles "should be willing to pay a premium for such advantage to those in possession of what she needs."

Taking up the question of ultimate water resources for Los Angeles and Southern California, McClure briefly touches upon the problem of distributing water from the Colorado River.

"Prophecies and dreams of the most optimistic character," he comments, "have during the past forty years come far short of anticipating the rapid growth of the city of Los Angeles.

"The population of the city at the present time is about 1,000,000 and comparing this with the population of 1920—577,000—and in 1900—175,000—we do not wonder that the agents of the city have been driven to their wits' ends in order to properly care for such rapid increase.

"Keeping in mind the failure of every one concerned to properly measure the increasing needs of the city at this time, and taking a long view, it appears quite consistent to assume that Southern California west of the Colorado River drainage area will, within the next forty or fifty years, need water from the Colorado River and that on or before such time as such waters may be available, all the supply in the Owens Valley and Mono Lake basin will be needed."

Regardless, however, of the eventual need for water from the Colorado, McClure says: "It is my conviction that were the waters of the Colorado River available at this time and in use, it would be good business to secure the supply from Owens Valley and Mono Lake basin because of the superior quality and delivery by gravity."

CAUSTIC CRITICISM

Referring to his conferences with the members of the Board of Public Service Commissioners, McClure asserts: "While in Owens Valley I heard some severe criticisms of the Chief Engineer and Board of Public Service Commissioners, but none of them exceeded in caustic utterance and bitterness statements made around the table in the Public Service Commissioners' room concerning the people of Owens Valley.

"I endeavored to convince the commissioners that it would be wise to forget the past and bend our efforts toward a solution of the problem, not only on account of the unrest in Owens Valley, but on account of the good name of Los Angeles.

"Fear was expressed by the president of the commissioners that some additional act of violence would be committed by the people of Owens Valley at an early date. To such suggestion I stated that I did not believe such fear was well grounded."

Appended to the McClure report are statements by the Bishop Chamber of Commerce, Farm Bureau, Owens River Canal Company, North Inyo Parent-Teachers Association, Thomas Hughes Company, the Women's Improvement Club, Hawson Ditch Company, Farmers' Ditch Company, Business Women's clubs and by individuals, all largely setting forth the arguments advanced by the valley and owners.

QUOTES TIMES EDITORIAL

An editorial published in The Los Angeles Times November 13, 1924, commenting on the Aqueduct crisis and urging fair play to both sides is quoted in full by McClure, who underlines many of the editorial's points.

Gov. Richardson, who has been engaged in matters relating to the present session of the Legislature, has not had opportunity to read the report of his special investigator and, hence, would not comment on the document today.

Those in close touch with the Governor's office believe that, after going over the report with the State Engineer, Gov. Richardson may decide to suggest to the Board of Public Service Commissioners and the Owens Valley residents that each propose members of a board whose duties shall be to attempt a compromise between the city and the valley land owners.

BILL HITS AT POLITICS IN CHURCH

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 17.—Churches whose pulpits or buildings are used for meetings or discussions of political reforms or problems would be subject to taxation under the provisions of a bill to be introduced in the California Legislature by Assemblyman S. V. Wright of San Luis Obispo.

The measure is aimed chiefly at preachers who use their pulpits for political purposes, and would make mandatory the filing of affidavits with county assessors showing that during the year prior to its date no discussion of a political nature or relating to any candidate or measure has been held on the premises claimed to be exempt from taxation.

Aside from removing the tax-exemption provision, the bill provides that any church in which organizations such as the Ku Klux Klan conduct meetings shall be held subject to taxation on the same basis as other property.

ENGINEERS, FIREMEN WIN WAGE INCREASE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—Engineers and firemen of the Chicago, Northwestern Railway today won an increase in wages amounting to $500,000 a year through a private agreement between the road and the employees. The daily increase will be 24 cents for passenger service, 36 cents for freight service and 32 cents for yard service for both firemen and engineers.

BRAWL ON SHIP INVOLVES DUKE

Club. Every one stood up, glass in hand, it is said, except Alexander Gross, a wealthy resident of Miami. According to other passengers Halligan remonstrated with Gross and in the melee ensuing the latter, who weighs about 200 pounds, suffered two discolored optics and a champagne bottle was broken over Halligan's head.

The melee was saved from becoming general by the Duke's intersection and by the sight of blood streaming over the actor's face. Halligan's left eye was blackened and three stitches were taken by the ship's doctor about an inch over his bruised optic.

The merrymakers then took an oath of secrecy. But passengers who had watched the party told the story to ship news reporters and Boris laughingly admitted acting the part of peacemaker. He denied a rumor that there was gun play.

His mother-in-law, his titled secretary and his wife's niece, Natalie, 8 years of age, who accompanied them, arrived second class for "purposes of economy." When told of Representative La Guardia's recent statement in Congress that the grand duke should be questioned as to whether he intended to attempt an overthrow of the American government, the grand duke replied:

"Ah, then I would be emperor of this great America! How charming!

"I'm here for a good time, that's all," he concluded.

Important Watches for Presentation Purposes

Frequently, occasions arise when a body of men desire to manifest their loyalty to a leader, or their regard for an associate—and always their intention is to select as a token of their regard something thoroughly worth while.

Naturally, and very properly therefore, such occasions center around the presentation of a fine watch—a useful gift and an enduring one.

The Geo. D. Davidson Co. has furnished hundreds of watches for such important occasions, including Howards, Walthams, Elgins, Patek-Phillippe, Gruens and Illinois.

And back of every watch has stood the prestige of this "Time-to-the-Second" store.

The incomparable Howard watch, in a new size and new dress. A small 10-size with 21 extra fine ruby jewels and eight adjustments. The case is 14-K. white gold. Howard never made a better small watch than this—$175.

SLAIN MOTHER AND DAD OF JAZZ-GIRL

[P. & A. Photo.]

Mrs. Joseph Ellingson and Joseph Ellingson

KIN WILL AID JAZZ SLAYER

though suspecting some cruel trick. Then she saw the tears that glistened in her kin's eye, and threw herself at his feet, unable to speak a word for the sobs that choked her.

Earl, more than six feet tall, stooped and picked the frail child up in his arms. He took her on his lap, and there in the city prison, sat in a chair and rocked and crooned to her as a mother might have done.

"Don't cry. We're going to help you. We'll go into debt to help you. We'll do everything that man can do to help you," he told her over and over again. The father came in, but words were beyond him, too. He just took her from Earl, and father and daughter clung to each other, silent save for the occasional choking sob.

For minutes, they did not speak. Then at last, the poignancy of their emotions past, they began to talk about what should be done.

"If you want the best attorney in the city, you may have him. Name whom you want," they told her.

The girl shook her head. "I only want Mr. Egan, the Public Defender," she said. "He stood by me this morning—the only person in all the world who was with me. He saved me embarrassment; he fought for me there. I want him to represent me, because I know he's my friend."

Late today the girl, her brother and father and Egan were conferring over the conduct of the case.

"My first step," said Egan after the inquest, "will be to have the case put before the proper tribunal—the Juvenile Court. There is no alternative in this matter—a mandatory statute leaves no other course than to lay the case there, and not in the police courts.

"My plan of defense I cannot now, of course, announce. That will come later. But remember—at the inquest this morning, it was brought out by her brother, in the midst of his other evidence which was against the girl, that all her life she has been sullen, morose, at times, moody. She would talk to herself when chided. She was impulsive, and flew into violent rages. She had a temper. She frequently ran away from home. This proves conclusively, I feel, that she is irresponsible mentally, has been so since childhood, and has been particularly so in the last four years, according to her relatives."

After the inquest even Asst. Dist.-Atty. Joseph Garry, who represented the State, said:

"In my opinion, the girl is a victim of moral insanity. That is not legal insanity, however."

The inquest this morning lasted two hours. The verdict was of course, inevitable—that Mrs. Ellingson was shot dead, and that there was sufficient evidence to justify a charge of murder against Dorothy. There were two elements of interest in the formal verdict, however. They are:

"(1.) We, the jury, however, find many discrepancies in the evidence which we recommend be closely investigated by the proper authorities at trial in order that there be no miscarriage of justice."

"(2.) An outstanding feature is the presence in the house of a revolver of unusually large size and caliber, of easy access, and always the ready means for the impulsive act of murder or suicide. We therefore, recommend the passage of a bill to restrict the sale and use of firearms."

The injunction in the last paragraph was the result of a long discourse to the jurors by Coroner T. B. Lelland, in which he pointed out the many arguments that have always been advanced against the free sale of guns, and the moral to that effect that is incorporated in the Ellingson case.

BANJO PLAYER PUT IN LOCAL JAIL

Keith Lord, Venice cafe banjo player, and one of the seventeen "sheiks" sought by the San Francisco police as former escorts of Dorothy Ellingson, spent last night in the Los Angeles City Jail.

Lord was taken from his cell in the Venice Jail yesterday afternoon and was scheduled to be taken to San Francisco last night, but the San Francisco detectives escorting him decided to postpone their trip until today.

The youthful banjo player is charged with a statutory offense against the young girl that murdered her mother.

THOUSAND-DOLLAR PRIZE COMING!

But One More Week of Limericks Then a Brand-New Contest With $3000 Cash for 350 Winners!

Here's big news for the 75,000 limerick "last liners" who have contributed to The Times limerick contests and for everybody else in Southern California.

There will be one more week of limerick contests, with the same daily prizes as hitherto. The last bob-tailed limerick will appear next Saturday. On Sunday next will be published the details of a new and totally-different contest in which The Times will pay $3000 in cash to approximately 350 winners. with a capital prize of $1000.

Don't fail to get The Times next Sunday.

The frisky tamale, a viand of uncertain antecedents favored by our neighbors to the south, was apparently liberally sampled by the "last liners" for inspiration in penning a final appendage for last Sunday's abbreviated limerick.

Their reactions were diversified, pithy and tart. Some apparently found the tamale not a bad palate companion. Others discovered that a trained stomach and a heroic one are necessary for the consumption of the toothsome and passionate dish, and still others remained neutral on the subject.

The blast of praise for the tamale sung by Grace J. Coomer of 4001 South Harvard Boulevard caught the judges' eye and kept it. Therefore her contribution is awarded the major $25 prize. She completed the hot tamale ode to read as follows:

A remarkable bird, the tamale;
When you know it you find it quite jolly.
At the Plaza you'll see
It at large, wild and free;
But, eaten, it's heatin', by golly!

Praise also was intended for the fiery dish by Rufus P. Spalding of 848 South Grand avenue, Pasadena, winner of the $5 prize, the judges believe. His contribution was:

"Chicken-hearted but not melancholy."

But the experience of Robert H. Bacon of 138 South Normandie avenue in gulping the tamale apparently was not pleasant. His advice was:

"Tenderfeet should eschew it, by golly!"

Helen Pierce of 5028 Stratford Road also found little to praise and much to bemoan in the make-up of the tamale. She said:

"But its bite takes the bark off, b'golly."

Katherine Priester of 4023 1-2 Marathon street sent in this doubly apt contribution:

"A fowl prize for some Lim'rick's finale!"

And H. H. Ferner of 1380 West Thirty-seventh Place combined a complete description of the heretofore unknown component parts of the tamale in his last line:

"A chick full o' pep, corn and folly."

However, H. N. Webber of Covina expresses complete ignorance of what goes to make the tamale. He did so in this line:

"Just whistle, it may be part collie."

The effect of the tamale on the victim is the subject of the contribution by A. H. Wood of 155 East Colorado street, Pasadena:

"When one's 'et' up one's 'het' up, by golly!"

Seeing that the tamale is described as a bird, Alice E. Des Larzes of 247 North Cleveland street, Orange, has this to say of it:

"Sprinkling salt on its tail is mere folly."

While J. B. Green of Box 144, Route 3, Highland, fixes its place of origin:

"A migrant from gay Mexicali."

Mrs. R. E. Washburn of 276 Bonita avenue, Long Beach, says this:

"It is all to the mustard, by golly!"

While Miss Blanche Wallace of 254 North Rita avenue, Huntington Park, intimates that it is hot enough without mustard:

"Hot and husky, but chili, by golly."

STATE AFFAIRS HORIZON CLEAR

that because the President has taken from the existing personnel of the foreign service his new Secretary of State and his new Ambassador to England that he must confine himself to that same personnel in selecting a new Ambassador to Germany. The situation at Berlin is less acute than it has been, and, as the administration indicates, it needs a trained business man at the head of the American Embassy, one possessed of diplomatic qualities, if possible. The President has told friends at the White House that he is searching for a new Ambassador to Germany both in and out of the diplomatic service, but that he does not know where he is to make his selection finally.

The appointment of Charles B. Warren of Michigan as Attorney-General fits into the new arrangement which the President and Secretary Hughes have made. Mr. Warren, with his recent experience as Ambassador to Japan and Ambassador to Mexico, has a peculiar knowledge of those two sometimes disturbed spots on the American diplomatic map. Thus it is that the administration of American foreign policy, after March, 4, will be primarily in the hands of a triumvirate consisting of President Coolidge, Secretary Kellogg and Atty.-Gen. Warren.

BRITISH UNDERSTAND

Week-end dispatches from England show that the British statesmen have a keener understanding of what the week's events mean than is possessed by their prototypes on the continent. The British government frankly takes no stock in the impression that is being conveyed by French statesmen that the United States is now bound up with the Allies in the major political controversies of Europe. The administration at Washington is tolerant toward the statements which have been made by French publicists and has not dignified them by open reply, but unofficially the administration tells inquirers that the United States has assumed no new obligations by becoming a party to the agreement made at Paris as to the distribution of funds collected for reparations in Germany under the Dawes plan. The explanation offered is that the French leaders, for reasons of domestic political concern, find it advantageous to represent America as having been drawn into something resembling an alliance.

The French contentions have made some impressions on the irreconcilable Senators. It is understood that the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate is considering a proposal suggested by the irreconcilables to adopt a resolution calling upon the Department of State for an answer to the charge that new commitments have been made. If such a resolution is sent to the State Department the answer will be clear and explicit.

The facts are all of record. European Allies, trying to operate under the text of the Versailles Treaty, spent fruitless years in controversy over the matter of collecting reparations from Germany. At length, the United States, as a disinterested friend, suggested through Secretary Hughes that the practical thing to do was to set up a nonpolitical collecting agency which obviously must take the form of a receivership, such as is provided for any bankrupt concern. The advice was heeded. Expert American economic advice was sought and the Dawes plan resulted. That plan in its essence constitutes a receivership of Germany's fiscal affairs. In brief, it provides that the receivers, after paying maintenance, upkeep and running expenses and laying aside sufficient capital for increased production, shall use the surplus or net earnings to pay the reparations debt.

The Allies were jubilant over this arrangement. They attempted to provide that all of this German surplus should go into their own pockets. The United States objected. This government, unlike the Allies, asks no reparations of a character to pay for military expenses from its participation in the war. It has a bill against Germany for damages done to individual Americans and another bill for the maintenance of the American Army of Occupation in Germany sent there at the earnest request of the Allies themselves.

The result of the Paris conference is to provide that the collectors or receivers in Germany shall make payments on these American claims in precisely the same manner that they make payments on the reparation bills of the Allies. And that, according to the Department of State is all there is to it. In obtaining this money this government deals not with the Allies or any one of them, but with the receivers.

BOUND TO NOTHING

It is argued in France that if the Dawes plan fails and the expected surplus does not develop from which to pay reparations, then the United States is bound to join with the Allies in enforcing collections in some undefined fashion. The position of the administration at Washington is that this government is not bound to do anything in any event. The administration has faith that the Dawes plan will succeed. However, if it does not succeed then all of Germany's creditors will have to devise some new scheme. In other words, the situation will be precisely as it was before the Dawes plan was adopted.

Among the irreconcilable Senators there is some whispered talk that the Paris agreement may be found to have the effect of impounding the German privately owned property in this country, now held by the Alien Property Custodian and to retain it as a guarantee for the ultimate payment of the American claims against Germany. Inquiry today develops, however, that the fear has no foundation in fact. Instead, the assurance that America is to receive payments from Germany through the Dawes plan collector serves actually to advance the date when the alien property here will be restored to its German owners. Congress must act to provide for this return, but the way is cleared for Congress so to act. With the arrangement for payment by Germany of American claims, the necessity for holding German property in this country passes.

Senate Defers Naming Stone to High Court

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Pending further investigation the Senate Judiciary Committee deferred action again today on the nomination of Atty.-Gen. Stone to be an associate justice of the Supreme Court.

The committee had expected to examine Clyde Dawson, a former Colorado attorney, with respect to a suit brought by executors of the estate of J. Pierpont Morgan, but that was postponed until Monday.

Maier & Pattison
In Recitals for Two Pianos

A Program of Popular Music

This will be a special treat for Southern California music lovers.

For it brings two-piano recitals, a rare combination of artistry and instrument, in a form that makes a popular appeal, delighting the non-professional audience without in any way sacrificing artistic standards.

Contrasting in personality and pianistic style, and, at the same time, possessing the rare sympathy and understanding necessary to ensemble perfection, their work is original and of absorbing interest.

SULPHUR HEALS SKIN ERUPTIONS

Mentho - Sulphur, a pleasant cream, will soothe and heal skin that is irritated or broken out with eczema; that is covered with ugly rash or pimples, or is rough or dry. Nothing subdues fiery skin eruptions so quickly, says a noted skin specialist.

The moment this sulphur preparation is applied the itching stops and after two or three applications, the eczema is gone and the skin is delightfully clear and smooth. Sulphur is so precious as a skin remedy because it destroys the parasites that cause the burning, itching or disfigurement. Mentho-Sulphur always heals eczema right up.

A small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur may be had at any good drug store.—[Advertisement.

ECZEMA

You will be compelled to admit that the results of S.S.S. are really amazing!

MANY people imagine that eczema or tetter needs only some external application on the skin in order to get relief. This is because the attention of the sufferer is so violently directed to the intense burning and itching which accompanies this disease. Try as they may—permanent relief will never be theirs until the disease laden blood is thoroughly cleansed.

We know there is one thing that stops eczema and that is more red-blood-cells! S.S.S. builds them by the million! You can increase your red-blood-cells to the point where it is practically impossible for eczema to exist. We know that as blood-cells increase in number, blood impurities vanish! We also know that night follows day. Both are facts! But have you, eczema sufferers, ever actually taken advantage of this wonderful fact? Thousands just like you have never thought about it. Skin eruptions, eczema, with all its fiery, skin digging torture, and its soul-tearing, unreachable itching, pimples, blackheads and boils, they all pack up and go, when the tide of blood-cells begins to roll in! Blood-cells are the fighting giants of Nature! S.S.S. builds them by the million! It has been doing it since 1826.

S.S.S. is one of the greatest blood-cell builders, blood-cleansers and body strengtheners known to us mortals! When you put these facts together,—then to continue to have eczema and skin eruptions looks more like a sin than a disease. S.S.S. contains only vegetable medicinal ingredients. Because S.S.S. does build red-blood-cells, it routs eczema, clears the skin, builds firm flesh, fills out hollow cheeks, and gives you that more up and going appearance.

S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

GETTING SKINNIER EVERY DAY

Hollows in Cheeks and Neck Growing Deeper Every Week

Something Must Be Done and Done Right Now—Quick

Tens of thousands of thin, rundown men—yes, and women too—are getting discouraged—are giving up all hope of every being able to take on flesh and look healthy and strong.

All such people can stop worrying and start to smile and enjoy life right now for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets which any druggist will tell you all about, is putting flesh on hosts of skinny folks every day.

One woman, tired, weak and discouraged, put on 15 pounds in five weeks and now feels fine.

We all know that Cod Liver Oil is full of vitalizing, flesh producing vitamines, but many people can't take it because of its horrible smell and fishy taste and because it often upsets the stomach.

McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets are as easy to take as candy and if any thin person don't gain at least 5 pounds in 30 days your druggist will give you your money back—and only 60 cents for 60 tablets. Ask Owl and Sun Drug stores or any live pharmacist anywhere.

But be sure to get McCoy's, the original and genuine, and bear in mind that for thin, sickly kids they are wonderful—a very sickly child—age 9, gained 12 pounds in 7 months.—[Advertisement.

NEW MYSTERY IN FEE DEATH

References to Son Found in Slain Banker's Desk

Widow, Friends Offer $5000 Reward to Spur Hunt

Ownership of Securities in Vault is Still Issue

Cryptic messages referring vaguely to a son and found in the desk of William R. Fee, Alhambra banker whose dead body was discovered in Lytle Creek Canyon last November, have added a new mystery to that case, which the widow and friends of the banker last week revived by offer of $5000 reward for information leading to the arrest of whosever was responsible for his death.

Fee had no son, yet the messages, written in longhand, refer to "William, Jr.," and to "your son." Those who are connecting events surrounding the man's mysterious death now are trying to solve this new angle which came to light through meager and vague references, so treasured by the man that he preserved them in his desk. Also in his desk were found two fervid declarations of love signed "Mary" and written in longhand, one of them on a mere scrap of paper.

LOVE NOTES

"My Dearest," began one of the declarations, "no time to say anything but that I love you more than anyone else in the whole world, and I'd take you any time I could get you. Think of me—I will of you. MARY."

Another, dated only a short time before the man's death, read:

"To my own most especial darling—all in order that he may look more beautiful the seemingly few times when my eyes do light upon him. It's with the same old wish—that we may always so love each other—some day to be even a little more close—that I remind you again today that I love you—better than anything and better than anyone. MARY."

Another letter to Fee that has just come to light is understood to yield some information, not disclosed, which may solve the question of who owns certain securities held in the Bank of San Gabriel in a secret trysting box to which Fee, president of the bank, and Miss Mary F. Watkins of Alhambra had access. Miss Watkins, who was questioned several times by police after Fee's body was found near her mountain cabin, admitted a clandestine love affair of years' standing between herself and the banker.

VALUABLE CONTENTS

In the box were found love notes written to Fee and signed Mary, six $1000 bonds of the Los Angeles Railway Corporation, $500 shares in the Warner Sugar Corporation, five shares in the Southern California Edison Company, two certificates of title to lots and a $2000 note.

Miss Watkins has demanded the contents of the box but Mrs. Fee previously had notified the bank not to let them out of its possession until ownership is determined. Consequently the bank refused to surrender the securities. A legal battle alone can determine ownership unless Mrs. Fee and Miss Watkins reach an amicable settlement, understood to be unlikely, at least, at this time.

Although police authorities officially declared that Fee came to a natural death while watching, from a hiding place, a merry week-end party in Miss Watkins's cabin, the Fee family has clung to the belief that he was murdered as first was supposed.

REWARD OFFERED

Accordingly Mrs. Fee and some of the friends of the dead man last week offered the reward to stir up new interest in the case in hope of apprehending the perpetrator of the crime. Sheriff Shay of San Bernardino county said he believed it "is a good movement." Sheriff Traeger of Los Angeles county and Sheriff Shay have agreed to help the family determine any questions that may arise from claims for the reward.

The story is current in Alhambra that Miss Watkins intends to travel, perhaps abroad, for a time in order to forget it all but inquiry at her home last night elicited neither affirmation nor denial.

Miss Watkins's connection with the San Gabriel Water District as its secretary has been terminated, it was declared yesterday.

Woman Loses an Arm After Fall Off Electric Car

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Jan. 17.—Hurt in a railway accident this evening, Mrs. J. O. Stewart, 60 years of age, 666 Lincoln avenue, Culver City, lies today in the Seaside Hospital, Long Beach, with her arm off and otherwise cut and bruised. Dr. B. S. Chaffee said she probably will recover.

Mrs. Stewart was on her way to visit her daughter, Miss Vera Stewart, 529 West First street, Long Beach, and fell when alighting from the electric car at Chestnut street, Long Beach. The car is said to have passed over her arm, mangling it, and otherwise injuring her. The arm was amputated at the hospital.

Brothers Hurt in Triple Wreck of Automobiles

Joe Maga, 1033 San Fernando Road(was perhaps fatally injured, and Paul Maga, his brother, and John Vercellono of San Pedro were slightly injured last night in a traffic accident a half-mile east of Roscoe, near Burbank. According to the Burbank police, Joe Maga became confused by the headlights of approaching cars, and a smashup ensued in which three automobiles collided, Maga's machine being the most badly damaged.

The injured men were taken to the Cottage Hospital in Burbank, where it was found that Joe Maga's skull was fractured and that he had received other injuries.

ELECTRIFY RAILROADS

(BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH)

PRAGUE, Jan. 17.—Czecho-Slovakia is planning to electrify the railroad from Wilson Station in Prague to Pilsen, as the first of a series of lines. By 1927, Czecho-Slovakia hopes to have many of the miles of trackage leading from the capital city free from locomotives. The saving in coal has been estimated at 50 per cent.

NIGHT-RIDER NOTE AGAIN IS RECEIVED

Nephew of First Recipient Involved; Burbank Police See Work of Boys

"The Night Riders," whose purpose seems to be an attempt to terrorize residents of Burbank, have left a second warning note at the door of a citizen of that community, Burbank police revealed yesterday.

Desmond Selby, a 14-year-old boy, found a threatening note pinned to the seat of his automobile and immediately notified Chief of Police Long. Inasmuch as the note mentioned a recent episode in which Selby was pursued by a man, who leaped out at him from a clump of bushes, Chief Long ordered the arrest of Walter Carey of Lancaster. Carey was released yesterday after questioning.

Selby is a nephew of Jay Henry, Burbank grocer, who received the first note signed by "The Night Riders." It was pinned to the rear door of his grocery and threatened his life.

Burbank police, after tracing every possible clew are practically convinced that the notes are being written by a boy or gang of boys, who have been reading too many lurid detective stories and are seeking an outlet for their overwrought imaginations in the series of threats.

BANDITS IN FIVE ROBBERIES

Two Hold Up Waiter and Empty Till; Watchman Gets Hard Words But Escapes Unharmed

Bandits, burglars and plain thieves kept police on the hop late Friday night and yesterday morning. A pair of gunmen entered the State Restaurant at 206 West Eleventh street early yesterday morning, held up C. W. Rynders, waiter, and departed well satisfied with $100 from the cash register.

William A. Cox of 1385 Arizona avenue, a watchman at the Title Insurance Building, was overhauled by a quartet of gunmen, two of them armed with shotguns, in the alley in the rear of the building, but aside from being subjected to a flood of verbal abuse, escaped without financial loss. He was wearing his overalls at the time, he reported to police, and had not a thing of value on him at the time.

The theft of a suit case containing $1600 in jewelry, silverware and clothing from his automobile, which he had parked for a few minutes at Seventh and Coronado streets, was reported by T. F. Smith of 746 South Carondelet street.

Mrs. P. J. Sellstrom, owner of a garage at 2600 West Seventh street, left the office of the garage for a few minutes yesterday morning. Upon her return she discovered that the desk had been rifled and two diamond rings and several automobile contracts had been taken. She placed her loss at $800.

Burglars forced their way into the home of Dr. C. L. Agee at 5950 Cimmaron avenue early in the morning by way of a side window and left with $500 in jewelry.

Jewelry and clothing valued at $800 were obtained by burglars who forced their way into the home of J. P. Paleto at 1581 Leighton avenue, he reported. The burglars got into the house through a rear door.

STUDENT ACTORS PRAISED

"Rose of the Rancho," a play by Richard Walton Tully, based on the early history of California, was presented for the final time last night by students of the Huntington Park Union High School at the school auditorium. The work of the youthful actors drew favorable comment.

Truck Driver is Killed in Slide on Embankment

John E. Lyther, 42 years of age, a truck driver, was crushed to death on the seat of his truck yesterday when the heavy machine hurtled down a twenty-foot embankment while being backed by the victim into a lot at 384 West Avenue 45, where a house is under construction.

The truck skidded and slewed sideways over the embankment. It landed upright at the bottom but the impact of the crash forced the hood of the machine far back, crushing the driver. The body was removed to the Highland Park mortuary.

Truck Load of Smokes Stolen by Two Thieves

Smokes enough to last them for several lifetimes were obtained by a pair of enterprising thieves yesterday morning when they eloped with a truck loaded with $10,000 worth of cigarettes. The truck is the property of the Citizens Truck Company. It was driven by Nathan Curry of 1829 Redwood avenue. He had parked it in front of the Southern Pacific freight offices at 1390 Terminal street for a few minutes. The thieves drove off with the machine just as the driver was coming out of the freight office.

INVESTORS IN OPEN AIR MEET

Julian Stockholders Fill Hollywood Bowl

Balance Sheet is Read by General Manager

New Properties and Future Plans Discussed

Announcements that the Julian Petroleum Corporation has made substantial additions to its properties since it submitted itself to investigation and valuation by the Citizens' Committee, and that more than three-fourths of its outstanding stock has been placed in escrow for two years, featured the mass meeting of the company's stockholders at the Hollywood Bowl yesterday.

CROWD FILLS BOWL

More than 20,000 persons filled the seats in the amphitheater and cheered the addresses of C. C. Julian, president, and the other directors of the corporation. The meeting was the first public gathering of the shareholders since Mr. Julian announced the reorganization of the corporation and the association with it of the group of eastern capitalists and oil men.

The new properties, expenditures and extensions of the company were outlined by S. C. Lewis, the new general manager of the corporation, when he read, in the course of his address, the balance sheet of the company up to December 31, 1924. Six miles of pipe lines, leases on 8300 acres in this territory and 10,000 acres in Colorado, and filling station expenditures totaling $204,000, were among the figures given by Mr. Lewis to the gathering.

WELLS STARTED

During 1924, he said, the Julian Petroleum Corporation started drilling operations on twelve wells. Five of these, he declared, were producers, four are uncompleted and three were given up as failures. In addition to this, M. Lewis declared, the Julian Petroleum Corporation has acquired in connection with the recent reorganization a total of seventeen producing wells in return for $500,000 worth of stock of the company. From December 31, 1923, to December 31, 1924, the company had invested $1,185,097 in production, had total sales of $3,283,577.40 and made a gross operating profit of $521,000, Mr. Lewis declared. This profit, however, was minimized by the depreciation and depletion charges fixed against it which left the company only $39,000 in the "red," an "amazingly small sum for a new producing and marketing organization starting under the conditions that confronted the Julian Company," Mr. Lewis said.

In making his introduction, Mr. Julian gave the figures covering the amount of stock impounded by his stockholders as the result of a plan announced by him several months ago. This action, he said, was made necessary to protect the Cheers of approval greeted Mr. Julian's statement that "the manipulator, the high-bidder and the second-story man" were among those opposed to the escrow plan.

"And I want to tell you," Mr. Julian told his audience, "that although I had to relinquish a substantial part of the control of the Julian Petroleum Corporation to bring into the company men of integrity, ability and financial standing of our new officers, you will find me, during 1925, fighting with you and for you, as I have done in the past."

Chester H. Sheppard of Portland, Or., and H. F. Campbell of Indianapolis, president of the H.C.S. Automobile Manufacturing Company, two of the new directors and members of the Lewis group, were the other two speakers. "Sit tight and don't rock the boat," was Mr. Sheppard's advice to the stockholders. "We are escrowing our stock along with yours and pledge you our best efforts, energies, finances and interests in return for your complete co-operation," said Mr. Campbell.

In making public the figures in the balance sheet as of December 31, 1924, Mr. Lewis called attention to the fact that sum charged to the organization of the company is less than the 20 per cent allowed by the California law in promotion of new corporations. The balance, he declared, showed current assets four and one-half times greater than current liabilities—another healthy gain.

NEW PLAN COMING

A new plan for greater co-operation between the company and the stockholders will be announced soon, Mr. Lewis said. This plan, he declared, will help increase the sales of the company's retail service stations. Loud cheers followed the next statement in which Mr. Lewis said that three days ago the company had completed negotiations that will make available to it beginning April 1, next, $2,500,000, at 3½ per cent interest.

Mr. Lewis closed his statistical discussion by reading an estimate prepared by him, based on past records of the company, showing the anticipated volume of business and profits for 1925.

Meet Called to Fight Untruths Against State

A luncheon meeting of business men to discuss remedies to offset the evils of publicity in various newspapers throughout the country adverse to Los Angeles and Southern California, will take place at the Biltmore at 12:15 tomorrow.

The meeting has been called at the instance of leading business men of the city. R. H. Ballard of the Southern California Edison Company will preside and among the speakers will be George I. Cochran, president of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company; Henry M. Robinson, president of the First National Bank; Harry Chandler, George G. Young, William M. Garland and M. De Brabant.

In the letter of invitation to the business men it is suggested that "Southern California has been suffering for months from misrepresentation and distortion of facts that has amounted almost to a real campaign against this section and has affected vitally practically everybody in this part of the State."

FLIGHT ENDS IN INJURIES TO SUSPECT

R. B. Nesbitt, 24 years of age, forgery suspect, is in the detention ward of the General Hospital today with serious injuries as a result of his attempt early yesterday morning to outspeed pursuing officers in a truck.

The truck brought up with a crash at the El Monte Boulevard bridge and the suspect was hurled from his seat with such force as to be seriously injured. He was being pursued at the time by Investigators Chriss and White of the District Attorney's office and Constable Bruttig.

Shortly after Nesbitt's arrest, the same officers took into custody Ernest McCoy, operator of a service station at El Monte. He also is charged with forgery. It is asserted that the two men forged scrip books for gas and oil on the Shell Oil Company by raising the amounts on the tickets in each book and then drove around to various Shell company filling stations with a specially constructed car containing a large tank. The gasoline and oil thus obtained, according to the officers, was brought to McCoy's filling station and there sold to motorists at regular prices.

Institute Will Honor Dr. Bridge With Assembly

An assembly in honor of Dr. Norman Bridge will be held in the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Monday morning, at 10:45 o'clock. The exercises will be simple and will be made up entirely of brief tributes to Dr. Bridge by men who have been asociated with him in various ways during his connection with the California Institute, which has been the recipient of such great benefactions from him, and of whose Board of Trustees he was president for more than twenty years.

Mr. Arthur H. Fleming, who succeeded Dr. Bridge as president of the Board of Trustees of the institute will be the presiding officer, and the speakers on the occasion will be Mr. Fleming, Hiram W. Wadsworth, chairman of the Board of Directors of the City of Pasadena, and for many years a member of the Board of Trustees of the California Institute of Technology; George S. Patton of San Marino, also a trustee of the institute; Seymour Thomas of New York and La Crescenta, the portrait painter wso had completed a portrait of Dr. Bridge a few months before he died; Dr. Robert A. Millikan, and Bishop Joseph H. Johnson.

The exercises will be open to the public and will be held in Culbertson Hall, the auditorium of the institute, corner of Wilson avenue and East California street, Pasadena.

Father in Iowa to Hear Son at KHJ on Birthday

No mechanism known, which any broadcasting station can add to its equipment, may compare in influence to one act of kindness and love which is given by it to the human family. Upon this truth rests the fame of the KHJ studio. We rejoice with the member of our artist family over their triumphs and grieve with them in their sorrows.

William Hullinger, flutist, has been coming to our station for many months, and during that time has endeared himself by his fine artistry and sweet personality to an unnumbered host of listeners, until today his popularity extends from coast to coast as his mail indicates.

On the evenings of the 20th inst., Mr. Hullinger will present a program in honor of his father's seventieth birthday. Three generations will be represented—the dear old father listening-in at Clinton, Iowa, Mr. Hullinger in flute solos, and his little daughter at the piano.

We know everyone will wish to hear this program and will send many loving thoughts on this auspicious occasion.

CITY CLUB PROGRAM FOR WEEK ANNOUNCED

OPEN FORUM TOMORROW NIGHT; PLAN OF CIVIC CENTER TO BE DISCUSSED

C. A. Dykstra, secretary of the City Club, announced yesterday that the Men's Open Forum at the club tomorrow evening will be addressed by Lyman Farwell and Everett R. Perry, who will speak on "Angles of the Civic Center Matter." Following the dinner at 6 p.m. Tuesday, a meeting will be conducted by the City Planning Association and plans proposed for the north-end civic center will be discussed.

Wednesday at noon, Walter Packard, an expert in agricultural matters, will speak on "Agriculture and Owens Valley." Wednesday evening Col. John R. White will give an illustrated lecture on "Sequoia National Park."

At the luncheon Friday a community sing will be conducted and a musical program given by A. Duartet, Frank Jocelyn, Dudley Chambers, Dor Thrailkill and Jack Bergman. The speaker at the luncheon next Saturday will be Dr. George Parrish, Health Commissioner, who will speak on "Los Angeles and the Public Health Question."

STONE-LAYING TODAY

Cornerstone-laying ceremonies for the new Druids Temple at Burbank will be conducted at 2 p.m. today by members and friends of Burbank Grove, No. 241, U.A.O.D. Participating at the ceremonies will be the Board of Trustees of Burbank, members of the Chamber of Commerce and representatives from other civic bodies of that city. Music will be furnished by the Burbank municipal band. The public is invited.

OIL INDUSTRY SURVEY BEGUN

Questionnaire Sent Out by Petroleum Institute

Pew Talks With Secretary Work on Conditions

Committee is Appointed to Collect Data

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—J. Edgar Pew, president of the American Petroleum Institute, came to Washington today from a meeting of the institute just concluded at Atlantic City, and conferred with Secretary of the Interior Work, chairman of the Federal Oil Conservation Board concerning the proposed inquiry by the President's oil board into general petroleum conditions in this country.

Mr. Pew explained that the institute, representing the industry in many of its diversified interests was anxious to assist in the government inquiry in every possible way, and that, with this view in mind, a committee consisting of representatives of many of the country's largest oil companies, had been appointed to study the whole situation thoroughly. This action was taken by the institute, Mr. Pew explained, in order that the industry as represented by his organization might collect and collate actual facts so that the institute and government board might know precisely and accurately just what actual conditions are.

Mr. Pew further informed the Secretary of the Interior that, because of the scope and importance of the questions submitted by the board in its letter of inquiry to the industry, it would likely require some time for those members of the institute receiving such letters, to secure the data which would be necessary to answer such inquiries as propounded by the government. It was the judgment of the institute's committee, Mr. Pew further said, that the questions could not be answered satisfactorily to the Federal board or to the petroleum industry without a full investigation of all available facts. The committee, however, he added, already had begun its work and would complete it as promptly as possible.

NAVY PLANE BURNS; TWO MEN ESCAPE

Flyers Fight Flames But Are Forced to Leap Into Water to Save Lives

Bursting into flame while taxiing in the outer harbor between the U.S.S. California and the U.S.S. Idaho early yesterday, a scouting plane piloted by Lieuts. M. B. Sterling and W. A. Gorry of the Idaho, was totally destroyed.

The two officers made a valiant fight against the flames with fire extinguishers but were finally forced to leap into the water to save their lives. Fearing that an explosion of the gasoline tank would throw burning oil over the water, they crouched beneath an unburned portion of the fuselage until aid reached them.

Backfiring of the engine while it was being warmed up for a flight was blamed for the fire by Lieut. Sterling, the senior pilot. He said that he and Lieut. Gorry were preparing to take off when flames suddenly shot up from the pontoons and enveloped the plane, catching the wings almost instantly. The two officers worked with fire extinguishers until they realized that the craft was doomed and then leaped overboard.

Sailors on the Idaho sounded an alarm and two motor launches dashed to the rescue. At about the same time, the aircraft's predicament was seen by men on the tug Oakburn of the General Petroleum Company. The tug was equipped with apparatus for fighting oil fires and it laid alongside, shooting several streams of chemicals at the burning plane and preventing an explosion of the gasoline tank. The motor launches picked up the two aviators uninjured and carried them to their ship.

The accident was the third which has happened to naval aircraft during the week. The first mishap was to the bombing plane 287 which made a forced landing because of engine trouble at Laguna and caught fire when it rose in the air again. The fire was put out and the plane "limped" home on one engine, however. The other accident occurred Friday when a scout plane from the U.S.S. Oklahoma ran out of fuel and was lost for three hours while other aircraft scoured the sea in a search.

OFFICER IS ACCUSED OF EXTORTION

Placed in Jail After Worker Says $10 Was Taken from Him

Patrolman V. R. McGregor, 33 years of age, was stripped of his badge and placed in the City Jail yesterday on a charge of extortion filed against him by a Mexican laborer, Rafael Perez.

It is charged that McGregor and another officer halted Perez at Fourth and Gless streets early yesterday morning and subjected him to a search. They found on him a short leather strap which they declared could be used as a blackjack, he said.

He was informed by the officers, the workman declared, that he could be sent to prison for possession of the strap and then forced to give them $10 after they had conducted a "kangaroo" court over him on the sidewalk and assessed him this amount as a fine. Photographs of a number of police officers were presented for his scrutiny and he identified McGregor as one of the patrolmen who had taken the $10 from him. McGregor, however, denied the charge. He declared he had never seen Perez.

ENTRIES IN HORSE SHOW INCREASING

Equine Lovers' Event to Take Place in Oakland February 6th to 10th

National interest is being manifested in the Northern California Horse Show Association event in the arena of the Oakland Municipal Auditorium, February 6 to 10, inclusive. Brig.-Gen. David P. Barrows, chairman, and Sam E. Kramer, secretary-manager of the show, announce that the list of entries for the show is growing constantly with the addition of stables from the Atlantic seaboard, Middle West, Pacific Northwest and Southern California.

William H. Wanamaker, Jr., of Philadelphia, an authority on harness horses and hackney ponies in harness, heads the list of judges for the exhibition. Henry Lawrence Bell, Bayside, Long Island, N. Y., will award the prizes in the division of hunters, jumpers and polo mounts. Harry McNair and B. Roger Pemberton are coming from Chicago with James W. Lockridge of Fayette, Mo., to judge three and five-gaited saddle horses, ponies under saddle and fine harness horses. The roadsters will be judged by Walter B. Palmer of San Jose.

More than 100 carpenters and laborers are working on the great stable adjoining the Auditorium that will house the blue-blooded horses entered in the competitions. These stables will be the biggest ever constructed in California, containing 250 box stalls opening out to four main isles. It is estimated that the transformation of the interior of the Auditorium into a representation of an old Roman temple with the preparation of the floor of the show ring will cost $10,000.

DAM WORK HALTED

WILLIAMS (Ariz.) Jan. 17.—Work is reported stopped on the new dam of the city water supply system, due to dispute between the contractors and the engineers over the footings of the structure. It is asserted that pouring of concrete was started before bedrock was reached.

DAWES PLAN IMPERILED BY BRITISH EMPIRE ROW

Fate of League Also Involved as Dominions Fight to Hold Independence Status

BY EUGENE J. YOUNG

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

[Copyright, 1925, by Eugene J. Young.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—While the Finance Ministers of the allied nations have been solemnly debating in Paris how to divide the money that is expected to come from Germany under the Dawes plan, nobody seems to have given much attention to what is happening in Germany affecting the success of that vital plan. There seems to be a pretty general idea that the plan will succeed by its own pressure and that nobody need to be concerned about the workings of it.

Yet, if the plan is to succeed, Germany must be behind it solidly and energetically. It goes without saying. Germany cannot get behind anything effectively unless there is a sound and stable government which can speak for the nation and see that everything is done properly. For weeks there has been no real government in Berlin. No real government is in sight. There are officials who carry on the routine, but there is no mastery, no center of authority, no definition of policy. Germany is marking time. Meanwhile the Berlin editors and correspondents of American newspapers discuss whether a government can be formed which will give loyal support to the Dawes Plan.

Most of the trouble in Germany has arisen out of the decision of the Allies not to evacuate the Cologne area and the region north of it the 10th inst., as provided in the Versailles Treaty, on the ground that Germany had violated the disarmament provisions of the treaty. Germany kept the 10th inst. as a day of morning. The militarists, the war breeders, the haters of France, are back at their old work of stirring up a desire for revenge. They are having such success that it can now be forecast the Dawes Plan will be put in grave danger unless a way is found to bring about the evacuation of Cologne and the Ruhr area in the near future.

That problem, and not the one of sharing moneys to be paid years hence, is the one calling for the immediate attention of the Allied statesmen. They know it and they held the financial conference in the hope of getting rid of some troublesome differences before they tackled the main question. They are faced with the necessity of making an entire new deal under circumstances which will strain all their resources of accommodation.

France demands security pledges backed by Britain before she will give up her grip on the Ruhr district and the Northern Rhineland. Britain solemnly agreed to find some way of guaranteeing French security as part of the price for French acceptance of the Dawes Plan. That security was provided to French satisfaction in the Geneva Protocol, the so-called arbitration and security compact drafted at the League of Nations Assembly in September. But the refusal of the British dominions to accept the protocol has wrecked this solution and it is up to Britain to find some other way to carry out the pledge to France.

If only Britain itself and the London Foreign Office were concerned it might be possible to do some tall trading with France and reach a solution. But under the system worked out during and after the war, Britain cannot bind her self-governing dominions to any course of action without their consent. France would not be disposed to accept any guarantee which did not bind Canada, Australia, South Africa, Ireland and New Zealan. But the dominions at this moment are plainly indicating they will not give assent to any such program.

Until they can be brought into line there can be no new deal affecting the chief European problems; and they are not likely to be brought into line until the London government does something substantial to heal vexations it has caused in the dominions by some of its recent acts and gives guarantees which will settle doubts of its good faith.

The dominions are vexed because the Tory government has undertaken to question their right to be treated as nations by the League of Nations, by the evident coldness of the Tories toward the League and by an attempt to make their activity within the League subject to an imperial conference. They feel the imperialists are once more trying to whittle away the independence won in the war—and they are not going to consent to any such process, even if Europe has to stew another period of years.

I have often pointed out the remarkable results which have flowed from Britain's attempt to give the shadow of freedom to the dominions without the substance; but now the situation is taking on farcical aspects. London solemnly undertakes to speak for the empire, and the empire then upsets the arrangements London makes. London asks the empire to get together in conference and decide on a new policy; the empire responds that a conference will get nowhere, because the dominions cannot know what their attitude shall be until there is a policy on which their Parliaments can pass; then London again solemnly tries to make another policy and the dominions find it won't do—and the whirligig takes another spin. That has been going on ever since the peace conference.

The whole difficulty arises out of this state of facts: At the Paris Peace Conference the dominions demanded their own delegations and the right to sign the treaty for themselves. They recognized the common fealty to the King-Emperor but not to the London government. They also demanded separate membership in the League of Nations. Britain was in no situation to refuse and they had their way. Ever since there has been a contest between the London Foreign Office and the dominions over the question of who should conduct the foreign relations of the empire.

The Foreign Office has tried in various ways to force its leadership. Lloyd George's sudden summons for the empire to make war on the Turk and the later effort to ignore the dominions in the Lausanne and Dawes plan conference were such attempts—in each case completely defeated by the refusal of the dominions to accept the leadership.

After the Dawes plan row, the dominions were given to understand that such a thing would never occur again. Premier MacDonald, in fact, attempted to bring them into a conference which should settle once for all how foreign affairs could be conducted with full participation of the dominions.

The present Baldwin government, however, has reopened the controversy in a way which threatens to cause a very grave crisis for the empire as well as a lot of trouble for Europe. While the Labor party was in power Ireland registered with the League the "treaty" with Britain which gave the Irish Free State the same status as Canada under the crown. In taking this action Ireland fulfilled the letter of the League Covenant. All members of the League are obligated to file treaties made with other members. The Secretariat sent out notices to the other members that the "treaty" had been registered.

The MacDonald government did nothing about it; but the Baldwin government filed notice at Geneva that the agreement was a matter of domestic concern of the empire and not of the League. This action was called by the Manchester Guardian "the worst of all mistakes in foreign policy." In effect it said that Ireland was not a nation even though it was a member of the League of Nations. As Ireland has the same status as Canada that dictum affected Canada also; and the other dominions.

London heard in no uncertain terms what Ottawa, Dublin and Cape Town thought of this coup. An attempt was made to placate the dominions. Colonial Minister Amery—who has authority over dominion matters—took occasion to try to define their status in a most remarkable utterance. He said "the British Empire is both a league of free and independent nations and an indivisible unit." Having thus made both fish and fowl of the dominions he served notice that "whenever any conference of nations meets to decide vital issues, the world will have to recognize the fact that every member of the British League of Nations is entitled to be represented separately and on an equality with other nations if it wishes at such conferences for discussion of the business on hand."

This nebulous assurance having been given, the Baldwin government at the end of December undertook to call an imperial conference to decide what should be the attitude of the empire on the Geneva Protocol, as the dominions had shown they would not except the protocol, it was understood—and plainly intimated in London—that the purpose was to agree on some new means of carrying out the pledge to give security to France. Foreign Secretary Chamberlain virtually promised the League Council at its Rome meeting that such a conference would be held in time to give the British attitude on the protocol at the March meeting of the Council.

But there is no reason to believe at this moment that such a conference will be held. Canada has said shortly that all necessary discussions can be carried on by cable. Ireland has let it be known that the dispute over her League status must be settled before she will enter upon any other discussions of foreign relations. South Africa supports this attitude. Canada and South Africa have intimated in Geneva that they will reply to London by appointing permanent envoys to the League.

The dominions are the more determined because they have long been suspicious of the attitude of the British Tories toward the League of Nations. They feel there is a design in London to ignore and destroy that body and, because it is the charter of their nationhood, they insist it shall be upheld. So they have no desire to go into an imperial conference and decide policies

Heart and Kidney Diseases Caused By Torpid Liver

Blood carries body poisons through the system to vital organs

To clear our systems of poison toxins that taint the blood and break down health, we must keep the liver regulated. Medical science now knows that the liver is our most important organ because it destroys the body poisons that cause diseases of the heart, kidneys, blood vessels, create high blood pressure and premature old age.

When the liver becomes torpid, these poisons, instead of being destroyed, are carried through the system by the blood. Then Nature gives quick warnings. You have sudden sick headaches, dizzy spells and nausea. If your stomach is acid from sour bile and your skin becomes sallow or blotchy, you may know poisons are in your blood.

The liver cannot be regulated by drugs, but there is a safe Nature substance which will act directly on the liver. The discovery is purified ox gall.

Get from your druggist a package of Dioxol. Each tablet contains ten drops of purified ox gall. In 24 hours the poison toxins will be removed. Your liver will be regulated. Blood purification will begin. Sallow skin will clear. You will feel so much better you will know you have found the cause of your ill health. Dioxol tablets are harmless, tasteless and cost less than two cents each.

These genuine ox gall tablets are prepared only under the name "Dioxol." If any tablet is offered you under another name, refuse it. Accept only Dioxol in the original, genuine package.—[Advertisement.

NEUREX

World's Greatest System Builder and Nerve Tone is Widely Endorsd

Radiant health
Von Rensselaer

The actual experience of many hundreds of people who had been sufferers from attacks of system undermining diseases, that have been restored by the Neurex System Treatment would if printed in book form make many large volumes, but we know that a fifteen-day treatment with Neurex Tablets is more convincing than thousands of other people's testimony, as Neurex Tablets positively assist in upbuilding and replenishing wasted and worn-out gland tissue.

A decline in nervous vitality, both mentally and physically unfits men and women for their usual work or social duties and to those whose state of health is in an impaired condition and who need a genuine system builder and nerve tonic, we advise that they immediately give NEUREX SYSTEM BUILDING TABLETS a thorough trial.

Neurex is on sale at Owl and Sun Drug Stores and other leading drug stores, or direct by mail if your druggist cannot fill your order. Price, $1.50.

DRINK WATER TO HELP WASH OUT KIDNEY POISON

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.—[Advertisement.

TELLS HOW TO BEAUTIFY HAIR

Has Devoted Over Forty Years of Study to Hair and Scalp Troubles.

Prof. John H. Austin, bacteriologist, hair and scalp specialist of Chicago, who has been with the May Co.

for the past 10 years, says that it is really remarkable that so few men and women nowadays possess an abundant growth of beautiful healthy hair. Prof. Austin is probably right in saying that so little is generally known about the hair and scalp that when trouble actually arises the person afflicted turns to anything recommended by anybody and usually the results are disastrous.

Science has proved that different ailments of the hair and scalp require different treatments. The particular trouble with which your hair or scalp is afflicted must be known before it can be intelligently treated.

Guesswork is of no practical value concerning hair troubles. Prof. Austin has found that only a powerful microscope can determine the exact trouble with which the hair or scalp is afflicted.

FREE MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATION of the hair and scalp. Both men and women invited. Prof. Austin's private office hours, 10 to 12 and 2 to 4. Mezzanine floor The May Co., Eighth and Broadway.

Why Many Mothers Are Thin and Pale

No one perhaps suffers a greater drain on strength, nerve force and vitality than the woman who has children to care for. Yet Science has now perfected a remarkable new strength-giving combination which has enabled thousands of nervous tired-out mothers, often in only a few short weeks, to build up and renew their strength, energy and physical and mental endurance.

Any doctor will tell you that a great many mothers lack sufficient iron—organic iron—in the blood. Without sufficient of this organic iron nothing you eat does you the proper amount of good. You don't get the strength out of it, so you become weak, pale and haggard-looking, nervous, irritable and easily upset.

In such cases what you need is organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to enrich the blood, and revitalize worn-out nerves. For Nuxated Iron is organic iron, like the iron in your blood, and like that in spinach and lentils. Try it for just two weeks and notice the marvelous improvement. Money back if not delighted. But be sure you get genuine Nuxated Iron, with the letters NI on every tablet. This is the only kind sold under this absolute guarantee. At all good druggists.—[Advertisement.

Costs Only 3 Cents to Remove Your Wrinkles

Better than massage for removing wrinkles and age lines, far less expensive and bothersome, is a simple tarkroot mixture which any woman can prepare and apply in a jiffy. Almost immediately after spreading this over the face there is a pleasant, soothing sensation and the mirror shows the horrid age lines and "sags" disappearing like magic. In less than fifteen minutes the face is as smooth and firm as a schoolgirl's. Seems almost too good to be true, but the actual experience quickly removes all doubt.

All one need do is to procure an original package of tarkroot from the druggist, mix a spoonful with a spoonful of lemon juice and apply with the fingers. This, of course, is perfectly harmless. It is easily washed off, leaving the face wonderfully refreshed and rejuvenated, with a healthy glow. And the cost of such treatment is 3 cents!—[Advertisement.

Declares Los Angeles Must Lead in Creations

People Told to Demand the Best at Stores

BY OLIVE GRAY

"If Los Angeles rises to the possibilities of her environment, she has a future unrivaled by any city of modern times." This is the belief expressed by Arthur Fairchild, New York member of the Fairchild Publications. Mr. Fairchild is at the Biltmore and is paying his first visit to the Pacific Coast.

"With a climate surpassing that of any country on earth," said Mr. Fairchild, "Los Angeles is privileged to create, in the line of manufactures and sports attire, something entirely distinctive and in keeping with her inspiring outdoor life. She should not follow in established lines, aping the products of others, but should lead into fields novel and distinctive. Conditions here are such as to prompt to originality in all lines of endeavor, and especially in all which pertains to recreation in the great open."

COMPETENT TO JUDGE

Arthur Fairchild, as one of the Fairchild Brothers, publishers of Women's Wear, Daily News Record, Men's Wear in New York and of the Chicago Apparel Gazette, has represented his organization in all leading countries and cities of the world and is competent to judge of conditions as few are.

Unbiased in his view of matters here, Mr. Fairchild's enthusiasm is vital and unbounded; yet his keen business sense sees for us a pitfall in the very favorable conditions existing here—a danger such as that prevailing in the lives of those too well favored by Fortune.

"It is not enough that your manufacturers, your producers, bring forth something merely just as good as that made elsewhere: They should achieve that which is better, far in advance of what is done elsewhere. I mean to say that the wonderful environment should be translated into originality, into masterpieces impossible of creation elsewhere. Just as higher accomplishment is exacted from those possessed of education and talent, in the intellectual world, so those residing here, under conditions so remarkable, should be expected to produce something beyond that which is possible anywhere else. Their appeal should be not only that their merchandise is "made in Los Angeles" and, therefore, should be consumed here, but they should see to it that their weaves, their garments are so excellent, so in harmony with the life here that they outdo all such products anywhere.

GENIUS DEMANDED

"A wonderful new field here exists for the exercise and the development of genius in all lines of endeavor and not only should the effort to live up to this possibility, be put forth by those in creative lines, but a critical exaction is the duty of patrons, in order that a high plane of production be attained and maintained: just as a mother or a teacher not only encourages by appreciation, but by critical supervision eliminates faults, so should Angelenos, for the good of this wonderful land, exact the very finest and most original products."

The Fairchild organization is preparing to more closely cement relations with Los Angeles and Southern California, by augmenting its forces here, where among all merchandisers and manufacturers, both retail and wholesale, they long have been an authority upon matters of world trade and production.

Mr. Fairchild expressed amazement over the extensiveness of the manufacturing and wholesale trade existing here and voiced the highest commendation of that foresight and acumen which had led to the upbuilding of establishments both retail and wholesale, comparing more than favorably with those of other and older cities of the world.

Child is Fatally Burned by Fall Into Fireplace

Fatal burns were received by little Joseph Leslie, 4 years of age, when he tumbled into an open fireplace at his home at 1656 West Twentieth street yesterday.

The boy had climbed out of his bed without his mother's knowledge and apparently had stumbled into the fireplace while playing near it. He was removed to the Receiving Hospital but died in a few minutes.

NEGRO CLERIC NAMED IN ALIENATION SUIT

Charging a former friend with stealing the love of her minister husband, Mrs. Elizabeth Allen yesterday filed suit in Superior Court for $50,000 damages against Mrs. Lucy Hardeman. All of the parties involved in the case were said to be negroes. The husband whose affections Mrs. Hardeman is charged with having purloined is Rev. Mack Allen. The complaint recited that Mrs. Hardeman caused Rev. Allen to take her on an automobile trip to Richmond and back.

OWNER OF GIN-LADEN AUTO SEIZED BY DRYS

Jim Leonard, 2005 Highland avenue, was arrested by Federal prohibition agents yesterday on a charge of possessing and transporting intoxicating liquor in violation of the Volstead Act. He was released under $1000 bond. The agents reported finding six quarts of gin in an automobile owned by Leonard, in addition to a quantity of other liquor in a garage at the Highland-avenue address.

Savings of 25% to 50% on Many Feagans Diamonds-and Watches-and Jewelry and Silverware and Leather Wares and Imported Wares

The Feagans & Company store has established a reputation for always showing the new and the unusual. To maintain this reputation, our merchandise must be kept moving. It is better for us to take a loss on slow moving merchandise than to keep it in stock. Seasonal merchandise is much the same. It must be sold in its season.

That is why we are willing to sacrifice 25%, 33 1/3%, and in some cases, 50% on many beautiful diamond pieces, and on exquisite jewelry creations, and on fine watches, and on many fine leather wares, and on imported wares, and on clocks and silverware.

1924 was the biggest year in the history of this store, and December, 1924, was the biggest month in our history. So far, 1925 is substantially ahead of the same period for 1924—all of which indicates that the alert, aggressive Feagans & Company policy meets with the public's approval.

It should be clearly understood that all our stocks are not included in this great sale—but

NOTICIAS MUNDIALES DE ULTIMA HORA

En obsequio a nuestros numerosos amigos de habla española, y para beneficio de los lectores americanos de "The Times" que estudien esa lengua, publicamos diariamente esta columna en castellano, con un extracto de las más importantes noticias de última hora.

Buena parte del futuro progreso de Los Angeles, que es la metrópoli de los Estados Unidos que más cercana se halla a territorio latino-americano, habrá de depender de las relaciones que logremos establecer con nuestras hermanas, las repúblicas del sur. Para que lleguen a ser enteramente cordiales, no hay nada tan importante como que nuestros ciudadanos se familiaricen con la lengua castellana. Tan se dan cuenta de este hecho nuestros habitantes, que hay al presente más de 25.000 personas que estudian español en Los Angeles. A ellas les conviene leer todos los días esta columna, en la que encontrarán español correcto y enteramente moderno.

Los Científicos Londinenses Estudian la Teoría de Abrams

LONDRES, Enero 17.—La "caja mágica" del doctor Abrams, que por mucho tiempo había sido olvidada, ha vuelto a ocupar la atención pública, debido a una información publicada hoy por el Daily Express de Londres, en el que se hace referencia a un dictamen del Comité de Investigaciones Científicas, informe que, si ha sido interpretado con fidelidad, anuncia que "hay algo nuevo y maravilloso" en relación con la "caja" y que, por lo menos, amerita que se haga un profundo estudio del caso.

Entre los miembros del Comité, se cuenta a Sir Thomas Horder, médico del príncipe de Gales, y especialista en enfermedades de cáncer. También se incluye al doctor C. B. Heald, consejero médico del director de la Aviación Civil.

El dictámen fué leído anoche en la Asamblea de la Sociedad Real de Medicina y dice que varios amigos de los miembros del Comité les hicieron presente la conveniencia de no publicar los resultados de sus investigaciones; pero que, después de madura reflexión, decidieron no seguir el consejo, porque están convencidos de que solamente bienes podrán derivarse de la publicación del resultado de sus trabajos, en los que ha dominado un espíritu de sinceridad científica, trabajos cuyos pormenores consignan en su informe.

Advierten los informantes, sin embargo, que no debe darse mayor extensión a su opinión, juzgando que ellos han encontrado elementos curativos en la "caja"; sino consideraría limitada a aconsejar que se haga un estudio minucioso del asunto. Los comentarios del público son que probablemente se va a limitar el descubrimiento a una nueva forma de energía.

El doctor Albert Abrams, de San Francisco de California, practicó sus sistemas curativos en la referida población, donde murió hace pocos meses; su teoría era que los electrones son la base de la vida y el fundamento de la salud. Inventó un aparato al que llamó "reflexófono", por medio del cual, decía, podía descubrirse el cáncer. El diagnóstico, por medio del examen de una gota de sangre,—aseguraba el galeno—podría, no solo revelar la presencia de enfermedades, sino aun la edad del individuo, su raza, y la duración de su vida. Inventó también el aparato que llamó "oscilociasto", asegurando que por medio de él enviaba ondas eléctricas que contrarrestaran las existentes en el cuerpo enfermo.

El doctor Abrams dejó ordenada en su testamento, la construcción de un instituto de curación electrónica, el cual empezó a erigirse, pero antes de ser terminado, surgió oposición de parte de los herederos del doctor la que será resuelta judicialmente.

Francia se Prepara Para Combatir Levantamientos Comunistas

PARIS, Enero 17. — Rumores vagos, respecto a pretendidos levantamientos de los comunistas rojos, han llegado a oídos de la policía. Como medida de precaución, se han aumentado los gendarmes de vigilancia en los barrios sospechosos, ordenándose varias visitas domiciliarias para buscar las pruebas del movimiento que se dice esta preparandose. Se tiene la certidumbre de que la propaganda para soliviantar a los radicales ha encontrado un terreno fértil en el ánimo de muchos extranjeros que han llegado a Francia, dedicándose a trabajos de ínfima categoría.

Se Pide la Anulación del Tratado Entre Méjico y China

MEJICO, Enero 17.—La campaña anti-china, que se ha venido desarrollando en todo el territorio mejicano, durante los últimos seis meses, ha adquirido proporciones tales, que la Cámara de Diputados recibió una solicitud pidiendo que sea anulado el tratado de amistad y comercio entre China y Méjico, que está vigente.

La solicitud fué elevada por la Sociedad Anti China "Pro Raza" apoyada por varios de los diputados por Sonora, Sinaloa y Nayarit y por algunos líderes políticos de la Baja California. El memorial exige que la Cámara tome enérgicas medidas para contrarrestar la perniciosa invasión de asiáticos a Méjico, acusando los solicitantes de lenidad las leyes vigentes de inmigración, ya que no impiden el constante influjo que están adquiriendo los orientales, y que está minando el terreno a los obreros mejicanos, en toda la Costa Occidental. Se acusa a los chinos de no traer beneficio alguno a Méjico; de que los ahorros que hacen en su trabajo o negocios, son capitales que van a beneficiar solamente a China, pues nunca son invertidos en Méjico.

Los firmantes del memorial piden también que no se admita la nacionalización de ciudadanos chinos en Méjico y que se prohiba que contraigan matrimonio con mujeres mejicanas. Se hace mención de que la guerra "tong" en el lado mejicano de la frontera de California y el control de las casas de juego por los chinos, han sido causa de muchos choques sangrientos y de que las autoridades hayan tenido que intervenir para someterlos al orden.

Los solicitantes han sido impulsados a dar este paso, por haber sabido la influencia que está ejerciendo el dinero chino para obtener concesiones de colonización en la Baja California y Sonora. Se calcula que la población china en Méjico es de 30,000, de los cuales 20,000 residen en Sonora y la Baja California.

Una Compania Industrial Construira Una Bodega de $250,000

El Señor John Heyman, vicepresidente de la Multy Steel Company, de Chicago, quien está de paso en esta ciudad y se aloja en el Hotel Ambassador, ha declarado a los representantes de la prensa que, en atención al desarrollo tan grande que han tenido los negocios de la Compañía que representa, en Los Angeles, ha sido resuelto que se construya una bodega para almacenar los productos de la referida negociación industrial, para facilitar su distribución. La construcción importará $250,000 y tendrá capacidad para $1,000,000 de productos. Probablemente dentro de un año construirá la misma Compañía una segunda bodega, para almacenar los productos que no quepan en la primera, si sus operaciones continúan en la escala ascendente que han estado ultimamente.

KEARNS AND HAYES SUED FOR $50,000

Boys Hurt in Auto Crash Name Manager and Trainer of Jack Dempsey

Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, and Theodore Hayes, trainer for the pugilist, were made defendants in two suits filed in Superior Court yesterday by Edward S. Ryan and Lester R. Gates, Whittier High School students, as the result of an automobile accident near Puente the 12th inst. Each of the plaintiffs asked $25,000 damages.

The boys stated they were driving on the highway at a reasonable speed when an automobile owned by Kearns and driven by Hayes approached at a high speed from the opposite direction. The defendants' car was declared to be racing with another vehicle.

Seeing themselves in imminent danger of a collision with the defendants' car, the plaintiffs asserted, they turned their automobile from the highway and ran into a tree, the impact throwing them from the machine and resulting in their suffering severe injuries. The complaints were prepared by Attorneys Wilbert C. Hamilton and Frank S. Adams.

Heber J. Grant Tells Origin of Deseret State

How Mormons under Brigham Young, president of their church, in 1847 raised the American flag at Ensign Peak, just north and east of Salt Lake City, to set up a new State called Deseret, was related at the Utah-Idaho picnic in Sycamore Grove, South Pasadena, yesterday by Heber J. Grant, president of the church.

He said the State embraced parts of California, Colorado and Idaho and all of Nevada, Arizona and Utah. The name Deseret was said to be the word for honey bee in the language accredited by Mormons to the original civilization in ancient America.

Mr. Grant has been here a week resting at the home of David C. Howell, 333 South Kingsley Drive. He will return to Salt Lake City Monday. While here he visited several of the fifteen Mormon congregations in Los Angeles county. He was a guest and principal speaker at the picnic yesterday, which was attended by between 1500 and 2000 persons, it was said. Many of the former residents of Utah and Idaho took basket lunches to the picnic grounds and spent the whole of the day talking over old and new times in their native States.

LAST DRIVE LAUNCHED BY COMMERCIAL CLUB

Launching of the last drive for memberships in the new Commercial Club of Southern California which ultimately is expected to reach 2500 is to be started this week, it was announced yesterday by the club membership committee. J. Ward Cohen, the club organizer, expects the drive to be especially productive in view of the proposed increase in membership costs slated for the near future. With the excavating work on the club site completed, architects are pushing the detailed plans for the building.

BILL ASKS BAR CORPORATION

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17. — Authority would be given for incorporation of the American Bar Association under a bill reported by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Start Something--with $60
Own $750-a-Year!

"Sixty Men out of Eighty-five reach the age of 65 without a Dollar"

By John E. Kennedy

A SERMON in fourteen words:

There it is—on Market St., San Francisco!

Set in blazing electric lights over a tall building—to-wit:

"Sixty men out of Eighty-five reach the age of 65 without a Dollar."

What better sermon than this by Church or State, could be preached to the Improvident!

And who ARE the Improvident?

Not Thee or Me,—of course!

But,—according to the electric Sermon on the Street,—"THEY" are 60 out of EACH 85 average Americans.

The great national game of "Living up to Lizzie" has much to do with this appalling Improvidence.

Rainbow Chasing, — Dwelling in a Fool's Paradise while we are Young,—to experience the Hell of Poverty and Dependence when we grow old or disabled.

Giving no thought to TOMORROW so long as the Sun of Prosperity shines for us TODAY.

Do YOU know anyone to whom THAT applies?

CAPITAL and "Income" are two different Horses.

We may have $12,500 Cash Capital invested in 6% Bonds, and receive from it $750-a-Year Income.

We may have $18,750 Capital hoarded in Savings Banks and receive from it—at 4% interest,—$750-a-Year Income.

But,—$2115 shrewdly invested in certain Guaranteed Income Property CAN produce that same $750-per-Year Income, too.

And, deducting from that $2115 price the $1050 of Cash Rentals you would receive, reduces its Net Cost to $1065.

Would you be interested in a prospective "$750-a-Year" Income from SUCH a Net Investment?

If so, THIS is the time to ACT.

With $60 you can now Found $750-a-Year Income

WITH a Down Payment of $60 Cash, plus $30-a-Month for 8 months, and $25 per Month average thereafter, you can do this:

You can own a piece of Guaranteed Income Property which will earn for you in Net Rentals alone, more than 10% Yearly, on Principal and Interest invested WHILE YOU ARE PAYING FOR THE PROPERTY.

You would receive outright Grant Deed to that Property, with Title Guarantee by a responsible Title Insurance Co., Free and Clear and in your name, on payment of One-Seventh its price in Cash with 5% Mortgage Notes for the balance.

That 10% NET EARNING is no mere Figure of Speech or promotional "Say-So."

Because,—it consists of Cash Rentals payable to you yearly, on highly productive California Income Property,—payment of which Rentals are GUARANTEED in writing by a $25,000,000 Concern of highest standing.

And,—after you have fully paid up the Purchase price of this Income Property, it should thereafter yield you $750-a-Year Income.

That opinion is predicated upon Investigations and Reports by The American Appraisal Co. whose valuations are accepted by large Banks everywhere as the basis of Property-Loans.

(Two of these Units should yield you $1500-a-Year in Net Income, or three of them $2250-a-Year Income.)

Now, have YOU got the $60 necessary to make the initial payment on Income Property, which first yields you $1050 in Cash Rentals GUARANTEED by a $25,000,000 Concern,—and later should produce $750-a-Year Income with reasonable certainty and continuity?

If you have, ACT PROMPTLY.

Because, Four-Fifths of this Guaranteed Income Property has already been sold.

ONE HELD IN KNIFE FIGHT

Trail of Blood Leads Police from Slashed Man to Home of Supposed Assailant

Victim of a knife fight after which he almost bled to death without medical treatment, Macario Cruz, 33 years of age, was found by the police early yesterday at 2305 Enterprise street.

A trail of blood was said by Detective Lieutenants Parsons and Vail of the Police Flying Squadron to have led them from the Cruz home to 2335 Hunter street where they took into custody Joe Cliscerl on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon. The knife fight was believed to have taken place at the Hunter-street address.

Detectives Parsons and Vail hurried to the Cruz home when George Cruz, brother of the stabbed man, notified the police that he had returned home and had found his brother lying in a front room in a pool of blood. The officers found that Cruz had lost so much blood that he was unable to talk and they ordered him removed to the Receiving Hospital. Little hope was held out for his recovery there but he revived in the General Hospital later and it was said that he had some chance of recovery.

Leading from the Cruz home, according to the officers, was a trail of red splotches which guided them to the address where Cliscerl was found. Detective Lieutenant Ballestero of the Latin detail took charge of the investigation and announced that he did not believe that Cliscerl had been in the fight, although it was practically certain that he had been there and that he was shielding the knife wielder.

MAINE MAN TO SPEAK

H. P. Rub it right on your painful back, and instantly the soreness, stiffness and lameness disappears. Don't stay crippled! Get a 35 cent bottle of St. Jacobs Oil from your druggist. A moment after it is applied you'll wonder what became of the backache or lumbago, pain.

In use for 65 years for lumbago, backache, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism or sprains. Absolutely harmless. Doesn't burn the skin.

OLD-TIME COLD CURE—DRINK TEA!

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of this hamburg tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacupful at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.—[Advertisement.

LYNWOOD FIGHT GROWS SERIOUS

Effigy of Former Trustee Hanged at City Hall

Officers Intervene to Halt Possible Bloodshed

Armed War Over Policies of Civic Board Feared

Detectives from the District Attorney's office yesterday intervened to prevent possible bloodshed in Lynwood's long smouldering political war. They acted after an effigy of F. M. Downey, until recently a City Trustee at Lynwood, had been found hanging at half mast from the flagpole of the Lynwood City Hall.

The effigy had been placed on the flagpole sometime early yesterday morning, it was determined, and residents of the town, fearing an armed outbreak, appealed to the District Attorney's office for action.

The action at Lynwood is declared to be tense and it was stated at the District Attorney's office yesterday that further action will be taken at once in an effort to bring about an agreement between the two war-like factions.

It was as a result of this bitter feeling that Mr. Downey and the other four members of the City Board of Trustees resigned last week to restore harmony. Their resignation came after petitions for the recall of Mr. Downey had been circulated through the town.

A new board was immediately formed to administer the affairs of the city. It is composed of Jackson F. Tweedy, G. C. Holz, H. J. Shouten, Rollin A. Plunket and H. E. Zeiser. Members of the old board, it was stated, had been co-operating with the new board but the hanging of Mr. Downey in effigy has disrupted relations.

Investigators Reimer, White and Chriss of the District Attorney's office, who investigated the affair, reported that they had discovered the man who placed the effigy on the flagpole but stated they would take no action against him at the present time to prevent a possible crisis. This man, they stated, had made repeated demands on the old board for the dismissal of certain city employees but had been rebuffed.

PHONE RISE TO BE FOUGHT

Citizens' Committee to Ask Rehearing on Ground Increased Rate Granted is Excessive

That a battle against the new telephone rates will be launched tomorrow with the Railroad Commission jointly by the city and the general citizens' telephone committee of which Louis B. Mayer is chairman was decided upon yesterday at a meeting held at the Chamber of Commerce attended by City Attorney Stephens and members of the committee.

After the new rates were announced the committee asked the City Attorney to examine the commission's findings and recommend to the committee the action he advised. The City Attorney yesterday recommended that a joint application be filed by the city and the committee with the Railroad Commission attacking the commission's findings and asking for a rehearing. The committee adopted the City Attorney's recommendations and the City Council is expected to do likewise tomorrow.

City Attorney Stephens said that the application for a rehearing will be directed against the new rates on the ground that they will yield a larger return to the Southern California Telephone Company than is justified by the company's needs. Compulsory measured service, as allowed by the commission, also will be attacked as well as the increased business rates and the separate exchange for Culver City and other adjacent communities.

Engineer John J. Dillon, who assisted the committee and the City Attorney in the fight against excessive higher rates, submitted estimates showing that Los Angeles business houses will pay under the new rate, in some cases, between 300 per cent and 400 per cent higher prices for services than they are paying now. One firm now paying $850 a month for telephone service, will pay under the new rate $3250 a month, it was stated.

Those present at yesterday's conference, besides Chairman Mayer and City Attorney Stephens and Engineer Dillon, included President R. W. Pridham and Secretary A. G. Arnoll of the Chamber of Commerce, Stanley Anderson of Beverly Hills, Leslie R. Saunders of the East Side Association, County Counsel Bishop, J. R. Coffman and Robert Sangster.

CATHOLIC FILM GUILD WILL MEET MONDAY

The Catholic Motion-Picture Actors' Guild will meet at the Hollywood Women's clubhouse next Monday evening. Jack Coogan, Sr., will preside at the business session in connection with the forthcoming benefit performance of the "Minstrel Boy," at the Philharmonic Auditorium on February 2, and Eugene O'Brien will deliver an address.

After the business conference members of the moving-picture colony will present an informal entertaining program contributed by Mildred Costello, Jack Caulfield, Letty Penn, Dorothy Vogel, Luke Cosgrave, Otto Lederer, the Hollywood Trio and the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet," with Camille Edgar and Douglas Montgomery using the special scenic arrangement designed by Roger Sterrett.

Seem to Begin Year

to Review Work for White Spot

M. & M. Directors for Monday

is twenty-ninth year service for the indus- and civic life of and beginning an- still greater activity, maintaining and peace and harmony in relations, the Mer- Manufacturers' Associ- its annual banquet Angeles Biltmore on 26th inst., at 7 p.m. committee in of F. W. Black, chairman; F. N. Couch, A. J. Goldwater, Paul G. Hoffman, W. C. Kennedy, F. B. McComas, R. L. McCourt, Maynard McFie, G. A. Miller, Charles H. Toll and M. H. Whittier, is preparing a program of unusual interest and enjoyment. Charles F. Stern, executive vice-president of the First National Bank and president of the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank, will be the toastmaster.

Irwin H. Rice, president, will present his annual report and speak of many things of interest and importance to the association and to the community. Among other things, he will trace briefly the history of the association, covering the six years during which he has served as president, and will discuss the newer philosophy and methods of the association in handling labor and open-shop problems.

A. L. Weil, vice-president and general counsel of the General Petroleum Corporation, will speak on the subject of "Oil and Its Economic Relation to Southern California."

A brief keynote speech, giving a general forecast for 1925, will be given by a man who is thoroughly capable of handling that subject.

The vital problems of taxation, which today are confronting every business man, will be discussed by a recognized authority in this field.

The White Spot is still white, and, to a very large degree, its whiteness is due to the existing freedom in local labor matters. This condition has been created and maintained by the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, acting on behalf of the business interests, over a long period of time.

The primary purpose of the organization is the perpetuation of this condition in industrial relations, it being self-evident that the greater the city, the greater the asset represented by open-shop conditions.

Next Monday the annual election of directors of the association will be conducted at the Merchants' and Manufacturers' headquarters, 1003-9 Van Nuys Building, the hours for voting being between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. On the 22nd inst. the new board of directors will meet and elect officers for the ensuing year.

The official ballot for directors includes the following names: Godfrey Edwards of Edwards & Wildey, N. W. Kelloway of Kelloway-Ide Company, John Pike of California Cyanide Company, I. H. Rice of George Rice & Sons, Hugh F. Stewart of Farmers' and Merchants' Bank, and M. H. Whittier.

The directors who will serve unexpired terms for the year are Earl C. Anthony of Earle C. Anthony Company, F. W. Black of California National Supply and Union Tool Company, John Coffin of California Furniture Company, Archibald Douglass of Pacific Clay Products Company, H. M. Eichelberger of Pioneer Paper Company, Louis Isaacs of Isaacs Brothers, P. L. McDonald of L. A. Planing Mill Company, W. M. Mines, and James Woods, Hotel Biltmore.

The nominating committee consists of James Woods, chairman; John Coffin, E. A. Geissler, Rowe Sanderson and Waller Taylor.

"Ten - Twenty - Five" Puts Caller in Quandary as to Meaning

Is ten-twenty-five a room number or a point of time?

A man walked in to the main office of the State Corporation Department, 1008 Pacific Finance Building, yesterday at 9 a.m. He asked to see Engineer Abel.

The clerk called the engineer by telephone and then reported:

"Mr. Abel is in and can see you at ten-twenty-five." The man went out.

Promptly at 10:25 a.m. he returned and asked if he might keep his appointment. The clerk escorted him to room 1025, where Mr. Abel had been waiting.

Course Offered in Secretarial Work at U.S.C.

Considering the work of a secretary from the executive's point of view will be one of the phases of a course in secretarial science being given at metropolitan college, U.S.C., in the early morning hours. Following its policy of giving practical courses in a convenient location and at a convenient hour, this work is being offered as early as 7:45 a.m., so that persons who report for work not earlier than 8:45 in the morning can take advantage of it.

Ethics of the office, office practice, business correspondence and the development of plans for directing the work of the office day by day are included in the instruction. Advanced work in shorthand, with review of abbreviations and the shortening principles of Gregg shorthand will be combined with dictation, speed exercises and transcription, the latter so arranged that writers of other systems may benefit by them.

PLEDGES ON CHEST DUE FEBRUARY 1

Statements to be Mailed to Subscribers Not Paid to Second Quarter

Payments for the second quarter on pledges to the Los Angeles Community Chest fund will become due February 1, according to a statement issued yesterday by George M. Babcock, general manager of the Community Welfare Federation.

The Chest is now in its first month of actual operation and so successful have been the efforts so far, that little trouble is expected in obtaining money due in pledges at this time. Statistics issued from headquarters reveal that of the $2,522,408 needed to finance the 125 charitable institutions participating in the Chest this year, more than 40 per cent of the amount had been paid prior to December 31, last, and that this amount will probably be increased 10 per cent before February.

Each subscriber, who did not pay the entire amount of his pledge in November, will be mailed a statement February 1 for the amount due at this time. However, it was said that subscribers desiring to make payments now can do so by mailing check or money order to the Community Chest headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce Building.

That the community has already greatly benefited by the Chest, comes in the announcement made last night that, though actual dispensing of funds was not to commence until the 1st inst. several of the participating institutions were helped financially in November and December.

INQUIRY TO FIX BLAME FOR CRASH

Board to Meet Tomorrow Morning in Interurban, Engine Wreck

Responsibility for the injury of four persons Friday afternoon in a crash between a Covina interurban of the Pacific Electric and two coupled engines of the Southern Pacific will be determined by a board of inquiry to meet tomorrow morning at 9 a.m. under the direction of W. H. Whelan, division superintendent of the Southern Pacific.

The accident occurred at about 6 p.m. Friday at the intersection of Alameda and Aliso streets. The interurban, a four-car outbound Covina train, was struck by the engines which were moving south on Alameda street at a speed estimated at between ten and twelve miles an hour. Four persons were injured, one seriously.

Confusion of signals is believed to have caused the accident. According to the story of the train crews the gates were not down at the crossing. The warning bell was being sounded, however, the towerman and engine crew declared.

A go-ahead signal was given by the ground flagman to the interurban, according to the motorman. The flagman said he could not see the lights of the engine because of the glare from automobile lights coming in the same direction.

The towerman said he was unable to get the gates lowered because the Covina train followed too closely another interurban. He said he was ringing the warning bell, however.

Fever Patients Are Taken Out of Branch Jail

City health officers yesterday completed arrangements with the General Hospital to care for scarlet fever sufferers from the Lincoln Heights Jail. Chief Police Surgeon E. G. Goodrich had diagnosed the ailment of eleven prisoners as scarlet fever and had announced that 400 of the 700 prisoners in the jail had been exposed to the malady. Eight of the sufferers were transported to the hospital, where scarlet fever tests showed positive on three and at the same time a close watch was placed on the jail for the outbreak of other cases.

VOTE OF CONFIDENCE GIVEN C. J. COLDEN

SAN PEDRO COMMERCE BODY COMES TO DEFENSE OF ACCUSED OFFICIAL

Confidence in C. J. Colden, president of the Board of Harbor Commissioners, was expressed by the directors of the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce in a resolution it has adopted and filed with the City Council and the Board of Harbor Commissioners. President Colden was recently sued by former President McKee of the board.

In their resolution the directors of the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce said they "had been privileged for years to have C. J. Colden as a friend and neighbor" and that despite many obstacles he had met in his official position he had "met them all as a man and had remained true to himself and his friends."

The directors "reiterated their entire confidence and in and respect for Mr. Colden and their esteem for him," and said that the directors "know that the final verdict will be in his favor." The resolution was signed for the directors by President A. E. Henning and Secretary R. H. Beaton of the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce.

COMMERCE PACT PARLEY FAILS

France, Germany Unable to Reach Agreement

Situation Not to be Taken as Tariff War

Teuton Attitude Puzzle to Trade Experts

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

PARIS, Jan. 17.—The German and French delegations which have been engaged in negotiations tending to a commercial agreement, both now convinced there is little possibility of coming to any agreement, have agreed that the situation shall not be considered on either side as a tariff war and that neither side will take any measures of reprisal. Each country will impose its maximum tariffs and let it go at that, for the present.

Such a situation, however, it is said, can not last long because France would be a heavy loser since her maximum tariffs, even in the bill increasing duties which is now before the Chamber of Deputies are far lower than the German rates.

The French government, it is understood, will make no move for the present but if the Germans remain obdurate when the tariff bill finally comes up for a vote in Parliament, measures are proposed that will adequately protect French trade and industry.

Government officials interested in the question and members of Parliament who have specialized in trade matters say they are puzzled to account for Germany's attitude, since, in several respects, she is bound to suffer as well as France. In some quarters it is held that the Germans refuse to make any concessions in favor of Alsatian products because they think they can intensify the resentment of the Alsatians to the French government. This resentment has already been provoked by the proposed application of the French law for the separation of church and State to the recovered provinces.

The French government is continuing its efforts to find new markets for Alsatian products. It is estimated that the recovered provinces already have found markets for two-thirds of the products formerly exported to Germany.

The French, it is stated, will make the most of the new situation in the Saar Basin which, in ten years, will be called upon to decide by plebiscite whether it will become French or remain German.

The Saar products are treated on the same footing as those of the French in Germany. As the French customs frontier takes in the whole coal and iron region of the Saar, this territory's trade will be seriously harmed, it is thought, and a large extent turned from Germany. In the meantime, during the period of adoptation to new conditions it is belived there will likely be considerable unemployment and that the French will be able to exploit the consequent irritation in the same way the Germans may exploit the Alsatian dissatisfaction.

Some political leaders are of the opinion that if the Saar trade is driven toward France, votes may also be driven in the same direction when the plebiscite is taken.

The balance of trade in 1923 between France and Germany was in favor of France by a little over 100,000,000 francs.

DRYS SEIZE THREE CARS OF ALCOHOL

Half-Million Dollar Load of Contraband Taken at St. Paul, Minn.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

ST. PAUL, Jan. 17.—Three carloads of alcohol, said to be valued at $500,000, and which are alleged to have been taken secretly from a Philadelphia distillery, were seized here tonight by the Federal prohibition enforcement agents from Minneapolis, headed by Maurice Silverman, acting prohibition director for the Northwest.

On the 8th inst., Silverman said, he received a "tip" that the alcohol would be shipped from Philadelphia to the Twin Cities. He immediately sent six agents to eastern cities.

The shipment was traced to Elkhart, Ind., and then to Chicago, were four men who attempted to unload the alcohol were arrested. The three cars were attached to a St. Paul-bound freight train and the agents guarded the liquor until it reached here. The cars had been consigned to three different addresses her.

It was reported here that an investigation has been started at Philadelphia to determine how the road. Gen. Pershing arrived at lery.

She was kept afloat by her watertight bulkheads.

BIOGRAPHER FOR WILSON PICKED

R. S. Baker to Write Life of War President

Unsent Letter of Executive Causes Widow's Choice

Historic Records Will be Open to Author

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Woodrow Wilson's life and letters—the long awaited authorized biography and compilation of papers of the great war period will be done by Ray Stannard Baker of Amherst, Mass. Although the work will begin immediately it may require several years before it is ready for publication.

Mrs. Wilson, in making her decision as the former President's executor, was fortified by the knowledge that Mr. Wilson himself probably would have selected Mr. Baker for the work had he lived long enough to arrange it.

For, among Mr. Wilson's papers was found the last letter he wrote befort his final illness came upon him and it was addressed to Mr. Baker virtually promising him access to the precious papers which comprise the "inside story" of the great war, the peace at Paris and Mr. Wilson's life itself. The letter never was sent. It was dictated on January 25, 1924, when Mr. Wilson already was beginning to fail and on February 3 he died.

WILSON'S LETTER

The letter read as follows:

"Every time that you disclose your mind to me you increase my admiration and affection for you.

"I always dislike to make or even intimate a promise until I have at least taken some step to facilitate my keeping it. I am glad to promise you that with regard to my personal correspondence and similar papers, I shall regard you as my preferred creditor and shall expect to afford you the first—and if necessary, exclusive—access to those papers.

"But I have it on my consciance that you should know that I have not made the smallest beginning toward accumulating and making accessible the papers we have in mind. I would rather have your interpretation of them than of anybody else I know and I trust that you will not think it unreasonable that I should ask you to accept these promises in lieu of others which would be more satisfactory but which for the present, would be without practical value.

"Pray accept assurances of my unqualified confidence and affectionate regards."

PRIVATE RECORD

Mrs. Wilson said today that until after she had completed arrangements to do the work, Mr. Baker was not aware of the existence of the unsent letter.

"The matter to be placed in Mr. Baker's hands," said Mrs. Wilson, contains the entire private record in letters and documents of Mr. Wilson's service as President which includes two of the greatest events in history—the war and the peace. Part of this record is the immense private correspondence of the Presidency, some 30,000 letters and other innumerable documents. There are many of Mr. Wilson's own memoranda, some times written in short hand, which he used in making his notes and many written by him on his own typewriter. These notes will indicate the origin of many of his speeches and illuminate many of his notable acts. A flood of light should be thrown upon the war and many obscure points in the diplomacy of the peace.

UNHURRIED WORK

"Mr. Baker will have no restrictions whatever upon a full and truthful account. It will be an unhurried work, carefully verified at every point and studied with cooperation of many of Mr. Wilson's friends and associates. Since Mr. Wilson made no arrangement of all his papers himself, we appeal to the public and to all his friends for every scrap of information and every letter to help in the thorough preparation of his biography. Every contact with him, no matter how brief, will be of value, in completing the picture."

Previous to her announcement of Mr. Baker's selection, Mrs. Wilson told friends that what she wished most was to avoid selecting a "sympathetic biographer" because she knew her late husband would approve of her course.

Mr. Baker, a distinguished American writer, first knew Mr. Wilson while he was Governor of New Jersey, but their intimate association began at Paris during the peace conference. He spent several years thereafter in writing of the war President's works during which he saw him frequently and had an opportunity to study some of the material which will be used in the life and letters.

Overcharging on Liquor Hit at in Measure

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 17.—Overcharging by druggists for liquor prescribed by physicians or the adulteration of such liquors would be prohibited by a bill to be introduced in the California Legislature by Assemblyman Jonast of Hayward. Charging more than 40 per cent over the cost price is defined in the measure as overcharging and would constitute a misdemeanor. A penalty is also provided for any druggist or employee who adulterates liquors.

TOM AND BEBE NAMED FILM KING AND QUEEN

Thomas Meighan and Bebe Daniels last night were crowned "king and queen of motion pictures" at the annual ball given by the New York Theater Owners Chamber of Commerce at the Hotel Astor, New York City, according to word received here.

Miss Daniels and Meighan were elected for the honor after a contest in which practically all the outstanding favorites of the screen were nominated by their admirers. The result of the popularity poll was given in a telegram received yesterday by Hollywood officials of Paramount, with which organization both stars are under contract.

ROADS SCOFF AT OREGON ORDER

State Would Require New Lines be Built

Inconceivable, Union Pacific Says of Proposal

Challenges Interstate Body's Power in Request

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Railroad briefs filed today with the Interstate Commerce Commission sharply attacked the proposal of the Oregon Public Service Commission, which has the tentative indorsement of examiners of the Interstate Commerce Commission, that the roads be required to construct a network of new lines in Central and Eastern Oregon.

Examiner G. I. Kephart, assigned by the Federal commission to consider the proposal, filed some time ago a tentative report, which declared the extensions ought to be constructed and that the Interstate Commerce Commission had the power to force the step.

"The proposal now made is to reach into the treasury of the Union Pacific for funds to be used in new construction to an amount of approximately 70 per cent of the assessed value of the entire assessable property in all of the counties where construction is contemplated," the Union Pacific brief filed by H. A. Scandrett, in behalf of that system and the O.W.R. & N. Company, its subsidiary, declared.

"That such a suggestion is seriously made is at least disquieting, and that it should be seriously considered is inconceivable."

In addition to attacking the showing of the need for and the business possible on the new extensions suggested, the brief challenged the authority of the commission to grant the Oregon request in part or in whole.

"If the Interstate Commerce Act of Congress intended to grant authority to the commission to require railroads to build into new territory," it said, "Congress was without constitutional power to carry out its intention. The right of regulation over property already in service for common carrying gives no right to impose such a burden on property not dedicated to such service."

The Southern Pacific likewise joined in the protests. The briefs will be used along with the arguments before the commission when it comes to passing upon the Oregon commission's appeal and the examiner's finding upon it.

BRIEF ENDS INQUIRY ON ARMY MAN

Counsel Declares Quiz Implies Treason on Part of Capt. Hibben

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Counsel for Capt. Paxton Hibben today filed a final argument which closed, pending a decision, the investigation by a military board of charges that he engaged in "activities inimical to constituted government of the United States."

Maj. Joseph H. San, attorney for Capt. Hibben, declared that the inquiry by a military board to determine the fitness of the accused to continue as a reserve officer of the United States Army actually had become a trial, with treason the implied charge.

Furthermore, Maj. San asserted, it was a trial in which Capt. Hibben, whose asserted Communistic sympathies and associations were a basis for the inquiry, was denied the constitutional right to a presumption of innocence until guilt was established beyond reasonable doubt.

A protest was directed against the investigation of such grave charges before an informal board of officers at the instance of the War Department when the Attorney-General of the United States "called the charges 'slush' and refused to prosecute them."

The brief was submitted to Brig.-Gen. William Barclay Parsons of the Officers' Reserve Corps, who presided over the board of inquiry. He, with Col. Francis W. Perry and Maj. Gordon Reel, comprising the board, will report findings to the commanding general of the corps area, who will make recommendations to the Secretary of War.

Patagonia Trip is Completed by Pershing Party

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

CARMEN DE PATAGONES (Argentina) Jan. 17.—After a five-day trip across Patagonia on the recently constructed State Railroad, Gen. Pershing arrived at Viedma, capital of the Territory of Rio Negro, at 7 a.m. today. He was greeted by the acting Governor and other officials. Gen. Pershing then proceeded by special train to Bahia Blanca. He was in full uniform.

Angeleno Wins Writ Fight in Kidnap Charge

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—A writ of habeas corpus for the release of Joe Bernardo, San Francisco, whose case has brought about kidnaping charges against Sheriff Thomas Finn of San Francisco, and others, was filed in the State Supreme Court today. The writ was made returnable in Los Angeles on the 27th inst.

Bernardo, wanted here on a charge of failure to provide, was arrested in Los Angeles. While action on a habeas corpus plea was pending there, Bernardo was brought to San Francisco by Finn and the other officers. The kidnaping charge followed.

Seven hundred automatic telephones were recently put in use in Shanghai.

SHIPPING and Los Angeles Harbor NEWS

OVERHAUL WEEK FOR FLEET NEAR

Ships Now in Final Working Days Before Lay-up

Long-Range Tests Program Approaches Close

Noted Author Sailing from Local Port Tomorrow

The present week will be a busy one for the units of the Battle Fleet based at Los Angeles Harbor, the final working days at sea before the battleships enter on their first machinery overhaul week of the year. But seven of the twelve units of the battleship divisions will be in port all week.

Long-range battle practice will be fired tomorrow by the U.S.S. Idaho and U.S.S. New Mexico, over a 19,000-yard range off San Clemente, winding up the fleet's long-range gunnery schedule with the exception of the delayed firing of the practice next month by the U.S.S. Mississippi and U.S.S. Nevada.

Today the U.S.S. Tennessee will return from San Francisco, where she has been in drydock at Hunter's Point. Upon arrival she will be moored alongside the U.S.S. Medusa, fleet repair ship, in Berth A-1 for annual overhaul by her own and the Medusa's crew. It will be the first time in naval history that a capital ship has been overhauled outside a regularly equipped navy yard.

Four of the ships will spend overhaul week at outside ports. On the 20th inst., the three sixteen-inch gun ships West Virginia, Colorado and Maryland, will depart for San Francisco, where they will entertain the personnel of the Japanese Midshipmen's Squadron, due at that port on the 23rd inst. under command of Vice-Admiral S. Haykutake. The three ships will return to this port on February 2.

The U.S.S. Arizona will undergo her regular machinery overhaul at San Diego, going to the southern port on the 24th inst., and returning here on the 31st inst. Overhaul at this port will be undergone by the following ships: Mississippi, Idaho, New Mexico, California, Arizona and Oklahoma, the ships remaining in port all next week. The U.S.S. Pennsylvania, flagship of Battleship Division Three, is also due to depart for Puget Sound Navy Yard for overhaul on the 20th inst., and will rejoin the fleet here on March 27, next.

ZANE GREY TO GO ON EXPLORATION TRIP

Zane Grey, author, accompanied by his son Romer, and his brother, R. C. Grey, will leave Los Angeles on the Panama-Pacific liner Manchuria, Capt. J. Munro, which will sail tomorrow for New York. The writer and his relatives are going on the steamer as far as Panama, where they will be met by the writer's yacht "The Fisherman." From Panama the yacht will sail direct to the Galapagos Islands, 800 miles west of the southern coast of Mexico, to join the Beebe Scientific Expedition and assist in collecting specimens of marine life.

On the yacht's way north to this port, Grey's party will explore the Cocos Islands, the Pearl Islands, the Tres Marias and other groups along the coast, and the little-known Angel de la Guarda Island in the Gulf of California. They intend also to climb the San Pedro del Martir range in Lower California, whence few white men have returned, and touch the desert coast of Sonora.

The liner will arrive from San Francisco today with several thousand tons of freight and more than a hundred passengers and will take a similar number from here tomorrow. Among the passengers are M. Morgan, director of the California Orange Exchange, and Mrs. Morgan; Stephen E. Taylor, manager of the Western Title Insurance Company at San Jose, and Mrs. Taylor; J. Preston Penfield, president of the Preston Brick Company of New York, and Mrs. Penfield.

More than a hundred passengers are en route here from New York on the round-the-world Dollar liner President Adams, which left Gotham the 8th inst., on her fourth voyage around the world. Thirty passengers will disembark here, including Mrs. F. Roberts and Mrs. F. Roberts of Los Angeles, en route from New York.

Diversion of Mexican-bound Imperial Valley cotton through Los Angeles Harbor, which heretofore had gone to sea by way of San Diego, is indicated in the shipment of 2386 bales on the Norwegian motorship Beulah, which has been chartered by the Mexican States Line for one trip to Manzanillo. The cotton is destined for Guadalajara, and is the first of several expected in the near future through this port. It has been estimated that Mexican mills will take 15,000 bales of Southern California and Lower California cotton this year. Much of it is shipped from the Lower California side of the border, through the United States in bond, back to Mexico. Recent success of Los Angeles shippers in gaining a railway rate from Imperial Valley on a parity with San Diego is said to be responsible for diversion of the trade through this port. The Beulah is taking in all 1000 tons, including 125 tons of distilling machinery and tanks and barrels for Mazatlan.

The Japanese liner Bokuyo Maru of the T.K.K. Line is scheduled to arrive here tomorrow morning instead of today, on her maiden voyage in the Japan-California-South American trade. She is a new vessel and on her voyage across the Pacific last week carried almost 500 passengers and several thousand tons of freight. A large number of those passengers are bound for the Latin countries, while the liner will take on twenty more here, discharging an equal number and 400 tons of freight. The Bokuyo was designed to take the place of the liner Seiyo Maru, but the latter has been put back on the run in place of the Ginyo Maru, which recently suffered a disastrous fire off Manzanillo. The Ginyo Maru is now at the Mexican port, but will be towed to a California port for temporary repairs. She will then load lumber in the north under a short time charter and sail for Japan, where she will undergo permanent repairs.

The Dollar freight steamer Stanley Dollar will arrive late tonight with several thousand tons from the Atlantic Coast and will inaugurate the Dollar Line's new terminal and berth 232-A, Terminal Island, recently allocated by the Harbor Department.

Two ships making their first calls are due today, the York City, stopping for bunkers, en route from Vladivostok to the United Kingdom, 16,000 miles, with a full cargo of oriental merchandise, and the Japanese freighter Gyokoh Maru, also stopping for fuel oil, en route from Manila to Galveston for the Toyo Kisen Kaisha Line.

Monday will witness more than a score of callers, including the new Japanese liner Bokuyo Maru from the Orient, the liner Venezuela from New York and Central America with several score passengers, and the Dutch passenger and freight carrier Kinderdyk from Rotterdam. The Livenza also will make her first appearance tomorrow from Northern Europe with 4000 tons for local discharge. She is the second freighter of the new Italian line to call here, and will be followed by a dozen others.

News of Ships and Sailings at Pacific Ports

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—The motorship Fukko Maru, 2200 net tons, built in Japanese yards for the lumber trade, is due to sail soon from Japan for San Francisco, bound for North Pacific ports to load mill products. It flies the flag of Suzuki & Co., Ltd.

The westbound freight conference which will meet here Monday is scheduled to discuss changing permanently the meetings of the conference from a quarterly to a semiannual basis and holding alternate meetings in some northern city.

Operation of the new Encinal terminals at Alameda will be started February 1 next, it was announced today.

San Francisco shipping circles were today apprehensive that purchase by the syndicate headed by Mayor James Rolph, Jr., of Shipping Board vessels now operated by Swayne & Hoyt, would end the direct service between San Francisco and Porto Rico now maintained by that company.

SEATTLE, Jan. 17.—The steamer Alaska of the Alaska Steamship Company sailed today for Southwestern and Southeastern Alaska ports.

Announcement was made here today that the Matson Navigation Company's freighter Makena is to pass through the government locks here early in the week to load lumber at a plant on Lake Washington. This is to be the second unit of the Matson fleet to enter the inland waterway to load lumber for Hawaii.

With every berth taken for the first time in several months, the coastwise liner Ruth Alexander departed tonight for California ports.

Among the passengers who are to sail for the Orient the 27th inst. on the steamer President McKinley will be H. J. Tozer, who has been named general agent at Shanghai, China, for the North-western Pacific Railway. Mr. Tozer was formerly assistant general passenger agent for the railroad at Chicago.

Kolehmainen's mark was made in a meet at Madison Square Garden February 12, 1913. On the same day previous to his five-mile record he shattered the world's three-mile record.

Loren Murchison, the greatest American indoor sprinter, won the 100-yard handicap with ease, negotiating the distance in 10 seconds flat.

Allan Helffrich, Penn State's crack half-miler, won the second section of the half-mile, a handicap affair. Helffrich won easily in 1:59 4-5.

Verne Booth, former Johns Hopkins star and former intercollegiate cross-country champion, wearing the colors of the Millrose A.A., won the two-mile special, defeating a field of eight starters. Booth's time was 9:23 3-5.

James Burgess of Georgetown, won the 440-yard handicap.

CINCINNATI ANNEXES INDOOR POLO TITLE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—Cincinnati won the intercity indoor polo handicap tourney title tonight at the new riding club, beating Chicago by the score of 14 to 9 1-2. It was a thriller all the way, both trios displaying clever mallet work and excellent passing. The riding was hard throughout.

In the opening game of the night an exhibition, New York defeated Brooklyn 17 to 11. This clash between old rivals was a corker and brought the big crowd to its feet time and again.

In a fiercely fought game the Cleveland trio defeated Detroit 11 to 6, in the first consolation match today. Newark took the second match, upsetting Philadelphia 10 to 6½.

Rickard Plans to Match Dempsey With Either Wills or Gibbons

A TROJAN AND HIS SPEAR

However, this particular citizen of Troy doesn't date from the days of Fair Helen, Achilles, etc., but is a very much alive, twentieth-century U.S.C. student, Morton Kaer by name, and all-around athlete by avocation. Kaer placed in the pentathlon at the Olympic Games last summer, starring in the sprints and javelin toss. Coach Dean Cromwell is counting on a lot of points from Kaer this year, and is grooming him for the javelin event in particular. He was snapped in the picture below during a recent workout at Bovard Field by Don Gilium and his celebrated telephoto lens. Notice the splendid set of muscles with which Kaer is equipped.

BIG RUMPUS IS STARTED BY LEONARD

Many Candidates Line Up to Claim Crown Vacated by Lightweight King

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Benny Leonard, retired king of the lightweights, started a fight with his letter of farewell.

Into the ring climb the National Association of Boxing Clubs of New York, the State Athletic Commission and Madison Square Garden Boxing Association, the latter comprising George L. (Tex.) Rickard, all determined to find a successor to Leonard.

Rickard is quoted as saying he will recognize the winner of the bout between Sammy Mandell and Sid Terris on February 6 as the titleholder, and that to the successful one will go a diamond-studded belt. The New York Commission would stage a tournament.

Latrobe Cogswell, president of the National Association, which covers all States where boxing is legal, with the exception of several Eastern States, suggests a tournament in each State, with the winners to meet in New York for the title.

Cogswell recently declared the New York Commission was endeavoring to control boxing, and insisted that the championships recognized by it could not be recognized nationally.

Leading candidates for the lightweight title include Sid Terris of New York, Sid Barbarian of Detroit, Sammy Mandell of Chicago, Louis Vicentini of Chile and Johnny Dundee, retired featherweight champion.

Redlands Five Walloped by Oxy Cagemen

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

REDLANDS, Jan. 17.—Occidental came up to form tonight and defeated Redlands, 32 to 16, in the second of the conference basketball tilts. The Tigers were out in front from the start and at the end of the first half led by a 16-to-6 score. This was doubled up by both teams in the second half. Mishkin was the star of the Tiger outfit and scored sixteen of the points, all on field goals. Louis Meilletta, erstwhile University of California and then University of Redlands star, now Mishkin's running mate at forward for the Tiger varsity, was so closely guarded by the Bulldogs that he was unable to get a basket from the field in the entire game, but he accounted for four points on fouls. Hosegood made eight of the twelve points for Redlands.

The Oxy victory came from better shooting, the work of Redlands on the floor being superior through most of the game, but the shooting was wild even from under the basket. Schaeffer of San Bernardino was referee, and Hall of Chaffey, umpire. The score:

LESSER LIGHTS HOLD CALCIUM

Fistic Stars Take Lay-off in Southland This Week

Schlocker and Mills Appear at Vernon on Tuesday

Local Lightweight and Briton to Box Ten Rounds

BY PAUL LOWRY

The lesser lights of the local pugilistic world are in for a full tanning this week. The McLarnin and the La Barbas, the Hudkins, the Carters and the Collmas are taking a blissful rest, and the boys who have been hacking their way around in the lesser spots have been elevated to all the grandeur that goes with the award of a main event.

Out at Vernon on Tuesday night Joe Schlocker, who carries the distinction of having won the first ten-round fight in Los Angeles after the new law went into effect, will tangle with Pat Mills, an English boy, who is sponsored by Charley Harvey, the veteran manager.

Schlocker has been coming along fast in the past few months, and his convincing victory over Joe Layman afforded his supporters basis for claiming that he will be fighting right along with Phil Salvadore and other ranking lightweights on the Coast very soon.

In his first fight in Los Angeles Pat Mills met Pocatello "Spug" Myers just before the holidays, losing to the tough boy from the northwest after winning the first two rounds.

Mills is a clever boy with a good reputation in the East, and if Schlocker beats him it will certainly put that curly-haired young man right up with the real good ones.

The Mills-Schlocker scrap will be a ten-round affair, with the semi-wind-up of six rounds bringing Ad Allegrini, who has just turned pro, and Sailor Billy Vincent, the "cartwheel" tar, together.

Eight rounds between Kid Mexico and Johnny Greb of San Pedro will provide the fight patrons of the Wilmington arena with their excitement on Wednesday night.

These boys will fight at 158 pounds in the main event. Mexico is a familiar face to the fight fans, but Greb is not so well known. He hails from the bustling metropolis of Minneapolis, and has battled many good boys in the East.

In the semi-wind-up Johnny Grella, who won an unpopular decision over Herman Auerback at Hollywood last Friday night, will put up his mitts against "K. O." Eddie Brown of Long Beach. Grella's right crosses were what caught the eye of the referee at Hollywood, and the former Athletic

DUNDEE ON WAY BACK TO AMERICA

Johnny Runs Out on French Champion; Leaves France in a Hurry

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PARIS, Jan. 17. — Johnny Dundee took a run-out powder this morning, sailing on the steamship Paris from Havre despite fact that he is signed to fight Bretonnel, the French champion, here on the 27th inst.

Dundee put up no forfeit for his appearance so the promoters of the fight after demanding that he pay about $8000 to cover the expense incurred in the coming match, attempted to arrest the fighter at Havre or seize his baggage.

Johnny got away too early, however, and the promoters were unable to find a court open to issue a writ to seize his baggage or hold the pugilist. The French line at Havre telephoned that Dundee—Mr. and Mrs. John Carrero, as inscribed on the sailing list—departed without incident and with his baggage.

Jealousy and worry is reported to have caused Dundee to leave. Although married thirteen years, and with an 11-year-old child, Dundee could not bring himself to leave his wife in the Champs Elysees alone the next ten days while he went to the country for intensive training for the fight.

Friends say the boxer took the Pope's reception in Rome much to heart also and insisted that his wife go to his training quarters with him. His trainers and manager, Jimmy Johnston, opposed this, and his wife refused, and then Dundee announced his intention of sailing for home immediately.

"I must return to America. My brother is very ill," his wife said.

"I must return with my wife," is all Dundee would say.

Florida is the only State in the Union which has not established a Fish and Game Commission.

HOPES TO HOLD BOUT IN JUNE

Tex Laughs at Rumors Saying Champ Will Retire

May Stage Two Championship Fights This Year

Two Jacks Ready to Go East to Look for Business

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Tex Rickard expects to match Jack Dempsey for a title fight in June with either Tom Gibbons or Harry Wills in spite of the champion's announcement that he will retire from the ring and marry this spring.

Jack Dempsey

The promoter said he had no definite agreement with Jack Kearns, the champion's manager, but expressed confidence the champion would accept his terms for at least one fight this year, and possibly two.

Rickard's plan would be to match Dempsey in a return go with Gibbons early in June, either at the Yankee Stadium or Boyle's Thirty Acres. If victorious the titleholder then would be sought for the long-awaited bout with Wills, negro challenger, in September.

If the champion declines more than one bout, however, Rickard will give him a choice of either Gibbons or Wills as an opponent. Both of these contenders have agreements with Rickard for title matches.

"I do not take seriously Dempsey's threat to retire," Rickard declared. "Even if he goes through with it I expect him to take on at least one more opponent to prove his undisputed supremacy before relinquishing his crown."

The promoter said he expected Kearns to visit New York in a few more weeks to discuss terms for one or two title matches this year.

Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, and Jack Kearns, his manager, will go East next month to see whether they can arrange a bout for the summer, it was declared here today by Kearns. Tex Rickard, if he expects to match Dempsey with Tom Gibbons or Harry Wills for a title fight in June, "is proceeding on assumptions," Kearns said, declaring that no arrangements have been made.

As for Dempsey's announcement that he will retire in June and wed Estelle Taylor, motion-picture actress, Kearns said that the only thing he knows about that is the publicity that he read, and that it will have no bearing on the trip East next month to seek a match.

Coach Andy Kerr's Team Scores 23-to-17 Victory Over Local University of California Five

BY BRAVEN DYER

The bulky basketball team from Stanford University bowled over the local University of California five, 23 to 17, last night at the Manual Arts gymnasium. When we say bowled over, we mean it for the presence of Ernie Nevers, Harry Shipkey and Dave Oliva, whose gross tonnage would put two or three elephants in the shade, simply squashed the Grizzlies. Ted Shipkey was also playing and Ted's manly chest sticks out so far it looks as if his shirt is in danger of momentarily popping off. His biceps resemble those of a weight-lifter and now and then he used 'em to advantage.

The Grizzlies started out well, holding a 6-point advantage for approximately ten minutes. Neither Harry Shipkey or Nevers was in the game at this time, however, and when they did enter the battle things began to happen. Some nice shooting by Price and a basket by Nevers tied the count, the Grizzlies going ahead again in the next few minutes to have a 12-to-9 advantage just before the half closed. Nevers and Price tallied again, however, and that made the score 13 to 12 in favor of the Cards at the half.

DEFENSE GOOD

During the first session the visitors were plainly bothered by the stout five-man defense of the locals. Between halves Coach Andy Kerr gave his men instructions to try a few long shots in hopes of breaking up the Grizzlies' defense and the plan worked to perfection. The Cardinals were never behind in the second spasm and when the going got tough, which it did on several occasions, they merely passed the ball around in their end of the court, much to the disgust of the locals and their supporters. At one time the score was 18 to 16, but Harry Shipkey and Nevers threw themselves into high gear to count one goal each and that put the game on ice.

Coach Caddy Works's athletes never gave up fighting, even though greatly out-weighed, and during the close of the fracas things began to get rough. Capt. Wilbur Johns and Capt. Dave Oliva met in a head-on collision that nearly resulted in a quick death. The former received a swell headache while Oliva's left eye bears mute but startling testimony to their meeting. The Stanford captain showed good sportsmanship in refusing the try for point on a technical foul for too many times out—which was one result of the collison.

USED TEN MEN

Kerr used ten men and they all did well. Nevers's dribbling was great, while the sensational shooting of Johns kept the locals in the running. The crowd jammed the gym to capacity, some of the spectators hanging from the steel girders. Some demon tumblers put

TROJANS AFTER RECORDS

Eight-Man Mile World and Four-Man Mile Coast Marks Due to Fall, Says Coach Cromwell

Dean B. Cromwell, who coaches the University of Southern California track-and-field squad, announced yesterday that he was certain the Trojans would better two records, one a world mark and the other good for the Pacific Coast, at the A.A.U. relays next month.

Cromwell has a host of sprinters dashing around Bovard Field this year and is preparing them for their effort to bust that eight-man mile world's record of 2:58 2-5 hung up by Charley Paddock, Yale Martz, Otto Anderson, Aden Hughes, Carl Lowe, Ed Shaw, Ivan Johnson, Bert Starry and Howard Torkelson a couple of years ago. For his eight-man team now the Trojan coach announces he will probably run Capt. Otto Anderson, Hershell Smith, Keith Lloyd, Brice Taylor, Yale Martz, Morton Kaer, Ed House and Doug Vinson, all capable of running the furlong under or right near the 22-second mark.

The other record the Trojans are gunning for is the Pacific Coast four-man mile mark hung up by Martz, Shaw, Johnson and Hughes on the same day they made the eight-man record. Martz is still back to run, and Cromwell believes that Yale, Otto Anderson, Al McDaniel and Kaer can turn in a 3:30 mile, which would beat the present mark by more than a second.

SMITH MAY COACH OREGON

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIR.]

EUGENE (Or.) Jan. 17.—"Dick" Smith, former University of Oregon and Columbia University halfback, is looming as the new football coach at Oregon.

The athletic committee of the university is being besieged by the Oregon alumni of Eugene and the State to select Mr. Smith as Joe Maddock's successor, and the committee is expected to make its recommendations to the executive council next week.

Dick Smith played at Oregon for four years, later going to Columbia, where he completed his course in law. At Columbia he played four years, being selected twice on Camp's all-American team as lumbia, he was both coach and captain.

Women's Pebble Beach Golf Championship Next Month Will Draw Talented Playe

MISS HOLLINS DEFENDS TITLE

Strong Competitors for Golf Honors Are Entered

Mary Browne, Miss Cameron Southland's Hope

Mrs. H. O. Young, Northwest Champion, to Play

BY CHARLES WEST

Miss Marion Hollins, present holder of the women's Pebble Beach golf championship, will have no easy time retaining her title February 11 to 15 when the greater part of California's feminine golf talent gathers at Del Monte to compete in the annual tournament, for included in a long list of entries are the names of several strong players who are apt to be unawed by the fact that Miss Hollins formerly held the national championship.

Among them is Miss Mary K. Browne, who convinced the golfing world that reputations mean nothing to her when she defeated Miss Glenna Collett in the semifinals of the women's national tournament last summer. Although Miss Hollins defeated Miss Browne without much trouble in the Pebble Beach finals a year ago, Miss Browne has improved her game vastly since last spring, and she is to be considered a dangerous contender for the Pebble Beach title.

SOUTH'S HOPE

Miss Browne and Miss Margaret Cameron of Annandale, carry the hopes of Southern California to Del Monte, for the other member of the "Big Three," Mrs. W. W. Campbell, State champion, will not play through the Pebble Beach event this season. Miss Cameron has displayed a convincing brand of golf of late, after retiring from tournament competition for several months. She was a victor in the 54-hole tournament held recently by the Women's Auxiliary of the S.C.G.A., winning by a large margin. Miss Cameron has held the women's Northern California title on several occasions, and is always a strong contender for any tournament in which she cares to compete.

Miss Hollins and Miss Browne have a slight advantage over their Annandale rival, for their powerful game is especially adapted for the long carries necessary on the Pebble Beach links. If either slips in the short game, however, Miss Cameron is apt to upset the calculations of the followers of golf and eliminate one or the other.

SEEKS MORE GLORY

Another formidable entrant in the championship affair is Mrs. Harry O. Young, holder of the Pacific-Northwest golf title for women. Although Mrs. Young has never appeared in this vicinity in competition, she is reputed to be a consistently good golfer who is apt to defeat anybody.

In addition to Miss Browne and Miss Cameron, there are a couple of dozen other Southern Californians planning to enter the tournament, among them Miss Ann Webster, Mrs. G. M. Midgley, Mrs. H. D. Hammond and Mrs. Dorothy B. Hill, who are expected to make the first flight.

Qualifying rounds will be played on February 11, the opening day of the tournament, match play continuing until February 15, when the finals in all flights will be played.

CONSTRUCT HUGE PALACE IN MUNICH

A new sport palace is to be built in Munich, Germany, with a seating capacity of 14,700 and room for 8000 standees.

PREPARE FOR TITLE TOURNEY

The annual women's pebble beach championship, which will be staged on the sporty course near Del Monte beginning February 11, is the biggest thing on the feminine calendar for the immediate future. Miss Marion Hollins, present Pebble Beach champion, and one of the strongest competitors for her title, Miss Margaret Cameron of Annandale, appear below, with a view from the seventh tee of the beautiful Pebble Beach course in the lower photograph.

PAAVO NURMI MAY APPEAR AT COLISEUM

Paavo Uurmi, the little Finn who has taken the measures of the world's best middle and long-distance sprinters, may visit California and show his wares before returning home. At least an invitation has been sent to him by Robert S. Weaver, chairman of the L.A.A.C. athletic committee and president of the Southern Pacific A.A.U.

Nurmi is now competing in the indoor competitions of the East. In case he comes here, which would be sometime before July 1, he will run in the Les Angeles Coliseum.

HAWAII AFTER STANFORD

Honolulu Eleven Wants to Play Cards, Bears, U.S.C. or Washington Next Season

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE]

HONOLULU (T. H.) Jan. 12.—University of Hawaii's victory over the University of Colorado football team on New Year's Day has started definite talk of bringing an even higher class team to the islands for the post-season game of 1925.

Hawaii defeated Colorado, 13 to 0, and proved master of the visitors at all stages. After scoring two touchdowns and getting a comfortable lead, the local team eased up on offensive and played a good deal of a defensive game, aided by the fine kicking of Quarterback Morse and the uncanny ability of the Hawaii defensive backs to diagnose the forward-passing offense of the visitors.

After the first three minutes of play, there was no question of the result, barring flukes. Hawaii outplayed the visitors on the line, in the backfield, on the ends and broke up the Colorado passing game when the visitors got dangerous.

Thus, by defeating the Rocky Mountain Conference champions—and, incidentally, twice crossing the goal line of a team that hadn't even been scored on this season—Hawaii proved the class of the football played here and feels entitled to look further.

Four possibilities are in sight for 1925—California, Stanford, University of Southern California, and University of Washington.

Hawaii has played two others of the "big" teams of the Pacific Coast—University of Oregon and Oregon Agricultural College. The first-named came here in 1921, when the local university had a squad of green men and not very good caliber at that. The material was very scant—the team had almost no substitutes. Oregon won easily and run up a big score. In the fall of 1923, Oregon Agricultural College visited the islands and was decisively beaten.

Between 1921 and 1924 football at the University of Hawaii improved tremendously. The local institution is just beginning to get a decent-sized enrollment, athletically speaking. Its student body has been less than 500 and its available football men less than thirty.

Now, with the growth of the Territory, the growth of the university, and the prestige aroused by several successive seasons of winning football, the football squad at the university will be much larger. Heretofore, each year half a dozen excellent high school and academy players would leave the islands for mainland institutions and certainly the fact that they expected to make one of the prominent teams in the States had something to do with their decisions. For instance, the redoubtable Blaisdell brothers, Bill and Neal, went from Hawaii to Bucknell and starred on the great Bucknell team of 1924.

Next fall the University of Hawaii will have a fair-sized squad with several husky veterans back and will get several likely recruits from local interscholastic football.

In looking for a game with one of the foremost teams on the Pacific Coast the local university doesn't assume that it is in the same football class as the Coast leaders. It doesn't assume that it can lick them, nor does it wish to be viewed as "cocky" and conceited over its record. It wishes to bring one of the best teams in the Coast conference here very largely for the sake of the football fans of the Territory.

A.A.U. Gym Championship Dates Arranged

At a meet of the gymnastic committee of the A.A.U., Southern Pacific Division, the following dates were set for the championship contests in that sport:

The Southern California junior gym championships will be held in the gym of the Manual Arts High School on the evening of February 14. The Southern California senior gym championships will be held at the University of Southern California on Saturday evening, April 4, and the California State gym championships at San Diego in the early part of May. The L.A.A.C. was awarded the invitational meet which has as contestants only the winners of the first five places in each event. This contest will bring together only the championships and will be the crowning event of the season.

L.A.A.C. has many capable gymnasts as well as many champions, and great activity can be witnessed any Monday, Wednesday or Friday evening in the gym between the hours of 5 to 7.

AEOLIAN YACHT CLUB ELECTS ITS OFFICERS

Southern California yachtsmen will be interested to learn of the election held at Aeolian Yacht Club, Alameda, for the coming season. The following report is taken from the Shipping Register:

Chet Ayers, chairman of the nominating committee, presented his ticket for next season's officers and was met with much applause. The following officers are named: Commodore, Fred Grecian; vice-commodore, E. A. Upton; port captain, R. J. MacNamara; financial secretary, C. A. Loring; recording secretary, F. McLean; treasurer, George Postel, N. Breakfield, C. Benham and E. C. Smith are slated for directors, and L. Olsen, D. J. McCarthy and C. A. Loring are named for the regatta committee.

CANADA SEEKS BOAT SUPREMACY OF WORLD

BIG FIELD FOR OPEN TOURNEY

Famous Pros and Amateurs to Play at Hillcrest

Hutt Martin Defends Title of Southland

MacSmith Looms as Double Champ of Season

Can Macdonald Smith, for two years the State open golf champion, add the Southern California open title to his list of conquests?

This is a question which is causing a lot of comment at this time, for the next championship on the golfer's calendar will be the event at the Hillcrest Country Club, February 4 to 6, when a field of amateurs and professionals heretofore unequaled in a Southern California tournament compete for the biggest golfing honor the Southland can bestow.

GREAT GOLFER

MacSmith is unquestionably a splendid golfer, and seems to thrive under adverse conditions. Last year he turned in a score of 68 at the Los Angeles Country Club in a windstorm which introduced the State open tournament, while the rest of the competitors were congratulating each other on breaking 75. This year he played consistent golf, staying near the top of the list throughout 72 holes, in spite of badly tried-out greens, and disconcerting winds. Hillcrest is exposed to breezes which have tendency to boost scores, and if one of the gusty days not uncommon in February occurs during the tournament, Smith's stock will soar.

Hutt Martin, the defending champion, is holding the title for the fourth time which indicates the standard of his game. He has been playing the Hillcrest course frequently of late, and has an excellent chance to retain his title. Ed Gayer, Hillcrest professional, holds the course record of 68, and will bear watching in the tournament, as will Willie Hunter, Brentwood pro. Chick Fraser of Midwick; Harry Pressler of Hacienda; Tom Stevens of California, and Grant Halstead of San Gabriel among others.

DUNCAN AND MITCHELL

Duncan and Mitchell, the sensational British professionals, the Espinosa brothers and Harold Sampson of San Francisco, will swell the list of pro entries.

The tournament will be open to amateurs with handicaps of 8 and under, and the possibilities are strong that an amateur will carry off the title. George Von Elm, runner-up in the national championships last summer; Jack Tarrant, who, with Von Elm, holds the amateur record for the Hillcrest links; Harlow Hurley, former Kansas State champion; Everett Seaver, former Trans-Mississippi champion; E. S. Armstrong; Norman Macbeth, W. W. Campbell, C. H. Palmer, Jr., and possibly California's three champions, Capt. A. Bullock-Webster, State title holder; Dr. Paul Hunter, Southern California champion, and Johnny McHugh, Northern California champ.

Amateur-pro foursomes will precede the 72 holes of medal play.

Anniversary Celebrated at Flintridge

Two tournaments were held yesterday at the Flintridge Country Club to celebrate the fourth anniversary of the opening of the club, in the morning a women's tournament, while the men competed in the afternoon, and participated in a stag celebration in the evening.

Class A of the women's tournament was won by Mrs. F. S. Hardin with a gross 90. Mrs. George Weber was second with a 91, taking net honors. Miss Margaret Cameron scored 92. In Class B Miss Julia Lockwood and Mrs. W. Carter tied for gross at 107, while Miss Reno won net honors, 115-30-85.

A. S. Evans was the winner in the men's tournament, 86-16-70. Ralph Reynolds was second, 76-4-72, J. R. Pratt third, 83-10-73, and Joe Hagerman fourth, 79-4-75.

LION FIVE DEVOURS CHRISTIAN CAGERS

Loyola's casaba slingers proved that they were a better organization than the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. when they trimmed the latter aggregation on the new Loyola court last night, the final score being 18 to 16. The Lions managed to gain a 2-point lead during the first half of the game, and held it throughout. More than once the "Y" men gave them heart failure though, and no Loyola rooter felt safe with only a 2-point margin. Shresovitch and McIsaacs played a fine game for Loyola, while Herbson was the individual star for the "Y." The line-ups:

Loyola: Tunney, f, 1; Shresovitch, f, 6; Brown, c, 3; Berg, g, 2; McIsaacs, g, 6, Sullivan, Sherwood.

Y.M.C.A.: Rillard, f, 3; Herbson, f, 10; Young, c, 1; Randall, g, 1; Miller, g, 2; Mitre, Chamberlin, Smith, Sandusky.

PETROLEUM QUINTET DEFEATS UNION OIL

With both sides showing plenty of defensive strength but little attacking power, the General Petroleum basketball team trimmed the Union Oil Company's cagers by an 11-to-4 score at the Manual Arts High School gymnasium last night. It was a Petroleum League game. Baskets were as shy as frozen polar bears throughout the struggle, the score at half-time being 5 to 3 in favor of the Petroleum five. Warner, winning center, starred. The line-ups:

General Petroleum (11): Walters (2) F.; Collis, F.; Warner (4) C.; Jepsen (1); [illegible], G.; Sylvester (2); Pleasant (2); Damerow.

Union Oil (4): Reeder (4) F.; Hollabec, F.; [illegible], G.; Campbell, G.; Arnold (2) G.; [illegible], Wheeler.

TEE, FAIRWAY AND GREEN BY CHARLES "CHICK" EVANS

FLIGHT OF GOLF BALLS

Continuing my previous article, let us understand "underspin." Mr. Braid says: "The basis of the investigation made by Prof. Tait as stated by himself is an old scientific law that when an object is poised in still air the atmospheric pressure upon it is equal at all points; and, further—that—when a ball is made to rotate in a current of air that side of the ball which is advancing to meet the current is subjected to a greater atmospheric pressure than the side which is moving in the direction of the current.

"Simplified and applied to golf, this means that when a ball is sliced it spins from left to right and that there is then a great atmospheric pressure which forces the ball toward the right. But when the ball has been 'pulled' from the tee the spin is in the opposite direction and therefore the extra pressure of the atmosphere is also from the opposite side with the result that the ball is pressed to the left. When the ball has been 'topped' the spin on its front side is in a downward direction so the extra air pressure is downward also and as in this case, the force of gravity is pulling in the same direction the downward movement of the ball is very quick and sudden. Lastly, when the spin given to the ball on the tee is the kind that makes the front side move in an upward direction, that is to say, "underspin," the balance of the atmospheric pressure tends to lift the ball upward and in a contrary direction to the force of gravity.

"A very little thought will show that the result of this must be to keep the ball longer in the air than it would remain if there were no 'underspin,' since it is the force of gravity that pulls everything down, and all the time that the ball is in the air it has some of the velocity that was imparted to it on the tee acting upon it until the other forces, chiefly air resistance, exhaust it.

"It will be seen, therefore, that pulls, slices and balls that fly well all arise from the same cause, the rotation of the ball and that the difference is in the direction of the rotation, which is settled by the kind of stroke that the golfer makes.

"Therefore, the great authority concludes that good driving lies not merely in powerful hitting, but in the proper apportionment of good hitting with such a knack as gives the right amount of underspin to the ball. And one of Prof. Tait's calculations was to the effect that in certain circumstances a man who imparted backspin to his ball when driving it might get a carry of about thirty yards more than that obtained by another man who hit as hard, but gave the ball no 'underspin.'"

My readers will appreciate the value of an added thirty yards to their drive. On some holes it might mean lowering their game a full stroke, though in more cases it would give them the advantage of a mashie shot to the green while their opponent might have to have another full shot to get home.

According to Prof. Tait, the ball that is properly given is not only not consciously aimed upward, but it is not hit upward. Such a ball for some distance after it has left the tee follows a line almost parallel to the ground, and eventually rises as a result of the underspin that is forcing it upward all the time.

And let me repeat here as emphasis for my readers Prof. Tait's point made in the first article that the effect of this "underspin" is to "hold the ball in the air" a longer length of time, thereby giving it plenty of opportunity to travel the full distance resulting from the velocity of its flight. In short, the underspin given to a driven ball is a means of neutralizing the effect of the atmospheric resistance and gravity.

Miles of Pipe Installed at El Caballero

With eleven miles of standard water pipe on the grounds, Golf Architect William P. Bell is rapidly installing the system that will furnish an ample water supply for El Caballero Country Club.

Construction of a huge tank which will furnish pressure for irrigating El Caballero golf course, will be started at once. Mains will be laid around the rim of the golf bowl to supply water connections for the 100 lodge sites which overlook the bowl.

Chairman Merritt H. Adamson of El Caballero golf committee said yesterday that with the installation of the water system El Caballero golf course will be one of the best irrigated links in the country, enabling the club to have a green all-grass course during all seasons of the year.

FORWARDS POPULAR AS CONFERENCE CAPTAINS

Southern California Conference basketball teams have a fondness for forwards as captains. Out of the six squads in the loop three of them have forwards for leaders while the other trio have selected either a guard or center.

Chili Eckles, a fleet forward, pilots the championship Whittier team. Wilbur Johns, hardly more than a whisp, but a fine forward, leads the local University of California outfit. Mike Brunner, another sharpshooter, is Caltech captain. Les Hosegood, a lanky chap who plays at center, is the Redlands general, while Larry Johnston, another pivot man, leads the Oxy tossers. Ralph Jesson, used alternately at guard and center, is the Pomona skipper.

SAGEHENS HAVE FAST FROSH TEAM

Coach Sawyer's Lads Show Much Promise in Practice Games to Date

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

POMONA COLLEGE (Claremont) Jan. 17.—Remaining undefeated after several practice contests the Pomona College frosh basketball team is fast reaching midseason form. Coach Asa Sawyer has found a wealth of material in the first-year class and practice each night constantly develops added reserve strength for the hard season approaching the Pomona frosh.

Five teams are daily practicing on the Sagehen court and Coach Sawyer is finding it difficult to distinguish between his so-called first team and the second string. Harold Merritt, brother of the varsity star, is showing up as good if not better than his brother at forward. Jack Hanildi, is another speed artist on the floor and makes an excellent running-mate for Merritt. Ray Duke, Felton, Groeger and Grey are other stars who show a world of class on a basketball court.

Although they have had little chance to tackle the varsity some believe that this year's frosh team will be able to consistently trounce that aggregation. No captain has been elected as yet but one will soon be chosen by the thirty or more freshmen who are making bids for first-string consideration.

With so many teams in action games are being secured for all of them in order that no man may go through a season without playing in one important clash. Freshmen will not tangle in any conference contests until the second round of the varsity play-offs. Little is known of the strength of other conference frosh aggregations, but much is expected from Occidental, the University of California at Los Angeles and Whittier.

LOS ANGELES WILL HAVE NEW GUN CLUB

Lou Reed, demon dispenser of firearms, ammunition, etc., at Tufts Lyon Arms Company, states that plans are now under way for the equipping of traps and a range for the newly organized Los Angeles Gun Club. Those who enjoy knocking over the blue rocks will find the new organization a haven of delight.

The club will have its range and traps at Arcadia, the government having set aside a portion of the Balloon School grounds for the organization's use.

Other clubs now running where one may peck away at the clay pigeons are located at Lankershim, Owensmouth, Upland and Santa Ana. The new organization will be a boon to local sportsmen in that it is located close to the city.

TRACK IN FULL SWAY AT SAGEHEN SCHOOL

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

POMONA COLLEGE, CLAREMONT, Jan. 17.—Local track competition at Pomona College begins this week with two events scheduled next Friday afternoon. Coach Robert Strehle, track mentor, and his varsity letter men are already coaching the 100 or more embryo trackmen who expect to enter the meets. The coming of Charles Paddock in an exhibition race on the 23rd inst. has heightened interest in track and by the end of the week B. V. D. artists will be in the sport limelight.

AGGIES TO CLASH WITH IDAHO FIVE

Strong Oregon Quintet to Play Vandals in Important Game Thursday

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO, MOSCOW, Jan. 17.—The Idaho Vandals will meet the Oregon Aggie hoopsters here the 22nd inst., in what dopesters expect to be one of the stiffest games on the Idaho Pacific Coast Conference schedule. The Aggies have lain rather low since their preseason tour of Southern Oregon and California, but they did enough on that trip to show what sort of basketball they were prepared to play during 1925.

The Aggies have an experienced line-up back and this year, Carlos Steele, stocky guard, stands out as one of the most consistent and valuable performers of Pacific Coast basketball. Playing close to Steele for honors is Pete Stoddard, midget forward. Pete is fast and he runs his stocky team-mate a close second for whatever honors there are to be divided at the close of the game. And then there are several more, both on the first varsity and second squads, who can get all out of the hoop game that there is in it. The Aggies will soon start an invasion of the Northwest, playing the University of Washington at Seattle next Saturday night.

The Vandals, too, have started off with a bang. They took their first conference game from the Whitman College Missionaries with little difficulty and came back at the end of the week and defeated the Gonzaga University Bulldogs, 37 to 23.

PENN GOBS GRIP ON IRON MAN TIGHTENS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, Jan. 17.—The U.S.S. Pennsylvania, leaders in the contest for the "iron man," highest athletic trophy awarded by the Navy Department, today added to her points and prestige by winning the marine whale boat race over a one-mile course in the outer harbor.

The U.S.S. Arizona and the U.S.S. Mississippi finished in second and third positions, respectively.

The U.S.S. Relief won the base port ships boat race in which the U.S.S. Procyon and the U.S.S. Medusa were entered.

OREGON COEDS MEET NEBRASKA IN SHOOT

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CORVALLIS (Or.) Jan. 17.—Three matches with other colleges will be shot by the Oregon Agricultural College women's rifle squad next week. Matches will be with the Riverside Junior College, the University of Nebraska and the branch of the University of California at Davis, Cal.

The Oregon Agricultural College coed team includes twenty-one students.

OMAHA PROMOTER WILL STAGE BIG BOXFEST

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

OMAHA (Neb.) Jan. 17.—Permission of the Nebraska State Boxing Commission to stage a Middle-Western boxing elimination tournament here soon will be sought by Jake Isaackson, local match-maker, he declared tonight. Professional boxers from Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, the Dakotas and other near-by States would be invited to the tourney, according to the promoter.

OSBORNE, HOLLY FORWARD, LEADS CITY IN CAGE SCORING

Player—Team—Position	Points
Osborne—Hollywood—F.	24
Neal—Jefferson—C.	22
Bowler—Manual Arts—F.	20
Durbin—Lincoln—F.	20
Kabrinsky—Lincoln—F.	18
Tate—L. A. High—F.	16
Kussman—L. A. High—C.	16
Geoglein—Polytechnic—C.	16
Seller—Manual Arts—C.	14
Ferguson—Polytechnic—G.	14

By the slender margin of two free throws, Byron Osborne, Hollywood High forward, leads the City League basketball scorers after four rounds of play in the 1925 schedule. The question of who has rolled up the most points to date should have been settled in a more spectacular manner when Hollywood met Jefferson at Hollywood last Friday. For Capt. Ralph Neal, sensational Jefferson center, was then at the top of the list with twenty-three points to Osborne's twenty-two and it was thought that the two would go at it nip and tuck to ring the cash register as many times as possible.

But Hollywood gave Old Man Dope a free ticket to the well-known ash can and stopped the Democrats' headlong rush toward the city bunting by handing them a 21-to-15 beating. Not only that, in so doing, the Red and White squad ruined Mr. Neal's chances by holding him scoreless. Osborne only did a little better when he sank the fouls.

Despite the fact that Lincoln took a 26-to-16 beating from Manual Arts, Durbin, Tiger flyer, is right up in a tie for third place, with Bowler of Manual Arts. Durbin scored ten of his team's total and Bowler rang the bell nine times. Kabrinksy, diminutive Lincoln forward, might be at the top of the list right now had he not sustained an injured arm when L. A. High beat the Railsplitters, 28 to 24, last Tuesday. However, Lincoln is the only team in the league which has played four games, so figure it out any way you please.

L. A. High breaks into the limelight with Tom Tate and Kussman tied for sixth place with Geoglein of Polytechnic, each having brought home sixteen points in three games played. Seller of Manual Arts and Ferguson of Polytechnic bring up the rear with fourteen points apiece, and the rest of the City League cagers string along behind in varying places.

Osborne stands the best chance to hold his lead for another round of play. Hollywood takes on Lincoln at Hollywood, and the Railsplitter defense is notoriously weak, thus giving him an opportunity to add some few points to his total. On the other hand, Neal will be bucking Boyle Brennen's tough defense when Jefferson meets Poly at Jefferson. Manual Arts goes over to L. A. High, and nobody can say as to that game.

FOLLOWING THE CASABA TOSSERS

BY BRAVEN DYER

Somebody's perfect record is going to be marred a week from Wednesday night when the unbeaten Hollywood and Los Angeles Athletic Club basketball teams tangle. Both squads are playing in the A.A.U. casaba casting tournament and thus far have squeezed through without defeat. The clash next week is carded for the Hollywood court and it's a safe bet right now that the Movie City gymnasium won't hold half the fans wanting to see the game.

Under the coaching of Chuck Kearney and Pep Jones the Cinema athletes have romped through their schedule, winning nearly all their games by wide margins. In Kearney and Reed the Hollywood team has a pair of brilliant forwards. Bob DeGrasse, veteran of many national A.A.U. tourneys, alternates with Reed at one of the basket-tossing berths and when right he is hard to beat. It is Kearney, however, who puts the life into the team. His shooting is uncanny in that he rarely ever gets set for a shot, merely flipping the ball the minute he gets hold of it. A bad knee has hampered his speed on the floor to some extent but by resting judiciously during the dull moments of the game he is able to burst forth in lightning spurts when the occasion demands.

George Yardley, former Big Ten choice for center while playing at Chicago, must be given credit for much of the Movie tossers' success. Although he looks as if he might fall apart any moment, George is the hardest-fighting man on the club, and his persistent following of the ball keeps his team in the running. The guards, McFadden and Warner, are both steady performers.

The Mercury athletes have had things their own way for some years now, completing a good season last year by smothering the Larry Semon All-Stars in a two-game series. The Hollywood team is a much better club than the Larry Semons were, however, and Fred Olney and his cohorts will find the going mighty tough next week.

Olney is the star of the L.A.A.C. team, and when he is in the game the Mercury tossers are always dangerous. Extremely tall and yet bulky enough to give him a good weight advantage over most centers, Olney shows tremendous speed when an opening occurs. He is a dead shot on all attempts from close in. Alling has been going at one forward with the old reliable Maynard Laswell at the other. These two are not as good as Kearney and De Grasse, but Olney is probably a shade better than Yardley, which throws matters about even. The absence of Rex Reason, the tall, black-haired guy who shot baskets with such reckless abandon last year, will hurt the Mercury team's chances.

Herf Saunders and Linnie Larson are a pair of demon guards and will probably have the edge on McFadden and Warner. They are bigger and should annoy Kearney and De Grasse not a little.

Next Saturday night the U.S.C. frosh take on the Mercury men and there is a good chance that the Trojan babes may slip over a surprise party on the club athletes. Leo Calland has a bunch of smart players under his wing and unless something goes wrong between now and the game, Olney & Co. are in for a tough night. Right now X. Jones and Thomas, two of the freshmen's best forwards, are out of the clash, but they may be ready to go when the whistle toots. If the frosh can upset their rivals, Hollywood ought to be sitting pretty for in the two-game series with the Mercury five the Movie tossers should emerge victorious at least once.

The visit of the Stanford team here last night gave local fans another chance to see that demon dribbler, Ernie Nevers, in action. Nevers, weighing better than 200 pounds, is undoubtedly one of the best dribblers on the Coast, and when he has had a little more practice will be ready to give the Golden Bears a terrific battle in the "Big Series" up north.

New Basketball Schedule Given for Conference

Due to the trip north next month of the local University of California team, several changes have been made in the Southern Conference basketball schedule. The Grizzlies will tackle Pomona on successive nights, while Occidental will also be encountered two evenings running.

The complete schedule follows:

January 24—Tech at Redlands, Oxy at Pomona, Whittier at Local U.C.
January 30—Local U.C. at Pomona.
January 31—Tech at Whittier, Redlands at Oxy, Pomona at Local U.C.
February 6—Pomona at Redlands, Oxy at Whittier.
February 7—Redlands at Pomona, Whittier at Oxy.
February 14—Oxy at Tech, Whittier at Pomona, Local U.C. at Redlands.
February 20—Pomona at Tech, Redlands at Whittier, Local U.C. at Oxy.
February 21—Tech at Pomona, Whittier at Redlands, Oxy at Local U.C.
February 28—Redlands at Tech, Pomona at Oxy, Local U.C. at Whittier.

STANFORD FIVE IS VICTORIOUS

on an act between sessions, but at that they had little on Nevers, Shipkey and the other Cardinal behemoths.

The line-ups:

Stanford (33.)		Local U.C. (17.)
David (3)	F.	Johns (9)
Price (7)	F.	Goertz
Jayred	C.	Priggs (4)
T. Shipkey (8)	G.	Bressee (4)
Oliva (4)	G.	Armstrong

Subs—Stanford, Nevers (4), H. Shipkey (3), Anderson, Mitchell, Alexander; Local U.C., Woodward, Brees.

OUT TO KNOCK 'EM DEAD

GRIZZLIES TOUR NORTH

Local Casaba Team to Meet California, Stanford and Olympic Club While on Trip

The local University of California's basketball machine, which is making its official debut in "big-time" competition this season, having met the Oregon Aggies, and Stanford while on their southern trips, will make a little barnstorming tour of its own during the week of vacation between semesters. The Grizzly cagers will visit the northern part of the State, taking on California, Stanford and the Olympic Club, February 2, 4 and 6, respectively.

Coach Caddy Works's squad may not be as heavy as the teams they will meet while north, but they have speed, skill and fight, and if the Bay City institutions think the locals are soft pickings, they are due to receive a smart jolt. To date the locals have shown a defense that is practically impregnable, while the classy work of Johns, Goerts and Priggs, all of whom have shown remarkable ability at hooping the casaba, makes their attack a thing to be feared.

Comparative scores give the Grizzlies an edge over their Bruin brothers. California had a tough time downing St. Ignatius, which team was beaten by the Oregon Aggies with ease. The Aggies in turn barely nosed out the local school, giving the Grizzlies an even break, if not an edge over the Berkeley institution. Stanford and the Olympic Club have heavier teams, and may down the southern aggregation, but they will be forced to extend themselves to do so.

Coach Caddy Works will probably take a squad of twelve men north with him on the trip. With three games scheduled within six days, they will all see action, no doubt. Those who are most likely to make the trip are Capt. Johns, Bill Goerts, Priggs, Armstrong, Bressee, Brees, Kline, Pierce, Woodward and others.

Idaho Nine in Victory Over Colorado Team

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, Jan. 17.—In a loosely played game in which both teams scored hits with great frequency, the U.S.S. Idaho nine defeated the U.S.S. Colorado by a 16-to-5 score yesterday afternoon on Trona Field, San Pedro. The game marked the opening of the battleship elimination series at the harbor.

Wojcrechowski, on the mound for the Idaho, allowed eleven hits, but poor fielding on the part of the part of the Colorado squad gave the winners sixteen runs. Thirteen errors, most of them in the Colorado infield, gave the Idaho one more run than the number of hits made off Holcomb and Faulkner.

After eight runs had been scored against them in the first four innings, the Colorado sent in Faulkner. The Idaho continued to score, however, making four runs in the seventh. The scheduled game between the California and the West Virginia was called in the sixth inning on a protest. Both teams had three runs when Commander E. D. Washburn, Battle Fleet executive officer, issued the order to stop.

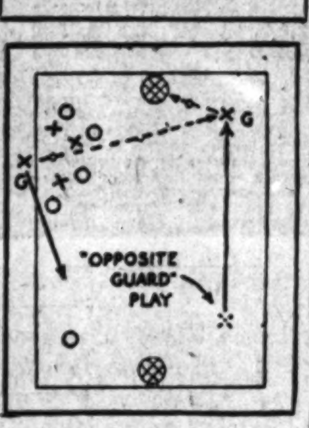
TWO SWIM RECORDS SMASHED AT HANOVER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HANOVER (N. H.) Jan. 17.—A New England record and a Dartmouth record were broken this afternoon in a swimming meet in which Dartmouth defeated Wesleyan, 41 to 27. Wesleyan's superiority in the dashes gave it an early lead over the Green, but the plunge and the 220 evened the score. Bogart of Dartmouth plunged seventy-five feet, the length of the tank, on each of two attempts and established a New England record of 45 4-5 seconds. The 220 saw another record, Woodbridge smashing the Spalding pool record in 2 minutes 34 seconds.

WINNING BASKETBALL



What is one successful play from the tip-off?

Answered by NELS NORGREN
Basketball coach, University of Chicago

This is how one such successful play is worked. The center bats the ball to the left forward, who has closed in toward the center. The left forward gives the ball to the right guard, who has crossed the floor and is going up the field. The right guard dribbles until within shooting distance and then shoots. The left guard must lie back as defensive man. The right forward goes up under the basket He is attacking and either serves as a feint, or, if the right guard is in trouble, is there to receive the pass from him and make a shot.

NOTES FROM THE HOLLYWOOD A. C.

Everyone is set for the big boxing show and stag that will take place Wednesday night. Bob Howard announced that there would be seven boxing bouts, one wrestling match and some vaudeville. The Hollywood male quartet and the club's orchestra will also help entertain the members. The big feature of the night will be the Gloom Chaser, who is better known as Lynn Cowan. The eats start immediately after the show. Better order 300 more chairs, Mr. Beard.

Clyde Swendsen, Cleve Morrison and Al Kelly returned yesterday from San Francisco, where they went for the week-end.

Twenty-seven entries have been received for the squash tournament. A silver cup will be given to the winner. See Bob Howard if you want to enter.

The club has a new chairman of the athletic committee in James Irsfeld, who succeeded George L. Eastman. Irsfeld should make a dandy chairman as he knows athletics. For three years he was the outstanding half back in the "Big Ten" football conference, when he was a member of the Minnesota eleven in 1921-2-3. He was picked on the All-American team one year and twice on the "Big Ten" all-star squad.

Northwestern University swimming team, recognized as the strongest in the country, will meet the Hollywood Athletic Club's squad in a meet on February 7.

Twenty-four "Tankers" attended the monthly stag in honor of the Los Angeles and Hollywood sport writers yesterday. George Marshall, Frank Lloyd, Earle Foxe, Frank Miller and Russ Cunningham brought back enough ducks to feed the whole gang and little Al Lemon, Jr., our popular dining-room manager, had them cooked up in great style. Atta boy, Lemon.

George L. Eastman will be gone for several weeks. He left last night for New York and Philadelphia for a little business and pleasure trip.

PLAYER-WRITER RULE INDORSED AT MEETING

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

UTICA (N. Y.) Jan. 17.—Endorsement of the proposed new player-writer rule of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, election of Louis F. Daley, of the East Orange Tennis Club as president, and awarding of two of the three sanctioned New York State tennis championships were the business transacted by the New York State Tennis Association at its annual meeting here today.

DEMOCRATS TO TAKE ON POLY

Leading Prep Cage Teams in Feature Game Friday

Manual Arts is Big Favorite Over L. A. High

Hollywood Ends Season Against Lincoln Squad

Something definite in the way City League basketball teams stack up should be decided when local prep quintets clash in three games next Friday. Two of the struggles will bring together teams that are, at present, tied for first place in the standings. Hollywood, the fifth squad, has a more or less easy date with Lincoln on the Foothillers' court.

Voyle Brennen's Polytechnic Yellowjackets and the Jefferson Democrats will hold the center of the calcium in their clash at Jefferson. Manual Arts journeys over to L. A. High to engage Coach Bob Munsey's team, which has attracted some little attention by reason of its sensational rise from last to first place in three games.

DOWN TO EARTH

Hollywood's convincing victory over Jefferson brings the Democrats down to earth and makes them seem slightly less a super-team. But, to be halted in a headlong rush on a league championship doesn't do any team's temper any good, so George Costello's quintet will probably be out for blood when it faces Poly Friday.

Dope gives the Mechanics a slight edge. Hollywood trimmed Poly, 16 to 15, and Jefferson, 21 to 15, thereby making the Poly team a 5-point favorite. At any rate, the struggle will probably hinge upon Poly's defense against the Green and Gold attack. And both are above the average. Whoever wins, the game will be worth going a long way to see and plenty of cage fans will do same.

SHOULD WIN EASILY

Manual looms as an easy victor over L. A. High. The Toilers are stronger in every department than L. A. and should eliminate the Pioneers from the running for the title without much trouble. However, after playing way over their heads to down Lincoln, the Artisans may not be at their best, while a bye has done the Blue and White some good.

One more defeat won't make so much difference in Lincoln's standing. Still, it won't be the first time for some supposedly weak sister to rise from the invalid's chair to clout a much stronger opponent and thus ruin its chances. Lincoln may upset the dope and trip the Foothillers and so cause much glee in the Polytechnic and Jefferson ranks.

Club boy may swing the same way on Brown.

Two boys who have been doing exceptionally well in the middleweight ranks recently will make up the main event at Hollywood on Friday night. They are Bert Manley and Fred Cullen, both of whom have done their best work in the Film City ring.

Manley had his big moment when he dropped Bert Colima, the pride of Whittier, and won the decision from the Mexican glove slinger. Cullen, a Blake product, has tipped both Nick Newman and Young George recently, and is a smart lad with a long reach.

Billy Hart has pleased the Hollywood fans so much that he has landed a semi-wind-up with Young Nationalista. The Filipino swings from any and all directions, but Hart is tough and can take 'em as well as send 'em, wherefore it ought to be quite a scrap.

Next Sunday's card at the Lyceum is only tentative, but Dick Donald believes it will be Harry Galfund and Young George. The former beat Billy Wells in the main event at Hollywood on Friday, but only got a draw for his pains. He is a powderpuff boxer, but an excellent defensive artist. Clever as Wells is he scarcely laid a glove on Galfund's anatomy, the leather cushions bouncing off Galfund's elbows, arms and shoulders with monotonous regularity.

Lonnie Austin of Seattle breezed into the city yesterday having in tow his three prizes—"Bearcat" Dode Bercot, Bud Bercot, and Roy Cliffe.

Dode is the southpaw, who licked Joe Benjamin at Doyle's last summer, and is slated for a go with Bobby Barret, the tough youngster of Philadelphia, who has beaten good ones like Lew Tendler, on the 27th inst.

His brother Bud, who fights in the 120-pounds class, will meet Benny Palmer in the six-round special event at Vernon on Tuesday night. Austin says Bud can hit harder than the conqueror of Benjamin, which makes the outlook rosy for Palmer.

Cliffe is a big 175-pound moose, who has done a lot of training in the logging camps of the Northwest, and he is said to be tougher than a pine knot. He will fight at Vernon on the 27th inst.

It's going to be some time before fight fans, who invaded the Hollywood arena last Friday, get over the episode of Inspector Denison, who caused a needless wait of twenty-five minutes to about 4000 people. If Billy Wells had too much tape on his hands, it was the inspector's duty to find that out before the men were scheduled to enter the ring. And if it was necessary to argue twenty-five minutes with Wells about his bandages, why not pull off the argument when the semi-wind-up was going on instead of sitting pompously at the ringside.

Checkie Herman of San Bernardino and Billy Ryan will meet in the main event at the Pasadena Armory next Tuesday night. It will be a ten-round go. Joe Resco and Young Lancho fight six rounds in the semi-wind-up.

Southern California Tennis Association Planning Expansion Under New Regim

WYN MACE IS NAMED SECRETARY OF BODY

Seek to Bind Tennis Clubs More Closely for Mutual Benefit; Net Game is Booming

BY PEP JONES

Realizing the increasing demands that tennis is making upon Southern California Tennis Association's officials and the utter inability of systematically and efficiently handling the affairs of the association, the executive committee has reached the conclusion that the only way to satisfactorily handle its affairs is the securing of the services of a competent secretary—one who can take over the actual working details of the association and handle all routine matters under the direction of the committee.

WYN MACE

As tennis has grown in Southern California from a small coterie of Santa Monica players to a vast array of enthusiasts and participants, it has become increasingly difficult for a few, whose hearts and souls have been wrapped up in the welfare of the game, to take the time from their daily duties and responsibilities to look after the various complicated details incidental to every tennis move and achievement, that occurs here in connection with the game. It is quite enough that such men as Tom Bundy, Simpson Sinsabaugh, Claude Wayne, Clarence Barker and a host more, too numerous to mention, should take the time to come together in committee meetings and outline the policies of the association and map out the various plans for their accomplishment.

After quietly looking around for some one to take over the position, the association has finally secured Wyn Mace. In Mace, the board feels that it has secured one who is in every way qualified to assume these responsibilities. Through the co-operation and generosity of the Los Angeles Tennis Club, Mr. Mace will use that institution as his headquarters, but the association emphatically wishes to impress upon the tennis public and various tennis clubs that Mr. Mace is working in the interest of all Southern California tennis and that his services are at the disposal and in the interest of every local tennis club or tennis gathering.

The executive committee, through its new secretary, will immediately launch a systematic campaign to gather all of the various tennis clubs into a close federation for the mutual benefit of all so that Southern California may have a great many flourishing organizations and that the attendant benefits and pleasures of tennis may be correspondingly increased. The board wishes to get in personal touch with the various organizations and work out a systematic program of sanctioned tournaments on fixed annual dates so that there shall be no doubling up of tournament dates. This will work out to the benefit of both the club holding the tournament and the match player, as it assures the first of a representative entry list, while giving the player a chance of competing in many more tournaments as he can plan further ahead without danger of missing these tourneys in which he would like to play. A thorough program of announcements and newspaper publicity will be arranged, which will undoubtedly raise the standard of play and increase the interest in the various tournaments.

In the past few years the most important tournaments have been held at the Los Angeles Tennis Club due to the fact that this club has had the best facilities to take care of both players and spectators. By the new arrangement it may prove more satisfactory to move some of the important tournaments to other clubs. Personally, I believe that the Los Angeles county tournament could be more appropriately held at some of the clubs outside of Los Angeles, such as Pasadena or Long Beach or some country club that could take care of the play from all angles. The city championship might even be moved over to the new Griffith Park courts and made a purely municipal affair. Perhaps a new tournament could be initiated for municipal or public park players only. These latter views of tournament locations are purely personal and should be taken as such."

Mercury Five to Meet Utah and Arizona

Charlie Keppen, demon manager of things athletic, for the Los Angeles Athletic Club, announces that the club has scheduled basketball games with the University of Southern California, Arizona and the Utah Aggies.

The club will meet the Trojans on February 4 and 7, in a home and home engagement, while the Wildcats will exhibit their stuff in the Mercury Pavilion on the 19th and 20th. The Utah Potato Growers will play here February 23 and 24.

All of the schools have good teams this year, according to reports, and should give the club some lively competition.

Keppen also states that he would welcome some games with the local University of California, as the Grizzlies are reputed to have quite a classy organization. It seems, however, that the North Vermonters are afraid of a beating for they have consistently refused to schedule games with the Mercury Five, since Caddy Works has been coaching at the institution.

A series of games between the Grizzlies and the Mercury casaba-slingers ought to draw large crowds, with the enviable reputations both institutions have established. It would not be at all surprising to see the Californians triumph over the Winged Foot, if they displayed anything like the form that has been theirs in their last few encounters.

STEELHEAD FISHING IS REPORTED GOOD

Reports to Lester J. McMurray of B. H. Dyas, and emanating from a good friend that lives in the Santa Ynez River valley, are to the effect that the stream is loaded with Steelhead trout.

Lou Breer of Tufts Lyon Arms Company also has word from reliable sources that the trout fishing in the surf just off the mouth of the Ventura River is now at its height. Several big fish have been brought in by Ventura men recently according to Breer. The largest trout caught this season was pulled out of the ocean last Thursday. The fish was thirty-two and one-half inches long, and weighed ten and a half pounds dressed.

PIRRONE'S ALL STARS vs. WHITE KINGS

OBSERVATIONS

BY THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER
BILL HENRY

Let us consider for a moment the unhappy fate of Messrs. Warren Bovard and Hal Stonier, the two young gentlemen who are carrying all the responsibility for everything, including the coaching rumpus at U.S.C., during the absence of Prexy Von KleinSmid. We have been busy weeping on the shoulder of Gus Henderson and various other parties and it occurs to us that there is room to consider the painful situation in which Messrs. Bovard and Stonier find themselves at this time—for all criticism of this swapping mounts in midstream falls upon them.

Whether Rockne had been approached previous to his arrival in California is not known, but at any rate, after the New Year's Day game they talked the situation over with Rockne and apparently arrived at a clear understanding with him. Rockne, being an old head, said that he could not consider the matter at all as long as Henderson was still the coach but apparently intimated that if everything could be arranged to Henderson's complete satisfaction he might be induced to take the job.

So Messrs. Bovard and Stonier, presumably with Rockne, hatched up a perfectly nice little scheme, which, if it had been allowed to work out according to schedule, would have apparently made them heroes instead of marking them as targets for a lot of criticism. In brief, it is presumed that the scheme was something like this:

Henderson was to be persuaded to resign—just as he was—with a sum of money to take the place of his two-year contract and his loss of prestige. The announcement would come from Henderson with the statement that everything was lovely and he felt that he had had a good year but that he felt he had been at U.S.C. long enough and thought a change would be for the better so he was leaving.

Then there would be a lot of discussion as to who would be his successor and meanwhile Rockne would have a chance to get back to South Bend and fix things up with the Notre Dame folks and then all of a sudden Messrs. Bovard and Stonier would announce to a startled world that they had secured the services of Mr. Knute Rockne, the demon coach from Indiana, and everybody would say what smart boys they were—and they would have been.

There would have been no connection between Henderson's resignation and the signing of Rockne, no suggestion that Henderson had been booted out in order to make room for a coach who could beat California and none of the uproar and riot among the Trojan students and alumni over the swap which would have been rather universally regarded as a pretty snappy bit of business for the old school.

But somebody didn't keep his mouth shut. Bovard and Stonier, hoping to add a second great coup by smoothing over the trouble with the northern schools at the same time so that when Prexy Von KleinSmid returned he'd find everything serene, arranged a conference in San Francisco with representatives of the northern schools and went to the Bay City with Knute Rockne, who was heading for South Bend.

But somebody squealed, the newspapers heard about Bovard, Stonier and Rockne going north together, put two and two together and in the absence of any official statement, leaped at the conclusion that they were dickering with Rockne to coach at U.S.C. It was a shot in the dark and probably an out-and-out guess but it hit the bullseye and rang the bell.

Bovard and Stonier were both in San Francisco when the papers began to discuss matters and the evasions and denials which were forthcoming from all hands just gave the newspapers that much more of an excuse for trying to dope out what was happening. By the time Bovard got back and Henderson sent in his resignation and an official statement was given out the public had received the impression that regardless of the whys and the wherefores of the case, the situation was badly muddled.

To top it off and make it even more annoying it is rumored that all did not go so well at the triangular conference in the north so that nothing but trouble seems to have resulted from a situation which, if it had progressed according to schedule, would have been regarded as a diplomatic triumph.

The northern schools, which were beginning to think that it would certainly be a top-notch idea to get together with the Trojans, are sitting back and giggling at the Trojan difficulties. Anyway, what started out to be a nicely organized transition certainly provided the newspapers and the sporting public with a week of unexpected gossip, speculation and news.

SAGEHENS IN THE MOVIES

Pomona Varsity and Frosh Grid Squads Take Part in Filming of Comedy at Claremont

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

POMONA COLLEGE, CLAREMONT, Jan. 17.—Returning to football for a day even though the season is supposed to be over, two Pomona College grid teams, the frosh and varsity, staged a game of their own on the Sagehen field this afternoon as a part of a new feature picture being made on the Pomona College campus.

Earl Merritt, Roland Clark, Leslie Baynham, Rannie Draper and all of the members of this year's champion eleven featured in the special scenes being filmed as one of the college comedy series being made by the F. B. O. Company of Hollywood. Members of this year's frosh aggregation also donned their suits and presented the varsity with a few of their old plays that worked against other conference frosh elevens.

In order that the game be made as real as possible, Coach Eugene White Nixon, co-operating with the company, invited the entire student body and townspeople as rooters. One thousand were on Alumni field when the first whistle blew and Pomona rooters once again executed a few of the stunts used in the classic Occidental-Pomona clash this fall.

NIMRODS CAVORT ON RIFLE RANGES NOW

Now that the hunting season is a thing of the past local nimrods are turning their attention to the various rifle, revolver and shotgun clubs about the city, paper targets and clay pigeons coming in for an undue amount of attention.

Those interested in rifle and revolver shooting will do well to look over the Los Angeles Rifle Club, which according to Lester J. McMurray of B. H. Dyas, is one of the best equipped organizations in these parts. Capt. E. C. Crossman is the head of the club, and aside from being something of a marksman is a mightly fine fellow. The club holds shoots every other Sunday on the Shutzen Park range, which is situated on the Rose Hill route to Pasadena.

The Encino Country Club, also possesses a fine rifle range which is open to members of the club.

LOS CERRENOS CLUB PLANS TRAP SHOOT

The Los Cerrenos Country Club, located at Chino, a few miles east of Pomona, is planning an open trap tourney, to take place some time next month. The club is equipped with first-class traps, and lovers of Blue Rock hunting will find first class accommodations for themselves and families, according to Les McMurray, fireman authority of B. H. Dyas. McMurray and Frank Brockway visited the club last week and were particularly struck with the beauty of the place, the clubhouse sits on the edge of a large pond, and is surrounded with shade trees, etc.

FLORIDA GIRL IS DISCUS CHAMPION

The women's record for throwing the discus is 98 feet 2 inches, held by Nell Carroll of Florida State College.

Ted Easton in Victory Over Nelson Dodge

Ted Easton, a veteran tennis player despite his scant 15 years of age, was the first to hand 12-year-old Nelson Dodge a beating on the courts yesterday when he defeated the Midwick sensation, 6-1, 6-0 at the Los Angeles Tennis Club. The match was promoted, if that is the term to be used, by Harvey Snodgrass and Snodgrass will stage another such event next Saturday, according to an announcement received here yesterday from himself.

Dodge was discovered in the recent Midwick Country Club open tennis tournament, when he romped through his schedule to a victory in the junior singles. Great things are predicted for him and so Snodgrass pitted him against Easton yesterday. The latter has been playing tennis longer than he can remember, and has received acclaim from none other than William T. Tilden II, for his court generalship.

The score doesn't tell the fight that Dodge put up against his more experienced opponent. Although the veteran, Ted, lost but one game in both sets, the Midwick lad played good tennis and didn't suffer any through the defeat. Snodgrass has not announced who will play next week.

FOOTBALL PROFITABLE FOR PENNSYLVANIA

The University of Pennsylvania made a profit of $258 595 on football this season. The total receipts from the games were $501,462.37, with expenses which included the guarantees paid to visiting teams of $242,897.38.

Prep Tracksters in First Practice of Year

OUTLOOK FOR SEASON BRIGHT

Large Squads Answer Initial Call for Track

Dearth of Letter Men at Most Institutions

Manual, Hollywood, Lincoln Look Strong

A sure sign that spring is not far away is discernible to the casual visitor at any of the local prep institutions these afternoons, the number of skinny shanked, scantily clad, shivering track aspirants out tearing up the track serving as sample testimony that the season of sap running and running saps is not far away. Despite the fact that winter's chill still frosts the night air, the future stars of the cinder oval are already commencing to do their stuff, squads that would rival Hannibal's army in size having turned out at all of the local knowledge foundries.

Although it is too early in the season to do much predicting, present prospects point to one of the best seasons that the city high schools have ever experienced. Two of the schools have a large coterie of star performers back, Manual Arts and Hollywood being about as well fortified as any, and their list of returning letter men is rather meager. Out at Franklin, as is the case with Jefferson and Lincoln, most of the boys that have turned out for track are youngsters in the ninth and tenth grades, and the coaches at these institutions are building toward their 1926 season rather than the present one.

At Manual Arts Coach Sid Foster will have Junior Hanford in the 440, Paul Borgefeldt and Maurer in the sprints, and Di Mecili in the broad jump as a nucleus around which to build his squad. Hanford may run the 100 and 220 also, as he has proven himself very capable in these events. Di Mecili jumped about 20 feet 11 inches last year in the Southern California meet, and should take points in almost any old competition this season. Foster loses two of his biggest stars, De Wolf Requa, star hurdler, and Vic Hansen, demon 880 man and miler, both having left the institution via the graduation route. Others who will probably show well for the Toilers this year are: Herb Bond in the sprints; Lee Brady in the 440; Paul Ennisman and Babe Hanson in the weights, both of whom shoved the shot about forty feet last year, and Harris, who did about eleven feet last season in the pole vault. Foster will have to develop hurdlers and distance men, having none of either at present.

Hollywood will probably hang their hopes on Red Brinker and Al Childs in the sprints, both being capable of about 10.02 in the 100; Lester Fads in the hurdles, and Fads and Landers in the high jump, the latter doing about five feet eight inches last year. Fred Zombo should show well in the broad jump, as he did about twenty feet last season, while Ronnie Drummond will hold down major honors in the shot and discus. Drummond shoves the pellet about forty feet, and heaves the platter around 115. Some of the men that Coach Bill Paige will miss are: Lee Barnes in the pole vault; Vic Klein in the dashes; Douglas in the 880, and Carley and Chase in the mile, all having graduated.

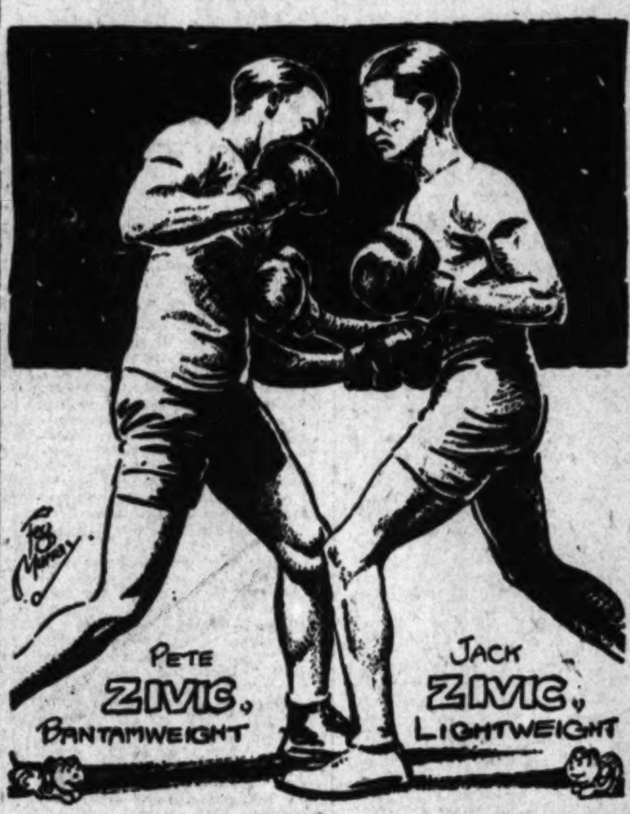
The American Game Protective Association, whose slogan is "never kill wantonly, needlessly, or brutally," is urging Congress to adopt measures for the better protection of game. Members of the association include sportsmen, game wardens and government experts from all parts of the country.

BATTLING BROTHERS

BY FEG MURRAY



Away down at the end of the indices in the boxing guides you will find the names "Zivic, Jack," and "Zivic, Pete." Undoubtedly the Zivics of Pittsburg will go down in sport history along with other famous brothers who have won fame in the ring. Add the Croatian name of Zivic to those of McGovern, Attel, Sullivan, Cross, Mitchell and Gibbons—other families that have given at least two boys to the fight game.

I knew the pair shown above when they were "simon-pures" on the good ship (?) Matoika that carried us all to the 1920 Olympic games in Antwerp. While the brothers Zivic did not achieve the success that their team-mate Frankie Genaro, now American flyweight champion, did, they fared very well for lads of 17 and 19 years of age in international competition.

I don't know what it was that Jack called Peter, but anyway the older brother looks as if about to commit fratricide in the accompanying illustration. Pete has won over such stars as Abe Goldstein, Midget Smith and Jack Sharkey, while Jack has beaten Ever Hammer, Ray Mitchell and Charlie White. Each lad ran up a notable string of successive victories as an amateur.

Jack possesses a trick shoulder that pops out of place now and then, but he also owns a terrific left hook.

OLD-TIMERS LAMENT LOSS OF RACING'S PICTURESQUE SIDE

BY FRENCH LANE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—What has become of the old-fashioned race-track killing? Where are the plungers of yesterday?

When John W. ("Bet a Million") Gates, Pittsburg, Pa.; Riley Grannan, John W. Drake, Mike Dwyer and that crowd folded up their tents and went out of business years ago it seems to have ended the period of wild race-track plunging.

At least there has been no new group to carry on or, if there has been such a group, it has been able to keep out of the limelight. But even the old-timer will admit there is more money wagered on horse races in America in a day now than there was in a week back in Grannan's and Pittsburg Phil's time.

If this be true surely there are plungers. Some individuals must be making wagers that would compare favorably with those of decades ago. As much as $1,000,000 has been reported to have been wagered on a single track in recent years in Kentucky and Maryland. But compared to the days when Gates or Grannan operated, it scarcely attracted the attention or comment that a bet of $25,000 or $50,000 would have aroused twenty years ago.

TODAY'S PLUNGERS

"Our big plungers of today are among our biggest business men, and they do their betting between business deals miles away from the racetrack," was the explanation one old-timer gave in lamenting the passing of such picturesque figures as Gates, Grannan, Drake, Dwyer and others from the American racetrack.

"They didn't particularly help the sport, harmed it more perhaps than they ever benefited it," he continued, "but they did seem to put more value on the speed and staying qualities of a horse than do even our great and rich races of today.

"And while there isn't a Gates or any of his kind for the crowds at the track to follow today, the betting and heavy plunging is going merrily along and many more fortunes are won and lost in this day and age than there was a quarter of a century ago."

Then the old-timer went on to explain where the big betting is actually done. A New York broker friend of his bets as high as a hundred thousand a day on races throughout the country. Not at the track, to be sure, but over the telephone to his particular betting commissioner, who perhaps scatters the wagers out with bookmakers in a dozen cities.

Another big Chicago business man, the head of a $5,000,000 concern, bets with even more reckless abandon than does the New York broker, according to the veteran of the tracks, who no longer actually sees the horses run, but who years ago discovered the possibilities in handling the betting commissions and now often makes more in a year than a Senator or a Congressman, by spending a few hours in his office each afternoon placing the bets of a couple of dozen business-men clients.

"This Chicagoan," he said, "would make Gates or Pittsburg Phil, or any of the other big bettors of their day, look almost like pikers. He will bet $25,000, or sometimes more on a horse that is running at a track 1000 miles away, and often does not learn the result until he reads it in the papers with his market report the next morning.

"Of course, he is one of the big plungers of the country and don't think that he doesn't put over a coup or killing now and then that compares with those of a generation ago. The public seldom knows of it because this fellow far away from the actual scene of the race has probably won $100,000 or more on the outcome, while back at the race track where the horse has unexpectedly won a race at odds of 6 to 8 or 10 to 1, few of the players and daily visitors have profited.

LOSING GAME

"But they don't always win. Most plungers seem to know that if they keep at it long enough they will finish without a bank roll. However, that doesn't make their number any the smaller, and while in the days of Gates one could probably count the actual number of what was then termed big race-track gamblers on the fingers of one hand, there are dozens of them now in any one of a dozen cities I can name who bet just as much, and a majority of them will not visit a race track more than a few times a year."

While this is going on among the business men who find they cannot quit the money-making business long enough to get out and see a horse on which they have wagered thousands run, there is probably as much speculation at the tracks as there ever was in the days of Gates.

But when the wide open bookmaking disappeared, so did the plungers as far as the public is concerned. Nowadays, they either bet in a parti-mutuel machine where the owner of a betting ticket alone knows how much he has wagered on any particular horse, or he is placing his money in the so-called oral way, either written on a slip of paper or whispered into the bookmaker's ear, and again the crowd that in the old days would follow the plungers up and down either side of the betting ring, has to keep its distance and try to guess the horse which the heavy player is backing.

And if Sol McGuire, the plunger of 1925, wins or loses $25,000 on a race, few except Sol's little circle of friends and his bookmaker know anything about it.

COACH BOB MATHEWS SPURNS MANY BIDS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO (Moscow) Jan. 17.—When Robert Lee Mathews, grid mentor for the Vandals during the last three years, consented to continue as athletic director at the University of Idaho, he turned down lucrative offers from at least four large universities. One of these, it is understood, offered him $10,000 a year to serve as football coach. But coaching football at Idaho isn't a financial proposition with Matty, he asserted in a statement issued to the press following the announcement that he had agreed to remain at Idaho. He has fought with Idaho through her lean years, he said, and that fighting has made him glad that the student body and faculty want him to continue.

President Harry A. Williams Says Coast League Is In for Great Baseball Year

PREXY IS OPTIMISTIC ABOUT COMING SEASON

Minor World Series, Harmony and New Parks Are Reasons for Rosy Prediction

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS
President Pacific Coast Baseball League

Apparently the Pacific Coast League is about to embark on its greatest season. No doubt when the sports editor of The Times asked me to write a statement on the prospects he expected just such an outpouring of optimism, for optimism usually reigns supreme in the realm of baseball during the winter and spring.

However, I think there are more than the usual grounds for this, while realizing it is as difficult to forecast a season as to pick the score of a game in advance. A chart of the history of any league would greatly resemble the outline of a very rugged mountain range with an occasional tall peak rising above the level of the range. In other words, baseball has its ups and downs, and it must depend on these "peak" years for prosperity.

Probably the most encouraging indication was the spirit displayed at the recent league meeting held in Los Angeles. Everything done was constructive. Making an agreement which will result in a minor world series being played on the Coast each fall is an achievement on which the clubowners are to be congratulated, as is the bringing of the minor league convention to the Coast next fall. This minor world series should, in time, become a sporting classic, and when the new parks are completed will, I firmly believe, be played before crowds of 30,000 or more. Also, the series gives the players an incentive heretofore lacking, and should result in speeding up Coast League baseball.

COMPLETE HARMONY

There was complete harmony and co-operation throughout the meeting here, indicating that the morale of the circuit has undergone a reconstruction and that the clubowners have decided that there is ample room on the ball field for all the fighting necessary to baseball.

When I was placed in this position something over a year ago, the task looked almost hopeless, the obstacles in front nearly insuperable. There was no working agreement with the majors, but chiefly bitterness and suspicion between them and the Coast League. Some of the clubs were at a very low ebb and needed players which the majors were sending elsewhere. Because of unsettled conditions there was no prospect of new and modern baseball plants being constructed. Capital did not care to take a chance. Some of the league directors were not on speaking terms, and when attending league meetings refused even to stop at the same hotel. And I found myself, although no party to these dissentions, surrounded by these deep-rooted antagonisms. And I still confess that at times I was forced to fight off discouragement despite the fact that the circuit enjoyed a most successful season. The chasm seemed too deep and too broad to be bridged. But there were indications at the last meeting that it had been spanned.

This change and the strengthening of the playin gpersonnel of the league during the past year are only two steps in the reconstruction. The league is to be placed on a physical basis which will make it enduring. By this I mean the erection of new plants. Every effort is being made and will be made to make the league attractive to capital. That progress is being made in this direction is indicated by the erection here within a short time of a $1,000,000 plant by Mr. Wrigley and the willingness of the Shibes, multimillionaire business men of Philadelphia, to back the new Portland owners. Moreing Field in Sacramento is one of the best minor league plants in the country. I understand that San Francisco is planning the erection of a steel and concrete plant and, it is said, there are similar plans on foot in Portland. In a few years there will be a chain of steel and concrete baseball stadiums reaching from Seattle to Los Angeles owned by the clubs. How different from the condition and outlook of a few years ago when certain of the weaker clubs were forced to call on other clubs for financial assistance in order to finish the season, and these other clubs could ill-afford to furnish this assistance. Now every club can stand on its own financial legs. Every effort will be made to make this circuit increasingly attractive to capital to the further financial strengthening of the league. These possibilities of the future are almost staggering in their potentialities. In growing thus the Pacific Coast League will assist in accelerating the growth and prosperity of the great Pacific slope as a whole and play a larger role in that community of interest represented on the other hand by the press and public.

ARRANGE MANY GAMES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Washington, world champions, will play twenty-five games on their spring trip. A Rookie nine will play Cuban All-Stars at Tampa, March 7.

WHERE CLUBS ARE TO DO TRAINING

All of the clubs in the Pacific Coast League with the exception of Seattle have decided where they will do their spring training this year. Killefer is still uncertain whether to take his Indians to Hollywood, Elsinore or to some San Joaquin Valley town. Following are the clubs and where they will train:

Vernon—Maier Park.
Los Angeles—Washington Park.
Salt Lake—Long Beach.
Portland—San Jose.
San Francisco—Fresno.
Oakland — Myrtledale Springs.
Sacramento—Sacramento.

GLENDORA, AZUSA IN BIG GAME

Orange Belt Nines Fight for Lead; Bellflower to Face Watts Squad

BY JOE BUSH

The leadership of the Orange Belt League will be decided this afternoon when the strong Azusa nine journeys to Glendora for a game that should bring out a flock of fans. Azusa has been traveling at a fast clip of late, but the Glendora players announce that they'll stop Mike Goslin's sluggers.

In the Pacific League the feature struggle will bring together Bellflower and Watts, not only old baseball rivals, but two teams right up in the runnign. The Blue Diamonds will tackle the Montebello outfit in the most important San Gabriel Valley northern loop struggles.

Four hot contests are on in the L. A. Harbor league, with the Fremont Woodmen-Cherry Heights tussle attracting a lot of attention. Other important games bring together Palomar at Virginia City, Howitzer at Compton, Larry's Stars at Monterey Park and Vermont Square and Williams Cubs at the Hazard playgrounds. The U.S.S. California nine meets Alhambra. The schedule follows:

ORANGE BELT LEAGUE
Eagles at Arcadia.
Azusa at Glendora.
Palms at San Gabriel.
Huntington Park vs. Crown City at Tournament Park.

L. A. HARBOR LEAGUE
Citizens' Trust Company vs. Eastman's Tigers at Santa Monica.
Spartan's All-Stars at Palms.
Pioneer Truck vs. Haverty's.
Colleen Landis vs. E. K. Wood at Fort MacArthur.

PACIFIC LEAGUE
W.O.W. at Cherry Heights.
Watts C. of C. at Bellflower.
Palomar at Virginia City.
Howitzer at Compton.

SAN GABRIEL VALLEY, NORTHERN

Sperry Flour vs. Glendale Letter Carriers at Glendale.
Fraternal Brotherhood vs. Bank of Italy at Ross Snyder No. 1.
[illegible] vs. Mesa Heights at Sixtieth and West Boulevard.

Pirrone Stars and Soapsters Tangle Today

The White King Soaps and Joe Pirrone's All-Stars clash today at Washington Park in a double-header that is expected to attract the largest winter league crowd of the season. The Soapsters are anxious to get back into first place again and to do so will have to take both ends of the twin pastime from Pirrone's wrecking crew.

Pirrone has added several new faces to his club and hopes to give the White Kings a surprise party. Pirrone will use Pape, young Seattle hurler, in an attempt to take one of the games. Doc Crandall and George Payne will start for the Soapsters, while Gordon Jones will be used should either falter. The first game will start at 1:15 o'clock. "Beans" Reardon, the boy bandit, and Jack Carroll will umpire.

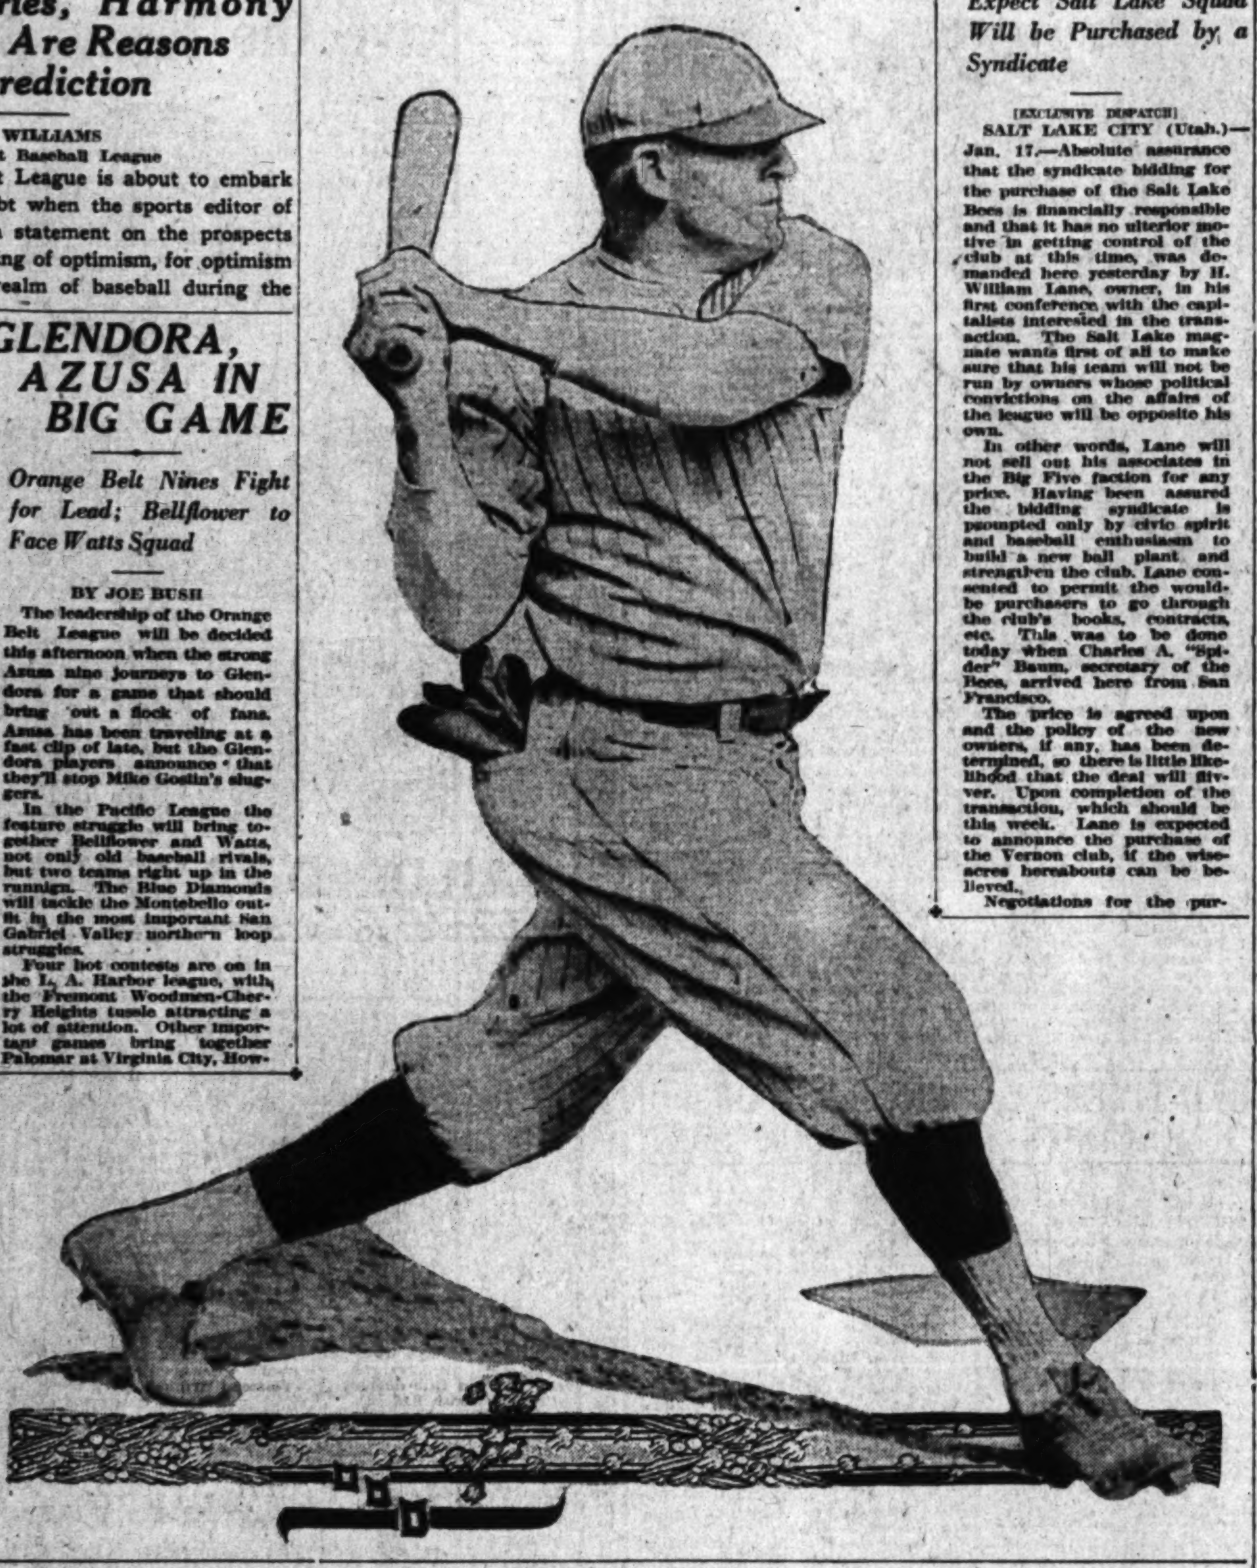
ST. LOUIS CARDS BOOK TWENTY-NINE TUSSLES

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 17.—Twenty-nine games are on the exhibition schedule of the St. Louis Cardinals announced tonight. The opening series of three games with Sacramento will be played at the training camp at Stockton, Cal., beginning February 28. Other opponents on the Pacific Coast will be San Francisco, Oakland and Kansas City.

HE SOCKS 'EM

It's Jim Blakesley, demon Vernon left fielder, who recently had an operation on his hand and expects to be in great shape the coming season. Blakesley hits around the .350 mark and Bill Essick is counting on him to drive in a flock of Bengal runs this year.



TIGER ROSTER ANNOUNCED

Manager Essick Will Take Thirty-two Players to Spring Training Camp Next Month

Bill Essick will take at least thirty-two players with him when the Vernon club goes into spring training at Maier Park this year. According to the club roster given out yesterday by Secretary Howard Lorenz, the Tigers will go into camp with four catchers, twelve pitchers, eight infielders and eight outfielders.

There is, however, a strong possibility that the Bengals will take even more players, for Essick has the strings out for about five more men. At least a couple of these deals are expected to go through.

Behind the bat Essick has Truck Hannah and Denny Murphy for first-string work, with Rod Whitney also available. Bert Read, a semipro backstop, will be taken to camp also. The following pitchers are now the property of the Bengals: Ken Penner, Ed Bryan, Jimmy Christian, Clyde Barfoot, Harry Courtney, Lefty Thomas, Clay Carson, Fred Groat, Evar Swanson, Ernie Haycox, Wee Ludolph and Phil Weinert. Penner, Bryan, Christian, Barfoot, Ludolph and Weinert are being counted upon to do the heavy work.

There are eight infield candidates, with hot competition slated for every position except first base where Jim McDowell will hold forth. Wes Griffin, Gordon Slade and Neal Finn will battle it out for second. Finn was farmed out to the Wilkes-Barre club last year where he did such good work that he was made manager before the season ended. Essick is counting on Finn to make good. For shortstop there will be Ed Hemingway, for whom Frank Shellenback was traded to Sacramento; Fred Pfahler, a local semipro, and Slade. Charley Deal and Jack Warner will fight it out for the hot-corner job.

In the outfield Essick has eight more men, with Jim Blakesley, Ike Wolfer, Mike Menosky and Pete Schneider favored to land regular berths. Wolfer was purchased from Portland and will probably take Chadbourne's place in center field. The other outer gardeners are Bob Gillespie, Firpo Bernard, Tommy Oliver and Ernie Orsatti, the latter another semipro.

Manager Essick announces that the Bengal battery corps will go into training February 28, with the rest starting work March 2.

HECTOR JANSE LEADS IOWA BASKETBALLERS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

IOWA CITY (Iowa) Jan. 17.—Capt. Hector M. Janse of the University of Iowa basketball team, is the twelfth forward to lead a Hawkeye five, according to official files at the athletic department.

In the twenty-six recorded years of Iowa basketball, there have been only three centers who have captained the teams and one of these, Robert Burgitt of the 1924 squad, was lost at the beginning of the conference season. A playing center has not led an Iowa five since 1904 when H. C. Parsons filled the position. Twelve guards have held the honor since basketball started.

MANY BASEBALLS ARE USED DURING SEASON

The National League used 44,221 baseballs last season. New York purchased the greatest number, 7560, and Philadelphia the least, 3450.

INTRODUCING COAST LEAGUE NEWCOMERS

BY CHARLES J. FOREMAN

WILLIAM FRANCIS McCABE, outfielder, Seattle. Born, Chicago, Ill., October 28, 1896. Height, 5 feet, 10 inches. Weight, 181 pounds. Bats both ways. Throws right handed.

Club in 1924—Atlanta, Southern Association. First engagement—Newport News, Virginia League, 1914. Clubs since then—Washington Americans, 1915; Chicago Nationals, 1918, 1919, 1920; Brooklyn Nationals, 1920; Rochester, International League, 1921; Los Angeles, 1921, 1922, 1923; Atlanta.

1924 record—Games, 70; at bat, 232; runs, 40; hits, 57; doubles, 17; triples, 3; home runs, 4; sacrifices, 10; stolen bases, 4; passes, 29; batting average, .246. Played 49 games in outfield, accepting every chance but one of 112 offered, for average of .991. Played seventeen games at first base, accepted 133 of 135 chances offered, for average of .985.

LANE WILL SELL BEES THIS WEEK

Expect Salt Lake Squad Will be Purchased by a Syndicate

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SALT LAKE CITY (Utah.)—Jan. 17.—Absolute assurance that the syndicate bidding for the purchase of the Salt Lake Bees is financially responsible and that it has no ulterior motive in getting control of the club at this time, was demanded here yesterday by H. William Lane, owner, in his first conference with the capitalists interested in the transaction. The Salt Lake magnate wants first of all to make sure that his team will not be run by owners whose political convictions on the affairs of the league will be opposite his own.

In other words, Lane will not sell out his associates in the Big Five faction for any price. Having been assured the bidding syndicate is prompted only by civic spirit and baseball enthusiasm to build a new ball plant and strengthen the club, Lane consented to permit the would-be purchasers to go through the club's books, contracts, etc. This was to be done today when Charles A. "Spider" Baum, secretary of the Bees, arrived here from San Francisco.

The price is agreed upon and the policy of the new owners, if any, has been determined, so there is little likelihood that the deal will flivver. Upon completion of the transaction, which should be this week, Lane is expected to announce the purchase of the Vernon club, if the wiseacres hereabouts can be believed.

Negotiations for the purchase are still being conducted by local Chamber of Commerce officials. The personnel of the Salt Lake combine is still unknown here, except that one of the men is formerly from Chicago and is a retired automobile manufacturer.

Favorites Nab Major Purses at Tia Juana

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 17.—Favorites predominated at Tia Juana this afternoon, in sharp contrast to the last few days of racing, when long priced horses seemed to be the rule.

The feature race today, a mile handicap, went to Ebb Tide, thanks to a splendid exhibition of riding on the part of Jockey Walls. Ebb Tide was reserved in third position while her stable mate, Batsman, fought the leaders, Canoe and Ceylon Prince, into subnission. Ebb Tide then was given free rein and she got down in front to win by four lengths.

The Miramonte Stock Farm put over a sleeper in Black Bart, one of their 3-year-old colts, in the fifth race of the day, at six furlongs. Black Bart, under Barnes's handling defeated another outsider, Herdsman, by a length with third place going to Seth's Bacon.

Tom Craven survived a long stretch duel with Woodie Montgomery and just managed to take the fourth by the narrowest of margins. Margaret White easily bested a band of thirteen going six furlongs in the third event. The favorite, Noon Glide, ridden by Pablo Martinez, who was reinstated today, finished second and Praiseworthy closed with a stout rush to be third. Summaries:

First race, two furlongs: Miss Lester (Smith,) won; Shasta King (Wilson,) second; War Bells (Schaefer,) third. Time: :22 2-5.

Second race, five furlongs: Lampo (Piccarillo,) won; Sollimenia (Barnes,) second; Freemason (Wilson,) third. Time: 1:01 4-5.

Third race, six furlongs: Margaret White (Schaefer,) won; Noon Glide (Martinez,) second; Praiseworthy (Pendergrass,) third. Time: 1:14 1-5.

Fourth race, mile and 70 yards: Tom Craven (McHugh,) won; Woodie Montgomery (Martinez,) second; Romulus (Griffin,) third. Time: 1:47 2-5.

Fifth race, six furlongs: Black Bart (Barnes,) won; Herdsman (Wilson,) second; Seth's Bacon (Walls,) third. Time: 1:15 3-5.

Sixth race, one mile: Ebb Tide (Walls,) won; Ceylon Prince (Barnes,) second; Canoe (Wilson,) third. Time: 1:39 3-5.

Seventh race, mile and one-sixteenth: Sway (Smith,) won; Three Square (Griffin,) second; Zealot (Fisher,) third. Time: 1:47.

Eighth race, six furlongs: Graysen (Corbett,) won; Seth's Alibi (Singleton,) second; Star of Eve (Berg,) third. Time: 1:13 4-5.

PAN-AMERICAN SPORT FEDERATION PLANNED

The special committee consisting of William H. Cuddy, William S. Haddock and H. Obertubbesing, which President Hulbert appointed to confer with representatives of Canada and South America for the purpose of establishing a Pan-American Athletic Federation, held its first meeting recently and tentatively arranged to hold an All-American boxing championship in New York City during the month of April, 19[illegible].

ANGELS FIGHT FOR JOBS

Grimes and McAuley Will Have Competition for First Base and Shortstop Berths

Competition for positions on the Angel team promises to be keener this spring than ever before in the history of the club for reason of the fact that Manager Krug has decided that no one player on the club is sure of his berth. Every man who reports for spring training at Washington Park will have to fight for his job and every player will be given an equal chance to win.

Manaker Krug is counting on having several players battle for every place on the team. At present it looks as if he is going into the conditioning period with approximately forty players. This number will include candidates for the infield, outfield, pitching and catching jobs. While Krug has not yet announced what his roster will be when the training opens, he is counting on making another deal or two and of adding several more youngsters to his list.

AFTER INFIELDER

About the only position on the Angel team that will not have several candidates for competition is second base. That is really the only berth that is open, Manager Krug not having determined which of his infielders to place there. He is in quest of a hard-hitting keystone sacker and may open up the struggle for that job by getting one as he plans to let Clyde Beck try his hand at that position.

There promises to be interesting rivalry for the first and shortstop jobs as Krug is planning keen competition for his veteran players, Grimes and McAuley. These men, of course, have experience in their favor but that will not win them the assignments they have been holding for so many years. They will be asked by the pilot to step out during the spring training and show that they still merit the honor of being regulars. That they will have plenty of competition is apparent from the men Manager Krug has signed and listed to try for those two berths.

Grimes, a slugger of reputation, will have Ray Jacobs and Lee Dempsey to battle for the first-base job. The former National League star has the edge on his prospective opponents because of his wicked batting power. Jacobs showed early last season that he possessed promise of being a real hitter and should make Grimes hustle for his job in the event he can improve a little on his batting.

HIT FORTY-ONE HOMERS

Dempsey has had considerable experience around the initial sack, having played in the minor leagues for several seasons. He is a left-handed hitter and only last season pounded out a total of forty-one home runs in the Western Association. He has been hitting so consistently around the .300 mark that Manager Krug has hopes of his giving the veteran Grimes a stiff fight for the initial-bag berth.

McAuley naturally has the call on shortstop after the brilliant brand of ball he played there last season. He convinced the fans in the league without a question of a doubt that he is still the foremost shortstopper in the Coast ranks. Time and again he came up with almost uncanny stops and frequently in ball games checked rallies of he opposing teams by hismarvelous plays. In addition, he started to hit heavily toward the close of the year when the club was in its commendable spurt and closed the race with an avarage of close to .300.

McAuley, like other members on the club, will have to fight for his job. His candidates will be Beck and Harry Benjamin. Beck played at short in considerable games last summer and, like McAuley, made many sensational plays and also hit strongly at times. He also covered second and there showed that infield work was natural for him. Benjamin is a youngster Manager Krug picked up in the neighborhood of San Francisco and is said to be a recruit of unusual ability.

Double Soccer Bill is Carded for L.A. High

Although the Rangers have already cinched the title in the Southern California Soccer League race, much interest is being evinced in today's contest which will take place on Housh Field at Los Angeles High. In the opener of the double bill the Foresters face the Nevians, while the championship Ranger eleven will meet the Spanish-Americans, who at present hold second place in the feature contest, at 2:45 p.m.

The Spanish-Americans, who have a mighty sweet outfit with the addition of Wilson at back, are out for blood tomorrow. It being necessary for them to win if they are to hold second honors. Too, they have a long-standing grudge to even up with the Rangers and tomorrow will be offered the opportunity to gain revenge.

Despite the fact that they have won the championship, the Rangers are determined not to let anyone whip them, and will do their best to retain their prestige, by romping on the Spanish warridrs. All of which makes it look as though fans present will see one of those real bloody struggles, that is a thriller from start to finish.

The Magyars will meet the Monicans at Santa Monica, but should have little trouble downing the latter team.

SALT LAKE BEES GET PIERCY FROM HUBSOX

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

BOSTON, Jan. 17.—William B. Piercy, pitcher, has been released tonight by the Boston American League baseball club to the Salt Lake club of the Pacific Coast League, the Red Sox management announced today.

NEW SYSTEM FOR GOLF PLAYERS OF BOSTON

A semiprivate golf club is to be organized in Boston, Mass., where members will have an opportunity to "pay as they play" on an eighteen-hole course. A fee of $1 will be charged for each round.

NATIONAL SPORT

Soccer is the national sport of South America and is played the whole year around.

BASEBALL PICK-UPS

Secretary Howard Lorenz of the Vernon Club yesterday announced that he had sent out thirty-four contracts to prospective Bengal players. The season for hold-outs will start Monday when the athletes find out just how much they can subtract from what they thought they'd get from what they are offered in the contract.

Oscar Reichow, business manager of the Seraphs, will send out contracts Monday, so the Tiger hold-outs will have a slight start on the Angel won't-signs."

Reichow stated that every member of the club was being given an increase in salary to show appreciation for the good work they did in the closing weeks of last season.

Henry "Hank" O'Day, veteran National League umpire, was a visitor at Washington Park yesterday, dropping in for a chat with Oscar Reichow, whom he knew when the latter was writing baseball for the Chicago Daily News. "Hank" announces that he is in perfect shape and expects to have another great year umping in the senior circuit.

Fred N. Chamberlain, boss of the concessions at the Chicago Cub's park, and his wife, arrived in Los Angeles for a lengthy visit recently. They will soon leave for Catalina Island, where they will spend a good bit of their time. Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain will go back to Chicago with the Cub baseball squad.

Chamberlain says that every time Judge Kenesaw Landis comes out to the Cub park he always visits the concessionaire's stand and gets six bags of popcorn, which last him until the game is over, unless extra innings are in order.

John "Beans" Reardon, who yesterday signed a contract to umpire in the Coast League the coming season, has been assigned by Prexy Harry A. Williams to ump all of the exhibition games which the St. Louis Cardinals will play out here this spring.

Reichow announced yesterday that the intended trade the Angels had planned with the Kansas City Blues, which would send Walton Cruise to the American Association club and bring Pitcher Ray Caldwell to the Seraphs, had fallen through. Caldwell has already been sold by the Blues.

REARDON IS SIGNED TO ARBITRATE

President Williams Has Signatures of Five Men to Ump This Season

President Harry A. Williams announced yesterday afternoon that he had signed "Beans" Reardon to a Pacific Coast League umpiring contract, making five men that the Prexy has signed for the coming season. Jack Carroll, Ed Teck, Charley Schmidt and Roy Brashear are the others who have affixed their signatures to arbitrator contracts.

The signing of Reardon dispels all rumors about Reardon's going to the majors this year. President Heydler of the National League decided that "Beans" needed one more year in the minors before taking a fling at big-league umpiring. Reardon was supposed to be a hold-out this season, but he came to terms without even an argument.

President Williams is well satisfied that the loop will have a good flock of arbitrators. Three more umps will be signed within a few days, Williams announced. Of those signed, Reardon and Carroll are the only ones who started umpiring in the Coast League last season.

SPORTS FESTIVAL TO BE HELD AT L.A.A.C.

The gymnasium of the Los Angeles Athletic Club will be the setting for another of those most popular athletic shows and dances that made such a hit last winter. The date is Wednesday evening, the 28th inst., and the excitement commences at 815. Dancing from 9 until 11:30 with music furnished by two of Los Angeles' most popular orchestras, the L.A.A.C. Mercurians and Owen Fallon's Californians, than which there is none better. Boxing, wrestling, balancing, tumbling, fencing and a sword dance will make up the program. Tickets will be 50 cents for gentlemen and ladies will be admitted free.

In playing a ground ball very easy to misjudge the and the hop. To play a ball start toward it a step or two until you the ball is going to hit, the ball on the "big-hop" ground. it comes off the "half-hop" ing a ball on the much more difficult than on the "short-hop" of the hop." Never let the ball Moving in to the ball or two avoids this. Always ball in front of you the side, and keep in a throw the man out.

CRESCENT POLOISTS IN CLASH

Blues Play White Squad on Crescent Field This Afternoon

Plans for the erection of a grand stand and for the fencing of the Crescent Polo Club Field have been completed, according to an announcement made by officials of that organization yesterday, and it is probable that the last free game to be played there will be this afternoon when the Crescent Whites, led by Warren Jennings, will meet the Blues who will follow the leadership of John Feys.

Last week the Crescents played a har-fought match with the DuBrock four, and although the visitors won the game showed that the Crescent Club has material which should make a fine team with a little more practice.

A number of fine ponies have been added to the Crescent stables during the past week, several of them coming from eastern stables, and it is believed that the new mounts will speed up the game of the Crescent squad considerably. The field too has been worked over this week and although last Sunday's game was very fast it is believed that the Blue-White battle this week will be even faster.

The line-up which will start today's game follows:

Whites.	Blues.
Warren Jennings	John Feys
Bert Rogers	Hugh Mann
Elam	Earl
George Sheafer	Gilliam

ECHOES FROM HEMPEN SQUARE

Most of the fighters are picking Joe Schlaifer to whip Pal Smith. How Come?

Pronounced activity just now at Doyle's Vernon training camp. Lonnie Austin, Seattle promoter, got in several days ago with his stable of Buddy Dorset, Dude Dorset, and Ray Gillis. Lonnie at once set his trio to work and the lads soon made things hum for the big gallery that was present.

Sailor Vincent is training carefully at Doyle's camp. The Sailor is strong on the vibration treatment and beats it to death almost every day. Frankie Sullivan, who swings the old vibrating stuff, says it has monkey glands beaten to a frazzle.

Joe Rivers [illegible] himself at [illegible] these afternoons dressed fit to kill, is the envy of all aspiring pugs. Joe is now a sleek [illegible] and expects to enter the [illegible] by about the first of next July. He sure is taking on the weight of prosperity.

George [illegible] when he was a newsie in Toronto, Canada, sold Harry Gilmore, veteran boxer, a paper for 2 cents. Harry in his hurry, forgot to grease George's palm. At the Vernon Coliseum last Tuesday night, [illegible] nailed Harry and got his 2 cents with thirty years' interest.

[illegible] is training at Myer's camp all dolled up in purple, sixth-color trunks. When the trunks were hung up to dry last Wednesday, they looked like an up-to-date cross-word puzzle.

Said Jimmy McLarnin last Wednesday at Myer's camp, "When Fidel swung that wild left to my right eye in the eighth round, I sure went dizzy for a spell." Jimmy still carries the trophy of that blow in a partly discolored lamp.

K.O. Kelly is the admiration of Myer camp devotees with his shadow boxing. He sure knows how to bear down on the old prepping stuff.

When Young Farrell heard of La Barba's cut in last Tuesday night's battle, he forthwith donned a training outfit and beat the poor punching bag almost to death.

Babe Herrin annihilates a horde of adversaries every afternoon in his shadow boxing. Every time he puts one away, one can hear him grunt clear across the street.

[illegible]

One of the fastest [illegible] seen around a local camp in some time is Joe [illegible], who recently came here from the East. He is an elongated baby with a hungry man's reach and from the way he works at the gym, should make it interesting for local [illegible].

McLarnin in the next few years will probably be a lightweight. He is growing like a [illegible] and has taken on [illegible] forward to the [illegible]. He claims that training for La Barba weakened him considerably. About 128 will be his poundage in his next ring venture.

Alec Trambitas held the watch for Jimmy Davy when Jimmy shadow boxed at Myer's last Wednesday. Davy, who is about as fat as a [illegible], sweat like thunder for about eight minutes and then in desperation [illegible], "Say, Alec, haven't you a league—can't you say 'time'?"

Well, lads, what do you know about this—Carl Morris, the old Oklahoma boss, is now numbered with the local fold and is working his torso and arms at Myer's gym. He expects to break into the local game shortly.

SWITZERLAND? NOSSIR! CALIFORNIA

SNOW IS PLENTIFUL FOR SPORTS

Frigid Winter is Close at Hand for Tobogganing and Skating This Year

Although the reputation of California has been based on sunshine, flowers, swimming in January, shirt-sleeves in February and heavy underwear never, it looks as though the Chamber of Commerce is going to have to change the tone of their folders. Icicles, snowdrifts, subzero temperature and all the wonderful sports which go with them are now possible for Californians, for with heavy falls of snow in the mountains close at hand and the opening of an ice rink in Los Angeles, Southern California won't lack any of the recreations for which St. Moritz, Switzerland, has become world-famous.

Lake Arrowhead, Baldwin Lake and Big Bear Lake, located in the San Bernardino Mountains, within a few hours of Los Angeles, and Oak Glen Lodge, Mt. Lowe, Camp Baldy and other resorts, have become centers of winter sports activity, and the Palais de Glace, which will soon be thrown open to the public, offer all the necessary facilities for the enjoyment of King Winter's offerings.

Toboggan slides have been built in several localities; Big Bear Lake freezes solid, providing excellent skating, while the bays of Lake Arrowhead also bear ice enough for skaters. Snowballing and sledding are possible at all resorts in the higher altitudes, and skiing is coming into popular favor. Oak Glen Lodge reports a heavy fall of snow this week; Ice House Canyon, near Camp Baldy, has plenty of "Back East" weather far into the spring; Pinecrest Mountain Resort, Mt. Wilson, Forest Home, Glen Ranch and Opid's Camp all have all the zero weather, snow and ice the most ardent winter sports fan could desire.

O'LEARY WILL WALK AT CASEY BALL GAME

Dan O'Leary, world's champion pedestrian, will attempt to circle the bases twelve times in ten minutes at Belvedere gardens as a preliminary attraction to the Los Angeles-Pasadena baseball game in the Knights of Columbus League, this afternoon. O'Leary has held this title since his notable victory in London way back in 1878 and is almost as good today. He keeps in condition by walking up Mount Lowe two or three times a week and is getting to be a well-known figure in the surrounding mountains.

Preceding the feature event the Scots will be hosts to Hollywood A. C. The latter, while they lost to the Scots in their previous meeting, are favored to take today's game. Due to the loss of some of their star players the Scots have faltered in their last few games, and unless Manager Nichols has found capable substitutes the Scots seemed doomed to accept defeat. Kick-off will be at 1 p.m.

In the morning game starting at 11 a.m., the Thistles play the Sons. This game marks the return of the Thistles after a lay-off of three weeks, in order to allow the management to strengthen the team. Manager J. Bain reports a vastly improved line-up.

BEN WESTON GETS STARS

Installed as Commodore of California Yacht Club at Celebration; Jeffers Second in Command

Memories of the old swashbuckling sailing days of Southern California yachting were brought to mind at the California Yacht Club last night where 200 sailors drank their bumpers dry to the flag officers who will serve the club during the 1925 season. The heeling deck of the windjammer, rather than the whine of the power yacht, appears as the dominant note of the season's activities, for of the eight flag officers inaugurated last night six are survivors of the famous salty clan from the old South Coast Yacht Club.

Paul Jeffers.

Commodore Ben Weston is one. It was away back in 1906 that Ben broke into the South Coast fleet with the gas boat Ethel. In 1910 he built the yawl Clipper and four years later entered the lists with the famous racing sloop Vite. Of recent years he has swept the Pacific Coast racing game with the R-class sloops Angela and Debra and has also been at the top in the last three international star-boat races on Long Island Sound. Ben this year will wear his second set of stars. He was commodore of the South Coast Yacht Club in 1914.

OLD SALT

Vice-Commodore Paul Jeffers is two. Paul has been sailing in California waters for twenty years and since he and his brother Sterling bought the sloop Wasp in 1909 the two of them have always been in there when there was any hard sailing done. The Jeffers boys and Ben Weston have their names engraved on more Southern California sailing trophies than any other three yachtsmen on the Pacific. Paul was rear-commodore of the California Yacht Club last season.

Fleet Captain Howard Wright is three. He and Fleet Surgeon George Laubersheimer, who makes four, are two of the old South Coast sailors left over from the Mah-Pe and Sweetheart days. Judge-Advocate Hubert Morrow and Fleet Secretary Fred Pettit, Jr., who are five and six, are also confirmed sailing bugs, although comparative newcomers in the fleet.

Rear-Commodore Ed Murphy is a power-boat yachtsman, as is the port captain, Dr. George Fairfield. They are both veterans at the put-put game, however, and survivors of the old Los Angeles Motorboat Club.

The coming season will be the greatest in point of activity and accomplishment in the history of California yachting, Commodore Weston declared in his inaugural speech.

IN LONG RACE

The blue-and-white burgee of the club will be represented in the 3600-mile ocean race to Tahiti, which starts from San Francisco on June 10, and is expected to finish at the south seaport during the French Bastille day celebration. It will be the longest yacht race in history.

On June 27 there will start from local waters the semiannual Honolulu race, on which there are expected this season to be fifteen entries. In mid-August all California yacht fleets will assemble at Santa Barbara for the annual regatta of the Southern California Yachting Association and three weeks later there will be held the Pacific Coast yachting regatta at Victoria. One hundred boats from the Southern California fleet are expected to go to Puget Sound for the trophy events.

Commodore Weston announced that there will also be an unusual number of short cruises by both the sailing and power fleets to Santa Barbara, Ensenada, around Catalina and to the various channel islands during the season. There will likewise be week-end races throughout the summer by the R-class sloops, the star boats and power craft.

Past Commodore Herbert L. Cornish, who presided at last night's ceremonies, in turning the helm over to Commodore Weston reviewed the 1924 season as the most successful in the club's history, in the number of racing events won, new craft added to the fleet and increase in membership.

In addition to the flag officers the following club members were installed as the advisory board: Keith Spaulding, Dan Laubersheimer, Joe Fellows, Alvin Frank, G. Allan Hancock, Arthur Braly, Ray Thomas, E. C. Wilson, Otto G. Wildey, Albert Soiland, Hal Roach, Herbert Cornish, Eugene Overton, F. P. Graves, Dan Little, Wilbur May and Harold Tuttle.

PRO BASKETBALL IS BOOMING IN MIDWEST

Professional basketball is one of the greatest of winter sports in the Middle West and throughout the Eastern cities, with the games played several times a week and drawing crowds as large as 10,000 fans. The games differ slightly in the professional leagues in the East in that the games are played in cages and the backboard is eliminated, the players having only a hoop to shoot at.

INDIA BIDS HIGHEST FOR BLOODED DOGS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—India, astounding as it may seem, has displaced the United States, as the highest bidder for the star dogs of the English show world and this takes in nearly every recognized breed. Rich Englishmen resident in India first started the high prices and natives followed.

RABBIT PUNCHES

By PAUL LOWRY

Ed Martin, who started the Attells—Monty, Caesar and Abe—on their respective careers in the opening years of this century, is chuckful of reminiscenses and anecdotes of the old fighting days in California, and later turned to journalism.

He is an ex-fighter himself after a treacherous career as a manager of pugs. His present occupation is sometimes referred to as "purveyor of news," a polite term for press agents.

A world's record was established by Martin back in 1898, when he managed Jack Johnson for one fight, this being the same Jack, who later won the world's heavyweight title.

Martin took Johnson when he was minus the seat in his pants, gave him two bits three times a day to fill up on T-bone steaks when T-bone steaks in San Francisco meant something more than a bone and ring of gristle, and landed a fight for him.

The bout Martin secured Johnson was with a boob named Kennedy, who was knocked out early in the fracas. Johnson beat Martin to the promoter's office, and collected the coin—$1100. The next day he went down and bought a suit of clothes for $13 with two pair of pants, a high hat for $3, a silk shirt for $5, a gold-headed cane for $9 and a bulldog for $10. He gave his manager $25 and then skipped town.

There was no "big money" in those days as we have come to think of it, and Martin tells some funny stories of the boys who had to "hock" their shirts to get a plate of pork and beans. One he relates about Kid Williams is a pip. Here's the way he tells it:

"Twenty years ago Los Angeles boasted a welterweight champion of the world whose short tenure of office was a record-breaker for insignificant financial remuneration. Kid Williams, the effervescent Deputy Sheriff and interpreter for the Sheriff's office whose right name is Frank Abraham Solomon is the shining example of what an awful mess can be made out of a world's championship.

"In a bout replete with great bitterness, Joe Walcott, the great Barbadoes negro welterweight, lost the championship to the Dixie Kid, another dusky-hued warrior, on an alleged foul after twenty rounds of terrific battling. The referee's decision was announced in the middle of the twentieth round and was followed by applause reminiscent of the recent Fulton fiasco. Police with drawn clubs entered the ring while the referee was making his getaway down one of the side aisles. According to a strict interpretation of Queensbury rules Dixie was the welter champion and title-holder. The following month Kid Williams defeated Dixie in a twenty-round bout before the Sacramento Athletic Club and became the new crown bearer. Then followed a series of bouts with the smallest award in the history of modern-day boxing.

"Traveling via side-door Pullman, Williams journeyed to San Francisco and was taken in tow by Tim McGrath, matched with Pat McCann, a middleweight at Newman, the bout to be held in a big saloon, which combined with a dance-hall, was the rendezvous of the sporting element of San Joaquin Valley. Training quarters were opened at the scene of the battle and a large poster stated that "Tim McGrath would walk a slack wire" immediately after the boxing match.

"Williams won in a walk, knocking out the farmer-fighter in three uninteresting rounds. The crowd, which had been making frequent trips to the bar for pre-Volstead refreshments craved more excitement and demanded that Tim do his wirewalking as advertised. Tim mounted a box and made a short speech telling the crowd that he would do his death-defying stunt the following Sunday. Instead of appeasing the mob they grabbed him and after taking off his shoes, made him stand on a wire that had been extended from a telephone pole to the building. When McGrath stood on the wire, the strain of his weight caused the imbedded part of the pole which was rotted away to topple over and the wire-walker and pole came down in a crash. Tim walked on crutches for several weeks and that casualty ended what might have been a brilliant career as an equilibrist. During this excitement the promoter disappeared and after the Sheriff caught up with him and made him disgorge, Williams received $26, which he devided with his manager.

"His next bout was with 'New York' Jack O'Brien, a really great fighter, who was a trifle too heavy for the lightweights, but who fought great bouts with Joe Gans, the old master of the art of boxing; Rube Ferns, who ruled in the welterweight division and 'Elbows' McFadden, a terror among the 135-pounders. They fought twenty rounds before the Stockton Athletic Club on a percentage basis. The bout, though extensively advertised, would have drawn a large house, but on the day of the contest it poured like the Pacific Ocean was on a rampage. Streets were flooded, cars quit running and the only means of travel was by the old reliable horse and buggy. Williams won the bout and after the club deducted training expenses he received $42.50 for his share of the purse.

"Col. Berry of Alaska, owner of one of the leading hotels in Fresno and backer of the Montana Kid, who was a familiar sight on Los Angeles streets with the bulldog that carried a pipe in his mouth, sent for Williams to come to the Raisin City to box his protege. Berry thought his boxer invincible and offered to wager a large sum on his chances. He was also the promoter of the contest and acted as stakeholder. Williams stopped at Berry's hotel, which was the first time he had ever been a guest in an institution where by pressing a button he could order meals and pre-Volstead drinks for himself and guests and receipted for the same by signing his name on a small white tag. He entertained lavishly. Several days before the bout Williams drew $250 to bet on himself and the colonel took the other end and also acted as stakeholder. The bout was short and sweet. At the sound of the gong Williams went after Montana and knocked him out in two minutes with a terrific left-hook to the jaw. Berry, who also acted as referee declared all bets off, and Williams the winner. Later Williams was presented with a statement by the combined club and hotel management showing that although he won the fight he was still indebted $24 after deducting hotel accommodations and monies advanced."

COACHES WIDEN SCOPE OF WORK

Athletic Directors Have Real Mission to Perform

Makes Men as Well as Heroes of the Gridiron

Eckersall Pays Tribute to Alonzo Stagg

BY WALTER ECKERSALL

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—That teachers of athletics in our universities and colleges are taking a keen interest not only in the development of teams and individuals but in the making of men as well is shown by the long years of service and self-sacrifice of some of the country's leading coaches and athletic directors.

In most cases development of teams is no longer placed above the development of the athletes for the business world. The coaches and others who come in direct contact with the athletes always look to the future of their charges and it is not an uncommon thing for coaches to discourage their athletes from taking up a professional career either as coach or professional participant.

In the point of active service, A. A. Stagg, football coach and director of athletics at the University of Chicago, is the oldest. The Grand Old Man of the Midway has now started on his thirty-fourth year of active coaching and he has been responsible for the development of many men who are now well known in the business and professional world.

At Chicago, Stagg is known as a character builder. He continually looks to the future of the men under him. If he can develop a winning football team composed of high character he has accomplished his purpose. He takes pride in talking of the athletes who are successful in the business world and it is a source of satisfaction to him to watch his proteges develop after they leave the university. Stagg is a graduate of Yale where he studied for the ministry.

Another great athletic man who is independently wealthy, but who is devoting his life to the development of men is Fielding Y. Yost of Michigan. At the time he took over the coaching position at Ann Arbor in the early nineteen hundreds, Yost was a successful business man with interests in Nashville, Tenn. Previous to going to Michigan, Yost had coached at Stanford and in the Missouri Valley.

It is his love for amateur athletics and his desire to see athletes develop into successful men that is keeping Yost in active touch with intercollegiate athletics. He is now director of athletics at Michigan and only last season turned over the actual development of Wolverine football teams to George Litchfield, capable mentor. Yost could make by far more money in his chosen business profession than he is making at Michigan where he believes his position is more worthwhile than his other business ventures.

Glenn S. "Pop" Warner, successful football coach at Leland Stanford, who had formerly coached football at Cornell, Carlisle Indians and Pittsburg, is another mentor who is well fixed financially, but who is devoting the best years of his life to the development of football teams and successful business men. Like Yost, the Stanford mentor has now been in the game for over thirty years and is still able to teach the gridiron game as was shown last fall when he developed a championship eleven at Stanford in the first year he was head coach. Pop has a keen personality and he always takes keen interest in knowing what his former pupils are doing.

Notre Dame Star to Start Work in Spring

Roy Baker Will Assist in Coaching Gridders

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—Adam Walsh, captain and center of the Notre Dame football team of 1924, has accepted terms and will sign a contract to coach football at Santa Clara for two years. This announcement was made today by Father C. J. McCoy, vice-president of Santa Clara University. Wisconsin and Vanderbilt were after Walsh, according to Father McCoy.

Walsh will take charge of spring training and will go on the job in earnest next fall. Roy ("Snowy") Baker, will assist him.

Ed H. Kienholz, coach for the last two years will coach the basketball team this year, and that will finish his contract.

SIGN SAM AGNEW

Sam Agnew, the veteran catcher of the San Francisco club, has been engaged to coach baseball at Santa Clara.

Kienholz coached football, baseball and basketball.

When the Notre Dame team was at Pasadena playing Stanford, it became known that Santa Clara was after Adam Walsh, captain of the Four Horsemen. Knute Rockne, head coach of Notre Dame, was consulted and he recommended his captain highly. Walsh hails from Hollywood and will be glad to work out on this Coast rather than go back East.

INSPIRING CAPTAIN

Walsh is a big man, full of youthful enthusiasm, and he was an inspiring captain at Notre Dame. He played last season under difficulties for he had bones in his hands broken in the Army game and near the season's close he hurt his leg. But he was full of dash in the Pasadena game, though he had admitted after that he was dog tired and was playing on his nerve alone in the second half.

Ed Kienholz is a fine type of man; clean in every way and a hard, conscientious worker. He had fine success coaching the Long Beach High School team, where he turned out some corking football teams, but his team did not make much of a showing last year for Santa Clara.

FLEET SPORTS

By a scant two feet the Leatherneck whaleboat crew of the U.S.S. Pennsylvania yesterday morning won the Marines' Challenge Cup Race in the Outer Harbor, after the U.S.S. Arizona and U.S.S. Mississippi crews had both threatened to grab the coveted trophy. It was probably the most heart-breaking, thrilling finish in the rowing history of the Battle Fleet, any of the three leaders having an even chance for victory until the final ten feet. The U.S.S. Oklahoma and U.S.S. California boats, which finished fourth and fifth, respectively, crossed the line but a boatlength behind the winners.

The race was pulled under perfect weather and sea conditions over a mile-and-a-half course between the two rows of anchored battleships, ending abreast the U.S.S. Idaho.

As a result of yesterday's victory the U.S.S. Pennsylvania today holds a commanding lead in the fleet's annual race for the Iron Man, the trophy awarded for general athletic supremacy. She heads the list with a total of 506 points, while the U.S.S. Arizona is second with 395 points. The U.S.S. Tennessee is third with 383 points. 345 points give the U.S.S. Idaho fourth position, while the U.S.S. California is fifth with 205 points. The final standing will depend much on the wrestling and boxing teams which win in the fleet finals and also in the outcome of the spring baseball series, now in full swing.

Two fast games of ball will be played this afternoon at Trona Field, the U.S.S. Pennsylvania-U.S.S. Arizona tilt starting at 1:30 and the U.S.S. Maryland-U.S.S. Oklahoma game at 4 o'clock. The U.S.S. Pennsylvania-U.S.S. New Mexico game, originally scheduled for this afternoon, has been postponed on account of the shift in the fleet overhaul schedule and will be played at the Puget Sound navy yard.

Lieutenant-Commander W. D. Hamilton, battleship force athletic officer, yesterday announced the following dates for the remainder of the baseball schedule, all games starting at 1:30 p.m. except when there are two games, the second affair then being held immediately after the diamond is cleared: The 24th inst.—New Mexico vs. California; the 25th inst.—Missippi vs. Arizona; the 26th inst.—New Mexico vs. Idaho; the 27th inst.—California vs. Tennessee; the 28th inst.—New Mexico vs. Mississippi; the 29th inst.—California vs. Idaho; the 30th inst—New Mexico vs. Arizona; the 31st inst.—Mississippi vs. Idaho; February 1.—New Mexico vs. Tennessee; February 1—Arizona vs. Idaho.

An unofficial smoker, at which specially selected boxers and wrestlers will perform, will be held in San Francisco Bay one week from today on the quarterdeck of the U.S.S. West Virginia, it was announced yesterday. The affair will be for the entertainment of the officers and men of the Japanese midshipmen's squadron, due at the Bay City for a week's stay on the 23rd inst.

MINE BOY TO MANAGER

BUCKY HARRIS'S STORY BY HIMSELF

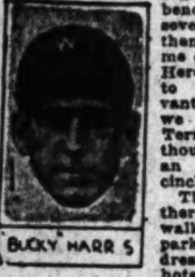
[Copyright, 1925, in United States and Canada by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.]

Chapter XIV. TWO FAILURES IN THE MINORS

This is the fourteenth installment of the autobiography of Stanley Harris, youngest major league baseball manager in the history of the game and the victorious strategist and one of the outstanding players in the 1924 World Series, in which his Washington club won the pennant manager in eight years is one of the most remarkable life stories America for the first time. The rise of Harris from colliery boy to big league has ever produced.

BY STANLEY (BUCKY) HARRIS

Within a week of the opening game of the Central League season, I was stamped a failure at second base. Myers benched me for several days, then he tried me out at third. Here I showed to better advantage. When we opened at Terre Haute I thought I had an infield job cinched.



BUCKY HARRIS

The first day there I had to walk to the ball park. We all dressed at the hotel. I was ready before the others, but they got out ahead of me and took a street car. Not yet having received a pay envelope, my money was low. I decided the walking was good and that my legs could stand the strain better than my pocket. When I reached the park Myers said to me: "I see we've got a Johnny Ward with us."

I looked around trying to locate the new player. Not a strange face was there. The boys gave me a big laugh. Then Myers explained that Johnny Ward was a fellow who always was showing up late. When I realized the joke was on me, I joined in the laugh. The fact that I had been joshed convinced me I was considered one of the regulars.

Joe Evers, a brother of Johnny, the famous Cub star, replaced me at second base. John Coveleskie, a brother of the American League pitcher, played in the outfield for Muskegon. Jack Compton, a former big leaguer, was one of our pitchers. Paul Cobb, Ty's brother, was with Terre Haute in the same league. Jesse Haines, who later entered the pitchers' hall of fame by twirling a no-hit game for the Cardinals, was Springfield's leading pitcher. He had been tried out by the Tigers also. They turned him adrift as they did me. He won twenty-three games and lost only twelve that year and was close to being the leading pitcher in the league. I don't believe I got much more than a foul off him in the few times I faced him.

I learned some things in such company. My fielding improved, but I hit a batting slump at the end of May. The harder I tried the worse I became. Finally I struck my stride and began to crash the ball.

Then, after a perfect day at bat and in the field, I was released. Dowling, a Grand Rapids infielder, took my place. I was out of a job in midseason and a long way from home.

DECIDE TO STICK

My bankroll consisted of twenty-odd dollars. The balance of the few pay checks had been sent home. Expenses were not high in Muskegon. I had a nice room for $2 a week. I figured I could eat breakfast for 10 cents, taking a cup of coffee and two doughnuts, do without a noon meal and fill up at night on an excellent table d'hote dinner. The latter cost 35 cents.

So I made up my mind to stick in Muskegon, as long as funds permitted, and try for a job elsewhere. I didn't want to go home a failure again. I wired my plight to Jennings. He replied, telling me to await word from him. The days stretched into two weeks without a message from the Detroit manager. I spent my afternoons, while waiting for the big dinner at night, in the ball park. A bag of peanuts filled me up.

Dowling didn't get off to a good start. Soon I heard the fans yelling: "Take him out! Get Harris back!" It was music to my ears. After a three weeks' lay-off, Manager Myers, finding Dowling would not do, signed me to another contract. In that I was the property of the Detroit club, I should have first consulted Jennings.

The Central League season then was divided into two championships, the first race ending July 5 and the second on September 10. Muskegon, making its debut in the league as the successor of Erie, Pa., finished in the cellar in the first half. I did my bit in putting the club there. The other cities in the league were Dayton, Grand Rapids, Springfield, Evansville, Wheeling, Terre Haute and South Bend.

I went along for a month on my second trial with Muskegon without showing any marked improvement. I did my best, but I was a busher of the bushiest type. Myers finally found a third baseman named Whalen, who could play rings around me. Then I received my walking papers for the second time.

At bat in fifty-five games, I hit for the puny average of .166. No wonder I was let out! This represented 169 times at bat, 8 runs, 28 hits, 9 sacrifice hits and 2 stolen bases, one of which I obtained on my first bone-headed play. My fielding was on a par. I had 83 put-outs, 81 assists and 21 errors in fifty-four games. My average of .893 was next to the worst in the league.

PROVED TO ME

Jennings had previously written that he couldn't find me a berth. He would try again next season, he said. There was nothing for me to do but pocket my pride and return to Pittston. On the train home I made up my mind to stick to baseball. I reached this decision while waiting in the Wilkesbarre station for the train to Pittston. I was discouraged and downcast—a failure, not once, but twice, in the minors.

My troubles were forgotten as my attention was attracted by the antics of a small boy. He wasn't more than 10 years old and none too big for his age. He was wrestling with a big crate of vegetables, trying to put it on an express truck. He refused to let any railway workers help him. He turned me down when I offered to give him a lift.

My offer evidently was the straw that broke the camel's back with the youngster. He was barefooted and his clothes were an armless shirt and overalls.

"Say, fellow," he greeted me, "I told my pa I was going to get this crate on a truck by myself. And by Golly! I'm going to or bust. Mind your own business!"

And when that spunky kid finally landed the crate where it belonged I forgot my troubles. He helped teach me the lesson of never giving up, no matter how big the task or how great the odds.

This time I put on a bold front when I met the boys. "I'll get there yet!" I boasted, but I know they had some good laughs behind my back.

I convinced myself that all I needed was more experience. No one taught me anything in the Central League. What I learned I picked up by observation. Such knowledge didn't amount to much. Fortunately I realized this. I went back to work in the mine because money was needed. Saturdays I played with the Lehighton team, of which Hughey Jennings had once been a member. Sundays I played with Pittston. My baseball education, such as it was then, wasn't interrupted much by the Muskegon failure.

Jennings, in reply to a letter in the winter, sent me my release from the Detroit club. He softened the blow by saying he would do his best to place me so that I would get another chance. He kept his promise by recommending me to Arthur Devlin, some time Giant star, who was managing the Norfolk team in the Virginia League.

Devlin was playing third himself. Knowing the master he was at the position, I told him I was a shortstop. I earned the berth. After we played sixteen games the league disbanded because of the declaration of war. I was out of a job again.

CONSTIPATION

Article CXXXV

The human body could be very easily likened to a steam engine, its waste corresponding to the ashes.

The elimination of the body's waste products is of the greatest importance, and from the retention of same great injury comes to every human being. The intestinal contents become dangerous by being too long retained; as putrefying fecal matter contains poisons that are harmful to the body. The common headache malady, and generally lowered resistance, is caused mostly by abnormal conditions of the intestines, often resulting in colds and even more serious ailments. Today, constipation seems to be extremely prevalent, in many cases because our diet usually lacks bulk or other needed constituents, but the greater reason being the failure to eliminate regularly, thoroughly, and often.

Allow constipation to continue long, and it ceases to become a trifling matter. It represents a constant and cumulative tax which often ends in very serious consequences.

One of the most beneficial aids to constipation is the free water-drinking habit when the stomach is empty, with a little lemon juice added, especially before breakfast. Excess of water-drinking at meal times is often the cause of constipation, or at least is one of the contributory causes. The very feeble or those suffering from heart trouble or dropsy should avoid excessive water-drinking.

The most important rule to follow in preventing or eliminating constipation is proper diet. Foods that possess sufficient bulk to promote the action of the intestines, and containing due amount of laxative elements, should be made a part of at least one meal every day. Such foods as prunes, figs, in fact most fruits except bananas, all fresh vegetables, especially the greens of all sorts, whole wheat, and the whole grain cereals.

One should avoid cathartics except under medical supervision, since certain drugs are often very harmful when their use is long continued, and the longer they are used the more dependent on them the user becomes. Laxative drugs, even mineral waters, should never be used habitually.

The normal man or woman will find no difficulty in having complete movements regularly two or three times a day by merely living a reasonable life, by being careful especially to avoid overfatigue, to include sufficient bulk in the food, added to this is the taking of regular exercise morning and night, including, in particular, breathing exercises, and to maintain an erect carriage.

The natural instinct to defecate, like many other natural instincts, is usually deadened by failure to exercise it. Civilized life, plus a false modesty, makes it inconvenient to follow this instinct as promptly as it should be. If this impulse to go to stool is neglected even for as short a space of five minutes it may disappear. There is no habit of more importance, or health measure more simple and effective than restoring the normal sensitiveness of this important impulse. It is an excellent rule to visit the closet immediately after each meal, until the reflex is trained to act at those, the most natural, times for its action.

One who is troubled with constipation should avoid excess eating of protein foods. The decomposition of protein in the colon is a great detriment to health as well as being a cause for constipation. Regularity and moderation in eating are always conducive to good health, which applies to the movement of the bowels. We are all desirous of enjoying perfect health, so why not aid nature in the most important function, and by so doing eliminate the cause of most of our troubles.

GILMORE OIL FIVE RUINS SHELL TEAM

What the Gilmore Oil basketball team, in the Petroleum League, didn't do to the Shell Oil Company quintet at the Manual Arts High gymnasium last night, wasn't worth doing. Gilmore defeated Shell by a 34-to-4 score and added insult to injury by ruining a lot of the latter team's best players. It was simply a case of too much Gilmore. The losers couldn't get going either on the attack or the defense and were soft meat for the Gilmore players. The line-ups:

Gilmore (34;) Norris (8) F.; Hawkins (17) F.; Gerpheide (15) C.; Johnson (1) G.; Prentiss (2) G.; McCarl, McPherson, Freidman and Lynn.

Shell (4;) G. McCall, F.; H. McCall (1) F.; Johnson, C.; Meley (2) G.; Hunt (1) G.; Carl, Cow and Lassey; referee, Wheeler.

STANDARD OILERS IN WIN OVER RICHFIELD

Breaking loose with a barrage of baskets in the second half the Standard Oil Company's basketball team defeated the Richfield company quintet by a 19-to-5 score at the Manual Arts gymnasium last night. It was the feature game of the third round of play in the Petroleum League. The playing of Holth at forward, on the Standard team, was the sensation of the game. Besides scoring six points, Holth did plenty of good defensive work and was a big hero in general. The line-ups:

Standard Oil (19;) Lynn (4) F.; Holth (6) F.; Mariette (3) C.; Wilsey (6) G.; Beauchamp, G.; Thompson and Aiken.

Richfield (5;) Williamson, F.; Combs, F.; Crandall (3) C.; Leishman, G.; Reed (2) G.; referee, Wheeler.

Trio of Best Ring Advisers Meet Tuesday

Three of the best advisers in the ring game in the West will go into action at Doyle's Vernon arena Tuesday night when Charley Harvey, Tommy McFarland and Willie "Gig" Rooney go into action behind boys they are piloting into the pugilistic labyrinths.

Harvey manages Pat Mills, English lightweight, who meets Joe Schlocker in the ten-round main event, and also acts as his chief second when the Britisher is in there with the mittens on. Rooney performs a like duty behind Schlocker. McFarland has Sailor Vincent in the semi-wind-up against Ad Allegrini, another protege of Rooney's.

All three of these men are experienced seconds and have been behind hundreds of fighters. Harvey has handled practically every noted English fighter who has visited the United States in the last quarter century and is known wherever boxing gloves are being thrown. He was formerly secretary of the New York Boxing Commission and knows the glove game from every angle.

uport Lock Keeper Once Halted German Army

ning of Sluices Flooded Whole Battlefield to Calais Was Blocked by Artificial Lake

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

BRUGES (Belgium) Jan. 17.—rt Geeraert, lock keeper of sluices of Nieuport and hero of First Battle of the Yser, died a hospital here today after a illness.

On Christmas Day when he near death he was given Cross of the Knight of the Order of Leopold in recognition of action for opening of the dikes November, 1914, flooding the battlefield and stopping the man advance. The honor act as a tonic and the sluice keeper vived notably for a time.

It was after the surrender of twerp, when the German troops advancing victoriously across gium that Geeraert's knowledge the workings of the Belgian system came into play saving not only the Belgian army destruction, but bringing the definite blocking of the to Calais to the Germans.

When the sluices were opened water began flowing into the country along the eastern side the railroad bank from Nieuport Dixmude. At first, its progress not noticeable, the water being absorbed by the ground. Within forty-eight hours the ground be juicy and a few hours later whole country was transformed a muddy plain.

Gradually the water began to above the ground—one foot, feet and at least three feet. A ful ally of the Belgians, the paralyzed the invader. When Germans had discovered what going on it was too late. Many had to be abandoned and the man troops caught by the rising waters were either drowned their trenches or, unable to reach solid ground, had to surrender. By early November an ficial lake extending to a width more than two miles acted as an ective barrier to the enemy from port to the north of Dixmude. First Battle of the Yser was and the Germans had met a serious check.

STONE ASSAILED BY MINER CHIEF

Brotherhood Mines War on Union, He Charges

Asserts Men Put Out Into Cold by Guards

Strike Breakers Imported, His Report States

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—Chapter three was written today in the controversy between officials of the United Mine Workers and Warren S. Stone, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, over the nonunion conditions of the coal mines operated by the brotherhood in the West Virginia fields.

The chapter, written as a complete report by Capt. Percy Tetlow, an official of the miners' union, describes in detail how families of union miners were evicted from their homes because the coal diggers would not accept a wage reduction. The report, which has just been submitted to international officials of the miners' organization, charges Stone with importing strikebreakers from nonunion fields to take the jobs of the union coal diggers.

The report made to the international union officials in part follows:

"Coal River Collieries is a coal mining company, the stock of which is owned and held by members of the Brotherhood of Engineers. These mines are located in what is known as the Kanawha fields of West Virginia. They are being operated on a nonunion basis with armed guard protection.

EVICTED BY GUARDS

"Because the miners have refused to accept a pay cut, which would place their wage scale on a 1917 basis, many of them have been evicted from their homes by armed guards in the dead of winter."

Capt. Tetlow's report alleges that "the men in control of the Coal River Collieries Company are pursuing the same policies, the same plans, as other nonunion operators in the West Virginia district.

Regarding the alleged antitrade union policy of the mine, the report avers:

"They have posted notices at their mines notifying all union miners to return to work at the 1917 wage scale. The men refused to work. The men in control of the brotherhoods' mines went into the courts and got possession of the miners' property just the same as other nonunion operators did. Writs were obtained and the sheriff and his deputies evicted members of the miners' union."

After the union-controlled mines were forced to shut down, Capt. Tetlow's report avers, that nonunion workers were imported from the nonunion fields of Alabama, Virginia and Kentucky. It was pointed out that about $3,000,000 worth of stock in the involved mines is owned by union locomotive engineers.

STONE MAKES REPLY

In his report Capt. Tetlow declares:

"I don't know of any company operating in the southern fields that is more vicious in its attitude toward plans of union miners than the Coal River Collieries Company. I can't understand how Mr. Stone, the chairman of the board of directors of the company, can from month to month issue statements regarding the situations which contain nothing but falsehoods."

In retaliation, Stone wrote an editorial in the current issue of the Locomotive Engineers' Journal, in which he says:

"Do not believe all the stories you hear. There is not a more satisfied lot of men employed in America than are the men employed at the Coal River Collieries Company. There are no miners living under better conditions. The co-operative plan is one that means more work for them.

"The pay roll lies before me as I write this and I only wish it were possible for each member of the Brotherhood of Engineers to secure the amount of money paid to the lowest class of workmen in the mines."

State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe late today awarded Chicago's 9500 union coal teamsters and chauffeurs a wage increase of 60 cents a day. Both officials of the coal teamsters' union and representatives of the Chicago Coal Merchants' Association, asserted they were satisfied wit hthe decision of the States Attorney. The 60 cents a day wage boost will be retroactive to January 1 when the union agreement expired with the coal distributors. The old rate was 70 cents an hour.

RADIO STUDIED WITH ECLIPSE

Is Broadcasting Affected by Sun's Rays?

Plant Set Up to Seek This Question's Answer

Fans Everywhere Are Asked to Aid Observers

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—To determine the effect of the sun's rays on radio broadcasting, an entire broadcasting station will be taken from Chicago and set up at Escanaba, Mich., almost in the center of the path of the total eclipse of the sun on January 24, E. F. McDonald, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, announced today.

By asking radio fans everywhere to tune in on the station and keep close check of their experiences before, during and after the eclipse, McDonald said it is hoped to determine the effect of day and night, if any, on broadcasting.

NIGHT SIGNALS STRONGER

"It is a well-known fact," McDonald said, "that the range of any broadcasting or other radio station of any kind is about one-tenth in daytime which it is at night. Many theories have been advanced in anticipation of the phenomenon, prominent among which is the theory that ionization of the air in the day time, due to the sun's rays, causes absorption. If this theory is actually true and it is the sun's rays which cause the characteristic weakness of the signals during the day time, then during the period of semi-darkness at Escanaba during the total eclipse there should be a reproduction of night-time effects."

Radio casting station WJAZ will be taken to Escanaba and will start broadcasting at 4 a.m. and continue until 10 a.m., central standard time. The total eclipse at Escanaba begins at 8:02 a.m., and lasts for one minute and fifty-seven seconds. From 4 to 7 a.m., there will be a period of natural darkness, then a period of normal daylight, followed during the period of darkness during the total eclipse, then the gradual coming of sunlight again.

CLOUDS WON'T MATTER

"The effect on the radio will be the same whether or not clouds are present," McDonald said. "In other words, though it will not be possible in case of cloudiness for astronomers to make their complete observations, the cloud shield should have no effect whatever on radio transmission."

During the total eclipse of the sun visible in part of California, in 1923, Mr. McDonald said a few radio listeners noticed that radio signals suddenly increased in intensity and suddenly decreased, but the reports were so few as to preclude satisfactory scientific deductions.

During the coming eclipse he hopes to get reports from thousands of radio fans.

LOVE FIGHT FATAL; MAN, WIFE HELD

San Diego Husband Says Shooting Occurred During Struggle for Gun

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 17.—Louis Dugat, 31 years of age, and his wife, Agnes, 27, are held by the police pending a thorough investigation of the death early this morning of Leo Hurley, whom Dugat found in his home in company with Mrs. Dugat shortly after midnight. Hurley was fatally wounded by a bullet which Dugat declares was fired when he was struggling with the other man for possession of a pistol.

Leo Hurley.

Dugat told the police that he had warned Hurley, who was a close friend of the family, to cease his asserted attentions to Mrs. Dugat. On returning home unexpectedly from Los Angeles at midnight he said Mrs. Dugat was in bed, and Hurley in the room talking to her. A fight ensued, with both men struggling for possession of a revolver which lay under a pillow. The weapon, Dugat said, was discharged and Hurley fell mortally wounded. A policeman passing the house arrested Dugat and his wife.

Revolutionary Plot Thwarted at Rio Janeiro

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 17.—The police of Rio Janeiro, according to reports reaching here, have discovered another revolutionary plot, said to have been engineered by a group of army officers. It was stated that the revolution was to have broken out after the departure of President Bernardes for Petropolis on a vacation.

The main purpose of the plotters, it was said, was to free their colleagues who had been imprisoned for similar activities, then to take possession of the principal military barracks. The police are said to have arrested the principal leaders, including one captain and two lieutenants, and seized bombs.

NAMES PUT IN FUN REEL WITH JOKES

"Local Laughs" Winners Get an Extra Kick Out of Recognition on Screen

Does there lurk in your bosom a secret ambition to "crash" the movies? Have you ever wished that you could experience the novel sensation, even if only for a moment, of looking at your shadowy self on the screen?

Only the chosen few know how it feels, but Times' readers and motion-picture patrons throughout Southern California have an opportunity to "crash the movies" in a more easily attained way—via the famous "Local Laughs" film appearing weekly at the California Theater, Los Angeles, and more than a score of other theaters.

The procedure is simple. By this time, most everybody knows that good jokes and witticisms are wanted to appear in "Local Laughs." The fifteen best contributions are selected every week, and the name and address of each contributor is announced on the screen. There is quite a kick—private, of course—in seeing the old moniker emblazoned before the eyes of the multitudes, and still more satisfaction in sending the audience into rounds of hearty laughter over your jest.

The remuneration for accepted contributions to this film is real money—$5 for the best joke; $3 for the second best; $2 for the third best. Twelve others receive $1 each. These prizes are awarded week after week.

See if you can't scare up a real joke not exceeding thirty words. Write it on the coupon printed elsewhere in this issue, or on separate paper, and send it in.

AUTOMOBILE SALES MARK SET BY FORD

Cars Marketed at Rate of 250 Hourly for 300 Days of Year

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

DETROIT, Jan. 17.—Selling cars at the rate of 250 an hour, twenty-four hours a day, for the 300 working days of 1924, the Ford Motor Company established the greatest sales record of its history in the twelve months ending December 31, last, it was announced today.

Domestic retail deliveries for the year were 1,873,581 cars and trucks, an increase of 87,736 over the sales of 1923, the company announced. Retail sales of trucks went over the 200,000 mark for the first time, exceeding the sales of 1923 by 15,613.

Sales of Lincoln cars, a product of a division of the Ford Motor Company, totaled 7501 as compared with 6013 in 1923.

It was also announced that approximately 2000 tractors have just been shipped to Russia, this being the second sale of tractors to that country, which first entered the tractor market last August when 900 machines were purchased.

East Side Men Discuss County Sewer Project

Members of the Los Angeles East Side Organization were guests at a banquet given last night by the Whittier Chamber of Commerce, at which the proposed county sewer system was discussed at length.

S. C. Graham, president of the Los Angeles City Club and chairman of the executive committee of the East Side Organization, and Fred T. Beaty, president of the association, spoke in favor of the voting of sewer bonds. Graham urged a heavy vote on the bond issue in District No. 2, comprising the towns of Montebello, Belvedere, Bandini, Downey, Belvedere Gardens and Belleflower, when the question is submitted to the electors on February 10.

Announcement was made of a meeting of representatives of all important communities of Southeastern Los Angeles county to be held at Whittier the 22nd inst., when matters affecting the interests of this area in public improvements will be given attention.

New Aeronautic Chapter to Help Air Mail Effort

Hoping to attain a membership of 5000, and planning as its first move a concentrated effort to gain direct air mail service for Los Angeles, a Southern California chapter of the National Aeronautical Association will be formed in Los Angeles, it was announced yesterday.

A committee of seven has been named to create the organization that will function as a part of the national body. Arnold Kruckman, 403 South Hill street, former head of the aeronautical division of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, has been named chairman of the committee, and Capt. Charles H. Babb, 108 North Western avenue, secretary.

Those interested in the movement pointed out that Southern California has more flying fields than are to be found in any other section of the country, and with several thousand members in the new chapter it will be possible to bring about intelligent comprehension of air mail needs, landing fields, equipment and other phases of aeronautics. Membership in the organization will be open to all those interested in aeronautics.

MANY OWN AUTOS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

FARGO (N. D.) Jan. 17.—The total number of motor vehicles in North Dakota in 1924 reached 117,050, according to the total number of license tags recorded in the State Motor Vehicle Department. As less than 5000 were trucks, this amounts to one automobile for every five and one-half persons in the State.

TROTZKY'S FATE EXPECTED SOON

Committee Now in Session Will Act on Minister

Observers Say War Chief Must Retract Views

Military Leader Has Retired to Rural Estate

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

MOSCOW, Jan. 17.—The fate of Leon Trotzky, soviet Minister of War, is expected to be decided within a few days by the central committee of the Communist party which began its sittings in Moscow today. There is much speculation as to whether Trotzky, although a member of the central committee, will participate in the sessions. He is considered by every one as out of active politics and unless he intends to appear in his own defense or is invited by his adversaries to do so, his presence at the sittings of the committee is scarcely expected.

In the face of the bitter and unprecedented campaign against him in and out of the Communist party, it is believed it would be futile for him to attempt to allay the storm which has all but engulfed him.

Political observers believe that nothing short of unequivocal retraction of the views expressed by the War Minister in his book "Lessons of the 1917 Revolution," followed by his promise to abstain in the future from factional discussions, will satisfy his opponents. As Trotzky is hardly ready at this moment to adopt either of these alternatives, it is thought he will seek refuge in complete silence awaiting the abatement of the present political foment to speak his mind.

There is, however, not the slightest doubt that whether the War Minister is present at the meetings of the committee or not, a resolution of censure will be passed against him.

Meanwhile the military leader has retired to a rural estate twenty-five miles from Moscow.

In this quiet spot in the midst of soothing natural surroundings far removed from political strife and party squabbles, Trotzky is now nursing his bronchial trouble and at the same time engaging in fresh literary work. It is problematical whether he will go to the caucasus health resort as originally planned, even after the meeting of the central committee which is expected to decide his future.

It is believed that a formal note of censure which frames the internal and external policies of the soviet government will be accepted by the war chief's adversaries as sufficient punishment for the asserted heretical views expressed by him in his recent book and within the councils of the Communist party.

PRINTERS HONOR FRANKLIN BIRTH

The part that Benjamin Franklin had in inculating high ideals into America drew tribute from nearly 500 persons who assembled in the Elite Cafe last night under auspices of the Club of Printing House Craftsmen of Los Angeles to commemorate the 219th anniversary of the birth of Franklin.

Federal Judge Benjamin Franklin Bledsoe was the principal speaker. Victor E. Hecht, vice-president of the Zellerbach Paper Company, was toastmaster and a number of others participated. The program was replete with quotations from "Poor Richard's" sayings.

"Printing," said Judge Bledsoe in beginning his address, "is the greatest boon and contribution to the welfare of civilization. Liberty comes and independence is ours only because people have a knowledge of their rights and privileges which come to them through dissemination of facts by printing. It is a lasting art. I deem it a great privilege to be invited to address a gathering of men and women representatives of the craft of which Franklin was an outstanding member.

"In my opinion, Americans can do no greater honor to themselves than by honoring this man whose thoughts and creeds are so interwoven in American thoughts and institutions.

"No other single individual contributed so much that has gone into the homely language of our people as did Franklin. His lessons on thrift are with us today and, in fact, are reflected not only in our financial institutions, the banks, but also in those institutions that are second to banks—the building and loan associations.

Franklin was the fifteenth child and the tenth son in his family, Judge Bledsoe pointed out, and while an American and known as a product of this country spent also twenty-six years in Europe. Withal he ran away from home when a boy.

Don Tyler, winner of the national oratorical contest, gave his prize oration on the Constitution. There was community singing and individual vocal selections by Harold Proctor, Florence Myers Engle and Fred McPherson.

PLAN ON WIDENING OF WILSHIRE IS OFFERED

IMPROVEMENT WOULD BEGIN AT MUIRFIELD INSTEAD OF AT RIMPAU

The Major Highway Committee of the Traffic Commission yesterday requested the City Council to provide that the proceedings for the widening of Wilshire Boulevard to 200 feet start at Muirfield Drive, instead of at Rimpau Boulevard, as first proposed, so as to link in with the widened Muirfield Drive. Under this plan Wilshire Boulevard will be widened from Westlake Park at Park View street to Muirfield Drive, so that in this section, by the cutting back of curbs on both sides, it will have a roadway width of seventy feet. From Muirfield Road to the western city limits between property lines will be 200 feet and this will be carried through Beverly Hills to the ocean. The committee pointed out that by beginning the 200-feet width at Rimpau there would be a gap of one block between the widened Muirfield Road and the 200-foot Wilshire Boulevard.

REID, TIN PLATE KING, SUCCUMBS

Pneumonia Proves Fatal to Millionaire in New York

Burial to be in Richmond, Ind., His Former Home

Began Business Life Sweeping Floors in Bank

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Daniel G. Reid, the "tin plate king," died today at his home at 907 Fifth avenue of pneumonia. He had been seriously ill only a few days. He was 64 years of age.

At Mr. Reid's bedside when he died were his daughter, Mrs. Rhea Reid Topping, and her husband.

Mr. Reid had been in poor health for four years, spending much of his time at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore and at the Florida resorts. He had been under the care of a physician nearly all this time.

There was a pronounced change in Mr. Reid's condition after midnight and Dr. F. R. Oastler, the physician in charge, summoned Mrs. Topping and told her that her father could not live.

BURIAL IN RICHMOND

It was said this morning that funeral services would probably be conducted Monday and that burial would be in Richmond, Ind., Mr. Reid's birthplace.

He is survived by his daughter, Mrs. Topping, a half-brother, Isaac J. Dougan and a sister, Mrs. Mattie Fosler, both of Richmond, Ind.

Reid's death had no perceptible effect on the stock market. American Can, with which he was more prominently associated than with any other stock, reacted slightly, but was only lightly traded in.

Mr. Reid, for many years one of the most active men in Wall street, was reported to have been active in the market just before his death. His wealth has been estimated at various times from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000.

Mr. Reid, who was known as one of the most daring and astute operators in Wall street, began his career by sweeping the floors of a bank in Richmond, Ind. He was made cashier of the institution and a few years later owned it.

He was born in 1858 in Muncie, Ind. At the age of 21 he was division superintendent of the Logansport division of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Just twelve years later his fortune was estimated at $20,000,000.

His manner being always affable, Mr. Reid made friends easily. Among these were William B. Leeds and the two Moore brothers, William H. and James H. When the McKinley high protective tariff bill was framed and Reid, always a close student of fundamental business factors, discerned an opportunity of making a fortune in the tinplate business, which was among those given high protection. He went with his plan to the Moores and Leeds. The result was the formation of the American Tinplate Company. This ultimately was made a part of the United States Steel Corporation when that concern was formed, and Reid, the Moores and John W. Gates, who also took a leading part in the affairs of the tinplate company, received $120,000,000 of United States Steel stock in payment.

VETERANS AMAZED

The gambling propensities of these westerners, who made huge fortunes, amazed even Wall street veterans, who were accustomed to huge stock deals. Reid astounded the financial community by capturing control of the Rock Island Railroad about the same time that John W. Gates bought control of the Louisville and Nashville, much to the chagrin of the late J. P. Morgan.

Mr. Reid organized the American Can Company and the Tobacco Products Company and then became a director of many companies, including the United States Steel Corporation, Interboro Rapid Transit, Continental Insurance Company, Lehigh Valley Railroad and the Bankers' Trust Company.

During the last six years or more he has not been nearly as active in financial affairs as formerly and he had resigned most of his important directorships.

MERCHANT PIONEER OF COAST DIES

Eugene Meyer, Early Day Angeleno Business Man, Passes Away in New York.

Eugene Meyer, pioneer Los Angeles merchant, died at his home in New York City Friday night, it was announced in dispatches from the East yesterday. He was 82 years of age and was the father of Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director of the War Finance Board.

He was born in Strasbourg, Alsace-Lorraine, and at 17 years of age came to Los Angeles where he later engaged in business. He took a prominent part in the upbuilding of the town, at that time having only 8000 inhabitants, and was a member of the vigilance committee. He owned the City of Paris department store on Spring street near the Temple Block.

In 1883 he moved to San Francisco to become the head of the London, Paris and American Bank. Ten years later he went to New York to become a partner in the firm of Lazard Freres and retired from active business in 1901. Mr. Meyer was an officer of the Legion of Honor.

In 1867 he married Miss Harriet Newmark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Newmark and aunt of M. H. Newmark of this city. They celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1917. Mrs. Meyer died in 1922.

He leaves five daughters, Mrs. Sigmund Stern of San Francisco, Mrs. Elsie Stern, Mrs. George Blumenthal, Mrs. Alfred Cook and Mrs. Charles Liebmann, and two sons, Walter E. Meyer, Eugene Meyer, Jr. A third son lost his life in the sinking of the Titanic.

NEW SHOALS PLAN MAPPED

House and Senate Leaders Decide to Force Underwood Bill to Conference

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Decision has been reached by the House and Senate leaders to concentrate on efforts to send the Underwood Muscle Shoals bill direct to conference between the two legislative bodies.

Before this step is taken, however, the ground will be felt carefully to make certain the Senate conferees will not be hostile to the bill. The broad variance between the Senate and House bills, it is said, would place scant limitations on the conferees and they would have authority to report out a brand-new measure. The House last year passed its measure to lease the properties to Henry Ford.

If the Senate conferees are likely to include Senators not friendly to the Underwood bill House leaders plan to refer it to the Military Committee with the hope that an early report will be made, including House modifications.

As a last resort, leaders of both bodies are prepared to turn to the proposal to refer the whole Muscle Shoals problem to a commission, similar to the bill offered by Senator Jones, Washington, the Republican whip, which was rejected by the Senate.

If the usual course is pursued the conferees would be Chairman Norris of the Senate Agricultural Committee, who led the fight in the Senate against the Underwood bill, and Senators McNary, Republican, Oregon, and Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, who voted against the bill.

Senator Norris has declined to listen to the suggestion of Senate leaders that he voluntarily waive any privilege as a conferee. Senatory McNary has remained silent and Senator Smith is out of the city.

If the Senate leaders' will prevails, Senator Underwood, Democrat, Alabama, author of the bill and the two other Senators friendly to the measure will constitute the conferees.

Pains of House leaders went slightly awry today when Chairman McKenzie of the Military Committee, not being informed of the leaders' plan asked for a unanimous consent, to send the bill to conference. Representative Longworth, the majority leader, blocked the request. He explained that he thought further consideration should be given to procedure before definite action was taken.

Informal conferences were held today between Senate and House leaders in an effort to reach an agreement on the course to pursue. The conference followed a visit to the White House by Representative Longworth and Chairman Snell of the House Rules Committee. The Chief Executive was represented to be in favor of the discussion of the problem between the leaders in an effort to get Muscle Shoals legislation through Congress at this session.

MEXICANS HIT CHINA PACT

Anti-Asiatic Society Asks Chamber of Deputies to Cancel Treaty With Celestial Nation

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 17.—The anti-Chinese campaign which has been going on throughout Mexico for the past six months has reached such proportions that the Chamber of Deputies has received a petition requesting that the existing commerce amity treaty between Mexico and China be canceled.

The petition was drawn up by the Anti-Chinese Pro-Race Society, supported by a number of deputies from the States of Sonora, Sinaloa, Nayarit and some political leaders of the Territory of Lower California. The petition requests that the chamber take energetic action to eradicate the Asiatic evil invading Mexico, the petitioners asserting that the present treaty's lenient immigration laws do not prevent the continued influx of orientals who are charged with undermining Mexican labor along the West Coast. The Chinese are also charged with not doing the country any good, of hoarding their earnings, which benefit China and are not spent in Mexico.

Those signing the petition also request that further naturalization of Chinese be curbed, and that they be prohibited from marrying Mexican women. Chinese Tong wars on the Mexican side of the California border and Chinese control of gambling houses have during the past six months resulted in numerous serious clashes among the population in which authorities were forced to intervene to preserve order.

The petitioners were further influenced by the present efforts of Chinese moneyed interests to obtain agricultural colonization concessions in Sonora and Lower California. It is estimated that Mexico's Chinese population reaches a total of 30,000, of which 20,000 reside in Sonora and Lower California.

Trawler, Rum Cargo Captured by Coast Guard

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—The Coast Guard rum chaser CG-255 brought the trawler Florence and its cargo of liquor into this port today as a prize. The crew of the Florence were under arrest. The Florence is a San Francisco boat.

As a party from the rum chaser boarded the Florence off Half-Moon Bay, her captain escaped in a small boat in the darkness.

BRINGS TALE OF ATTACK BY PIRATES

British Steamer Puts in at Hongkong With Safe Rifled; None Hurt

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HONGKONG, Jan. 17.—After being in the hands of pirates since a few hours after it left port, the British steamer Hwong Hwa, which sailed for Singapore three days ago, was back in port today with an amazing story of piracy on the high seas. The passengers were penniless, the ship safe had been rifled and all valuables removed, although no bodily harm had been done.

Officers of the ship said that the pirates, all Chinese, embarked with the rest of the passengers and remained under cover until the ship was a few miles from port. Then they cast aside their pretense, gathered in a group on the deck, rushed the bridge and made prisoners of the officers and crew.

With the officers and crew captured, the pirates calmly took over the running of the ship, first dismantling the wireless and then proceeding to search the cabins and passengers. They spent a day opening the ship safe and finally, with all valuables collected, ran close into shore and disembarked with their booty.

FRANCE PREPARING FOR RED UPRISINGS

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PARIS, Jan. 17.—Faint whisperings of a Communist uprising late in January have reached the ears of the police. As a result extra gendarmes have been assigned to duty in the different arrondissements. New raids are being made on the headquarters of the Communists. It is believed red propaganda has found fertile soil in the aliens who are imported into France for the lower branches of labor.

Home-made, but Has No Equal for Coughs

Makes a family supply of really dependable cough medicine. Easily prepared, and saves about $2.

If you have a severe cough or chest cold accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes a pint of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such promptness, ease and certainty that it is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Farmer's Wife Finds Astonishing Relief

"For ten long years I had suffered with my stomach. I tried everything without relief, but after one dose of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy I knew I had obtained what I had been looking for and I took the full course of treatment. It is going on 4 years now and I have never had any pains or bloating since." It removes the catarrhal mucous from the intestinal tract, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded at all druggists.—[Advertisement.

Blackheads Go Quick By This Simple Method

Blackheads—big ones or little ones—soft ones or hard ones—on any part of the body, go quick by a simple method that just dissolves them. To do this get about two ounces of calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—and wash off. You'll wonder where the blackheads have gone. Pinching and squeezing blackheads only open the pores of the skin and leave them large and unsightly—while the simple application of calonite powder and the water dissolve them right out, leaving the skin soft and the pores in their natural condition.—[Advertisement.

NEVADA RUINS TESTIFY OF VANISHED RACE

BURIED CITY HAS RELICS OF TILLERS' CULTURE

Excavators for Indian Museum See Evidence Populous Tribe Built Dwellings 2000 Years Ago

BY CARL CRANE

Some 2000 years ago, or thereabouts, a populous race that [illegible] centuries before Columbus discover America, lived in the valley of the Muddy River in Southern Nevada. They tilled the fertile lands along the river, whose waters they used for irrigating their fields of corn, beans, squash and other products on which they subsisted.

In the low hills that border the valley they built their houses of adobe and stone. Their agricultural implements, household utensils, weapons, clothing and ornaments, while crude, were of a type that are found only among human beings that have reached a degree of enlightenment far beyond the savage stage. They were people who had concluded that a settled community, which enabled them to raise crops insuring a regular supply of food, was preferable to a nomadic existence that meant wandering over the face of the earth in pursuit of game and such stray forms of wild vegetation as had been found edible.

DEPARTURE PUZZLES

For a long time these people dwelt in the valley. Nobody knows how long. But they built their dwellings all along the Muddy River and it is probable that at one time this region was far more populous than it is today. Then something happened to the tribe. Nobody knows what. Drouth, famine, or the invasion of another and more powerful tribe. In any event they left their villages and departed for parts unknown.

And now scientists are making excavations where the former villages stood, unearthing walls and ruins of former habitations and thousands of articles that once played a part in the life of the vanished race. They are also discovering the burial places of many of the former residents, who were buried in or near their habitations.

The fact that there are remains of prehistoric people in this valley has long been known by the local inhabitants, but it is only within the last few months that the region has attracted the attention of scientific men, who have come to regard it as one of the important archaeological fields in the western part of the United States.

[illegible] DIRECTS WORK

The site of the present research which has become known as the Buried City of Nevada, is about three miles north of the little town of St. Thomas, some sixty miles north of Las Vegas, Nev. The excavations are being conducted under the auspices of the Museum of the American Indian of New York, a member of whose scientific staff, Prof. [illegible] Harrington, is directing the work.

The place where the excavations are being made was chosen because it is believed to have been the center of the ancient population, to judge by the wealth of remains found there. The area of the prehistoric village seems to have covered a tract about six miles long and ranging in width from half a mile to a mile. All over this section there are indications of prehistoric dwellings, tombs, buildings, probably used as places of worship, and great numbers of artifacts of one kind and another, fragments of pottery, grinding stones and fragments of weapons predominating. Scattered indications of the same ancient race are found also in other parts of the Muddy River valley as well as in the valley of the nearby Virgin River.

RUINS UNCOVERED

The excavations thus far made, which have extended over an area of [illegible] more than an acre in extent, have already uncovered the foundations and remnants of walls of a dozen ancient buildings, some of them of circular construction. Particularly interesting is one believed to have been a ceremonial chamber. On the walls of this building, of which a portion of the walls remains, was found a number of tablets covered with painted hieroglyphics, which somewhat resemble the tablets occasionally found in some of the Indian pueblos in the Southwest today. The walls have not been found intact in any of the buildings thus far excavated. In one of two in-

FROLIC TO COST BEERY LARGE SUM

Film Actor Shaves Off $12,000 Whiskers to be at Wampas Ball

Five dollars in money and $12,000 in whiskers to attend this year's Wampas frolic and ball!

That is the price Noah Beery will pay for the privilege of viewing the unusual sights to be seen at the publicity men's affair to be given at the new Ambassador auditorium February 5.

Here is the way Noah lists the cost of the ball for him:

Price of ticket, $5; whiskers, six weeks in the growing at a weekly salary of $2000, $12,000. Total $12,005.

Before
After

The whiskers, grown for a recent production, are to be used again. But since Beery expects to give the evening of February 5 exclusively to pleasure, he refused to be hamperd by the facial foliage and off they came.

"But that isn't the worst," he complains. "If I pay amusement tax on the entire cost of admission I must give Uncle Sam about $120 for my evening's pleasure."

Demand is Heavy for a Chocolate Dipping Course

"Yes, we have no course in pipe organ playing; nor are we giving a course in telephone switchboard operating. I'm sorry, but as yet we have no instruction organized in window decorating—if we have enough demand, however, we may establish such a course next quarter, opening in March."

The information clerks at Metropolitan College have been kept busy, during the past two weeks covering registration in the winter quarter, in directing the swarms of afternoon and evening registrants to classrooms where the 100 courses in art and agriculture, commerce and education, home economics and psychology, English and science, sociology, and Spanish, were held, and in answering inquiries to which the above replies were inevitable, in substance if not in form.

Although acting on the general principle that sufficient demand would be met with provision, requests for instruction in aesthetic dancing and chocolate dipping were unfulfilled in this downtown branch of the University of Southern California in the Transportation Building, even though it aims to provide education to meet every reasonable need.

REVERED PRIEST WILL LIVE IN BRONZE

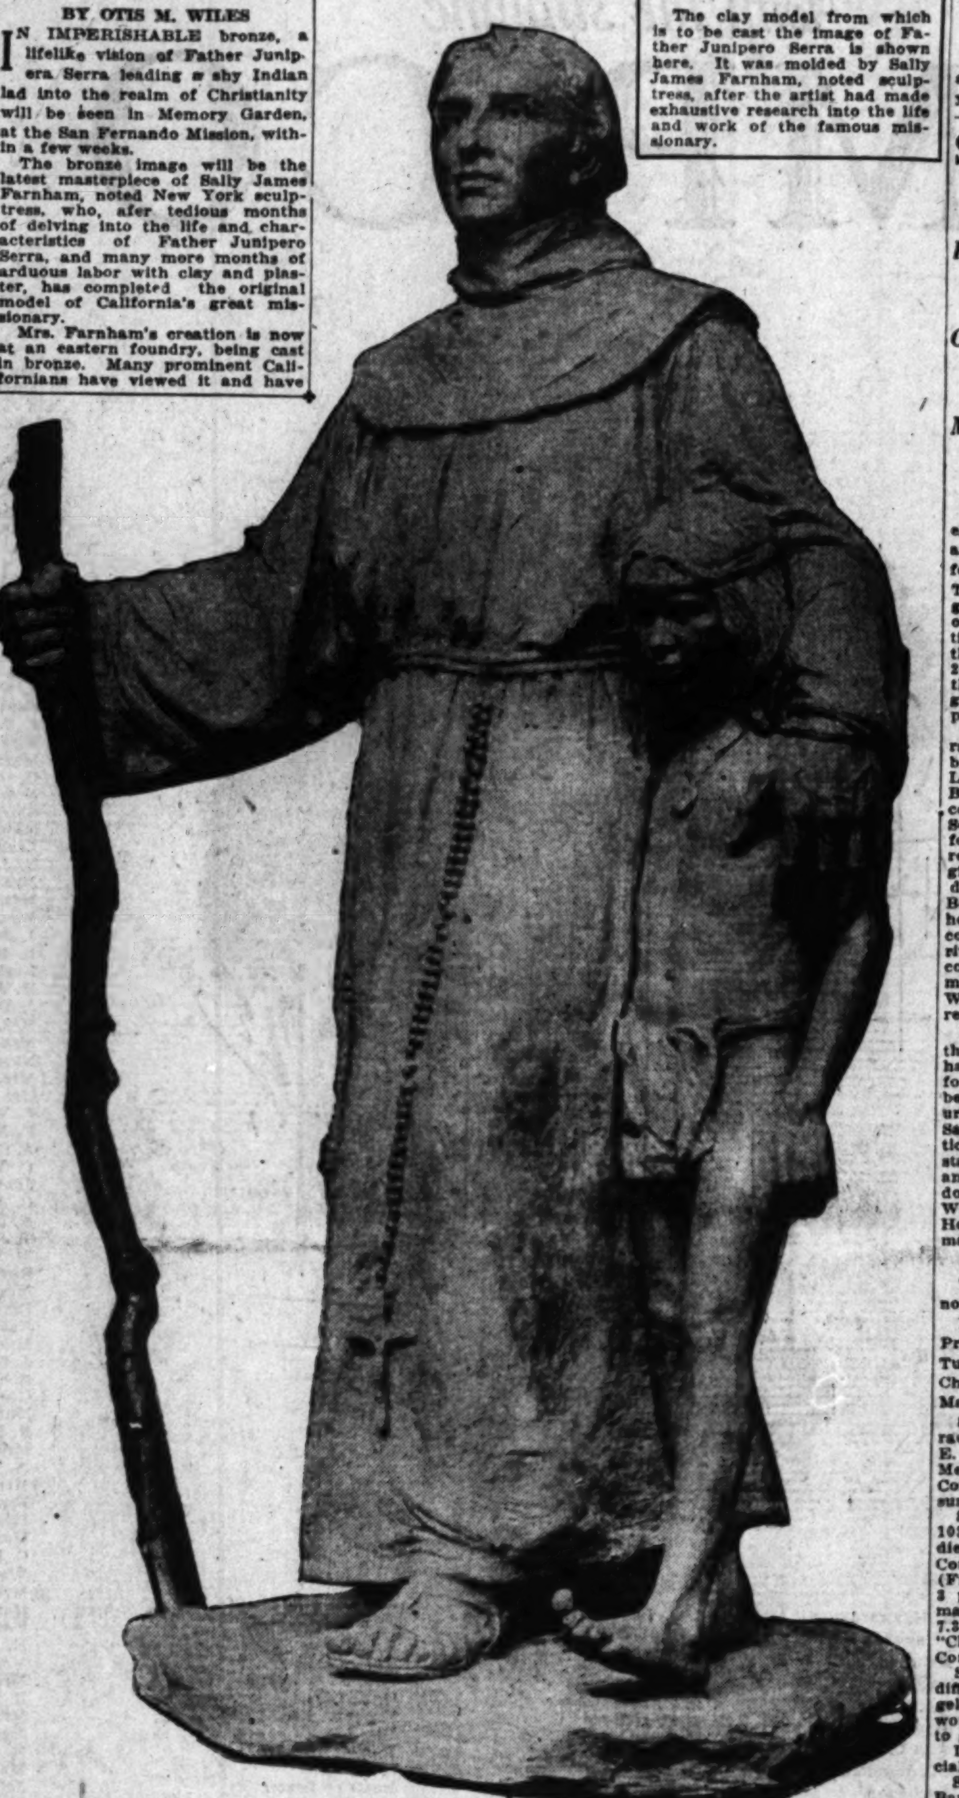
Art Statue to be Placed in Garden of San Fernando Mission

BY OTIS M. WILES

IN IMPERISHABLE bronze, a lifelike vision of Father Junipera Serra leading a shy Indian lad into the realm of Christianity will be seen in Memory Garden, at the San Fernando Mission, within a few weeks.

The bronze image will be the latest masterpiece of Sally James Farnham, noted New York sculptress, who, afer tedious months of delving into the life and characteristics of Father Junipero Serra, and many more months of arduous labor with clay and plaster, has completed the original model of California's great missionary.

Mrs. Farnham's creation is now at an eastern foundry, being cast in bronze. Many prominent Californians have viewed it and have sent back messages of highest praise of Mrs. Farnham's endeavors to create the most authentic image of the founder of California's celebrated Franciscan missions.



The clay model from which is to be cast the image of Father Junipero Serra is shown here. It was molded by Sally James Farnham, noted sculptress, after the artist had made exhaustive research into the life and work of the famous missionary.

Details of the ceremonies that will attend the unveiling of the statue of Father Junipero Serra are yet in their infancy, but the event promises to be one that will live in memory. The statue is eight feet in height and will surmount the historic old surge box beside the star-shaped fountain that was built by the Indians more than 125 years ago, and which was copied by the padres from one at Cordova, Spain.

STORY OF MISSIONS

The unveiling of Father Junipero's statue will be the closing chapter of the wondrous story that is writ in the crumbling remains of the old Franciscan missions. Of the missions founded by Father Junipero Serra there are twenty-one. They extend from Mission San Diego de Alcala, founded on July 16, 1769, and the first of California's most beautiful chapter of history, to Sonoma.

The missions were erected a day's journey apart. And over the long path that was beaten by weary, sandaled feet of the devout padres, and which lives today as California's famed El Camino Real, the followers of the Franciscan faith trundled their patient way, converting savage Indians on their travels.

San Fernando Mission, christened by Father Junipero as Mission San Fernando Rey de Espagna, on September 8, 1797, was one of the wayside points along the chain of old missions. Here Father Junipero visited frequently, and here he continued his conversion of the savage Indians to the Christian faith.

Other missions have been trampled to dust by the march of years. Not so with San Fernando. It has been rejuvenated, brought back to its historic splendor of old by a group of interested citizens. Work of restoration has been done on

RUGGLES WILL CONTESTED

Heirs Seek Share of Million Dollar Estate Left by Woman Doctor to Christian Science Church

BY BEN A. MARKSON

Dr. Georgia S. Ruggles, skilled in medicine, accumulated sums through a fair income, which, by judicious investment, grew to approximately $1,000,000. When she died in her spacious residence at 404 South Irving Boulevard on May 23, last, she left a will in which the bulk of her estate was bequeathed in trust to the Christian Science Church for educational purposes. Yesterday Attorney Francis D. Adams filed a petition in the Superior Court for a partial distribution of the estate on behalf of ten heirs-at-law of Dr. Ruggles, residents of the States of New York and Vermont.

The petition asserts that these heirs are the first cousins of Dr. Ruggles, being the descendents of brothers and sisters of the old Revolutionary families of the Wards and Sacketts, ancestors of Dr. Ruggles.

Recently Arthur W. Eckman, as attorney for the Christian Science Church of Boston, requested the service of notice upon him of all proceedings in the will case.

LEGAL BATTLE LOOMS

The indications are that a legal battle will be waged between the ten asserted blood heirs and the Christian Science Church for a portion of the Ruggles estate, valued in excess of $500,000.

A petition similar to that filed by Attorney Eckman has been presented by Attorney Adams in behalf of the heirs-at-law. Attorney Adams now represents, in addition to the claimants, those beneficiaries named in the will with the exception of the church.

Dr. Ruggles, widely traveled, and a collector of gems and objects of art, is the descendant of two of the most illustrious families in American history, according to geneological authorities and works of Revolutionary history, which Attorney Adams says he will use in attempting to establish the claims of his clients. These families, the Wards and the Sacketts, date back to the days of William the Conqueror, and Edward the Confessor, according to records in his possession. Many volumes containing the families' history are in the principal libraries devoted to American Revolutionary history, particularly the records of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and the tumultuous and epochal days spent by these founders and patriots in the settlement of this government and its destiny.

VALUABLE JEWELS

Dr. Ruggles was an exceedingly large holder of Southern California securities, her fortune consisting principally of stocks and bonds in leading industries and properties. Her cash balance at the time of her death was less than $500. Her jewels, however, included a pearl necklace valued at $150,000 and a flat diamond appraised at $22,000.

Her will leaves a great sum to charitable purposes and large bequests to friends. She left her former husband, Herbert Ruggles, whom she divorced in 1893, $25 a month for life. He is now 83 years of age and resides at Lakon, Ill. Dr. Ruggles was 74.

The heirs-at-law who propose to contest the charitable bequest of the will, are Mrs. Florence Os-

LONG BEACH BUYING WISELY

City Not Intoxicated by Oil Wealth; Royalties Are Buying Beach Lands and Parks

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Sudden wealth is an awful test of character. About three years ago Long Beach discovered that it had an income of $1,500,000 a year from its oil royalties—having made a sagacious bargain for 40 per cent on its oil land leases.

Under the first hectic elation of the news Long Beach sang out jubilantly that it would henceforth be a taxless city. Its taxes just about equal that amount.

It could and might have degenerated into a reckless waster, oozy with wealth, soft and irresponsible, living recklessly for the present, blind and callous to the future.

But pretty soon its cautious old wiseheads got together. Nay, nay, Long Beach would not shirk the responsibilities of the present generation. Rather, would she build for the future and relieve posterity of those burdens so often shifted on to it by an ambitious present.

So when one disgruntled citizen cynically remarked that he would jolly well like to know what was being done with that million and a half dollar royalties—since, dash it all, taxes were as high as ever, I thought I would like to know, too.

NOTHING FOOLISH DONE

For struggling progressive cities the country over are jealous of Long Beach, and they like to think they would be spending that sumptuous income to much better advantage. Well, would they?

After visiting the managing editor of the Press-Telegram, Mrs. Frank Selovar, and the City Manager, Mr. C. H. Windham, and gossiping w.th half a dozen representative citizens in various walks of life from a real estate man to a grocer's clerk, I doubt whether any city could have kept its head more sagaciously under this strain of sudden wealth. I could not discover that Long Beach had done a single foolish thing or a single wasteful thing.

City Manager Windham listened with suppressed triumph to my innocent inquiries. Then he cleared the papers off his desk and invited my inspection of an itemized statement beneath the glass plate which covers it, right under his managerial nose, all day and every day.

This statement is a record of tangible capital investments of the $2,282,728.52 received in oil royalties since January 1, 1922, to December 1, 1924—since he has held office.

I rather suspect he would have been a very disappointed man if some one had not done a little investigating and given him a proper chance to "point with pride."

SAVES BOND ISSUES

Because you see, Long Beach is putting the money in those things for which she would have had to float bond issues or gone without—but for the oil. As well as for wiping off a previous bond debt of $289,960.80. So that her bonded debt today is a mere $8,000,000 or so—$5,000,000 for her harbor improvements — and even that may eventually be taken care of by the oil royalties.

In the mean time, in two brief years, Long Beach has bought a Southern Pacific depot site on Broadway, several acres of beach lands, wonderful park lands, lots

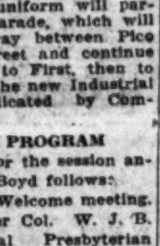
SALVATIONISTS TO ARRIVE SOON

Plans Made to Receive Commander Booth

Officers of Thirteen States Due Here 23rd Inst.

Mammoth Parade Will be Feature of Congress

Salvation Army officers as delegates from thirteen States will arrive here in the next four days for the opening of the Western Territorial Congress of their organization here from the 23rd to the 29th inst. More than 600 delegates are expected.



Lieut. Com. Adam Gifford

Elaborate plans are being made by Lieut.-Col. C. R. Boyd, divisional commander for Southern California, for the reception to be given Commander Evangeline Booth, who is coming here from her headquarters in New York to conduct the congress. On her arrival Commander Booth will be accompanied by Lieutenant-Commissioner Adam Gifford, and Col. W. J. Barnard Turner, chief secretary, and Mrs. Turner.

Col. Boyd announced yesterday that he and the officers of his staff have completed all arrangements for the congress. One feature will be a parade at 2 o'clock next Saturday afternoon. More than 1000 Salvationists in uniform will participate in the parade, which will start on Broadway between Pico and Eleventh street and continue down Broadway to First, then to Weller street to the new Industrial Home to be dedicated by Commander Booth.

CONGRESS PROGRAM

The program for the session announced by Col. Boyd follows:

Friday, 8 p.m. Welcome meeting. Principal speaker Col. W. J. B. Turner, Emanual Presbyterian Church. Welcome to delegates by Mayer Cryer and Charles H. Toll.

Saturday, 2 p.m. Mammoth parade. Welcome to Commander E. C. Booth; 3 p.m. Dedication of Men's Social Service Building—The Commander. 7 p.m. meetings at surrounding corps.

Sunday, great day of salvation. 1030 a.m., Holiness meeting; soldiers and ex-soldiers, Lieutenant-Commissioner Gifford in command. (Friday Morning Club Theater.) 3 p.m. Musical festival, the Commander (First Methodist Church.) 7.30 p.m. Salvation meeting, "Christ of the Doorstep," the Commander (Trinity Auditorium.)

Special meetings to be held at the different Corps as follows: Los Angeles No. 1—T.H.Q. Staff and women's social service; the latter to give a demonstration.

Los Angeles No. 2 men's social service officers.

Santa Monica, Territorial Staff Band.

Long Beach, Training College Staff and Cadets. Los Angeles No. 4, Northern California Division. Inglewood, Golden Gate Division. Los Angeles No. 5, Oregon Division. Los Angeles No. 9, Montana Division, Scandinavian, Scandinavian Division, Japanese Corps, Japanese Division, San Pedro, Inland Empire Division. Wilmington, Inter-Mountain Division. Redondo, Utah, Idaho and Wyoming Division. Huntington Park, Washington Division, Pasadena, Border Division.

OFFICERS' COUNCIL

Monday, 2:30 p.m., Officers' council, Lieutenant-Commissioner Gifford. 7:30 p.m. "In Rags" by Commander Booth. Chairman, William May Garland (Trinity Auditorium.)

Tuesday 10 a.m. Officers' council, Commissioner Gifford; 2:30 p.m. Group meetings, 7 p.m. Officers locals and soldiers' council, "Winter Fires" by Commander Booth.

Wednesday, 10 a.m. Officers' council, "Compromise Nothing," by Commander Booth; 2:30 p.m. Group meetings, 7 p.m. Officers' council.

Thursday, 10 a.m. Staff gathering, the Commander; 12:30 p.m. Staff luncheon. 7 p.m. Staff officers' council by Lieutenant-Commissioner Gifford.

TO INVITE THOUSANDS

Thirty thousand invitations to the sessions of the western congress of the Salvation Army, convening in Los Angeles this week, will be delivered at this number of homes tomorrow by local Boy Scouts.

Each invitation is in an addressed envelope and the Scouts will make a "special delivery" to the 30,000 addresses. More than 200 troopers will accomplish the feat in one day, without neglecting their school work.

The invitations were prepared by Mrs. E. D. Jones of the Salvation Army.

Scouts will also assist the visiting delegates from other cities in sightseeing and as escorts.

The Lancer

by Harry Carr

YANKING three stupid boys to their death at the end of a rope was the best guess that modern civilization could give to a riddle that has no answer.

Hanging Ferdinand, Sears and Geragac for the death of Charles O. Chapman will not stop other bandits. Not to hang them, on the other hand, would be to throw up our hands in surrender.

BRAINS TOO DULL

It's rather a hopeless problem.

These men were dull rather than bad. They would have been less dangerous if they had been wholly bad.

That is to say, if the world were filled with two kinds of people; part all good and the other part all bad, the problem would be comparatively simple. Just a massacre of the bad ones.

The trouble is that men like these three whose "souls went whimpering overhead" lack brains to keep up with a civilization that is geared beyond their mental capacity. They turn blindly, frantically and stupidly to the only resource they know—physical force and violence.

We can't lock up them all; and we can't kill them all. Possibly it did a little good to hang them; possibly a little harm. No one will ever know.

WANT TO BE QUEEN?

If any girl wants to be a queen, why there's a job vacant.

Boris of Bulgaria, the only bachelor king in Europe, is looking for a wife. He can speak French, German, English, Hungarian and Russian. Also he is a first-class, tip-top locomotive engineer.

In view of the present teetering condition of European thrones, the last mentioned might be his best recommendation. If he loses his crown, he is sure of a job as a "Casey Jones."

THE HEROES DEPART

With the retirement of Gen. Robert Lee Bullard, the "big four" is lost to the Army: Harbord, Liggett, Pershing and Bullard.

It seems very hard that the careers of these officers should be snuffed out at 64 when it happens that all three are at the prime of their lives.

Gen. Bullard is a star polo player and, just before his retirement, ran a mile and a quar-

This card his description, photograph, that the bearer has with all the laws relating and apartment-houses, and especially to a "strict observance of the law relating to the procuring of wines intoxicating liquors, narcotic drugs or immoral women, for guests and others."

With the conclusion of this investigation Mr. Blake then furnishes the man's employer with a printed form which must be returned to Mr. Blake's files if the applicant is ever discharged or leaves that employ. If in case the applicant has been discharged the employer must state on this form what the record of the bellman was and the reasons for discharge. This in turn is also investigated by Mr. Blake, in this way giving the bellman a just trial. If the bellman in question has been found guilty of any improper action, this is recorded and he must look for other employment.

Knowledge of the rigid inspection that must be encountered in Los Angeles has passed through the underworlds of other cities and as a result Los Angeles is known to be a hard nut for the crooked hotel employee to crack. In other words the old-time query of the thirsty stranger of "Hist, boy, known where I can get a drink?" has become obsolete in Los Angeles.

Mr. Blake's files, coming under the jurisdiction of the police department, are open at all times to inspection by all police authorities. In the three years that the bureau has been in operation members of the Sheriff's office, and the District Attorney's office have many times been able to obtain helpful information there. Mr. Blake said that in a list of 118 names of bellmen the first year of the bureau's existence the police were able to weed out seven professional criminals, and as a result had the opportunity to watch closely their activities in Los Angeles.

CONFERENCE DINNERS

As a further impetus to the spirit of co-operation existing between the police and the members of the Hotel Men's Association, Chief Heath, his division commanders, and Mr. Blake and the hotel men meet at dinners to talk over the work accomplished through the bureau.

Aside from the aid afforded by Mr. Blake's work in the curtailing of crime and apprehension of criminals, there is another feature of the bureau which has done a great deal to elevate the position of the "bell-hop." This is Mr. Blake's enthusiastic desire to see clean-cut responsible young men employed in the local hotels. As a result the morale of the bellmen has been raised. As free as possible from the element of the crook, the bellmen have come to realize that they now occupy a position of dignity and in this way are able to give better service to their employers, and and to themselves.

Hotels Here Rank With Nation's "Dryest"

C. H. Blake

To aid in enforcing prohibition and other laws, Mr. Blake investigates the records of all persons applying for employment as bellmen in hostelries belonging to the local association.

HEIRS CONTEST RUGGLES WILL

teyee and Mrs. David N. Williams, who reside on a farm at Brookdale, Poultney, Vt.; Arthur Ward, a farmer at East Poultney; Mrs. Harriett Thomas, Silver Creek, N. Y.; Mrs. Warren Curtis, Ransomville, N. Y.; Mrs. Elizabeth Hurd, Chatham, N. Y., and the Misses Ella, Eliza, Minerva and Almira Smith, Clinton Corners, N. Y.

These heirs reside in sections of the East where the Sacketts and Wards in the early days cleared away the forests and founded settlements. They were found by Attorney Adams during a prolonged search which extended over practically the entire southern, midwestern and eastern portions of the United States.

LARGE LEGACIES

Dr. Ruggles's will bequeathed several large legacies and annuities to certain of her life-long associates and servants and employees, and left the balance of her estate in trust, the income to be used for the education of children in institutions encouraging the teaching of Christian Science faith, and the residue of the estate, upon termination of the trust, to the Christian Science Church.

The will was admitted to probate on November 5, 1924, Richard Nevins and Harry B. Lamport, bond salesmen for Hunter-Dulin & Co., were appointed executors, the legal firm of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher appearing for the proponents. The will admitted to probate shows its date of execution as April 28, 1924, and the petition shows that Dr. Ruggles died on May 23, that year, a period of twenty-six days elapsing between the making of the will and Dr. Ruggles's death.

VALIDITY ATTACKED

The petition for partial distribution filed by Attorney Adams yesterday, asserts, that because of the fact that Dr. Ruggles died within thirty days of the execution of the will, that under the California laws relating to charitable trusts, the attempting disposition of Dr. Ruggles's property to the Christian Science Church is illegal and void, and that, therefore, in so far as this portion of the estate is concerned, Dr. Ruggles died intestate, and the residue of the estate would, therefore, revert to her heirs-at-law.

Dr. Ruggles was the daughter of Almira Ward and Morgan Sackett. Almira Ward was the sixth child of the Hon. William Ward and Lucy Church. The geneology of the Ward family, written by Andrew Henshaw Ward, tells that the Hon. William Ward was one of the first settlers of Poultney, Vt., and that he was one of that sturdy band that resisted, step by step, the progress of Burgoyne's army and participated in its capture. He also, was a cousin of Gen. Artemus Ward, in command of the colonial forces under George Washington, and the first major-general under Washington.

And, by the way, Orlando, one of the sons of William and Lucy Ward, accompanied Horace Greeley, the great journalist, on foot from East Poultney to New York City when Greeley went to the metropolis to obtain employment as a journeyman printer. Orlando Ward founded the Toleda Blade.

PIONEER ANCESTORS

The ancestors of Dr. Ruggles migrated to America in the sixteenth century and were identified closely with the policies, wars and developments on this continent to an extent too great for detail in connection with the present case.

In connection with her own life, however, it is of interest that descended as she was from a line of soldiers, pioneers, and clergymen, her adoption of the profession of medicine was quite by accident. She had a brother, Leon, whose descendants, it may be noted, she specifically cut off from sharing her estate, the reason being unknown. Leon studied medicine. He was injured and died of blood poisoning. Their father urged Georgia Ruggles to study medicine, desiring a physician in the family.

She began practicing in Chicago about 1880 and was doing a fair business up until about 1893, when her gross income was approximately $8000 a year. At about this time the merger of the Carnegie companies was made and she put a considerable sum into the merger company's stocks and sold out about 1901 with considerable profit. She retired from the practice of medicine.

DUAL ROLE

Her father and mother had taken to raise a girl named Anna Conley, who grew up and married Joseph Critchfield. They had a child named Effie Critchfield, and Dr. Ruggles's parents helped to bring up Effie. When her parents died Dr. Ruggles assumed the dual relation of mother and sister to Effie, and this companionship lasted until Dr. Ruggles's death, a period of practically fifty years.

Effie graduated from the Conservatory of Music at Columbus, O., and went to Europe to continue her musical education. Dr. Ruggles joined her abroad, assisting her until in 1896 Effie was acclaimed as one of the great prima donnas of her time. She quickly became guest artist at many of the large operahouses throughout Europe, notably Covent Garden, London; Royal Operahouse, Milan; and operahouses at Paris, Berlin and Vienna, her career bringing her a good income.

COMPANY FORMS

About 1900 Dr. Ruggles formed a copartnership with one Barrett, of Philadelphia, whereby she and Effie, who took the professional name of Mme. Dorre, furnished a part of the capital of the American Loan Association. Incidentally, Barrett died in Los Angeles in 1923 and left an estate of more than $1,000,000. When Dr. Ruggles sold out her share of the company it was for the cash sum of $425,000.

Effie, or Mme. Dorre, was at Dr. Ruggles's bedside when the latter died, and she is one of the principal beneficiaries in the will. She is living now at Dr. Ruggles's residence on Irving Boulevard.

Lucy Stiles, a companion of Dr. Ruggles for many years, who was left a $2000 annuity and $200 a month for life, died in San Diego recently. That portion reverts to the residue of the estate.

THE SHEIK

One of the most interesting places in this town is a little Mexican theater in Main street. The scenery is made out of butcher paper; so the pillars and the stone walls wave gayly in the wind.

On a recent night, a great honor befell the young sheik leading man. Right in the middle of an emotional scene, an admirer walked down the aisle with a box of cigars. The sheik stopped emoting; came down to the footlights; took the smokes; shook hands with the admirer; asked after his family; then came back to his place and went on with the scene—a Hamlet-like son reproaching his wicked mother for her sins.

Well, and why not? We know it's only play acting anyhow; and a box of cigars is a box of cigars.

BURIED CITY KEY TO OLD CULTURE

Adobe Walls Appear Under Wind-blown Sands

Skeletons Show Men Were Five Feet in Height

stances wall portions up to a foot in height were found standing, but for the most part nothing remains but the foundations. The floors in nearly every instance are still in a good state of preservation, however, and when the debris covering them is removed the ground plans of the houses can be readily made out.

These ground plans show that the buildings were of different types, most of them being of a horseshoe form with a number of rooms, all entering upon a central court. In some instances the inner court was almost circular, the two ends of the structure coming close together. In others the building described a curve and there are also one or two examples of ell formation.

FIREPLACES FOUND

The rooms were quite small, averaging some six by eight feet in size, and more or less rectangular in shape. The walls, which probably ran up to a height of seven or eight feet, were built of lumps of sun-dried adobe shaped somewhat [illegible] loaves of bread. They we[illegible] in adobe mortar and pl[illegible] over with adobe after be[illegible]d. The courses of adobe [illegible]lternated with occasional [illegible] of flat stones, apparently [illegible] greater strength. Most of th[illegible]oors were of adobe, which has become so hard and smooth that it looks like cement. In rare cases the floor was laid with slabs of stone.

In many of the houses fireplaces are found, consisting of small bowl-like depressions in the floor, which are often found filled with charcoal and burned red on the sides, showing long use. It is probable that the small rooms into which the houses are divided were used mainly for sleeping purposes, cooking and eating taking place in the court outside.

In some cases it has been discovered that the same site has apparently been utilized for two and even three successive buildings. This is indicated by floors found at different levels, one above the other, and by two or three sets of walls, each embracing an area larger or smaller than the one preceding it. The ruins show that the roofs were made of poles laid horizontally across the walls and covered with brush, sticks or grass, on top of which was placed a layer of adobe. In several places has been found the impression made by this grass or brush on the adobe roof-covering, which was applied in soft state.

HOUSES COVER DEAD

One of the most interesting features revealed is the fact that the ancient houses were ultimately used for the entombment of the dead. In the course of the work of removing the wind-blown sand and earth which cover all the ancient buildings to a depth that varies from a few inches to several feet, eighteen skeletons have been found in graves that were usually dug through the floors of the buildings.

"It is apparent that the tribe left their dwellings to take up their abode elsewhere but they came back to bury their dead in their former habitations," said Harrington. "It is a well-known fact that the Indians have a horror of death and will not remain about a house where it has occurred, and as it is quite probable that these people were the progenitors of some of the later Indian tribes, it is reasonable to suppose that they entertained similar ideas on this subject.

"The theory that these houses were made to serve as tombs after they had been abandoned as dwellings is supported by the fact that in several instances we have found evidences that when the grave was dug the house was already in a state of delapidation, with the roof and walls caved in. The grave was sunk through all the debris and when the floor was reached a shallow grave was dug beneath it and the body was buried there. That these burials were made by the same tribe that formerly lived in the houses is indicated by the type of pottery found in the graves, which is identified with that found on the floors of the rooms."

Many of the skeletons uncovered were found in such a state of preservation as to make it easy to form an idea of the appearance of these prehistoric Nevadans. The remains indicate a people of rather small stature, none of the adult individuals exceeding five feet by more than an inch or two. The skulls are of the brachycephalic or broadheaded type of man and have well-developed foreheads, showing a high degree of intellect. There is some indication of prognathism, or the heavy lower jaw which characterizes tribes not far advanced in the scale of development, but according to Prof. Harrington, this feature is not more marked than in many of the existing Indian tribes. The teeth, which are unusually well preserved, are rather large.

All the skeletons are found lying on their sides, which was the usual method of burial among all the aborigines in America and is found to this day among undeveloped peoples in many other parts of the world. Prof. Harrington, who has spent many years in the study of the American Indian, stated that he had at times discussed the subject of burial customs with tribesmen who had informed him that they considered the white man's way of burying his dead flat on their backs objectionable because it does not make proper provision for the comfort of the deceased.

KETTLES AND BEADS

All of the graves thus far opened have contained, in addition to the skeleton, various articles such as kettles, bowls and water bottles of pottery, many as perfect as the day they were made; arrowheads and knives of flint, metates or stone slabs for grinding corn, and beads and pendants of shell and turquoise, often of beautiful workmanship. The bodies were always wrapped in blankets when buried, indicating that this ancient tribe knew the art of weaving. In most instances only fragments of the blankets covering remains are found and these have to be handled with extreme care owing to their fragility. The excavators cover them with hot paraffine the moment they are exposed to the air, in order to preserve the fabric.

"I have not as yet had time to determine what material was used in weaving these blankets," Prof. Harrington said. "It was probably cotton or the fiber of milk weed. We have found some coverings made of strips of rabbit or mink fur twisted or woven together with fibers of hemp. The cloth coverings are of very fine texture and indicate a high degree of skill in weaving."

FOOD REMNANTS

Some of the graves also yield remnants of food, including parched and unparched corn, beans and squash seeds. Among the charred remains found in the ancient fireplaces are many corncobs. Occasionally the bone of animals are found buried with the human remains. Usually they are the skeletons of dogs, which apparently were often buried with members of the family. In one grave, which contained the bones of an infant perhaps 2 years of age, there were

SLIGHTLY PUZZLING

Nowadays when baby concentrates on papa's checkerboard the idea is that it is some sort of a cross-word puzzle.

AMONG THE CATS

Cats were domestic pets 3800 years ago, but not the same ones. Next to the wife the first living thing in the human home was a cat. Not signifying anything.

BROADWAY HOLD-UPS

Strangers who have been induced to cough up $12 a seat to speculators in tickets for New York shows have a right to complain to everybody from President Coolidge down to the Tammany cops. None of the Gotham shows are worth the money—or anything like it.

ON THE SPOT

Of the twenty-five most influential preachers of America—as determined by a vote of 30,000 subscribers to a religious weekly—nine are in or from the Chicago field; thus showing that the ministers themselves realize where the big work is to be done. They are not hunting easy berths.

THE GERM CARRIER

In addition to other disgraceful habits it is now asserted that the pestiferous cockroach of the kitchen is also furnishing transportation for the cancer germ. It is sure that somebody has been doing it and it may readily be blamed upon the cockroach. He is equal to any domestic infamy. California is lucky in being reasonably free from this annoyance.

THE NATIONAL GAME

Ban Johnson himself is said to be interested in a movement to place baseball under Federal supervision. The President would be expected to name a commission to have jurisdiction over the big leagues. But doesn't Ban know that the President would be likely to appoint Judge Landis as head of the commission and there he would be on the same old job with the whole government behind him.

AMONG THE SARDINES

It looks as if there might be sardines enough to go 'round. The December catch of sardines in the Los Angeles Harbor district exceeded 20,000,000 pounds and the season's take will count up to nearly 100,000,000 pounds. The business of our local canneries would make the island of Sardinia look like an outpost of Robinson Crusoe. But the trouble is that when sardines get into their boxes they cannot tell you where they came from.

SAME OLD STORY

France alleges that Germany could muster an army of 400,000 young men over night as the output of the police training schools. But Germany is not going to use them as an army. Any nation can muster an army of young men in a few hours if there is a great emergency or the land be seriously threatened. Germany might well say that France is a menace in that she has 1,000,000 men ready to rush to the front at the call of a single man. Why assume that Germany is forever on the battle line?

UP IN THE AIR

They have the ancient ratio of sixteen to one in London, but it is not in the form once so eloquently demanded by William Jennings Bryan. It is provided by the commercial aviation lines. Their rates on their various trips to Paris, Switzerland and more distant points are sixteen miles to the American dollar. This is possibly more than sixteen miles to the gallon, but all things considered it is a reasonable passenger rate. It provides a swift and a dustless trip and it also supplies some scenic novelties and physical thrills. The business is expanding more rapidly than it is in this country.

RUSSIAN BUSINESS

We sent 600 tractors to Odessa in December, thus showing that some of our manufacturers are doing business with the Russians. There is no effective objection to this. We do not need official recognition of a government or the execution of a treaty before our traders can sell Russia a bar of soap. If they are not selling contraband wares or evading duties our merchants may send their goods to any harbor. In shipping tractors to Russia the Americans were playing Santa Claus in a substantial way. With competent farm machinery the peasants may in time work out their own salvation and break the rod of the Commune.

GIVE OTHER MEN A CHANCE

The City Engineer has cut out the "fancy stuff" by killing overtime among city employees to the pleasant extent of $7000 a month. Why not do away with it entirely and employ more worthy men for the other $8000? It would seem probable, in a city of this size, that there are many good men who would be willing to work on the streets for $4.75 a day and be satisfied with six straight days a week and pay for holidays. The same rule will apply to the better jobs at bigger pay. A department that has been paying from $12,000 to $15,000 a month for overtime, at an average at about double the regular wages, certainly has use for more men.

CIVILIZATION VS. MARRIAGE

"The marriage ceremony will eventually be scrapped and some other arrangement more adequate to the times will take its place," says the Rev. Nelson Junius Springer, pastor of the fourth Unitarian Church of Brooklyn.

The Times ventures to predict that his utterance will find its way to the waste basket long before the marriage license, judging by his own words that "anything that is no longer useful should be discarded for something that is."

Sensationalism and cynicism are not useful; marriage is. The statement of the preacher notwithstanding, the twentieth century and marriages are not incompatible. The vast majority of the American people cherish marriage as a sacred institution, as did the early Hindus of 2000 B.C., and the Mambuti Pygmies of the Congo forest today, because human instinct acclaims it, demands it. Nor has marriage "failed to meet the requirements of civilization." On the contrary, civilization has thrived through marriage. The trouble is the minister has mistaken society fads for civilization.

Had Mr. Springer confined his "survey of matrimony" to his own congregation in Brooklyn instead of making it "nation-wide" he would have found 90 per cent of his married contributors well satisfied with their bargain. The remaining 10 per cent find their reflex all over creation. Fortunately minority rules do not apply to essential institutions. Bolshevists tried "free love" in Russia and it was found wanting. France placed its free and childless "goddess of love" on a pedestal in the Pantheon during the revolution and returned to legal unions in sackcloth and ashes. Malthus spread his pernicious doctrine and today premiums are paid in France for large families.

The difficulty lies not with civilization which abolition of marriage would wreck, but with misunderstood principles of both marriage and civilization. The home is the basic unit of society. Gregarious building up of nations and tribes depends upon the normal homes for ethnological continuation. Savage tribes in Africa like the Masai are extinct at this time because they failed to realise this basic fact. The Chinese, Japanese and Hindus in Asia, the Kavirondo, Baganda and Soudanese in Africa, Italians, Scandinavians and Belgians in Europe increase in wealth and power in proportion to their increasing populations. So much for the principles of civilization and racial continuity.

The principles of marriage also are confused in the pastor's mind. Civilization asks of marriage no more than did the origin of the human race. Marriage became a social process before Christianity and Christianity raised it to the dignity of a sacrament on the principle that the first object of matrimony is the causation of legal offspring, the second a diminution of concupiscence. Ultrasociety places the second first and the first second, but civilization still issues its marriage licenses with an eye on legitimate issue.

Divorce dockets are crowded, true. But should judges ask petitioners for divorce the question "What intention had you in mind on the day when you asked for a marriage license?" the above-quoted confusion of principles would be clear. So would the parson's findings, had he made his survey on these same lines.

Is the economic situation at fault? No more than marriage or civilization. Jazz bands and the cradle may not harmonize. But jazz bands destroy economy, while the cradle creates it. Marriage, civilization and economy can get along without jazz bands, but civilization and true economy cannot succeed without marriage.

The Rev. Springer's statement may be sensational, but, in the light of analysis, it is not in accord with fact or theory. Were spectacular sensationalism barred from the pulpit marriage would pursue its pacific course through future time as it has in the past. And fortunately notoriety hunters have failed before to mislead:

Those blessed souls whose married bliss
Lives on in love and silent kiss.

"Living is so high and so complicated," quoth the Rev. Mr. Springer, "that many men and women who really want to marry find that they would have to wait a number of years. So they just don't wait." Nor even do they wait for the unwelcome fruit of their impatience. Nor do they wait one for the other. This is no novelty. The red-light districts of the past were crowded with the same variety.

The State cannot exist without marriage for the same reason that maternal instinct is lacking in a municipality which is a corporation without a soul. Children simply cannot flourish on a State diet, nor women maintain their feminine nature without craving for the little hand that clasps the breast. It is unnatural to propose to change the order of nature on which hangs the prospect of the future.

Eliminate marriage from civilization and what moral stamina remains is lost in one generation. Intended childless unions or illegal unions with children are equally bent in one direction, degradation and prostitution of the one soulful inspiration which elevates human nature above the animal genus. Substitute lustful indulgence for legitimate desire of reproduction and man and woman of the future become automata of the one passion from which civilization has saved mankind through marriage.

The one manifest criterion of immortality of the human soul is the recurrence of paternal and maternal characteristics in their progeny. Leave it to promiscuous and fatuous breeding and the human character is killed in the birth of human animalism. Such doctrines promulgated from the pulpit are an insult to the very pillars which support it. Legitimate fathers and mothers will rise in indignation at the proposal of a plan which at once destroys the most sacred institution of civilization to raise in its place a structure of aboriginal influences at which savage tribes in darkest Africa would grin.

What stimulates the code of social honor and pride is the anxiety of the child to emulate his father and mother in their best qualities. What does Mr. Springer propose for the child who knows neither father nor mother? The State, Mr. Springer, is an abstract educator and we prefer to leave the future in the hands of the honest-to-goodness parents as we know ours and those around us.

THE MONEY GOES

The Treasury Department contends that our silver dollar is practically indestructible. But it is astonishing how spendable it is. It may be indestructible, but it is not keepable.

DOLLARS AND GLORY

A wise rabbi has raised his voice in protest against the manner in which Americans indicate their worship of success—success measured by financial standards alone. Yet the fact remains that the average American of today has little reverence for the dollar itself. The Americans glow over achievement and, while it is true that much of this achievement is summed up by a mass of money, it is not the gold that commands the enthusiasm.

The Americans will express more regard for some wholesome athlete who can swat the ball with regularity than they will for the Napoleon who can pile up a bunch of millions by making a new brand of shaving soap. There is quite a feeling that Henry Ford has accomplished something, but it does not rest upon the circumstance that he has possibly become the world's richest man. It lies rather on the fact that his genius for organization has put forth so vast a number of his cars for so little money. Likewise Rockefeller may have once been famous for his wealth, but he was never worshiped on that account. Now he is genuinely revered through the organization which is inspired by him and which is so nobly warring against disease.

If the average man is asked to make out a list of twenty of the best beloved or most admired Americans today it will be found to have mighty few millionaires in its composition and not one of those will have his standing measured by his millions. The Americans are not slaves to the dollar—at least not to the extent of excluding other ties and interests.

PENALTIES OF TASTE

One of the deepest-seeing philosophic writers of our time was Dr. Norman Bridge of this city, whose recent death was a real loss to literature. Aside from his numerous medical works Dr. Bridge wrote many magazine articles as well as books of essays and biography. Perhaps the most arrestive, and certainly the most provocative of thought, was his volume called "The Penalties of Taste."

This title, so pregnant with suggestion to the esthetic mind, is a whole book in itself. A reader of a sensitive and fastidious nature would quickly glimpse in it such sufferings as he had himself experienced in his harsh contacts with a world with which he felt himself out of tune—a world in whose daily life, usages and aims he had found so much that was alien to his own temperament. It is useless to try to impress upon a person with such a nature the fact that he must either fall in line good-naturedly with the herd or else armor himself with a bluff philosophy that shall make him proof against vulgar assault. Such a person seems bent upon kicking against the pricks. He is not at ease among his fellows and cannot be made to feel so.

If there were not in our artificial civilization so many cultured people of this type—those whose constant complaint is that they are not understood and that nobody sympathizes with their fine habit of thought—there would have been no need to write such a book as "The Penalties of Taste." But that such a book has a real excuse for being and that Dr. Bridge was the very man to write it is seen by even the most cursory perusal. All through its pages, and particularly in the chapter on "Bashfulness," is revealed the fact that the author himself was a victim of an estheticism which, though by no means morbid, carried with it the penalties which he pointed out with much fine literary art and fidelity to human nature. He stood for high ideals—the very highest—and he had that over-refinement of taste which is to its possessor at once a misfortune as well as a splendid asset, in that it provides infinite resources of mental wealth and exaltation of soul. The misfortune lies in the fact that, as the author says, "it exposes such persons to constant carking from the lack of refinement all about them."

Dr. Bridge confesses that his essay on "Bashfulness" was suggested by some of his own experiences. He relates that after he had delivered it as an address in a Los Angeles church he was not surprised to be told that one of his auditors had said that "the speaker had in his own person illustrated his theme." At the same time he was given credit for many helpful suggestions as to how bashfulness might be overcome.

Having pointed out the penalties of taste, he then proceeds to show its rewards. He holds that the best taste leads one to order one's life and to seek one's pleasures in accordance with universal law. One must adjust oneself to that law. To see through the life conditions by which one is surrounded is to see the vital essence of things and to be comforted thereby. Thus a man will find unsuspected good in people and will be more likely to cultivate it himself. And this leads to that optimistic serenity which cannot be annoyed or harassed. He points out that the sensitive nature may take refuge in a vocation that is to its liking or it may find it in an avocation selected for its refining influence as well as the pleasure it may give.

In this way "a well-directed and well-cultivated taste," Dr. Bridge holds, "can minister to the comfort of mind and body and contribute to a happy longevity," as was fully illustrated in his own case. He discovered how he might ameliorate or control abnormal mental moods and bodily conditions by voluntary effort. In his chapter on "The Mind as a Remedy" he has set forth some of the rules for applying this beneficial psychiatric power and they are to be commended to all who are suffering the penalties of taste.

Just About It

by James J. Montague

A VINDICATION

I never was greatly impressed
  When my parents repeatedly said
That the bee was a bug that possessed
  The secret of getting ahead.
I had watched her at work, in cold weather and hot,
  Eternally bringing in honey,
And it always struck me that the poor creature got
  A very poor run for her money.

Nor did I consider it wise
  For an insect so fragile and slight,
At the first flush of daylight to rise,
  And toil till the velvety night,
Disdaining amusement and risking her health,
  As she winged her way hither and yonder,
  To gather in uncounted combs full of wealth
  For the next generation to squander.

And now I have found I was right,
  For the bees, so the scientists state,
Isn't shrewd, or far-sighted or bright,
  But a weak helpless victim of fate.
It is true that she toils with an ardor intense
  On the gigantic task that is set her,
But that doesn't prove that she has any sense,
  It shows she don't know any better.

I am glad that I always refrained
  From molding my life on the bee's,
Though my parents and teachers explained
  How nobly she scorned idle ease.
I am glad that when told I must copy her ways,
  I decided—in secrecy—not to,
And make it a rule through the term of my days
  To do just as much work as I've got to.

HOW IT STARTED

BY JEAN NEWTON

"Don Juan"

Today we use the term "Don Juan" more or less lightly to describe a "ladies' man," one who is concerned chiefly with matters of courtship and love-making. In its origin, however, this had a more sinister significance.

We have the name from a legendary figure that is one of the most widely adapted in the literature of various countries. The principal of the Don Juan legend is a profligate who gives himself up entirely to the gratification of sense and acknowledges no higher consideration. In his career of self-indulgence he murders a man who stands in his way and then challenges the spirit in which he disbelieves to manifest its existence. The spirit does return and prove to him its existence. It forces him to admit its supremacy and the worthlessness of a sensual existence and then he is dragged down into the infernal regions!

The legend has been adapted in several well-known pieces of literature in various languages—notably Moliere's "Don Juan," 1665; Shadwell's "Libertine," 1676, and Mozart's immortal opera, "Don Giovanni."

LAND OF REAL SPORT

BY LEE SHIPPEY

Many a region in which hunting and fishing are good is a "hunter's paradise," but the Tampico Tribune objects to that phrase in describing Mexico. It is too commonplace such a sportsman's wonderland as Mexico, the Tribune suggests instead that Mexico be known as "the land of real

"One party returned this week," reports the Tribune, "after having killed tigers, mountain lions, deer, mule deer, antelope, bear, etc. Wild ducks and geese, pheasants, turkeys, quail, grouse and snipe; wild hogs and many other varieties of game may be obtained by a sportsman within a short distance of this city, and the rivers are as full of fish as the forests are of game. Monster tarpon, the largest in the world, may be caught within the limits of the city, and the rivers and lagoons teem with robalo, one of the gamiest of fish. Those caught usually weigh ten to fifteen pounds. Sheepshead, mullet, perch, croakers, mango snappers, red fish, jewfish and a score of other fish may be caught by any fisherman, no matter how inexpert."

What the Tribune says of Tampico largely is true of most of Mexico, though, of course, not many towns are situated where two great rivers unite and meet the sea. But throughout Mexico game is so plentiful that epicurean tourists get many a thrill at even the small-town hotels at which they stop. Not long ago an Angeleno traveled clear across Mexico, eating with delight the ordinary table d'hote dinners wherever he chanced to stop, without once being offered either beef or pork. Nor would he ever have cared for them had they been offered—they were available often enough, but he preferred the well-ordered meals regularly provided. He ate virtually everything mentioned by the Tribune—everything edible, that is—and many other things besides—chicken, baby goat (so delicate it certainly would have been sold as baby lamb in most restaurants at home) and a veritable connoisseur's feast of fruits and fruit products. And all was surprisingly cheap—surprising to him because, like many others, he had made the great mistake of judging Mexico by border towns.

Even in Mexico City, a Los Angeles family found, hunters came past their residence in Colonia Roma with such regularity as to make them independent of the butcher. There was one handsome Indian who looked like a direct descendant of the Montezumas, who regularly, twice a week, brought his spoils of the chase. One could place orders with him just as with a market—if one wished a quarter of venison or a dozen quail or a wild turkey for Sunday dinner the hunter could be so informed when he made his regular Tuesday call and the next Saturday he would deliver the goods as ordered. Such a country truly has reason to be known as "The Land of Real Sport."

REAPPORTIONMENT SHOULD COME NEXT

The child-labor amendment is now out of the way of the State Legislature.

Reapportionment should come next. It should be voted upon early so that its shadow shall not affect the passage of any other laws.

The natural sense of justice and instinct for fair play should dictate the reapportionment of the State in accordance with the 1920 census. Even now reapportionment is four years late and it will require tremendous effrontery for any legislator to insist that we should put off till tomorrow what should have been done four years ago.

As it is now California presents the curious and distasteful spectacle of a commonwealth that is not fulfilling its obligations as a democracy. It tolerates a condition that virtually disfranchises hundreds of thousands of its own citizens, who have a right that they are not allowed, representation in their own State Legislature.

Reapportionment should come as inevitably as the income tax, as the first of every month, as the blooming of the trees in the valleys. As our population increases reapportionment in the Legislature should take place. It is the meeting of bills, the taking of the inventory, the balancing of accounts.

At present the people of Southern California have a right to complain. They are sore and naturally so. Let us see that justice is done, without bargaining, without haggling. Write to your Senators and Assemblymen and let them know that's how you feel about it.—[San Francisco Call and Post.

THE HAPPY MAN

I saw a river rolling by,
  In wondrous haste, it seemed to be,
And oftentimes I heard it sigh,
  "There is no peace but in the sea."

Life, too's, a river running on,
  And discontent sits on the shore,
Till, like a bubble, all is gone
  Into the endless Evermore.

Ours is the rosebud and the rose,
  A little while they scent the air,
Then it is lost; who knows, who knows,
  Perhaps we'll find it over there.

The winds were fair but yesterday,
  And I was on the shining sea,
But land, the land, was far away,
  And there I still had wished to be.

A fortune fell into my hands,
  And friends enough I quickly met
And I could roam in many lands,
  But there was something, something yet.

Happy the man who often finds
  His little cup filled to the brim,
Who drinks it down and never minds
  Whatever fate has sent to him.

But we must realize that Long Beach has done a rather fine high principled thing not to apply those oil royalties to the payment of their own taxes and let posterity take care of itself.

And if there really are no bad politicians in Long Beach it rather upsets the maxim that "money is the root of all evil."

One can't help feeling that maybe we should have adopted the City Manager plan for Los Angeles. Perhaps we should have if we had $1,500,000 yearly oil royalties to play with.

Inconvenient "Currency"

Economists tell learnedly why money makes the commercial world go round, but a Parisian opera singer of a decade ago learned the lesson in one classic experience. She was determined to tour the world thoroughly and she stopped over in the Society Islands, where her manager contracted to have her sing for one-third the receipts. Her share of "the box office" was three pigs, twenty-two turkeys, forty-four chickens, 5000 coconuts and an uncomputed quantity of bananas and oranges. She couldn't convert her proceeds; the natives had no money. She fed the fruit to the animals and donated her barnyard to the community when she sailed away.

First Edition of Blue and White

PUBLISHING the first daily high school paper in Southern California and the second on the Pacific Coast is the record established by the students of the journalism classes at the Los Angeles High School. Last Monday the first issue of the Blue and White Daily was distributed to the 3000 members of the school. It has four small pages full of interesting information.

The paper is the combined result of the journalism, advertising and printing classes; the first two under the faculty supervision of Miss Katherine Carr, and the latter directed by Orville R. Fisher.

Miss Marjorie Harriman, W'25, is the editor of the paper this semester, and largely through her efforts in behalf of a daily publication, was the change made. The final consent of Principal Housh was gained only on condition that the paper meets with the approval of the student body. Already much enthusiasm has been expressed by the students, according to Miss Harriman, but formal assent will be sought by popular vote before the end of the term in February.

Other members of the editorial staff are as follows: Charles Crall, assistant editor; Ruth Rhea, assistant editor; Earl Mathis, sporting editor; Rudolph Villasenor, assistant sporting editor; Morris Howell, special writer; Harriette Segall, special writer; Marian Smith, organizations; Lola Betty Adams, features; Chester Williams, features.

In the printshop, type is set and the paper printed under the direction of Student Manager, Charles McCormick, and his assistants.

The Blue and White as a weekly, was first published in 1912. Some members of the staff since then who have made their "by line," in the newspaper business and as publicity men are Harry Brand, Ray Davidson, Frances Perrett, Kenneth and Theodore Taylor, Lawrence Weingarten and Maxwell Styles.

PADRE SERRA TO LIVE AGAIN

the mission, the Park Commission has converted two and a half acres into beautiful Memory Park, and the Mission Land Company raised a fund for the molding of the heroic statue.

The commission for the work was given to Mrs. Farnham fifteen months ago. She delved into the life of her subject and laboriously studied the anatomical characteristics of the people of the Island of Majorca, off the coast of Spain, where Father Junipero Serra was born in 1713, and from whence he sailed to Mexico in the days of his youth.

The inhabitants of Majorca, Mrs. Farnham learned, possessed facial features different from those of any other Spaniards. With her research work completed and aided by the few existing prints of Father Junipero, the sculptress plunged zealously into her work. The bronze statue is seven feet and six inches tall, including an extra bronze base five inches in height, and is sixty inches in diameter. The figure of Father Serra stands seven feet in height, and the figure of the child is five feet tall. The sculptured work depicts the famous padre with his staff and garbed in the priestly raiment of the Franciscan era. The robe worn by her model was furnished by John Steven McGroarty, father of California's picturesque Mission Play, and is said to be exact in every detail. Father Junipero, the statue will reveal, has his brawny hand over the shoulder of a serious-minded Indian child, attired only in a loin cloth, and with a mischievous toe poking upward as he proudly walks by the side of his great teacher. It will be ready for shipment to Los Angeles about March 15.

The vision that will soon be witnessed in bronze, as it is unveiled before the old mission, is the same that was witnessed a year ago, January 21, 1924, when the study that Mrs. Farnham chose for her work was presented in tableau to hundreds of visitors at the historic old shrine.

RACIAL ADJUSTMENT CLASS DAY CHANGED

Dr. Raynor's class in the psychology of racial adjustments, just started at metropolitan college, University of Southern California, last week, has been changed to meet on Monday evening at 7 o'clock instead of Saturday morning at 10:30. Enrollment will be open until the meeting of the class on Monday night in the Transportation Building, Seventh and Los Angeles streets.

With special reference to America's southern neighbors and the Far East, this lecture course, which grants university credit, will include discussions on the biological and economic factors of different countries and climates, their influence on the mental differences in races, and the principles and agencies involved in racial adjustments under modern conditions. The course is designed to be of equal interest to Americans and other nationals, and is conducted by Dr. Ernest A. Raynor, formerly president of Union College, Manila, P. I.

WESTERN CANDY MEN ASSEMBLE

First Delegates Expected to Arrive Today

Gambling as Selling Device to be Opposed

Sentiment in Industry to be Emphasized

Primed for what is expected to be the most constructive program ever planned for a confectioners' convention, several score delegates to the tenth annual confab of the Western Confectioners' Association will arrive in Los Angeles today, with the balance due to reach the city tomorrow.

Chas. F. Adams

The conference officially opens on Tuesday in the Biltmore with tomorrow given over to registration and several preliminary meetings.

Already several delegates and officials of the association have arrived. Fred G. Taylor of Ogden, Utah, executive manager of the association, who originated the idea of applying sentiment to the making, marketing and use of confectionery, has been in the city several days, laying ground work for the meet.

To extend hospitality a reception committee headed by Benjamin Myersoff, and consisting of L. J. Christopher, G. S. Woodford, H. F. Hagemann, R. E. McFarland and H. C. Rice, all of Los Angeles, will meet today's incoming trains.

TO TOUR CITY

Immediately upon arrival, the delegates will be escorted to hotels, after which they will be taken for drives around the city and to the homes of local confectioners, Mr. Myerson said.

Charles F. Adams of Boise, Idaho, first vice-president, who has been mentioned as one of the likely contenders for presidential honors, is expected to be welcomed this afternoon, it was said.

Business sessions of the confectioners will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Work of the convention is slated to continue through the lunch hour of each of the three days. While the delegates consume their mid-day repast, they will be addressed by speakers of national note in the candy-making industry.

Among important features to be taken up during the confab will be the elimination of punch boards and gambling devices in selling candies and Mr. Taylor's suggestion for application of sentimental and romantic ideals to the craft. The latter, it is said, if adopted, will place candy-making as an artistic profession. Already, candy makers throughout the country are reported to be leaning toward the thought that they are producing a commodity utilized largely as a gift for expression of sentiment and admiration.

Fred G. Taylor

The confectioners' annual high-jinks will be held Wednesday evening at the Biltmore. A ball in honor of the newly elected president is set for the following evening, with Jackie Coogan, typifying American boyhood, a big factor in candy-consumption, as another guest of honor.

Healthy Mothers Have Healthy Children

"For mothers and prospective mothers the greatest help can be found in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and Golden Medical Discovery," said Mrs. Anna Smith of 3288-8th Ave., Sacramento, Calif., whose picture appears here. "I have use both during expectancy and afterward and know from my own experience their strength-giving and nerve-quieting effect on the prospective mother. Nature is wonderfully helped and the tonic effect is seen in the child. I was able to continue my work through expectancy in comfort. I am glad to be able to recommed such a splendid reliable help to womankind."

of the corporation are as follows: Arthur S. Heineman, president; John H. Gage, vice-president; Marco H. Hellman, treasurer; L. Lasater, secretary; James V. Westervelt, general manager; William H. Sibbald, manager of hotel operation; John Hartwell Alvord, attorney; Louis Cass, Louis M. Cole, John H. Gage, Arthur Heineman, M. V. Van Fleet and J. V. Westervelt, directors.

There is something "new under the sun," the author of Ecclesiastes to the contrary, nothwithstanding. The innovation is the Milestone Motel, which, according to President Heineman, is destined to democratise the highways and eliminate highway robbers. The word "Motel," which has been copyrighted, means motor hotels. However, it means more than that, for it signifies a home-hotel for motorists and their families. The Milestone Motel will mark the end of a perfect day, providing an up-to-date home for the night and all next day, if desired, for a family and the gasoline horse for the sum of $1.50 to $2.

From the automobile, the tired travelers will step right into the hotel-home prepared for them. The manager of the Motel will present the driver with a key which opens both the garage and one of the six charming little homes of the bungalow court. In case of a party of two or three, single and double rooms just as "homey" as the apartments will be provided.

And as "plain" John Smith drives into the garage in his "tin Lizzie," he will have the satisfaction of knowing that no one else will know, as they pass, whether the auto-stable contains a cheap or expensive car. In one of these homes of the highway he will count for just as much as any count or king, and the members of his family will be treated just as royally.

On the other hand, if a man is blessed with a high-priced car he will have the satisfaction of knowing that porters, bell-boys and mechanics will not tax him for his good fortune. For be it known that tips will be taboo at the Milestone Motel.

Let it not be imagined, however, that the antitip order of the corporation means lack of adequate service. The rooms and apartments will be clean and tidy when the visitors arrive and maids and porters will be on hand to attend to the wants of the travelers, according to the management.

"The choice of the bungalow-court type of fire-proof buildings, and their home-like grouping was dictated by business judgment, and meets the approval of various automobile clubs of the Coast," said James Westervelt, general manager of the corporation.

"The rooms and apartments will be cool in summer and, of course, will be heated in the winter. Each apartment will be supplied with hot and cold water, bath and shower, comfortable beds and good furniture and a neatly arranged kitchenette. In short, everything will be provided travelers, for the initial price paid for entrance, excepting food."

To the rear of each Milestone Motel will be the large public kitchen, laundry, drying-yard, garages, and playgrounds. On the highway frontage will be a large public dining-room, the commissary, dancing pavilion, parlor lobby and public lavatory. The officials are also considering the installation of a good library at each Motel along the more than 800 miles of coast line.

Milestone Motels will be built on the outskirts of cities along the mainly-traveled highways, affording to the motorist a hotel home away from hotel crowds and from the bustle and grind of traffic.

RADIO, TOO

Each Motel will accommodate not fewer than 130 adult persons, according to plans. Each apartment, (two to a bungalow) will accommodate from four to five adults, as well as cots for children and a sleeping porch for those who love to listen to the songs of the stars before they fall asleep.

Among other interesting features at each Milestone will be a telephone, a large radio receiving set and an adequate information bureau.

"Careful investigation reveals the fact that while city hotel rates are justified because of the excessive high cost of operation and the investment made, they are beyond the purses of many motor tourists," said Mr. Westervelt. "Thus the motorist finds himself faced with the unpleasant necessity of choosing between the auto camp and the commercial hotel in the heart of the city. It is largely for this class of tourists—which may be termed the great middle class—that the Milestone Motels are being constructed."

"MA" TELLS BLOW TO KLAN

Woman Governor-Elect of Texas Says "Daylight Government" Platform Won Election

BY MIRIAM FERGUSON,
Governor-Elect of Texas and South America

[Copyright, 1925, in United States, Canada and Great Britain and South America by North American Newspaper Alliance and the MacNaught Syndicate. All rights reserved]

Daylight government, opposed to river-bottom justice of tar and feathers, was the chief principle winning victory for me in the gubernatorial election in Texas. My election wrecked the plans of sheeted wizards, dragons and miscellaneous hobgoblins who hoped to place the political power of Texas on the throne of the emperor of the Ku Klux Klan.

Two years ago my husband fought the Klan in his race for the United States Senate, but the people had not been sufficiently awakened at that time to the danger of hooded whipping squads and invisible political machines to realize that a victory for sponsors of daylight government was necessary for the welfare of their State. When the restraint of an injunction from the Supreme Court barred Jim Ferguson's name from the ticket in the Democratic primary in 1924, and I was forced by a long series of injustices to enter my name in place of my husband's in the campaign for Governor, I was determined to oppose the masked order that had brought discord and strife to Texas

TRIAL BY JURY

One of the most sacred principles in the foundation of American government is the right of trial by jury. When mob justice threatened to supersede rights that had been won by the sacrifice and the courage of patriots and when red-blooded sons of a frontier empire of heroes covered their faces and took whips in their hands to administer "justice" to lone victims in wooded pastures at night, the thinking people of Texas realized that this was a question of life or death for the ideals that they had been taught to venerate as the highest standards of free citizenship.

Therefore when I entered the race for the highest office within the gift of Texas people, I made a uniform of gingham aprons, and enlisted in a political struggle between visible and invisible forces with the determination to champion the cause of those who stand for law, tolerance, and the justice of the courts.

PRODUCT OF TURMOIL

The Ku Klux Klan in Texas was given the greatest blow it has ever received when the polls returned a mighty vote of repudiation in November. My majority over the announced candidate of the Klan was a denouncement voicing the sentiment of the masses.

The history of the Klan in Texas is an explanation of the cause of its existence in a State that has always signified fair play and broad-minded men. The Klan swept Texas at a time when unrest and turmoil, following the terrific trial of the World War, had demoralized the stamina of the people. Any panacea for relief from the chaotic turbulence of the times was eagerly sought. Agents of the Klan told dissatisfied men that they brought a remedy for threatened disasters of society. These agents also made the most of each community's chief prejudice, and capitalized race hatred, religious intolerance and political greed, by making magnificent promises of the power that would come with secret conniving and with invisible rule.

CAUSED ENMITY

Religious prejudice is the foundation of the Klan, when all camouflage is torn aside. The Klan, shutting its doors to certain citizens, brought dissolution and hatred from the start to towns that had been harmonious and to neighbors that had been friends.

The Klan gained dominance in Texas in the beginning because of its birth in a time of chaos. Then its agents built up an army of good men and of narrow men alike, by offering the bait most acceptable in each community. In negro-populated districts the fear of race equality as the result of uncontrollable conditions offered a strong incentive to sincere men to join the cause. In other districts the vanguard of the Klan pictured the Pope's alleged encroaching power.

And everywhere the danger of foreign control was stressed. Statistics showing the increase of foreigners within the country were quoted and the immigration doors were made a subject of argument. A heart-breaking war with foreigners was just over; sentiment was strong. That our best citizens are a result of the melting pot that had bended the strength of all nations into a democratic people, was forgotten. Jewish domination of the industrial power of America was pictured. Patriotism and the preservation of the law were made a basis of appeal that caused many officers of the law and good men to enter the Klan.

MENACE SEEN

Thus thousands of men whose intentions and purposes were the best, were inducted into an organization that soon began a program of punishment on a par with medieval inquisitions.

Early in the history of the Klan in Texas, the common people began to realize that Klannishness was based on interests hurtful to their own welfare and they refrained from joining the invisible empire. But there were many who could not see the menace of the Klan for its pretensions. Immediately after its organization in Texas, a series of outrages against guilty and against innocent victims alike, shamed sane people and threatened to give unlicensed power to any man who wore a mask. Unlawful gangs took advantage of this opportunity to gain nefarious purposes behind the sheet, and private hatreds were satisfied in lonely woods with torture. Whipping squads were organized in every Klan, and it became a common practice for Klans to exchange visits in order to administer floggings and tarring-and-feathering to stranger victims for neighboring Klans.

As a candidate for Governor, I promised—that when I reached office I would urge laws limiting the license of hooded mobs. I shall ask the Legislature to pass laws requiring the membership of each Klan to be filed with the County Clerk, and I would have a law that made mask-wearing in public an offense punishable with one year's imprisonment for one person alone, and with two years' imprisonment for three or more people congregated with masks on.

"CRISIS IS PAST"

Although at one time the menace of the Klan, with its silent political machines and its determination to acquire power through politics, seemed to threaten internal dissolution that would have brought shame and distress to this country, I believe that as far as Texas is concerned, the crisis is past and that sincere men with the best interest of State and neighbor at heart, will forsake the mask for daylight rule, court justice and religious tolerance. There are many people who have been in bad company before, whose manhood rescued them from the peril of too much association with unworthiness. That the worst is over in Texas is best demonstrated by the State elections of the last two years. The 1922 election netted some victories for the Klan, but the last election was almost a complete victory for anti-Klansmen.

Liberty of conscience and the right of just trial shall prevail in Texas if the people and the people's woman Governor can tear the mask from the Lone Star, whose creators died that their children might have justice, tolerance and independence from all powers—visible or invisible—that threaten the liberty of free men on free soil.

A university president was complaining about the worship of wealth that has seemed to characterize our time.

SOUTHERNER DENIES TOTS ARE SLAVING

Carolina Editor Refutes Tales of Exploitation of Children in Cotton Mills

A communication received by The Times from David Clark, managing editor of the Southern Textile Bulletin, Charlotte, N. C., says that California newspapers are charging Southern cotton-mill owners with working children as young as 4 years of age. He points out that every State in the South, with the exception of Georgia, in which twenty-one children are working under permits, absolutely prohibits the employment of children under 14 years of age.

That there is an organized campaign of misrepresentation conducted "in behalf of a centralization scheme inspired by Washington bureaucracy, to make the public believe there are thousands of children of tender years, slaving in cotton mills of the South, is another charge of Mr. Clark. If the public did not believe such misrepresentation, he says, there would be no public demand for the child-labor amendment to the Constitution.

"The public believes the enactment of the former Federal child labor law would relieve the situation," he states, "and yet the truth is that southern child-labor laws are now so high that the enactment of either of the former Federal child-labor laws would remove only twenty-one children from all the cotton mills of the South, and the Georgia Legislature will remove them long before any Federal law can be passed."

Steady progress is being made in State laws regulating child labor, Mr. Clark declares, and even this year, Mississippi, North Carolina, Rhode Island, and other States have advanced their standards.

Start the Winning Fight Today

Do you get up in the morning, still tired and worn out? Do you suffer from indigestion and gas on your stomach? Do you ache all over, complain of rheumatism?

What you need to pep you up and win back your lost strength and energy is a natural tonic and builder like Tanlac. Millions of men and women have been helped back to health by this marvelous remedy. Our files are filled with enthusiastic letters of thanks.

By the famous Tanlac formula, Tanlac is a compound of roots, barks and herbs gathered from the four corners of the earth. It has a way of getting right down to the seat of trouble without delay. It revitalizes the blood, rejuvenates the stomach, adds pounds of needed weight and brings the flush of health back to faded cheeks.

Don't you let your system run any farther downhill. You, too, can win the hard fight against the sickness that is dragging you down if you will only enlist Tanlac in the battle. Get a bottle at your druggist's now. Start the winning fight today!

AMATEUR RADIO RULES REVISED

Commerce Department Gives Out New Regulations

Wave-Length Limits, Spark Usage Announced

Quiet Hours to be Observed Daily and Sunday

The Department of Commerce has made public for the benefit of supervisors of radio and owners of amateur radio stations the following revised amateur regulations governing the operation of amateur stations:

Intercommunication: Amateur stations are not permitted to communicate with commercial or government stations unless authorized by the Secretary of Commerce, except in an emergency or for testing purposes. This restriction does not apply to communication with small pleasure craft, such as yachts and motorboats, which may have difficulty in establishing communication with commercial or government stations.

Wave lengths: One hundred and fifty to 200 meters, 75 to 85.7 meters, 37.5 to 42.8 meters, 18.7 to 21.4 meters and 4.69 to 5.35 meters are allocated to amateur stations.

Spark transmitters: Amateur spark transmitters produce considerable interference and consequently are responsible for many complaints. Amateur owners of such transmitters should abandon their use as early as possible and adopt a system producing less interference. Until such change is made they will be permitted in the wave-length band between 170 and 180 meters and should have a decrement not exceeding .1.

Phone and ICW transmitters: Phone and ICW (interrupted continuous wave) transmitters will be permitted in the band from 170 to 180 meters. ICW shall be defined as the type of wave produced by mechanically interrupting one or more of the radio frequency curcuits or the type of wave produced by any transmitting set which produces an equivalent effect.

CW transmitters: CW (continuous wave) transmitters shall be permitted in all of the bands allocated for amateur use.

Coupled circuits: Amateur stations must use circuits loosely coupled to the radiating system, or devices that will produce equivalent effects to minimize key impacts, harmonics and plate supply modulations, except in cases where loops are used as radiators. Conductive coupling, even though loose, will not be permitted.

Power supply: No restrictions will be imposed relative to the character of power supply, provided the emitted wave is sharply defined.

Quiet hours: Amateur stations, when using wave lengths between 150 and 200 meters, are required to observe a silent period from 8 to 10:30 p.m. daily, standard time, and on Sundays while church services are being broadcast. Such stations, when using wave lengths below 85 meters and having a pure continuous wave, or where a full wave rectification is employed, are not required to observe a silent period provided no interference is caused by other services.

CROSLEY
Better-Cost Less
Radio Products

¶ Less than four years ago, when Radio Broadcasting was just beginning, when a few amateurs were listening to phonograph record concerts over the air, when apparatus to receive such music was either home-made or the limited factory-made equipment was both inefficient and costly—

¶ The vision came to a young man of the Middle West that Radio Broadcasting would develop into one of the most powerful factors of life itself; that it presented a greater medium for entertainment, education and culture than had ever been dreamed of before; that radio receiving sets could be so simplified and perfected as to bring this wonderful new thing better and at a great deal lower cost into any and every home in the land.

¶ This man, Powel Crosley, Jr., started then a radio manufacturing business, the growth of which has become one of the business romances of the age.

¶ Today almost one out of every five factory-made radio receivers bears the name CROSLEY.

¶ The production of Crosley made Radios has reached almost 5000 per day; probably three times as many as made by any other company.

¶ The very element of simplicity necessary in quantity production has developed a degree of efficiency found in no other equipment.

¶ Owners of Crosley Radios marvel at their ability to outperform more costly sets, and the demand for them grows by leaps and bounds.

¶ With increased production periodically came reductions in prices.

¶ Recently the justly famous Crosley Trirdyn, incorporating a unique combination of radio frequency amplification with Armstrong Regeneration making three tubes do the work of five or six, the most popular receiver in the world selling at its price or more, was reduced from $71.50 to $55.00 and again the demand increased tremendously.

¶ The Crosley line of receivers includes a one tube set that brings in coast to coast and foreign stations. It sells for $15.95.

¶ The two tube Crosley 51 Radio sells for $20.35.

¶ The three tube Model 52 is only $33.00.

¶ Every Crosley owner is a booster. He feels that his Crosley investment represents the utmost in radio value. He is therefore the best form of Crosley advertising.

¶ Crosley Radios are made under Armstrong U. S. Patent 1,113,149.

¶ Some dealers would prefer to sell higher priced sets—they are more profitable—but if you insist they can sell you Crosley Radios.

EXPORTS OF RADIO SETS INCREASING

Value of Shipments for Past Year Expected to Total Six Millions

Exports of radio apparatus from the United States have increased almost $200,000 a month recently, and if the December exports increase in proportion, the total exports for the year will reach a value of $6,000,000. Last year the exports totaled $3,443,112. So far, for eleven months, the total is $4,950,746, $500,000 more. a half more.

Department of Commerce experts believe that this year's radio and wireless exports will be practically twice those of the year 1923. At the end of the seven months' period 1924, radio exports were valued at $2,123,832, against $1,894,823 during the same period last year. During the past four months, however, these exports totaled $2,826,914, increasing as follows: August, $541,238; September, $567,434; October, $769,249, and November, a record month, $948,993.

In weight, the November exports amounted to 593,686 pounds, compared with 507,193 pounds for October, and 338,919 pounds for September.

All electrical exports from the United States in 1924, will exceed those of 1923 in value by $12,000,000, the Department of Commerce states. With the increasing demand for radio apparatus abroad, due chiefly to the dissemination of radio knowledge, the increasing tendency in other countries to remove restrictions on imports, and the greater freedom granted to broadcasters overseas, radio apparatus exports of the United States have increased materially.

Canary Chatter

On Monday evening in the ballroom of the Biltmore, there is to be a recital for the purpose of raising funds to create a school pavilion for the children of the Orthopedic Hospital. Queen Titania of KHJ has been invited to act as co-hostess with Pauline Frederick and other stars at this important function. She is the only child to whom an invitation has been extended. Doubtless all the crippled children have enjoyed her fairy voice many times over the air. Such is the fame of radio.

Information just received from the Hawaiian Islands indicates the Honolulu Advertiser, known by the call letters KGU, has increased its capacity to 500 watts. If this station succeeds in broadcasting its climate, listeners may be at loss to determine their preference of watering-places.

Uncle Remus's versatility has apparently not suffered as the result of his recent accident. In fact his injured ankle seems to have stimulated his powers of creation. Last night he appeared with a new song, both the words and music being his own, entitled, "Oh, Say, Wouldn't it be a Dream?"

The stories and legends of the Indians of the Southwest, which began Friday night, are to have a place on the radio broadcasting program of The Times studio on every Friday evening.

Realizing the vast storehouse of delightful myths and the romance and legends of the several tribes inhabiting California, New Mexico and Arizona, whose reservations the Santa Fe Railroad traverse, it was decided by the officials to bring some of the interesting features more prominently before the public, and the medium of the radio was chosen to help bring about accomplishment.

The most romantic figure of today on the American continent is the Indian, particularly is this true of the Southwest. Living amidst the ruins of still more ancient people, his origin is a mystery. The mythology of the tribes contains a wealth of beautiful imagery, striking in its originality, and strongly reflecting the nature-world of this great territory.

Miss Gladys De Witt, a talented reader, and a Santa Fe girl, will interpret the stories and relate them to the vast radio audience of The Times. It is the plan to add several exceptionally good features to the Santa Fe program as the interest grows, including some of the best musical numbers obtainable from any source.

The New Salesman

The new salesman, although very enthusiastic, could not be described as altogether convincing.

"This," he said, "is one of the finest blankets produced today. In material and in construction it is far above anything at present on the market. For the price there is nothing to touch it."

"What is the price?" his customer inquired.

"Just a minute and I will inquire," was the reply.—[Exchange.

SAXOPHONE BAND PLEASES

KHJ Program Includes Original March by One of the Players; Edward Murphey on Program

BY CLAIRE FORBES CRANE

The station of KHJ and our entire community, were highly complimented last evening by our new radio patron, the Merchant Tailors' Association. As many of us know this association is a national organization comprising many of the finest tailoring establishments in the country. At present the Merchant Tailors' Association contends that Los Angeles is not only a great art center but the hub of fashion as well.

Of course, we feel flattered and even though our sister cities might argue the point, this new Godmother of ours has given us an ideal to live up to. All hail to the "Tailor Made Man!"

Kathryne Thompson and her Southern California saxophone band, Leonore Killian, contralto, and a one-act play presenting Ruth Braislin and Edward Murphey were on the program.

KATHRYNE THOMPSON

The fame of Kathryne Thompson and her saxophone band is as boundless as the sea. On the occasion of the band's last appearance atat KHJ it received over 150 congratulatory telegrams. So great is the carrying power of the saxophone that during the broadcasting one number was picked up distinctly in Paris, France. Miss Thompson is to be congratulated upon having formed an organization which plays like one entity, and last night it received more of an ovation than ever.

Young composers are always encouraged to give of their best efforts at KHJ. Last evening we heard one of the finest marches that has been brought to us in many a month. It was called "The Dawn of Peace," and was written by one of the members of the band, Lewis J. D'Ippolito. The rhythm of a march is always fascinating and Mr. D'Ippolito has chosen to write his in the grand style of Verdi's march from "Aida." The melody is good and the counterpoint unusually interesting.

Lillian Althouse, who is concert mistress of Kathryne Thompson's Southern California saxophone band, played a solo composed by herself entitled "Memories." Both her interpretation and the composition itself were thoroughly enjoyed.

Lenore Killian's warm and sympathetic contralto voice, was heard to advantage in a group of semi-classical ballads. By special request, accompanied by Kathryne Thompson, Miss Killian sang "Waiting for You," one of the most popular of versatile Kathryne Thompson's songs.

Our radio playwright, Edward Murphey, is forever inventing clever stunts for his radio family to enjoy. Last evening Mr. Murphey created a sketch which was played by Ruth Braislin and himself and which must have struck home to many listeners-in. It was about two young people who never made good because their clothes were always shabby. Finally the young wife joyously invested in some tailor-made garments the chic of which swept all before them! At the conclusion Edward Murphey asked radioland to write a sequel to this little idea. What were the benefits derived from realizing that you were well dressed. There is a wonderful field for imagination here, and the Merchant Tailors' Association offers five prizes one of $15, another of $10 and three of $5 for the best 100 to 200-word answer to the problem. Address your answers to Merchant Tailors, care of KHJ, and the judging will be done by a competent committee.

HI MOULTON'S ORCHESTRA

At noontime Hi Moulton and his orchestra visited us. I wish that some of our family might watch Hi Moulton and his men play. Each one is on the alert and no effect which might add to the fineness of their broadcasting, is too small for them to remember. More power to you boys!

Saturday afternoon brought us Charlie Wellman and his Saturday Afternoon Frolic presented through the courtesy of the Pacific States Electric Company. I am through prophesying "cakeless frolics." There is only one thing to be thankful for since I saw the pumpkin pie, cakes and candy of last Saturday afternoon, and that is that I am not on the frolic to acquire some of the added avoirdupois which is being acquired by all who partake.

The children's program was graced by pretty little Henrietta Poland, 5-year-old screen juvenile, a pupil of Carter Weaver, and George Ezra Crane, Jr., who has been playing in "Peter Pan." Quaint Jane Adele Riley sat on Uncle John's knee and gave several attractive poems with a winsomeness all her own. The musical portion of the hour was contributed by

Music for the critical

Time was when people were so impressed with the wonder of radio, and so entertained by the fun that came over, that they actually didn't mind the bluster of a noisy horn. But most of us aren't like that now. We want music that is music—we want speech that is really human speech—unclouded by horn sounds. And we can have it now—with a Radiola Loudspeaker.

You cannot blame every extraneous sound on the loudspeaker. But if your set is working perfectly, all it needs, to give you clear, faithful, undistorted reproduction, is a Radiola Loudspeaker. Hear one today, and if you really want to judge the difference, ask to hear it in competition with others.

On conclusion of this concert, the stage will be occupied by the Piggly Wiggly Girls and Carol Atherton, soprano. Those who missed the opportunity to hear Yankee, the famous canary bird, sing the entire melody of "Yankee Doodle" will be given another chance to hear this remarkable bird display its vocal powers. Mrs. Ina O'Brien, its owner, will have it appear that evening and exhibit its unique talent.

Thursday will be opened by the Valvoline Trio and Thomas L. Johnson, baritone. The afternoon program will present Joseph Heindl, 'cellist; Grace Curry, harpist and George Hood, reader, the latter two appearing on all of the remaining Pacific States Electric programs for the week. At 7:30 Harold Swartz will deliver his weekly lecture on art, and will be followed by an address on "Care of the Body" by Dr. Philip M. Lovell. The evening will be devoted to a regular home-like studio program.

Friday night will bring one of the most exquisite surprises it has been KHJ's pleasure to broadcast. Through the generosity of the Martin Music Company, a long array of Radioland's favorites will appear before the microphone and contribute to making this evening one of the outstanding events of the year, in fact nothing like it has ever been attempted before; we would suggest that you assist in making the audience as near 100 per cent as possible. Aside from its artistry, the concert bears a sentimental value that will not be revealed until the night of its performance.

PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA

Saturday night will be the night of nights. It surpasses anything heretofore presented to Radioland and undoubtedly will remain an enduring memory to those fortunate enough to partake of its beauties. The Los Angeles Soap Company, wishing to advance the interests of art in Southern California, will present the entire Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra under the direction of Walter Henry Rothwell. The concert will be given in the auditorium of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Eighth and Hope streets, and will be broadcast by line telephony through KHJ. No admission fee will be charged, the doors will be thrown open to the public at 6:30 p.m. and will be closed five minutes before the opening of the concert, which will be 8 p.m. Considered one of the four leading organizations of the world, the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra will play to an audience which no auditorium in the world could seat; and our gratitude goes out to the Los Angeles Soap Company for its willingness to bring this splendid music to thousands, whom space and other circumstances would deny this opportunity.

The position of respect which KHJ occupies in other worlds outside of Radioland is eloquently attested to in the announcement that Silverwood's, one of our city's most substantial institutions, have agreed to give two programs a month at KHJ for a period of six months. Strict adherence to ideals invariably brings its reward.

NEW BRITISH STATION DESIGNED FOR POWER

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The British Broadcasting Company's new high-powered station now under construction at Daventry will have many interesting features, designed to give the maximum power output, says the Wireless World and Radio Review.

Situated in the open country, the site chosen for the new station is 800 feet above the sea level and is nearly 400 feet higher than the surrounding country. A "T" aerial is being used, two towers being set at heights of 500 and 500 feet, respectively. The transmitter is situated directly in the center. In designing the antennae care has been taken to make the natural wave length as near as possible to 1600 meters, the station retaining the same wave length as 5-XX. Although the power rating will be twenty-five kilowatts, the actual consumption of the station probably will reach 100 kilowatts. A novel earth system is being employed, consisting of a circular metal plate laid underground with a radius of 100 feet.

FOURTH "R" ADDED IN MODERN CURRICULUM

The simple curriculum of old-time schooling composed of the "three R's" does not suffice today. "Readin', writin' and 'rithmetic" no longer cover the basic educational requirements of the modern youth, a fourth "R," standing for radio, has been added. High schools, colleges and even broadcasting stations include courses in radio as a major subject. Through radio broadcasting a new means of disseminating education in many forms is now used practically, and if a tabulation of students actually attending classes at institutions of learning was made today and compared with a census of the students gaining knowledge from the air, so to speak, it is believed those staying at home and listening in nightly to some eighty stations putting out radio education, would outnumber the former old-style students.

S.O.S. CALLS MUST HAVE QUIET ETHER

Stations Should Tell Fans Why They Are Signing Off Before Pulling Switch

When an S.O.S. call is heard by any commercial, amateur or private broadcasting station, the law provides that all stations give it priority and cease sending. While many broadcasting stations are quite consistent in complying with this regulation, Department of Commerce officials state that all do not comply. Frequently interference is noted, when a ship at sea is calling for aid and other ships and shore stations are trying to communicate with her, relaying messages and locating ships in the neighborhood of the disabled vessel.

Of course, the distress call goes out on 600 meters, which should not interfere with any but the broadcasters using wave lengths well above 400 meters, but all must cease transmitting until the Navy announces that all is well. It is possible that the department may permit broadcasters on the lower wave lengths to continue broadcasting during such silent periods, if they do not interfere with 600 meters, but as yet it has not been done.

When broadcast announcers are forced to sign off due to distress calls, it is permissible, departmental radio officials point out, for them to announce the cause briefly so fans will know why the broadcasts cease. The simple announcement "Ship in distress. Signing off temporarily. Station WRC," is cited as a model.

Some stations do this, but others stop so abruptly that fans are at a loss to know what is the matter; this is what happens when the operator on watch hears the distress call, and pulls the main switch. It is believed that if he told the announcer to sign off as suggested above, it would be a benefit to listeners, who often struggle for a half hour or so to get the station back, wonder what is wrong with their sets, and when radiating sets are used they fill the air with unnecessary squawks and whistles.

Radio is Benefit to Attaches in South America

Many governmental officials stationed in South America keep in touch with home affairs by listening-in on their radio sets, according to A. E. Cook, aide to Secretary "Jim" Davis of the Department of Labor. Mr. Cook, who accompanied Secretary Davis on his recent trip to South America, says that American attaches listen in almost daily to ten or twelve American stations. This is especially true in Santiago and Valparaiso, Chile, and also in certain places in Peru. These Americans report that they get stations in Texas, New York, and even Seattle, Wash., frequently, and Pittsburg every day, he says.

Radio is spreading among the South American natives rapidly, and even in the mountainous districts great interest is manifest. Some of the mountaineers believe the radio officers on the ships which touch at their ports are wireless wizards. They consequently seek advice and spare parts whenever a ship comes in. These enthused natives will buy anything, according to the radio operators, and even have been known to bargain for the ship's transmitter and receiver. One insisted on buying some faulty tube sockets and a "dead" B battery.

French Expert Hears Stations in United States

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PARIS, Jan. 17.—Leon Deloy, noted French amateur radio experimenter, reporting on his recent investigation of conditions between France and the United States, declares:

"We have made several attempts to receive American transmission on a loop thirty meters by ten and found reception is a trifle weaker than on an aerial. The reception of American messages on waves of seventy-five and eighty meters and of KDKA station was experimentally good. On December 11, with one high-frequency valve and one low-frequency valve, we heard Pittsburg signals and American amateurs calling so loudly they could be heard all over the house."

On January 8 the Dutch at Hilversum began work with high-powered apparatus, broadcasting concerts by famous artists and orchestras daily on a wave-length of 1050 meters, employing the call sign HDO.

TERM "METERS" ABOLISHED

Kilocycles Will be Radio Designation Under New Department of Commerce Regulations

With the matinee program at 2:30 on Thursday afternoon, KHJ came on the air utilizing its new assignment of 742 kilocycles, designating a 404.1-meter wave length. Heretofore KHJ has been transmitting on a wave length of 395 meters, or a corresponding frequency of 760 kilocycles. For the purpose of obtaining a more accurate calculation dealing with fractions, the Department of Commerce of the United States government has expressed its desire that reference to radio waves be expressed in kilocycles, replacing the familiar term, meter wave length.

The advantages of this practice have been familiar to radio engineers for some time, and it is now to be universally adopted replacing the wave length in meters.

As a matter of fact, wave length is a somewhat artificial conception in the handling of radio apparatus, and is one of the difficult things for the beginner to understand. The frequency of the radio wave is the same as the frequency of the alternating current which flows in the radio transmitter, or receiving set.

As often happens in technical matters, the idea of "kilocycles" is simpler than the forbidding aspect which the word suggests. "Kilo" means a thousand, and "cycle" means one complete alternation. The number of kilocycles indicates the number of thousands of times that the rapidly alternating current repeats its flow in either direction in the antenna during a period of one second. The smaller the wave length in meters, the larger is the frequency in kilocycles.

REASON FOR CHANGE

The reason that kilocycles are coming into use and displacing meters is that the necessary separation of the frequency of transmitting stations to prevent interference is the same, no matter what the frequency may be. This necessary separation is variable and quite misleading when expressed in meters. Thus the number of radio stations transmitting simultaneously without interference can be correctly judged from the kilocycles but not from the meters.

For example, the amateurs will, in the future, work in a band of wave lengths from 150 to 200 meters, but this is a frequency band from 2000 to 1500 kilocycles. This is an enormously wider band when considered from the viewpoint of kilocycles than, for example, the band having the same width in meters from 1000 to 1050 meters, which is 300 to 286 kilocycles. While it is possible to carry on fifty simultaneous radio telephone communications between 150 and 200 meters, only one could be carried on between 1000 and 1050 meters.

TO FIND KILOCYCLES

In accordance with the recommendations of the second national radio conference, the Department of Commerce and other government departments will hereafter follow the practice of specifying in even values of kilocycles, rather than meters. The conference recommended the practice of expressing wave frequency in kilocycles per second with wave length in meters in parenthesis thereafter. The relation between the two is very simple. To obtain kilocycles, divide 300,000 by the number of meters; to obtain meters, divide 300,000 by the number of kilocycles. For example, 100 meters equal approximately 3000 kilocycles; 300 meters equal 1000 kilocycles, 1000 meters equal 300 kilocycles, 3000 meters equal 100 kilocycles.

The following wave-length allocations to Class B stations in the Sixth District, just received from the Bureau of Navigation, are effective immediately.

Set's Radiation Nuisance Can be Easily Avoided

Despite educational efforts, ignorance and indifference continue to play large parts in radiation nuisances. Not that anyone who has read up even in a small way doesn't understand the evil and, vaguely, the cause; but that they fail or refuse to recognize the fact that they themselves often are the means of ruining their neighbors' enjoyment—and their own.

A set that is radiating never can be delivering anything approaching sweet musical notes or clear speech. At best, there is a mushiness which thickens speech and garbles tones. If in no other way a receiver owner can tell when his tube is in oscillation he surely can in this way. By turning down the filament and adjusting the plate circuit control he will clear up his reception. The point where it is clearest is the proper operating point for the cathode. Bringing in outside stations will be a bit more difficult, perhaps, but there will be greater satisfaction all around.

Where signals must be found by a beat note the tube filament should be lowered to the proper operating point the moment the station's carrier has been located and tuned in without the beat note. If the beat note can be picked up then the station can be also without radiation.

Try that out, if you have been in the habit of tuning in beat notes.

GRAND OPERA STAR ONCE REJECTED BY LOCAL GLEE CLUB

BY EDWARD SEAY
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—A young Los Angeles man further enhanced the fame of the Golden West by giving the staid Metropolitan Opera Company an unprecedented thrill on the night of the 2nd inst. On that occasion Lawrence Tibbett, erstwhile Angeleno, made the fashionable four hundred in the "golden horseshoe" forget their discussion of the cross-word puzzle and the other important chatter that punctuates the usual opera. Singing the role of Ford in Verdi's "Falstaff" before the most brilliant audience since the opening night of the opera season Mr. Tibbett startled and won the critical audience with his marvelous baritone voice.

With Antonio Scotti, the "Falstaff" of the performance, Tibbett took a curtain call before dashing off to his dressing-room to repair his make-up for the next scene. The famous Scotti took several curtain calls, and still the uproarious applause rose in higher gusts. Dignified matrons, trying to keep their diamond tiaras in place, leaned over their box rails and called the name of Tibbett to the conductor. A messenger was dispatched backstage by Gatti-Casazza, the high priest of the Metropolitan, however, and the slender, rather tall and blond youth stepped between the curtains, and beamed his thanks to the cheering throng.

PRAISE FROM THE PRESS

The newspapers were unanimous the next morning in their praise of the hitherto unknown singer. The New York Times gave an account of the affair on the front page, and the other dailies were equally generous with their space and praise. Noting that the singer was from Los Angeles, I telephoned his apartment, and made an engagement to see him Monday morning. Judging from the Sunday news stories I expected to find him in a hall bedroom with his wife busy frying bacon over a gas jet.

Finding the address to be the exclusive Club Des Artistes at 1 West Sixty-seventh street, I at first thought I must have secured the wrong address, but the door man assured me that the newly arrived singer indeed lived there. A neat colored maid admitted me to a charming studio apartment of large proportions, and Mrs. Tibbett stepped forward to present me to her husband. Still flushed and slightly embarrassed by the furore he had created, Mr. Tibbett consented to talk to me about his days in the West.

"Those were happy days," he said, "full of the joy one gets from living in the sunshine near the sea. I went to school with little thought of singing until I entered Manual Arts High School on South Vermont avenue. I decided I would like to be in the school glee club, and accordingly made a tryout with a number of other boys. My operatic career nearly ended there, because I was not admitted to the club. I tried to prepare myself seriously for the profession of a doctor as my parents wished, but the music in me still craved an outlet, so I again tried for the glee club the next year, and this time was more successful. I suppose that was the start of my career."

By 1917 Mr. Tibbett had appeared in some of the Los Angeles Community Theater plays, and had sung in a number of amateur concerts when he enlisted in the Navy, and became an instructor in seamanship on the U.S.S. Iris.

HIS MARRIAGE

In 1919, with the war a memory, he was free to continue his study of music. With some money that had been saved for university courses Tibbett became a married man. He and Miss Grace Mackay Smith had met at the college preparatory department of the Manual Arts High School and both felt that their love was real. Tyrone Power was just then organizing a Shakespearean stock company to play the West Coast, and Tibbett was successful in getting a job. During the short engagement he played Mercutio in "Romeo and Juliet" and Iago in "Othello."

This brief try at professional work made him sigh for an opportunity to try his wings in New York City, but it took some time for the idea to incorporate itself into action. He sang in church choirs, and did other odd jobs of singing to keep the larder filled.

Mr. Tibbett finally was able to come to New York in the fall of 1922. He obtained a church position in New Rochelle, and took up his study of voice with Frank La Forge. By this time twin sons, Richard and Lawrence, Jr., had come, and the young father had to scramble even more earnestly for a livelihood. His instructor arranged for an audition at the Metropolitan Operahouse in the spring of 1923 before Signor Gatti-Casazza, and the result was highly satisfactory, although the singer confessed that at the time he was shaken with fright. An empty house, save for only four or five eminent and critical judges was not reassuring to an embryo baritone.

Last season Mr. Tibbett sang in thirty-five performances. Eight of these were in the role of Valentine in "Faust," four as Silvio in "Pagliacci" and three as the herald in "Lohengrin." Until last Friday night he had not sung any outstanding role, however, and was resigned to a long period of plodding before reaching the heights he has now topped. Several weeks ago he was given the role of Ford in "Falstaff," and although he did not know any Italian, in which language the opera is sung, he set about perfecting himself in the part.

In answer to my query as to future plans, Mr. Tibbett shrugged and smiled. He would like to return West and sing in the Hollywood Bowl in concert, having already had that pleasure when Conductor Oberhoffer had him sing with the symphony orchestra two summers ago.

PEOPLE YOU KNOW

Platt I. Tudor, the Fount of Beautiful Thoughts

BY LEE SHIPPEY

No man ever uttered more beautiful thoughts than does Platt I. Tudor. Every sentiment he expresses—vocally, at least—is pure and noble. Indeed, every one has stood the test of time.

Naturally, his conversation is extremely inspiring to the young. It never fails to inspire them with earnest wishes—to be elsewhere. They find him as refreshing as an August day in Omaha.

When Platt learned that Simeon Simp has passed on, leaving a widow, considerable property and $20,000 life insurance, the desire to comfort the widow made both his eyes and his palms moist. He dripped saccharine sympathy like a sugar maple.

"My dear lady," he said, both his hands, being clammy, naturally closing on one of hers like a clam, "forgive my seeming intrusion. You do not know me, but I honored Mr. Simp highly. I cannot refrain from expressing my heartfelt sympathy and assuring you of my loyal friendship. Remember you still have friends. And what is so rare as a true friend? No man is useless while he can be a friend. To be a true friend is the highest aim of my life, friendship and service. It is better to serve than to be served. It is more blessed to give than to receive."

"You are exceedingly kind, Mr. Tudor. What may I do for you?"

"Ah, dear lady, it is I who am here to ask that question of you. How may I be privileged to serve you? Service is the highest aim of my life. Some strive for gold, but money isn't everything. I only strive to serve."

"Indeed! What is your business, Mr. Tudor?"

"One I can most heartily recommend to anyone with idle money to invest, ma'am. A business inspired by the spirit of helpfulness and brotherhood, which yet yields a handsome profit with no risk. I help many of my fellow-men over their rough places and temporary difficulties. Whatever my faults, Mrs. Simp, I am one who truly loves his fellow-men."

"I see. You manage some charitable institution."

"Well—aw—summed up, it amounts to making very short-time loans in strict confidence to absolutely gilt-edged people. I manage to turn over my capital eight times a year and make close to 100 per cent annually."

"But isn't that—er—illegal?"

"My dear lady, to the pure all things are pure. I assure you it is strictly legitimate. We have a clever way of making everything legal. Then we make a neat additional profit out of association dues and attorneys' fees. It works out so that when we lend a fellow $100 we really lend him only $85, the rest being used up in fees, and get his note for $120 in sixty days. That's $35 interest on $85 in one-sixth of a year. Not bad, eh?"

"Of course, dear ma'am! Money isn't everything. Friendship is the most beautiful thing in the world. In this case, one of the pleasantest. Truly, virtue is its own reward. I would rather have the approval of my own conscience than the crown of an emperor. I will find my happiness in serving you unselfishly."

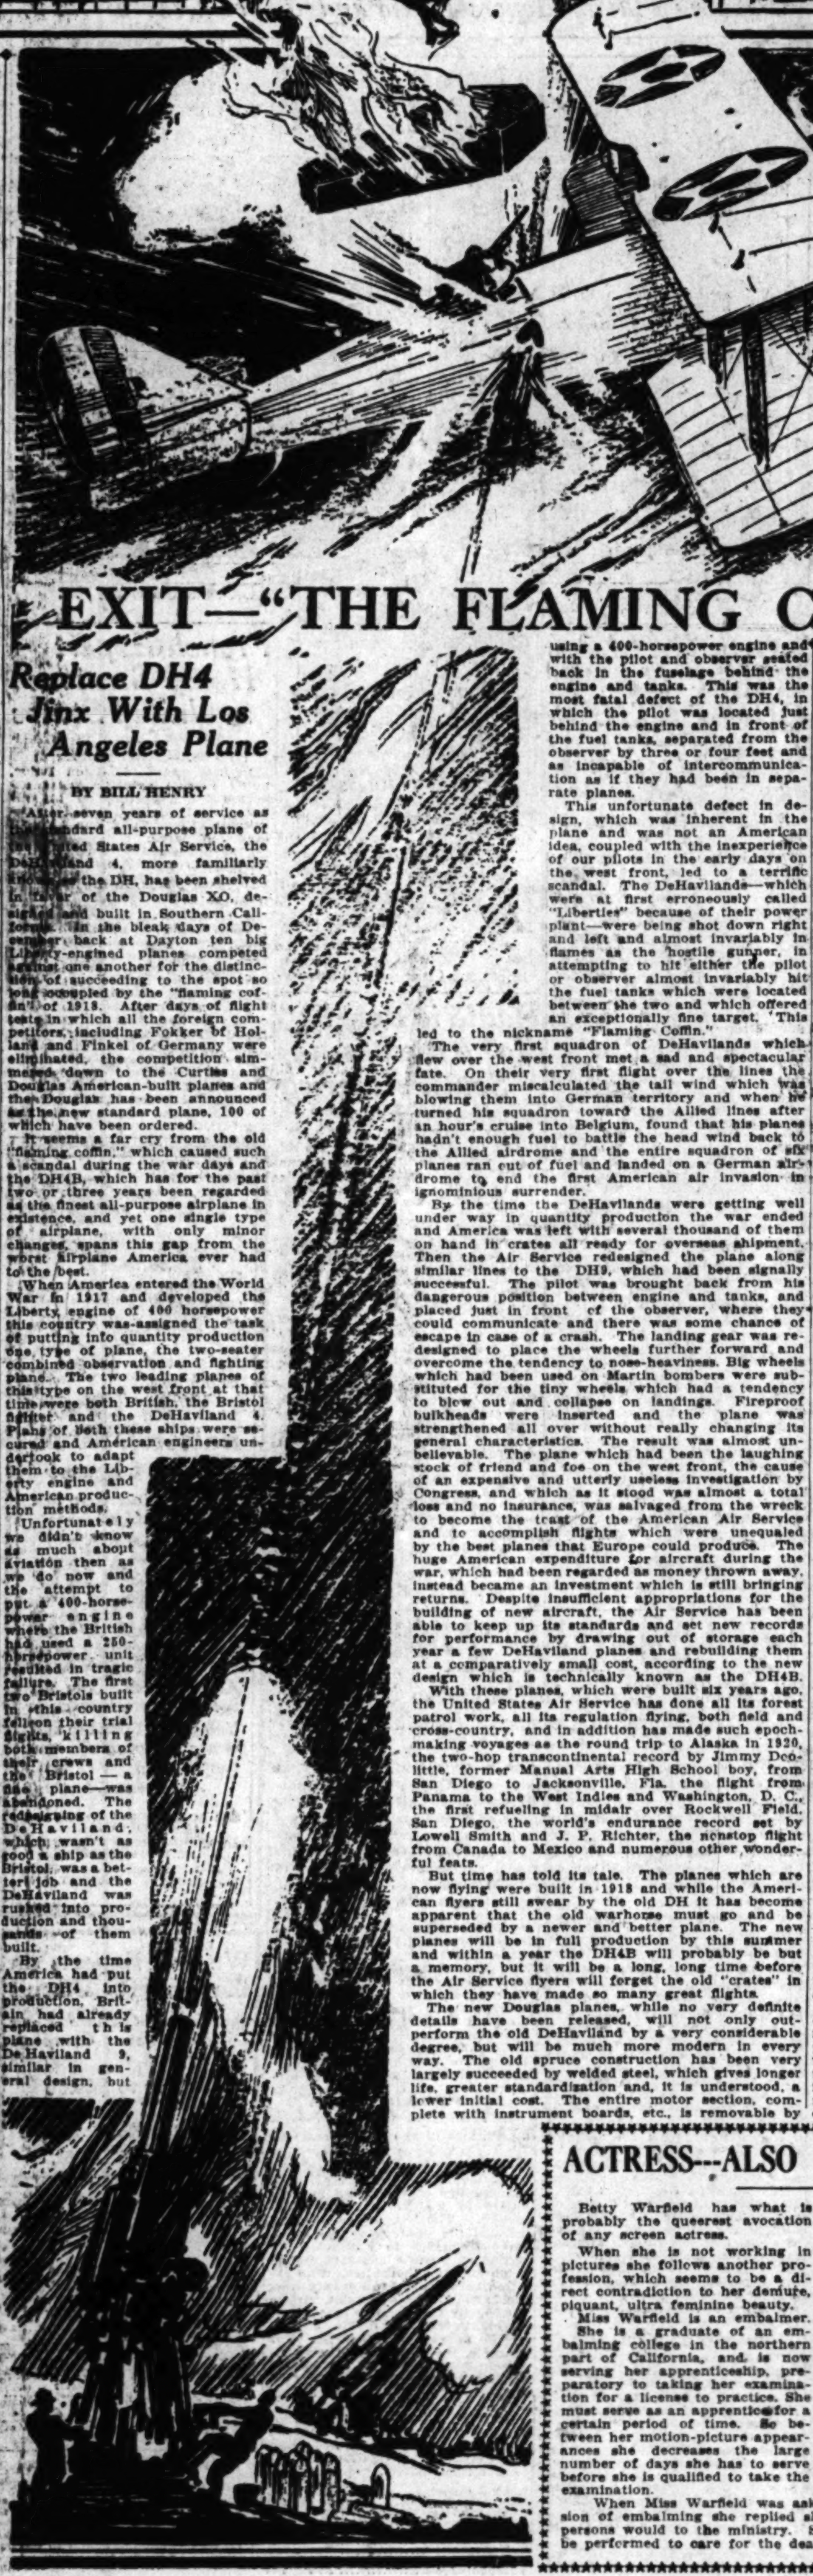
Mrs. Simp made a few more notes and asked time to think it over. In the next few weeks the unselfish man spared her a great deal of his valuable time. Throughout his visits she kept jotting things in her notebook. At first he thought she was computing interest, but when he learned she was putting down the beautiful things he said his bosom swelled with honest pride. His stream of noble sentiments changed from Tennyson's brook to Niagara's rapids after that, and grew more and more personal—so that finally "Mealy" said, teasingly:

"Mr. Tudor, I begin to suspect you are in love."

"I cannot deny it," he confessed, one hand on his heart. "I am too honest to dissemble. My natural sincerity makes my feelings apparent. Whatever my faults I am an honest man."

"Yes," she continued, "from my notes I see that you are convinced you are an honest man—and that an honest man is the noblest work of God; that you believe it is only noble to be good—and cannot help admitting you're one of the best; that you hold kind hearts dearer than coronets—and your life aim is to be kind; that you insist money isn't everything—but consistently relieve your clients of all you can; and that, above all, you have the approval of your own conscience. It's plain to see you're in love, and equally easy to see with whom. You are the most single-hearted man alive. Your one and only love is Platt I. Tudor. Please close my front door gently from the outside—and if you come cooing around here any more I'll sic my police dog on you.

Which shows that one cannot always tell—not even when they're nicknamed "Mealy."



EXIT—"THE FLAMING COFFIN"

Replace DH4 Jinx With Los Angeles Plane

BY BILL HENRY

After seven years of service as the standard all-purpose plane of the United States Air Service, the DeHaviland 4, more familiarly known as the DH, has been shelved in favor of the Douglas XO, designed and built in Southern California. In the bleak days of December back at Dayton ten big Liberty-engined planes competed against one another for the distinction of succeeding to the spot so long occupied by the "flaming coffin" of 1918. After days of flight tests in which all the foreign competitors, including Fokker of Holland and Finkel of Germany were eliminated, the competition simmered down to the Curtiss and Douglas American-built planes and the Douglas has been announced as the new standard plane, 100 of which have been ordered.

It seems a far cry from the old "flaming coffin," which caused such a scandal during the war days and the DH4B, which has for the past two or three years been regarded as the finest all-purpose airplane in existence, and yet one single type of airplane, with only minor changes, spans this gap from the worst airplane America ever had to the best.

When America entered the World War in 1917 and developed the Liberty engine of 400 horsepower this country was assigned the task of putting into quantity production one type of plane, the two-seater combined observation and fighting plane. The two leading planes of this type on the west front at that time were both British, the Bristol fighter and the DeHaviland 4. Plans of both these ships were secured and American engineers undertook to adapt them to the Liberty engine and American production methods.

Unfortunately we didn't know as much about aviation then as we do now and the attempt to put a 400-horsepower engine where the British had used a 250-horsepower unit resulted in tragic failure. The first two Bristols built in this country fell on their trial flights, killing both members of their crews and the Bristol—a fine plane—was abandoned. The redesigning of the DeHaviland, which wasn't as good a ship as the Bristol, was a better job and the DeHaviland was rushed into production and thousands of them built.

By the time America had put the DH4 into production, Britain had already replaced this plane with the DeHaviland 9, similar in general design, but using a 400-horsepower engine and with the pilot and observer seated back in the fuselage behind the engine and tanks. This was the most fatal defect of the DH4, in which the pilot was located just behind the engine and in front of the fuel tanks, separated from the observer by three or four feet and as incapable of intercommunication as if they had been in separate planes.

This unfortunate defect in design, which was inherent in the plane and was not an American idea, coupled with the inexperience of our pilots in the early days on the west front, led to a terrific scandal. The DeHavilands—which were at first erroneously called "Liberties" because of their power plant—were being shot down right and left and almost invariably in flames as the hostile gunner, in attempting to hit either the pilot or observer almost invariably hit the fuel tanks which were located between the two and which offered an exceptionally fine target. This led to the nickname "Flaming Coffin."

The very first squadron of DeHavilands which flew over the west front met a sad and spectacular fate. On their very first flight over the lines the commander miscalculated the tail wind which was blowing them into German territory and when he turned his squadron toward the Allied lines after an hour's cruise into Belgium, found that his planes hadn't enough fuel to battle the head wind back to the Allied airdrome and the entire squadron of six planes ran out of fuel and landed on a German airdrome to end the first American air invasion in ignominious surrender.

By the time the DeHavilands were getting well under way in quantity production the war ended and America was left with several thousand of them on hand in crates all ready for overseas shipment. Then the Air Service redesigned the plane along similar lines to the DH9, which had been signally successful. The pilot was brought back from his dangerous position between engine and tanks, and placed just in front of the observer, where they could communicate and there was some chance of escape in case of a crash. The landing gear was redesigned to place the wheels further forward and overcome the tendency to nose-heaviness. Big wheels which had been used on Martin bombers were substituted for the tiny wheels which had a tendency to blow out and collapse on landings. Fireproof bulkheads were inserted and the plane was strengthened all over without really changing its general characteristics. The result was almost unbelievable. The plane which had been the laughing stock of friend and foe on the west front, the cause of an expensive and utterly useless investigation by Congress, and which as it stood was almost a total loss and no insurance, was salvaged from the wreck to become the toast of the American Air Service and to accomplish flights which were unequaled by the best planes that Europe could produce. The huge American expenditure for aircraft during the war, which had been regarded as money thrown away, instead became an investment which is still bringing returns. Despite insufficient appropriations for the building of new aircraft, the Air Service has been able to keep up its standards and set new records for performance by drawing out of storage each year a few DeHaviland planes and rebuilding them at a comparatively small cost, according to the new design which is technically known as the DH4B.

With these planes, which were built six years ago, the United States Air Service has done all its forest patrol work, all its regulation flying, both field and cross-country, and in addition has made such epoch-making voyages as the round trip to Alaska in 1920, the two-hop transcontinental record by Jimmy Doolittle, former Manual Arts High School boy, from San Diego to Jacksonville, Fla. the flight from Panama to the West Indies and Washington, D. C., the first refueling in midair over Rockwell Field, San Diego, the world's endurance record set by Lowell Smith and J. P. Richter, the nonstop flight from Canada to Mexico and numerous other wonderful feats.

But time has told its tale. The planes which are now flying were built in 1918 and while the American flyers still swear by the old DH it has become apparent that the old warhorse must go and be superseded by a newer and better plane. The new planes will be in full production by this summer and within a year the DH4B will probably be but a memory, but it will be a long, long time before the Air Service flyers will forget the old "crates" in which they have made so many great flights.

The new Douglas planes, while no very definite details have been released, will not only outperform the old DeHaviland by a very considerable degree, but will be much more modern in every way. The old spruce construction has been very largely succeeded by welded steel, which gives longer life, greater standardization and, it is understood, a lower initial cost. The entire motor section, complete with instrument boards, etc., is removable by undoing four bolts so that a change of engines can be completed in a few minutes instead of a whole day. Where the DH rambled along at 115 miles an hour with 120 as an absolute maximum, the new plane with the same engine and a bigger, useful load makes from 135 to 140 and climbs several thousand feet higher. It lands ten miles an hour slower and has many other advantages, but just as the motor driver hates to part with the old bus which has carried him safely over dozens of months and thousands of miles, so the Air Service pilots will be a long time forgetting the old DH.

Last week the Air Service awarded a contract for fifty of the new Douglas planes to the local concern whose factory is located at Santa Monica, and a force of 350 men will be put to work at once. Word from Washington indicates that this initial order will be followed by a larger contract, as the new plane is to be the basis of a five-year building program. It is anticipated that the new planes will be turned out at the rate of one per day from the Douglas plant as soon as production gets under way.

MANY TELL OF GRIZZLY AT SEQUOIA

Reports on Great Bear in National Park Can be No Longer Doubted

That a California grizzly bear is now living within the Sequoia National Park or the territory thereabouts there seems no shadow of doubt. So convincing are the reports, and so accurate the description given of the animal seen by numerous persons on various occasions that no longer can their reports be discredited or disbelieved. The most important reports on record are as follows:

On August 7, 1921, eleven park visitors reported having seen a large gray bear at the Giant Forest bear pit, that was practically twice the size of the other adult black and brown bears; that this particular bear had a distinct hump on the top of its shoulders, and when the animal appeared the other bears all ran away. During the month of April, 1924, James B. Small and his road-working crew of several men reported on several occasions having seen a large grizzly-colored bear in the vicinity of their road camp near Moro Rock. Mr. Small and some of his men had previously worked in Yellowstone National Park where grizzly bear are numerous, and all pronounced the bear they saw as a grizzly. On October 13, 1924, Alfred Hengst, a cattle man of Three Rivers, came into close contact with a huge bear near the headwaters of Cliff Creek. Undoubtedly this bear was the same animal as seen by others for this is the description that he gives: "It was the biggest bear I ever saw—bigger than any cow, and looked as though sprinkled over with snow. I had a close view of the beast, which was undoubtedly a grizzly."

In addition to the foregoing, several persons at various times during the last three years have reported having seen bear tracks within the park that were over twelve inches in length and six inches in width. Such tracks are much larger than those made by either the black or brown bears.

ACTRESS—ALSO AN EMBALMER

Betty Warfield has what is probably the queerest avocation of any screen actress.

When she is not working in pictures she follows another profession, which seems to be a direct contradiction to her demure, piquant, ultra feminine beauty.

Miss Warfield is an embalmer. She is a graduate of an embalming college in the northern part of California, and is now serving her apprenticeship, preparatory to taking her examination for a license to practice. She must serve as an apprentice for a certain period of time. So between her motion-picture appearances she decreases the large number of days she has to serve before she is qualified to take the examination.

When Miss Warfield was asked why she chose the profession of embalming she replied she felt the call as some other persons would to the ministry. She feels it is a sacred duty to be performed to care for the dead.

TETE A TETE

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Dorothea Johnston's Shakespeare program at the Ebell Club brought to mind that even if they did not have women's clubs in those days, the ladies did get off some mighty lengthy speeches. And take them all round they were pretty well posted on male machinations.

Dorothea looked well, dressed the parts well, spoke well—but I don't think she should sing.

A well known society girl has been sighfully friendly with a married man for five years—pathetic, frustrated romance stuff. He got a divorce last month—and now she is gasping about what a fool she was, and thank goodness her eyes were opened in time—and she's going to marry somebody else.

We hear so many stories about business corporations having no heart.

I know a little girl clerk who went to work for a local firm—men's wearing apparel—straight from school. A few months later her mother was stricken with tuberculosis.

The firm has kept her mother in a sanatorium for ten months, sent fine presents at Christmas time, and is generally playing the role of fairy god-mother rather handsomely.

Mrs. Albert True has just returned from Chicago.

"I am so very glad to be back with the dear Dean," she says fervently—meaning Dean William MacCormack of St. Pauls. "You know I don't usually approve of humor from the pulpit, but the Dean's is so refreshing, isn't it?"

Dear little Mrs. Eliza Ricketts is an important personality at the Ebell Club. She laughingly says she is 16—has been for ages. She has the prettiest white bobbed hair and the dearest little shoes with bows on them. And she always sits right in the middle of the front row, so as not to miss a single thing.

Talking about shoes—even the most sedate of club women permits herself the frisky kind these days.

Mrs. George McCoy, art chairman of Ebell, favors patent leather with Cuban heels—very recherche. Mrs. Ernest Douglas is wearing a specially saucy kind—brown satin and cutey ribbons. Miss Francesca de la Guna's are brown suede, two bars. Pauline Rice Shields, who naughtily says she has large feet, certainly conceals any such fact effectually in high grey French kid.

Both Mrs. Florence Kreider, president of the Friday Club, and Mrs. William Read, president of Ebell, wear their skirts so long that you have to peek around to discover what cutey shoes they are wearing.

Positively no one anywhere favors spring-sides or side-button boots any more. Rather do they all convey the impression that they are just off of their dancing lessons.

Mrs. Wade Ransom, long-time member of Ebell, who has been wandering round the world, with a special penchant for Paris, and who recently returned on my ship via Panama, is feeling wanderlusty again already. Only taken out a temporary membership this trip—very significant.

Mrs. Sumner Hunt is seeking a speaker on "The Psychology of Travel" for her department—why not Mrs. Ransom before she gets away again?

PRIZE HORSES BEING ENTERED

Ambasador Show to Crown Competition Series

Reginald C. Vanderbilt of New York Invited

Sir H. Montagu Allen May Act as Judge

The Fourth Annual National Horse Show at the Ambassador Auditorium February 16 to 21 next will be the crowning event of a series of equine competitions such as have never before been witnessed in California, according to announcement made yesterday by William S. Blitz, manager of the most notable of these exhibitions.

The Beverly Hills Horse Show of last week, the first held by that community, was a marked success both in point of attendance and financial returns. It was held under the auspices of the Beverly Hills Chamber of Commerce and the Bridle Path Association.

Issuance yesterday of the prize list for the Los Angeles show discloses that the most liberal allowance ever provided for equine competition here has been made, awards totalling $25,000. Entries close February 8 at the office of the Southern California Riding and Driving Club, 319 Herman W. Hellman Building, where William S. Blitz is in charge.

Reginald C. Vanderbilt of New York has been invited to officiate as a judge, and while he is desirous to appearing in the tanbark arena next month, it is possible that ill health may prevent his making the cross-continent journey. He has displayed his keen interest in the Los Angeles horse show, however, by donating a cup for the grand champion horse of the exhibition and the trophy is now in transit to this city.

Another notable of the equine and social world invited to participate as a judge is Sir H. Montagu Allen, C.V.O., who was Master of Hounds at Montreal, Can., president of the Montreal Horse Show and now a director of the Olympia Horse Show in England. It is certain that he will accept the honor as the distinguished Canadian is now wintering in Pasadena and has promised to remain for the show.

Mrs. J. H. Ramboz, who is in charge of the advance box-seat sale, says that never has there been such an early demand for tickets.

Notice to Parents

I WAS FAT

NOW I ONLY WEIGH 130 POUNDS

Took Off 50 Pounds In 8 Weeks—No Diets, Exercises, Creams, Dangerous Drugs or Worthless Reducing Girdles.

Read About "SAN-GRI-NA" Latest French Way to Take Off FAT—It's Safe and Lasting.

"Dear Fat Folks: Let me tell you the truth about fat. Do not be fooled by believing you can check a fatty condition in your system by going through weakening diets, strenuous exercises, rubbing your body with creams or lotions, or by using any of the old drugs for reducing. If these were effective, THERE WOULDN'T BE A FAT MAN OR WOMAN IN THE COUNTRY today, as diets, exercises, creams and old remedies have been tried for years. Do not think for a minute that you can take off fat by wearing so-called reducing girdles—it cannot be done. I personally know the horror of being fat—I went through it. Not only did I feel ashamed of my figure, but, worse still, I never was well or happy like the rest of the girls—I always had pains in my back or limbs, my feet ached, my head was dizzy—ALL THAT BECAUSE I WAS OVERTAXING MY FRAME WITH 50 POUNDS OF EXCESS FAT WHICH NATURE DID NOT INTEND FOR ME TO CARRY. I had spent a small fortune trying everying known to reduce, but never succeeded until I found out about 'SAN-GRI-NA,' the discovery of a French scientist, who has devoted his life to the study of 'obesity' and has been able to compound in a small, tasteless tablet the ingredients necessary to gradually and safely eliminate fat from the body. If you want to reduce and at the same time improve your health, go to-day to your drug store, get a package of 'SAN-GRI-NA' (make sure it is 'SAN-GRI-NA'), take two small tablets before each meal and watch your weight go down. 'SAN-GRI-NA' is GUARANTEED ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS. Not only does it do away with fat, but it acts as a tonic on the entire system. Do not accept any substitute, as 'SAN-GRI-NA' is the only thing which ever reduced me and which I can truthfully recommend."—Madame Elaine, New York City.

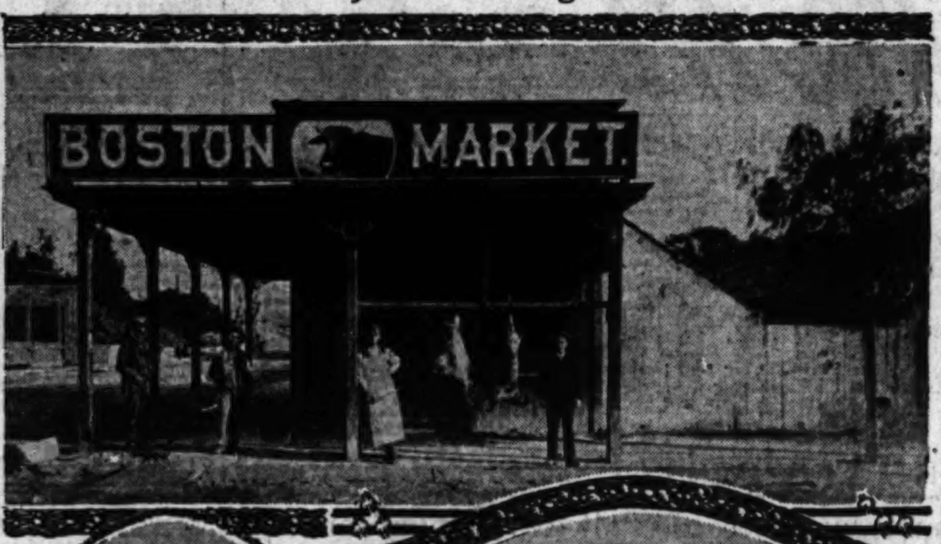
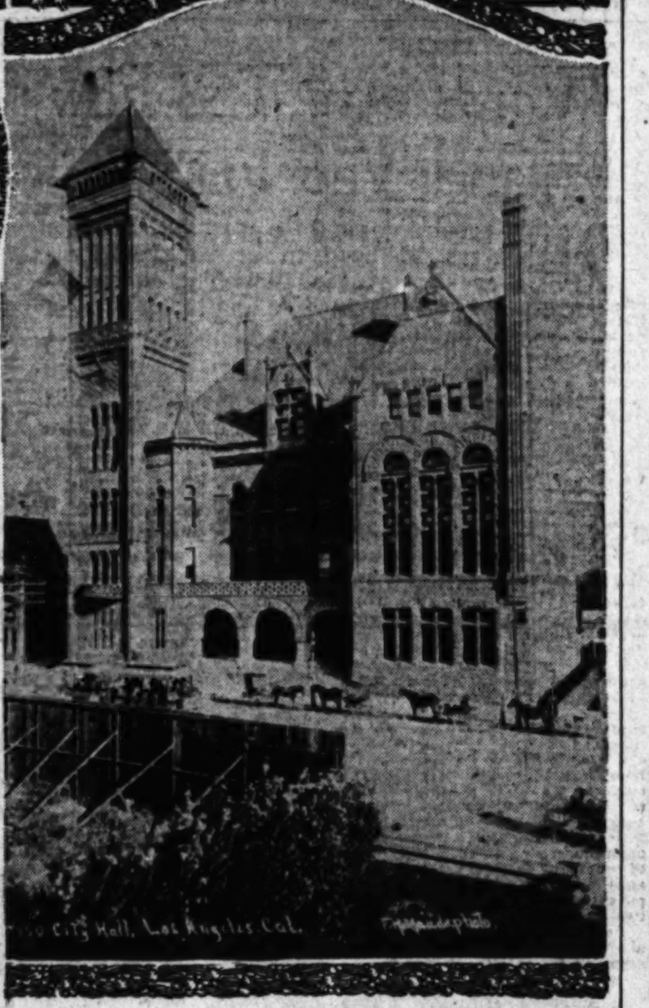
CITY'S INFANCY RECALLED BY BANKER

Declares Pioneer Days as Exciting as Modern Marvels





City Hall, Los Angeles, Cal.

Then and Now

Maurice S. Hellman, a picture of whom appears above, recalls the days when a butcher shop occupied the site at Fifth and Spring where his office now stands. A picture of this shop appears above. Below is the City Hall of Modern Los Angeles, as it appeared in years gone by with horse vehicles parked in front of it.

THIRTY-FIVE years ago today Maurice S. Hellman, pioneer Los Angeles banker, was elected a director of the Security Trust and Savings Bank.

Mr. Hellman was a young man, 25 years of age, when the Security stockholders met on January 18, 1890, in their second annual session in a diminutive banking storeroom on Upper Main street and took this action. He had spent all of the twenty-five years in Los Angeles, having been born in 1864 at the corner of Third and Main streets. The Hellman home in those days was on the outskirts of the residential section.

Four years after Mr. Hellman became a director of the Security Bank he was elected a vice-president. He remains to this day a senior vice-president. In addition to that he is chairman of the board of directors.

As he goes to his office at the corner of Fifth and Spring streets every morning he can look back to the days when there was nothing but a barn and a one-story butcher shop at that corner. He recalls that if you did not care to walk from the business section, around the Plaza, to Fifth and Spring streets you might hire the one lone hack in the pueblo to carry you there. There was a bigger celebration over the final installation of a horse car line down Spring street than over the opening of the matchless Pacific Electric interurban system in 1903.

FATHER AN ARGONAUT

Mr. Hellman's father, Samuel Hellman, was an Argonaut. He stayed in San Francisco, after the long voyage in a windjammer around the Horn, until 1855. Boarding a sailing vessel in San Francisco in that year, he landed a week later at San Pedro Harbor, noted then as the greatest hide and tallow exporting port in America. Forty thousand cattle, supplying a part of this trade, roamed Los Alamitos Rancho, now Long Beach. There were a dozen other large cattle ranches in the county.

The senior Hellman established the first book and stationery store in the Pueblo de Los Angeles. It subsequently became Hellman, Stassforth, Inc., the forerunner of the present Grimes-Stassforth Company. After graduating from the Los Angeles High School in 1882, when the one lone school of the town stood on the present Courthouse site, young Maurice worked in his father's store.

MAURICE BOUGHT STOCK

One day a short, alert looking man, a comparative stranger in town, dropped into the store to buy a book-keeping set, explaining that he was opening a new bank down the street by the name of the Security Savings Bank. As he bought the books he asked some advice of young Maurice as to how to keep them. He was so impressed by what the young salesman told him that he offered him a job in his bank. In lieu of taking the job, however, young Hellman bought some stock in the new enterprise, and became thereby one of the founders of the Security Trust and Savings Bank, today the seventh largest bank in the United States outside of New York City. The man who offered the position was Joseph F. Sartori. He started the Security by borrowing most of the capital of $22,000, when thirteen other banks were struggling along in a community which had been left "fits on its back" by the departed boom of the eighties.

Mr. Hellman, although still living very much in the present, on occasion delights in telling of the old days in Los Angeles. He relates with a smile how the authorities paraded the captured bandit, Tiburcio Vasquez, terror of California during the seventies, past the school house so all the children might see him. It was only a little while afterward, he says, that the American element became sufficiently numerous to vote out bull fighting as a Sunday pastime. The ever increasing number of Americans finally made it worth while for Remi Nadeau, the Basque sheep herder, to sell his sheep and build the Nadeau Hotel at First and Spring streets. The conviviality of the formal opening of that hostelry was not excelled by the recent opening of the Biltmore, says Mr. Hellman, who attended both affairs.

KNEW PIO PICO

The pioneer banker was well acquainted with Pio Pico, last Mexican Governor of California, and with Gen. Andres Pico, who commanded the Californians in their last stand against the Americans, signed the treaty of Cahuenga, surrendering California to Fremont. He says they were both fine, courtly gentlemen, a credit to their race and a credit to this county. Once American citizens, their patriotism and devotion to the United States could not be questioned.

Mr. Hellman was a boy of 12 years when the Southern Pacific finally entered the city in 1876. He says the celebration of the event was held at San Fernando, where a line had been run awaiting the completion of the San Fernando tunnel. It seemed that all of the 18,000 persons who lived in Los Angeles county at that time were there to see the driving of the golden spike that united the northern and southern ends of the first railroad, and to watch the first train through the tunnel. The 1500 Chinamen who were used in digging the tunnel were all lined up with their shovels at "present arms" during the ceremonies. San Fernando, declares Mr. Hellman, was quite picturesque. In addition to being headquarters for the 1500 Chinese railroad builders, it also was the southern terminus of Remi Nadeau's stage lines to the famous Cerro Gordo mines in Inyo county. Nadeau had the contract for teaming all the supplies to and all the ore from these mines. His San Fernando stables housed 1600 mules and eighty teamsters.

When Mr. Hellman severed all other connections and went with the Security Bank he had the opportunty of learning the banking business from the ground up. Adding machines and typewriters had not been invented, so that after banking hours he and Mr. Sartori spent many long hours writing letters and legal documents in longhand. There were not more than three or four working in the bank, and with California going through its leanest period business was slow. But both he and Mr. Sartori maintain, however, that it was the right time to start a bank. Now, with depositors sufficient to populate a city the size of Denver, and with deposits reaching the $200,000,000 mark for the first time in the history of the city, who will gainsay they are not right?

the skeletons of two puppies, one on each side of the human bones.

"The artistic sense of these prehistoric people had been developed to a considerable extent," said Prof. Harrington. "This is seen in the ornamentation of the pottery, which consists of various bold but artistic designs in black or white and is reminiscent of the pottery of certain present-day Indians. The vessels are graceful in shape, one specimen in the form of a vase with a pitcher-like handle especially attractive."

One interesting reminder of this people is a ledge of sandstone, about fifteen feet long and six or seven feet wide, in the foreground of the cluster of buildings whose remains have been exposed. Into this stone a number of holes, some six or eight inches in diameter and about the same depth, had been drilled, apparently for the purpose of providing mortars in which the families in the vicinity ground their grain. Some of the pestles required for this primitive style of milling were also found near this stone slab.

The excavations have so far been confined only to the low hills that border the river valley, but Prof. Harrington said it is probable that still more remarkable discoveries will be made in a series of sand dunes situated on the low lands of the valley itself. It is believed that these dunes indicate prehistoric dwellings hidden beneath them and from their size it is thought possible that excavations may reveal houses with the walls intact.

As to the age of these prehistoric remains Prof. Harrington stated positively that it could not be less than 1500 years and he was rather inclined to the belief that these buildings were erected as far back as 2000 years.

"The absence of rain in this section has retarded erosion and it must have taken many centuries to have leveled the houses with the ground," he said. "Then they were covered up with wind-blown earth and sand and it must have required another long period of time for the material above them to have accumulated in this region of high winds and constantly shifting sand and earth. The aridity of the climate would also help to preserve the remains, but in spite of this we find all the contents of the graves except the largest bones exceedingly fragile, showing that they have been buried a long time."

J. G. Scrugham, the Governor of Nevada, has taken great interest in the work of the scientists and is lending his co-operation to the enterprise. Of the material that has been unearthed during the excavations, a part will go to the museum of the University of Nevada, while some will remain on the site of the excavations where it is purposed to establish a museum. The rest will be placed on exhibition at the Museum of the American Indian in New York.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 15c and 30c.—[Advertisement.

Stop That Pain!

Use Plasmo for Quick Relief

We Guarantee It—

Get Quick Action for Blood Poison, Boils, Burns, Varicose Veins, Ulcers—Relieves Rheumatic, Sciatic and Neuritis Pains

Plasmo will stop pain. If it doesn't we refund your money. We know it will, so can safely guarantee it.

So all we ask is that you try it at our risk!

No need to suffer from common ailments—end your pain in this quick way. No need to waste money trying "remedies" that will not work. This one will, or it costs you nothing.

Easy to apply—like an ointment but more pleasant and quicker to get results.

Please try it at our risk.

From Volcanic Deposits

We bring this material to you scientifically perfected by years of experiments, at the cost of a fortune.

For this is nature's own boon—a volcanic mineral—developed and improved by man and given to the world as a positive relief from pain.

Scientists attribute its amazing pain-healing properties to its high radio-activity and to its colloidal activity.

Plasmo makes for increased blood circulation when applied at the point of pain. Your doctor will tell you that congestion is the cause of pains from sores, infections, cuts, boils, etc., where swelling attends them.

When Plasmo is applied it penetrates the pores and draws the blood to the affected part, stimulating normal free circulation and carrying off all foreign matter. Congestion is thus relieved, and pain, swelling, discoloration and inflammation all quickly disappear when clean blood circulation is thus restored.

If you are suffering from pain or infections of any kind, get a jar of Plasmo today and apply it tonight.

See how well you sleep. Wake in the morning and find the pain gone.

If Plasmo doesn't get results, you get your money back—by returning jar with purchase slip—but we know it will. Thus in Plasmo you risk not a penny, you pay only for relief.

Stops Rheumatic Pains, Too

Plasmo is excellent for rheumatic, sciatica, or neuritis pains. Apply same as for skin disorder, and note how rapidly it penetrates to the sore parts. Follow directions and get quick relief.

STEAMSHIP LINE BONDS OFFERED

Munson $5,000,000 Issue Placed on Market

Bay City Building Liens Open to Purchase

Foreign Exchange Society Installs Officers

Munson Steamship Line three-year 6 per cent gold notes to the amount of $5,000,000 will be offered tomorrow by Mitchum, Tully & Co., Harris Trust and Savings Bank, and Kidder, Peabody & Co., at a price of 99 and interest to yield 6.73 per cent.

The bonds are dated the 1st inst. and are due January 1, 1928. The interest is payable semiannually on July 1 and January 1, at the office of Harris, Forbes & Co., New York. They are callable as a whole or in part on thirty days' notice on July 1, 1925, at 102½ and accrued interest, and thereafter on any interest date at a premium decreasing ½ point each six months. The Federal income tax is payable without deduction up to 2 per cent.

Security of the notes is furnished under issuance of a closed mortgage which will provide security by a first preferred ship mortgage upon nine vessels with an aggregate deadweight capacity of 49,250 tons, and upon any additional ships when acquired by the company, as well as by pledge of all stocks and securities owned by the company.

The issue will provide for the purchase of new ships, for retirement of existing indebtedness, for additional working capital and other corporate purposes.

The Munson Steamship Line and its shipping subsidiaries on June 30, 1924, had assets of $20,749,674. The consolidated net earnings available for interest charges for the ten-year period ended December 31, 1924, averaged over $2,000,000 per annum, or more than six times the interest charges on the company's total funded debt, including the issue.

STRUCTURE TO BE BUILT

S. W. Straus & Co. has purchased and is offering an issue of $135,000 first mortgage 6 per cent serial coupon bonds at prices to yield from 6 to 6.10 per cent secured by the textile building, to be erected at once on the northeast corner of Mission and Plum streets, San Francisco. They constitute a closed first mortgage on the land and five-story loft and industrial building, conservatively appraised at $209,000.

The bonds are dated November 1, 1924, mature in from two to twelve years, interest payable May 1 and November 1, and are callable at 102. They are exempt from personal property tax in California, and Federal income tax up to 4 per cent is paid by the borrowers. The property is designed for the use of textile and other light manufacturing industries and for warehousing and wholesale distribution concerns.

The fourth and fifth floors and half of the third floor are already under lease to a responsible textile manufacturing concern on a rental more than sufficient to carry the interest charges of the bond issue.

Curron Named President

The Foreign Exchange Club of Los Angeles, organized to foster foreign trade, held its first meeting of 1925, Friday evening. The following newly appointed officers were installed: G. E. Curron, assistant cashier of the Commercial National Bank, president; F. C. Chapman, manager of the foreign department of the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank, vice-president; W. C. Neary, assistant cashier of the Union Bank and Trust Company, secretary-treasurer. The executive committee consists of C. W. Rosenthal, assistant cashier of the Security Trust and Savings Bank; L. H. Kellan, financial agent of the American Express Company, and H. Dorton, assistant manager of the foreign department of the Bank of Italy.

Frank Le Bold, cashier of the Citizens' Trust and Savings Bank, the outgoing president, was presented with a gold fountain pen as an expression of gratitude for the service he had rendered.

Offices Transferred

R. H. Durst & Co., have moved their offices from 803 Haas Building to new ground floor quarters at 618 South Spring street. Extensive alterations are being completed and the new offices will be ready for occupancy the 20th inst. Enlarged floor space will permit the installation of many additional facilities.

CONTROL OF TITLE FIRMS IS OBTAINED

H. B. Kelly to Establish New Business and Open Downtown Offices

H. B. Kelly, formerly of Santa Ana, has purchased controlling interest in the Los Angeles County Title Company and the Pomona Abstract and Trust Company, and intends to consolidate the two organizations. In the near future he will deposit $100,000 in securities with the State Treasurer and seek to obtain a permit from the State Insurance Department.

At the present time the Los Angeles County Title Company has an office in the Bank of Italy International Building and the Pomona Abstract and Trust Company is in quarters at 241 North Broadway. It is Mr. Kelly's plan to consolidate the offices and establish main headquarters in the downtown financial district.

Mr. Kelly is familiar with the title business, having been associated for some time with the Abstract and Title Guaranty Company of Santa Ana. He severed this connection two years ago and devoted his attention to oil investments in Huntington Beach and other Southern California oil fields.

Following the announcement of the acquisition of the two title companies, Mr. Kelly declared that he intended to concentrate on business in Los Angeles county.

RADIO SHARES HOLD FAVOR

Speculative Leaders Come and Go; Latest Fancy Has Broad Following; Profits Large

BY EARLE E. CROWE

Professional traders have learned in the past few months that the transition from a dragging to a violent market is easily accomplished by a few simple movements in the radio shares. A few experiments have shown the strength of the impression the new industry has made on speculators and the professionals are not backward in using this convenient flag when interest in the market is at low ebb. Because of the wide publicity the radio companies have received, the belief evidently has arisen that radio offers the shortest cut to wealth that the speculative markets can offer.

Favorites come and go in the stock market as in any other business of a speculative nature. The traders whole-heartedly support a certain class of stocks just as the fans swear by a baseball player or a prize fighter until some one else comes along with a newer popular appeal. The traders stay with a spectacular performer until its possibilities are exhausted in one way or another, or the stock passes into the respectable confines of the investment class. The average trader is after action and the newer and volatile shares are so handled that excitement is never absent for any length of time.

FORMER FAVORITES

Several years ago United States Steel common occupied this position in the market before the corporation's activities were stabilized and earning power definitely established. The turnover in Steel common was tremendous and the oscillations were erratic enough to hold the attention of even the most fickle of the trading body. The stock soon lost its speculative tincture, however, and now is recognized as the leader of the seasoned, semi-investment group. Before the Steel Corporation, however, was accorded a definite place in the scheme of things marketwise, the rails were enthroned in popular fancy, and railroad gossip was the dominant note in board-room conferences.

The coppers have had their day, especially when Amalgamated Copper was touted as the best stock in the market. Motors at various times in recent years have attracted a big following, particularly Studebaker and the General Motor issues. More recently the oils were regarded as the best money makers, and they still retain a substantial hold on the imagination of many traders. In California, the oils yet are the best-liked shares on the board. The antics of Mexican Petroleum are still fresh in the minds of hundreds of enthusiasts, many of whom have shifted their allegiance to Pan-American, which apparently has inherited the proclivities of its untamed sister company.

Petroleum companies, however, are suffering from internal disorders and the coppers are just recovering from a long sick spell. The railroads are looked upon more as a semi-investment group, although consolidation plans invite considerable speculative buying. It finally narrows down to the radio shares, and a glance at the record of stock trading in the last few weeks shows that they are trying hard to fill the role.

PROFITS ASTONISH

Paced by Radio Corporation of America, which advanced to the big board last spring, this group has given startling testimony of the profits in the manufacture and sale of radio equipment. The public has eagerly taken all the equipment offered for sale, and new companies naturally sprung up overnight to get in on the new gold mine. The keenness of the competition has brought on innumerable law suits over patent infringements, but new inventions are appearing with enough frequency to enable many of the new companies to hold their heads above the struggle.

Radio Corporation thrust a giant structure before the public gaze at a time when the possibilities of the radio industry were hardly realized. The stock was selling on the New York curb around 3½ when the national magazines began to tell of the wonders of the radiophone and of the new art of broadcasting. The stock market was not long in appreciating the strategic position the Radio Corporation held in the industry. The company, controlled by General Electric and Westinghouse interests, and at that time by American Telephone and Telegraph, was manufacturing radio equipment under sole patent rights covering the regenerative, or feed-back circuit, and the superheterodyne. Control of inventions governing the manufacture of vacuum tubes gave the company another important monopoly. In addition, the foreign and domestic wireless communication business was another source of profits, all of which the stock market realized when the shares were bid up in a short time to nearly 7.

PRICES BOOM

Since that time the sales of radio equipment have reached such tremendous figures that the profits of all companies have prompted boiling activity in the shares listed on the New York curb and the New York Stock Exchange. Radio Corporation changed the par value of its stock to $50, and the common now is quoted around 71, having leaped ahead with astonishing rapidity.

A host of newer companies have cast their spells on the impressionable speculator. Hazeltine Corporation, owning and controlling the Neutrodyne patents of Prof. K. A. Hazeltine, is one of the leaders on the market and has shown remarkable strength in price. Dubilier Condenser and Radio is another, and De Forest radio, using the inventions of Dr. Lee De Forest, has excited considerable comment in its market movements. The New York curb, the great training ground for New York Stock Exchange securities, now has approximately sixteen radio listings.

Radio's rise to popularity and wealth is a repetition of the history of other industries. Its future is not definitely established, and before it can be, the fortunes of some of the participants are likely to undergo radical fluctuations. The motion-picture business not long ago was boosted as a certain success, but the process of stabilization sizably reduced some of the spectacular earnings accounts and the ardor of enthusiastic stockholders considerably dampened as a result.

From a stock-market standpoint, it is only a matter of time until the newest plaything has outworn its attractiveness. Some of the companies will survive the period of readjustment and others will pass the way of the unfit.

CLOVER FIELD IS LEASED FOR OIL

Marland Acquires Tract in Historic Section

Drilling to Await Outcome of Ocean Park Well

Substantial Bonus Believed to Have Been Paid

Clover Field, where the first around-the-world flight began, and coincidentally one of the finest aviation fields on the Pacific Coast, may, in the not-far-distant future, be transformed into an oil field, if the plans of the large oil companies are successful.

Officials of the Marland Oil Company, one of the largest producing companies of the Mid-Continent fields, which is becoming one of the most active operators in this State, yesterday announced the acquisition of a five-year lease on the 170 acres comprising Clover Field, the lease to run for a period of five years.

No immediate drilling on the lease is contemplated, it is said, the Marland policy being to await developments in the Union Oil Company's proposed wildcat well which is to be drilled at Ocean Park Heights, about 1500 feet from Clover Field.

In the event that the Union test finds oil, Marland will begin drilling on the aviation field, and will extend its operations to cover as much of the lease as shows promise of being productive.

ROYALTIES ADDITIONAL

The Marland interests obtained their lease on the field from Stanton Brothers, owners of the tract. The consideration involved was not made public, but it is known that a number of the large companies were negotiating for it, and that the Stantons have been holding out for a bonus of $85,000 in addition to the usual oil royalties.

Clover Field at present is under lease to the government on a year-to-year basis, and in the event of the discovery of oil in the neighborhood, would in all probability, be abandoned as an aviation field, it is asserted. The field is near the ocean, and landings have to be made in the face of an ocean wind, and the presence of derricks averaging over 100 feet in height would make the field a hazardous landing place, even though no derricks were built on the field itself, according to reports. It is declared that the proximity of city subdivisions has made Clover Field a less desirable aviation base than it was at the time of its establishment.

"WILD-CAT" INTERESTS

Substantial oil companies are taking more interest in the Ocean Park Heights district at present, than in any other wildcatting projects in Southern California. The Union Oil Company is the largest holder of acreage, and the Marland with its latest acquisition probably is next. The Standard Oil Company is said to hold more than 100 acres in the immediate neighborhood of the Union's projected well, and the Superior Oil Company has about seventy acres, adjoining the Union Oil Company's land.

According to geological opinion the district is a promising locality for petroleum exploration. Several companies in the past have considered drilling it, but for one reason or another the project has never actually developed.

Union officials have asserted that work on their new wildcat will be started within two weeks, and a definite decision as to the petroleum possibilities should be made within a few months.

FIRM STOCK MARKET AIDS COTTON PRICES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Cotton futures closed about unchanged today after moving narrowly all through the short session. The better tone evident in other speculative markets served to influence sentiment favorably at the outset and advances of some 20 points were registered in early trading, but at that level the market encountered sufficient offerings to cause a setback, which all but canceled gains. Closing prices were 3 points net lower to 3 points higher. Spot cotton, 24 cents, unchanged.

OILS HELPED BY GAS PRICE RISE

Representative Stocks Up on Lower Stocks

Globe Grain Common Mounts on Earning Report

Citizens' National Gains on Week's Trading

BY FRANK L. GARDNER

(Banks, Huntley & Co.)

Most of the representative oils displayed pronounced strength during the early trading last week on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange and in three instances new highs were established. Statements emanating from those prominent in oil circles that the present situation offers exceptionally favorable prospects and price increases for gasoline in the East were responsible for the fresh spurt in petroleum issues.

Shell Union was under excellent accumulation and exceeded its best previous record at 26 1-4, a gain of 3 points from the previous week, and Associated Oil advanced beyond its 1924 top to 35. Shell closed at 26 1-4 and Associated around 35. On high sales at 39, Union of California broke through its former high but reacted to 37½ on an ex-dividend basis and closed at 38 1-4. Union Oil Associated, however, did not approach its former record and reached only 66 1-4 with a close at 65½, ex-dividend 75 cents.

Pacific Oil rose steadily to 57 and closed around 56, and California Petroleum common touched a high at 28, close to its 1924 peak. Fluctuating narrowly between 62 3-4 and 62 3-8, Standard of California appeared unusually dull and United was inactive around 37. General Petroleum moved between 42 1-4 and 43 and finished around 42½.

HOLLY LEADS DAY

Holly Development and Julian Petroleum resumed leadership of this group last week. Holly was under considerable selling pressure and sagged from 1.71 to a low at 1.50. The close was at improved figures at 1.58. Julian preferred was heavily bought and jumped from 19 to 24, reacting to around 22½ at the finish. Julian common rose from 8½ to 10½ and closed at 10.

At 9½, Republic reached a peak for recent months but final trading was at 8. Globe Petroleum, a recent low-priced speculative favorite, sank to 1 cent and Olinda registered a further advance to 30 cents. United States Royalties was an active trader. Early buying around 17½ was short-lived and the market slumped to 15 cents with a subsequent improvement to 15½ at the close.

Gilmore Oil, a new listing, began its career on the board at 14 3-4 and advanced to 16. The market was unable to absorb late offerings and the finish was around 15 1-4. Fluctuations in Marine Oil were between 95 and 1.00 and Henderson Petroleum moved between 80 and 85. Mascot changed hands at 1.22 and Midway Northern was unchanged at 57 cents.

Some improvement was evidenced in sales of Transport at 80 and Rice Ranch registered a recent high at 1.10.

INDUSTRIALS ADVANCE

A prominent advance in Globe Grain common attracted considerable attention. On rumors that the 1924 earnings statement, soon to be released, would show a good rate on the common issue, the stock rose sensationally from 61 to a new peak since 1922 at 67. Trading slowed down somewhat during the later sessions and transactions were around 65½. Globe Grain preferred was in improved demand in the neighborhood of 97. California Delta Farms registered a gain of 2½ points to 12½ and Los Angeles Investment moved narrowly between 4.04 and 4.08.

Selling at 100½ and 101, Goodyear preferred appeared particularly dull and Goodyear Textile preferred lost a half point on sales at 87½. Sun Finance and Investment sold at 1.03 and 1.05 and Western Chemicals at 11 and 12 cents.

Few sales of bank stocks appeared in the records last week but prices remained firm and strong. Citizens' National gained 2½ points to 310 and Merchants' National moved up 1½ points to 224. United States National was in demand at 185, a 5-point gain and Bancitaly Corporation was slightly improved at 109½. At 142 and 143, Americommercial Corporation was practically unchanged and First National sold at its former level, 378. Bank of Italy gained somewhat to 275.

PUBLIC UTILITIES BETTER

Investment demand for high-grade securities was reflected in improvement prices for utility issues last week. Los Angeles Gas preferred rose to 91½ and closed at 91 1-4 and Pacific Gas preferred, another 6 per cent stock, sold around 95½. San Joaquin prior preferred and Edison 7 per cent preferred were both in excellent demand around 99 3-4 and 105. Edison common sold throughout the week steadily at 104. San Joaquin series A preferred gained slightly to 91 1-4 and Southern Counties Gas advanced to 102 bid.

United Eastern's rise to 50½ cents featured the mining group. Reports that the company had taken over the development of a promising Arizona copper property planning an exenditure of $125,000 were responsible for a renewed interest in Eastern. Gold Dust appeared in better demand and reached a high at 15 cents, assessment paid. Black Range gained a point to 6½ and Oatman Gold 2½ points to 6½. Notice of another 1-cent assessment apparently influenced some selling in Oatman United and stock sagged off to 20 from 20½ cents. Tom Reed sold at 38 cents. A continuation of the recent climb in Prince Consolidated carried the price to 27½ where it closed while Richmond slumped to a low at 1½ cents. Yellow Pine lost a portion of its gain and sold off to 75.

Buying Bonds is Not Always a Matter of Cold Figures

FORTY-FIVE years ago O. T. Barker, a business pioneer of the Southwest, started a furniture business in a little frame building on the old Plaza in the village of Los Angeles. The development of this business during a comparatively brief span of years, to the largest institution of its kind in the world, is a business romance if there ever was one.

Many conservative investors have bought Barker securities on the strength of cold figures—assets and earnings—alone, while many others have given thought to the other side of the picture, which reflects the growth of a great city and the upbuilding of a wonderful business, with all the intensely interesting human elements which have contributed thereto.

And now once more investors who have within them a feeling of civic pride and [illegible] to take part in the accomplishments of this great institution, have an opportunity to do so through the purchase of bonds of the Sun Realty Co., issued for the purpose of erecting the magnificent new home of Barker Bros., Inc., which will be an entire block in length, with frontages on Flower, Seventh and Figueroa streets, containing more than eleven acres of floor space.

The satisfactory manner in which these bonds will be secured and the ample income [illegible] provided by the long-term Barker lease, together with the other interesting features, are all set forth in a circular which will be mailed upon request.

BOND QUOTATIONS

Narrow Limits

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Bond prices held steady in a typically quiet Saturday trading session today. Fluctuations today were narrow although several convertible issues followed closely the upward trend of stocks.

Increasing activity in Mexican bonds testified to Wall street's optimistic views on the debt situation which will be the subject of conferences here next week. The assented 5s added 1 1-2 points to their recent gains.

After a lull in new financing, offers were being resumed on a large scale next week. The National City Company will head a syndicate which will offer $50,000,000 Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company three-year 6 per cent notes, probably at a slight discount. Proceeds will be used to refund two outstanding issues, $30,000,000 5 1-2 per cent notes and a $20,000,000 block of 6s.

These issues will be redeemed at a moderate premium in February.

Buying of railroad bonds today centered mainly in convertible issues, such as Chesapeake and Ohio 5s and Delaware and Hudson 5s, which moved up a point or more. Standard Gas convertible 6s jumped 2 3-4 points; Skelly Oil 6½s 1⅛ and Magma Copper 7s a point.

NEW YORK CURB

Radios Improve

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—The sharp upturn that took place in the late trading Friday, when traders attempted to acquire stocks to complete outstanding contracts, was renewed today with a general strengthening in the different groups. Radio shares recovered a material portion of the decline suffered in the recent slump, and moderate improvement was shown in the public utility and baking concerns.

Oil shares were slow in reflecting the upward trend, but brisk buying soon developed in several of the more popular issues, with the result furnishing the day's features. South Penn rose 4 points to 174½, and Prairie Oil sold from 234 to 238½. Business during the week in the curb was irregular in character and movement, but ended with a development of weakness which turned the early gains into substantial losses in many issues.

Mr. Walter L. Eckhardt, President of the Corporation, has summarized his letter to the bankers as follows:

HISTORY AND BUSINESS: The Music Master Corporation, organized in 1922 with a nominal capital, is today the largest merchandising organization in the United States, distributing exclusively radio products, consisting of radio receiving sets such as Super-Heterodyne Radiola, Thermiodyne, Zenith and other well-known makes; also loud speakers, tubes, parts and accessories.

The corporation has expended large sums in national advertising and has planned to appropriate at least one million dollars for this purpose in 1925.

In addition to its general distribution of high-grade radio products, the Music Master Corporation manufactures the Music Master Loud Speaker, which is probably the best-known reproducer in the market today. The corporation has developed a number of new and important articles which will shortly be introduced to the trade.

PLANT: A plant at Betzwood, near Philadelphia, Pa., consists of thirty acres with modern daylight factory and other buildings thereon, having all facilities for manufacturing and especially suitable as headquarters for the general distribution of the corporation's products.

The main offices are located in Philadelphia with branches in New York, Pittsburgh and Chicago. It is proposed to open immediately sixteen additional branches throughout the United States to enable us to maintain close contact with the two hundred wholesale distributors affiliated with this corporation.

SALES: From sales in 1922 of $191,795.65 the corporation's activities have grown so rapidly that the sales in 1924 aggregated $3,687,947. From orders received for deliveries during 1925 and from a careful survey of the requirements of our distributors, it is expected that the sales for 1925 will approximate $15,000,000.

MANAGEMENT The same personnel, which has been responsible for this successful growth of the corporation, will continue to direct it, and, with the new interests now allied with the management, we believe that this corporation will be the leader in the industry.

THE DIRECTORS of the corporation will be as follows: Matthew C. Brush, Samuel F. Pryor, E. R. Harriman, William T. Smith, J. W. Guibord, Morris Wolf, Herbert D. Williams, Jules E. Mastbaum, Anthony C. Feliz, J. H. Gross, Leo Potter, H. Allan Miller, T. Harvey Ferris, Harry A. Arthur, J. Harker Chadwick, W. B. Woodbury, W. L. Eckhardt.

Legal details in connection with this issue will be passed upon for the Bankers by Messrs. [illegible], New York and for the Corporation by Messrs. Wolf, Petersen, Block & Schorr, Philadelphia, and this stock is offered for subscription (subject to allotment) when, as and if issued and received by us, subject to the approval of Counsel. Accounts have been audited by Price, Waterhouse & Co. Delivery may be made in either temporary Certificates or Interim Receipts, exchangeable later for Definitive Engraved Certificates.

Application will be made by the corporation to list this stock on the New York Curb Market.

BULLS RULE IN MARKET CRISIS

Reactions Declared Normal and of Benefit

Speculators Under Urge of Reckless Buying

Professional Selling Causes Liquidation

BY HERBERT R. JACKSON
(Howard G. Rath Company)

Little or no surprise was caused by the reactionary trend of the security markets toward the close of the week and little or no apprehension existed. Prices have been rising steadily since election day and as a result, some sort of reaction was really overdue. However, this reaction was so generally expected that considerable capital had been kept available for the opportunities it would bring. Hence, when selling orders were entered in volume, the securities were readily absorbed and the decline made little progress, average prices fluctuating about three points.

It must be remembered that the kind of boom market that has been witnessed during the past two and a half months creates a sort of psychological recklessness on the part of speculators. Prices of securities are often bid up, not on the basis of actual intrinsic value, earning power and prospects for the future, but in the belief that some other speculators will take these securities at a higher price. Very often paper profits in some securities are used as margin for additional purchases with the result that stocks pass from strong into weak hands. Carrying this reasoning a step farther, it becomes immediately obvious that the market as a whole is vulnerable to selling pressure.

When stocks are weakly held, as it must be conceded many have been of late, professional selling can very easily induce a certain amount of genuine liquidation. This is a corrective process that really imparts new strength and stability to the markets, for many stocks return to strong hands and the credit situation rights itself. In this respect the present market is probably no exception. In the past few days there has been a certain amount of professional short selling and a certain amount of genuine profit-taking. The character of the buying has been such as to induce short covering, in turn creating what is usually called a "two-sided market."

TREND PUZZLES

It is impossible to state at this time which of the cross currents will control the market in the immediate future, whether prices will sag lower or the upward trend be renewed, but one can state with assurance that the current major upward swing has not run its course. Average prices may decline anywhere from 5 to 10 points immediately, or in the next few weeks, but a renewal of the upward movement is inevitable before final culmination of the rise. As for the minor day-to-day swings, the market as a whole will be better for the technical reactions which may occur.

It is apparent that some groups of stocks have discounted all the improvement in business that can reasonably be expected for six months or a year to come. This is also true of some individual issues where it may not be true of entire groups. Certainly the current price of United States Steel common does not overdiscount the improvement in this industry which is operating at well over 90 per cent of capacity. The same may be said of numerous railroad issues, notably Atchison, which recently increased the common dividend from $6 to $7, and Southern Pacific, which apparently can afford to take the same action. There are other railroad stocks yielding from 7 to 9 per cent which could easily sell up so that their yields would more nearly conform to current money rates.

The oil group now seems to be having its long deferred upward movement under the leadership of Pan-American and Shell Union, both of which are understood to be in a position to increase dividends. Also the decline in production in the new Wortham fields is construed as a bullish factor for oil stocks. Another point mentioned recently is that oil is coming out of storage and the advance in the price of gasoline in the East is looked upon as the forerunner of a general advance in the price of crude.

TIRES GO UP

Tire and rubber stocks are responding to the move initiated by Goodrich common, which attained a new high level in the past week in anticipation of dividend resumption. The Goodyear stocks continue under accumulation in the belief that a plan for funding or paying the 28 per cent back dividends on the preferred has been worked out and found acceptable. On this basis, both preferred and common stocks could easily advance substantially from current levels.

Firmness and an upward trend in the price of copper are responsible for the continued accumulation of copper stocks. In the reaction last week this group forfeited little of recent gains. In fact, individual issues such as American Smelting and Refining advanced in the face of a more or less general decline. Kennecott, Chile and Cerro de Pasco acted very impressively, while the restoration of Anaconda's dividend a short time ago is expected to lead to other dividend inaugurations and increases.

The general bond list fluctuated little in market value in the last couple of weeks, but there have been sustained advances in the better known convertible issues. For instance, Pan-American 6s crossed 106, an advance of more than 8 points from the original offering price of a few weeks ago. Sinclair three-year 6s, carrying stock purchase warrants, were sold to the public at 98 1-2 a few weeks ago and at their high point of the week showed an appreciation of 9 1-2 points, even though the stock has not as yet attained the minimum conversion price. It is not so many weeks ago that Maxwell Motor convertible 7s scored a remarkable advance of 13 points, prior to redemption.

BOSTON WOOL MARKET

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

BOSTON, Jan. 17.—In the wool market, tendency is still to await the opening both in finished goods and in foreign markets for the raw product. The sales which opened at Sydney and Melbourne, Australia, at the beginning of the week, have had a rather stimulating effect on the local situation. Prices are firm in most all cases.

MARKET REVIEW

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—By way of terminating a week which has been a period of readjustment of prices, nearly all of the markets moved upward today, indicating apparently, both repurchases by speculators for the decline and an automatic upward reaction when pressure of speculative sales was removed.

The day's advance on the stock exchange was well distributed and as a rule not violent. It resulted in a considerable number of 3-point recoveries or more, and even the averages scored an advance of a full point. Sterling did not get back either to the season's high rate of week before last, or even to the best price of last week's recovery from the early reaction, but it gained ground appreciably, the franc and the Italian lira following.

The bond market ended the week firm as a rule, but with individual movements irregular, which has been true of the week as a whole. During the week, United States government bonds have slipped off a trifling fraction; less than might have been expected when call money rates were advancing to 4 per cent. All of them are still close to the best prices of the month, although a point or more under the high prices of 1924, which were reached as a rule between August and November. The fact that the market for these bonds remain so steady at the present time is a fairly good barometer of the ideas in banking circles as to the future of money rates.

Another influence making toward easy money, was disclosed in the weekly statement of the associated banks. Two weeks ago, $25,366,000 surplus reserve was changed to a deficit of $3,105,000; a week ago the deficit grew to $28,511,000. This was not accomplished by heavy loan expansion; it was directly caused by too rapid reduction in reserve credits in the Federal bank. Thursday's statement of that institution, with its $30,500,000 increase in reserves held for member banks, showed the corrective process to be at work, but today's clearinghouse bank statement proved that it had been carried much further.

It reported the addition of $33,000,000 for the week to reserves of private banks held by the reserve bank and an increase of surplus reserves, partly due to reduction of loans and deposits, amounting to no less than $31,300,000. This presumably means still easier money.

STOCK PRICES REBOUND AGAIN

Late Reaction Eliminates Weak Holders

Nash Motor Soars; Other Specialities Climb

Key Stocks March Forward With Market

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—With a number of weak speculative accounts eliminated by the reaction of the last few days and the technical position of the market strengthened through an extension of the short interest, stock prices made brisk recovery today when the main upward movement was resumed. Net gains in most of the active issues ranged from 1 to 4 points, with a few exceeding the maximum figure. Trading was moderate in volume, today's sales being slightly under 900,000 shares.

Violent fluctuations took place in a few specialties. Nash Motors opened 19 points higher at 285, broke to 268 and then rallied to 270 for a net gain of 4 points on the day and 60 points for the week. Associated Dry Goods climbed more than 10 points to 152 and then eased slightly. Commercial Solvents A and B scored net gains of 7 and 6 1-4 points at 117 3-4 and 116½, respectively. Net gains of 3½ to 6½ points were recorded by American Radiator, Jersey Central, Federal Light and Traction, National Distillers Products preferred, and Sears Roebuck.

The so-called pivotal issues took a prominent part in the advance. United States Steel common closed 1 3-4 points higher at 135¼; American Can moved up nearly 3 points to 163 7-8, and Baldwin showed a net gain of 1 3-8 at 134 1-4.

Several issues also responded to individual influences. Ludlow Steel climbed over 2 points to a record top at 40 on buying attracted by the possibilities of its stainless steel process; Allis Chalmers reached a new maximum at 83 3-4 on reports that 1924 earnings would run between $8 and $10, and Consolidated Distributors sold at 7 3-4, a new high on the movement, in anticipation of important developments in connection with radio merchandising.

Rails rallied with the industrials, some of the best gains being recorded by the eastern hard coal-carrying roads. Delaware and Hudson and Lackawanna each showed net gains of more than 2 points and Reading and Lehigh Valley gained about a point each.

Further recovery of Italian lire, which advanced 9¼ points to 4.17 cents in reflection of the vote of confidence given to Premier Mussolini, was the feature of the foreign exchange market. Other rates held firm.

OIL NEWS

BY HOWARD C. KEGLEY

Holders of units and fractions of units in the Trust lease of the Union Oil Company at Rosecrans, got their first production yesterday, with the completion of the Trust No. 2, the initial production being reported at between 1000 and 2000 barrels. No gauge had been put on the well yesterday afternoon, and the oil was being allowed to flow into the sump until it cleaned up, but Union officials were confident that when the drilling mud and emulsion are cleared up, the well will make around 2000 barrels a day.

Trust No. 2 is located in the northeast corner of the 130-acre lease. It was drilled to a depth of 4940 feet. It offsets the Union's Howard Park No. 2, the Bankline Oil Company's Gordon No. 1, and the E. J. Miley Athens No. 2. The initial production reported is better than in any of its offsets. This is attributed to the fact that the Trust No. 2 was drilled deeper than the wells in this area.

Gets New Holdings

The Lewis Oil Corporation, a Long Beach organization, is preparing to inaugurate a program of development on its recent acquisition in Huntington Beach, according to field reports. The Lewis interests purchased the lease of the Merchants' Oil Company, at Crystal and Garfield streets, including several producing wells. Two new wells are to be drilled on the property, it is said.

Official Report

Imports of petroleum at Atlantic and Gulf ports for the month of December, totaled 6,567,000 barrels, or an average of 211,839 barrels, according to the official report of the American Petroleum Institute.

Reports for the first week in January indicate a considerable increase over the December average, the total for the week ending the 3rd inst., showing imports of 1,666,000, which is a daily average of 239,857 barrels.

Production Jumps

The Marine Corporation's No. 21 well in the Athens district of the Rosecrans field, is the only well yet completed at Rosecrans to show an increase of production. According to the company's production report the well made 1403 barrels on Friday, and 1334 barrels on Thursday, these figures contrasting with about 1190 barrels, production a week ago.

Gets Oil Cut

The Union Oil Company's Gray No. 1, the southerly outpost of the Rosecrans field, reported gray sand, showing a slight trace of oil, at 6133 feet yesterday. This well has had practically no showings since it was started.

PRODUCE MARKET IN SAN FRANCISCO

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—There was limited trading in all classes of fruits and vegetables today. Even bananas, which have been in fairly liberal supply, were almost inactive. About 15,000 boxes of apples moved out of city cold storage during the past week, leaving a balance of 228,417 boxes.

Bananas, per lb., Hawaiian, 6@7½; Central American, 6@7.

There was hardly the usual demand for artichokes and sweet potatoes, which may have been due, in part, to the higher price due on them. While potatoes were showing a slightly weaker tendency, and prices on Washington Gems registered a decline of 5c per cwt. Trading in onions has been very dull throughout most of the week.

Beans, 20@25; Florida, 15@22.

Potatoes, jobbing, Rivers, 1.50@2.65; Washington and Idaho Gems, 2.15@2.35 cwt.

Dairy, live stock and poultry quotations, unchanged.

Wheat Futures Sell at High on Present Market

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—A material change in the character of the foreign news, with export sales of around 2,000,000 bushels of North American wheat in the past two days, in the face of increased movement of Southern Hemisphere grain, led to aggressive buying of futures and all deliveries sold at a new high on the crop, and closed at practically the top, with May up to 1.89¾ and July to 1.63¾, with net gains of 3⅝@3¾. May finished at 1.89¾@1.89⅞, July 1.63¾@1.63¾ and September 1.51⅛@1.51⅜. Corn was ⅝@⅞ higher, with May 1.35@1.34¾, July 1.34⅞@1.34¾ and September 1.35. Oats gained ⅝@1⅛ and rye 1⅜@2⅜.

The grain markets gave an excellent account of themselves the past week, millions of bushels of corn being sold out by longs. Where all the grain went to was a mystery to the trade. The close was at net gains of 5⅛@5½ for the week, while corn was up 5⅜@6⅛, oats 5⅜@11¼ and rye 3⅜@4⅜. Lard was 20@45 higher, ribs 17½@43¾ higher and bellies unchanged to 5 cents higher.

The continued dock strike in Australia, combined with heavy rains in Argentina, promises to cause considerable delay in the free movement of the new Southern Hemisphere crops, and has apparently caused considerable anxiety on the part of importers, who have taken both cash and futures in North American markets on a big scale for several days. Export sales for the day exceeded 600,000 bushels, including 422,000 bushels of hard winter, via the gulf. Russia was reported negotiating for immense quantities of flour in Germany and is estimated to need 9,000,000 bushels of seed grain. Domestic milling demand was fair, with 25,000 bushels sold at Kansas City to Iowa mills, and a full cargo of flour was sold by Kansas City interests to Italy, which was also after hard winters at the seaboard.

With all deliveries of corn in new ground for the season, there was a lessening of local pressure, and less attention was paid to the slow domestic cash demand and the large discounts in the sample market. Country offerings to arrive were limited. Leading shorts were free buyers, and houses with country connections took small amounts in a persistent manner.

Oats were dull early, but toward the last there was a general movement on to cover shorts, which found offerings light. Some Canadian grain was sold for export at the seaboard, and Germany took barley at the highest price of the crop.

Rye was active and sharply higher, but failed to get into new ground. Export sales were 300,000 bushels, with Germany and Norway the buyers.

Strength in grains more than offset the large receipts of hogs and low prices at the yards and lard closed 23@32½ higher for the day, while ribs were 12½ cents higher. Bellies were 2½ cents lower to 12½ cents higher. Deliveries of January contracts were 350,000 pounds of lard.

ORANGES

The market on California navel oranges has held fairly steady the last week. In some sections alternate signs of weakness and strength have been displayed, while private sale markets have recorded little change over a week ago.

Shipments the last seven days have averaged 137 cars daily, a gain of thirty-four cars daily over the previous week.

Most of the fruit arriving now in eastern markets has been shipped since the frost. With few exceptions, this fruit has been giving excellent satisfaction to the trade and to the consumers. How fast oranges that test good on the tree now will go to pieces cannot be determined at this time. Suspicious fruit will soon be going through the water separators.

Continued cold nights throughout the citrus belt has kept growers and shippers on the anxious seat since the first frost of the winter Christmas Eve.

Some additional damage has undoubtedly resulted, the extent of which cannot be reliably estimated until later. In some districts much fruit that has not been frosted is beginning to drop before the frosted fruit, due to chilled stems.

California citrus fruit growers have no established precedent to guide them in safeguarding against frost danger. Preparedness at all times is the only safe rule. The entire month of January can be classed as a critical weather period.

Southern California navels have been slow to mature, color and size this season. The cold nights are now bringing out the color, but the fruit is not sizing up satisfactorily. Weather forecasts hold promise of heavy rain from the 19th to the 22nd inst., inclusive, which will help the size situation, if it materializes.

F.o.b. California quotations on fancy, free from frost navels are on a basis of $4.50 a box for sizes 216s and larger; $4.25 on 250s; $4 on 288s and $3.75 on 324s and smaller. Choice fruit is $1 a box less.

LEMONS

The demand for California lemons continues good in most markets.

F.o.b. California quotations are on a basis of $3.25 a box for choice 300s to $4.50 for extra choice 300s size.

There are on hand and available for sale within the next thirty days in all United States ports approximately 175 cars of foreign lemons, as compared with forty-five cars in 1924; 219 cars in 1923 and 110 cars in 1922 for the corresponding period.

CATTLE: Fairly liberal receipts for the week, estimated around 4500, coupled with a moderate supply direct to packers, proved more than adequate for trade requirements and prices dropped generally 10 to 15 cents on steers, while she stock lost around 25 to 50 cents, mostly the latter. The larger portion of this week's receipts was she stock and a fair representation of good cows and heifers put in their appearance. Several lots of steers from the Ogden show were offered. Among these were three choice 1100-pound steers at 10.50, one weighing 1190 pounds at 12.50, three averaging 1170 pounds at 9.50, one weighing 1910 pounds at 9.35 and a short load of good 1000 to 1022-pound weights from 8.00 to 8.25. The bulk of steers offered were mostly common and medium kinds averaging 950 to 1100 pounds that cleared from 6.50 to 7.60. Kinds on the canner and cutter order sold downward to 4.00.

A part load of choice 837-pound heifers from the Ogden show realized 8.00, while a load averaging 1020 pounds cleared for 7.25. Nine head of choice 1294-pound show cows made 7.00. The practical top on she stock was 6.25, paid for strictly good 1112-pound northern cows. However, odd head and small lots sold upward to 6.50. The price spread of 4.50 to 6.00 took in the bulk of fat cows and heifers, mostly northerns, while light southwesterns turned largely from 3.50 to 4.25, the lower priced kinds being only in cutter flesh. Canners and cutters lost 15 to 25 cents, the bulk of canners selling from 1.90 to 2.50, while most cutters went over from 3.00 to 3.50. Bulls were in fair demand and supply and ruled fully steady, when compared with last week's close. The bulk of bolognas cleared from 3.75 to 4.50. However, thin range bulls were fairly numerous from 2.50 to 3.25. Beef bulls cleared largely from 4.75 to 5.00, although odd head of strictly choice kinds sold as high as 7.00. Southwestern stockers and feeders turned largely from 4.50 to 5.00, while cows and heifers for feeder purposes went over mostly from 2.75 to 3.75.

CALVES: This week's supply of calves, both direct and through the yards, proved too great for local trade and several cars were reloaded and shipped to northern markets. Prices generally declined around 25 to 50 cents. Milk vealers, mostly 130 to 200-pound weights, turned from 8.00 to 11.00, with only odd head above the latter price. The bulk of southwesterns, 250 to 325-pound weights, cleared from 7.50 to 8.00, although more desirable kinds sold upward to 9.00. Weighty kinds and "bobs" sold downward to 5.00.

HOGS: Approximately 7500 hogs were offered on this week's market. This supply, coupled with about 9000 direct, was more than packers could handle readily and consequently slow trade developed on the closing days and declines of 50 cents to 75 cents were evident at the close. The closing top rests at 11.75. However, the extreme top was 12.00, scored the fore part of the week, while last week's closing top was 12.40. The bulk of 130 to 195-pound weights on the closing days cleared from 11.25 to 11.75, while strong weight slaughter pigs, light lights and mixed butchers turned largely from 10.25 to 11.00. A few light weight pigs sold downward to 9.25. Packing sows fluctuated somewhat, declining sharply the fore part of the week, but regaining some of the loss toward the close. However, values were still 15 to 25 cents lower, when compared with a week ago. The bulk went over from 9.00 to 9.25.

SHEEP: Nothing was offered this week in the ovine division. However, a strong undertone prevails in both lambs and sheep. In the general opinion of the trade, choice handy weight wooled lambs are quotable upward to 16.50, while choice light weight ewes are quotable upward to 8.50. However, packers advise if they are the right kinds they will bring more money.

Affairs of the Week

By Juana Neal Levy

[illegible] of Ash Wednesday and the season of Lent [illegible] year is extremely early, February 25, being the earliest date [illegible], Society is rushing all its affairs and exerting its efforts to [illegible] as much as possible into the short interval.

[illegible] Bachelors' ball will take [illegible] Friday evening preceding and [illegible] invitations will not go out un- [illegible] of this month. However, [illegible] debutante and belle is eager- [illegible] an invitation, the af- [illegible] being the great social event [illegible] season, and as each bache- [illegible] has the privilege of only one [illegible] guests, the list is perforce [illegible] exclusive and invitations are [illegible] to be desired and, of course, [illegible] prized.

[illegible] shortly following the first [illegible] month, is the opening of the [illegible] Glide in Vermont ave- [illegible] which has been much looked [illegible] to by the younger set, es- [illegible] although the older ma- [illegible] about as much interest- [illegible] anticipation of skating as [illegible] young belles and debutantes. [illegible] and announcements of [illegible] are also of much in- [illegible] affairs in honor of [illegible] being given and [illegible] the post-nuptial [illegible] the charming young [illegible] their return from [illegible] as many of them [illegible] pre-nuptial affairs [illegible] their entertain- [illegible] until after the [illegible]

[illegible] beautifully appointed [illegible] date was that [illegible] Church, daugh- [illegible] Ralph Owen [illegible] Homer W. Wessen- [illegible] which was [illegible] home of the [illegible] in Tenth street, [illegible] Westhafer of- [illegible] young bride, [illegible] popular members [illegible] set, is a niece of [illegible] Coble of Los An- [illegible] of Mrs. William [illegible] She was given in [illegible] father and wore [illegible] of white chif- [illegible] in pearls [illegible] tulle veil, [illegible] lace, form- [illegible] shape [illegible] of orange [illegible] The bridal [illegible] and lilies [illegible] the cere- [illegible] held, after [illegible] Wessendorff [illegible] for a wedding [illegible] and have [illegible] last Wednesday [illegible] Burbank. [illegible] young bride-elect, who is being much entertained this month, is Miss Gertrude Gilmor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Gilmor of Rosewood avenue, Hollywood, who recently announced her engagement to Dr. Ralph W. Taylor of Washington, at a charmingly arranged bridge tea given in honor of two brides of the season, Mrs. Jennor Webster (Cora Baker) and Mrs. Leon Gilmor (Marion Bass.)

The guests were mostly sorority sisters of the guests of honor and hostess, Phi Mu of University of Southern California. Dr. Taylor, who is the son of Mrs. Louise Taylor, is an alumnus of University of Southern California and a member of the Delta Sigma Delta Fraternity.

The wedding will be one of the events of the early summer, most probably in June, and after their return from an extended wedding trip, Dr. Taylor will bring his bride back to Los Angeles to make their home. Many affairs are being planned in the near future in honor of Miss Gilmor, although the dates are not yet all arranged.

Another charming young bride-elect is Miss Marjorie Gladys Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Morris of 330 South New Hampshire street, who announced her engagement last week to Henry L. Meyers of Minneapolis.

In honor of the betrothal, Mr. and Mrs. Morris and their daughter were at home Sunday during the afternoon and evening, introducing Mr. Meyers, who had come to pass the holidays with his fiancee. The wedding will be one of the events of early March. Mr. Meyers, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Meyers, is planning to take his bride abroad for a three months' honeymoon trip. Miss Morris, who will be the honor guest at numerous affairs before the wedding, was graduated from Los Angeles High School and finished at Girl's Collegia e. She is a member of the Alpha Beta Kappa Sorority.

Among the attractive members of the younger set are Miss Eleanor Donau and Miss Virginia Donau, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Hugo J. Donau of South Gramercy Place. One of the loveliest affairs of the month was the beautifully appointed tea given by the Misses Donau in the Rose Room of the Mary Louise, wnen 150 members of the younger set were bidden.

Miss Eleanor Donau was graduated last June from Marlboro School and is now attending the University of Southern California, while Miss Virginia is a senior at Marlboro School this year and will be graduated next June.

The Wilshire Country Club was the setting chosen by Miss Jeanette Toberman for an affair during the holidays when her guests included a large number of friends who were home for their vacation from University of California at Berkeley.

Christmas motif in the brilliant crimson and greens was employed in the decoration of both the clubrooms and tea table and the young hostess was assisted in receiving her guests by her mother, Mrs. Charles E. Toberman, and by Miss Augusta Parker of La Jolla.

Miss Toberman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Toberman of 1761 North Harvard Boulevard, Hollywood.

Among the attractive members of the young college set are Miss Elizabeth Lowther and Miss Lillian Lowther, daughters of Mrs. Howard Smiley Nichols of the Rampart who recently entertained with a beautifully appointed luncheon and bridge party.

The decorations were carried out in orange and green and covers arranged for Miss Janann Parr, Miss Virginia Bartlett, Miss Frances Mills, Miss Hazel Converse, Miss Dorothy Kinsey, Miss Doris Edwards and the hostesses.

The Misses Lowther were honor guests at a week-end party given by Miss Frances Mills at the Mills mountain cabin, Mount Baldy, motoring up and back.

Miss Elizabeth Lowther, who was graduated from Hollywood High School, is attending the University of California, Southern Branch, while Miss Lillian, who was graduated from the Denver High School in Colorado, is now a student at Miss Fulmer's in West Adams.

Mr. and Mrs. Nichols and the Misses Lowther are planning to make Los Angeles their permanent home and are domiciled at the Rampart until they decide on a home of their own.

For Visitor

One of the most charming visitors to Los Angeles this winter is Miss Georgina Strong Hicks, daughter of Frederick Hicks of Washington and New York City, who arrived several weeks ago to be the house guest of her aunt, Mrs. Dean Mason, and her grandmother, Mrs. Harriet W. R. Strong of Los Angeles and Whittier. Miss Hicks, who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Dean Mason at their delightful home in Lafayette Park Square, has been the incentive for a number of delightful affairs, among them the luncheon at the Biltmore Wednesday afternoon, with which Miss Alice Hicks entertained. Miss Hicks and her mother, Mrs. Frank Silas Hicks, have recently taken a house in Alexandria avenue for the winter, while her sister, Mrs. Robert Frank Gross, and Mr. Gross have moved into the old Erasmus Wilson place in Chester Place. The luncheon table Wednesday afternoon was exquisite in its appointments, the centerpiece being formed of corsage bouquets of pink cyclamen and white camellias, with sprays of maidenhair ferns. Those included were Miss Georgina Hicks, Miss Hortense McLaughlin, Miss Bernardine Murphy, Mrs. Leland Stanford Ross (Josephine Cook,) Miss Polly Schoder, Miss Margaret Martin, Miss Marguerite Brunswig, Miss Dorothy Lillian Wellborn, Miss Isadora Cunningham, Miss Muriel Flint, Miss Betty Bettingen and the hostess.

Invitations have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Murphy and their attractive daughter, Miss Bernardine, for a dinner-dance at the Biltmore Wednesday evening, the 28th inst., in honor of Miss Georgina Hicks, and Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDonnel Taylor are entertaining at the Midwick Country Club in her honor Saturday evening.

For Visitors

Dr. and Mrs. Isaac Hampshur Jones of 443 South Arden Boulevard entertained Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stockton White III of Philadelphia, in their box at the Philharmonic Orchestra concert last evening, and later at the assembly dance in the music room of the Biltmore. Those invited to meet the visitors were Mr. and

DEDICATED TO BETTER HOMES

California Furniture Co. Makes an Announcement of Great Importance to Buyers of Floor Coverings

Twice each year most retail home furnishing stores throughout the country conduct so-called "sales of discontinued patterns of floor coverings". The reduced prices for these brief periods are usually made at the suggestion of the manufacturers.

In past years, the "California" has followed this custom but in accordance with the general policy of this institution, the price reductions have not been publicly declared. As a result, the offering of these special values in floor coverings has been known only to the "California's" regular patrons. Undoubtedly many have been deprived of these twice-a-year opportunities for savings and may have gathered the erroneous idea that other stores may undersell the "California" during these periods.

To correct this false impression the "California has decided to tell the public the facts:

Right now the "California" has fifty high grade worsted Wilton Rugs, 9 feet x 12 feet—all of them 1924 beautiful designs—priced at $110.00 each. The 1925 designs in the same quality—are priced at $140.00 and $150.00 each.

These rugs include such well known makes as Whittall's Anglo Persian, Bigelows' Imperial Ispahans, Karagheusian's Herati and Hardwick & Magee's French Wilton.

Other standard sizes are now correspondingly re-priced.

The "California" does not wish to exploit this offering as a sale but it is felt that you are entitled to know that these rugs, which have been re-marked in accordance with the usual factory policy, are available now at very much less than the usual prices.

There is a showing of some of these rugs in one of our windows this week.

GREETS GUESTS AT LUNCHEON

Hostess Presides at Home Function

[William F. Snyder for National Illustrated News Syndicate]
Mrs. Norman Fraser

ONE of the charming hostesses of the season is Mrs. Norman Fraser of 236 North Kenmore avenue, who entertained recently with a beautifully appointed luncheon at her home. The decorations carried out the holiday motif. Guests included Mrs. Warren Williams, Mrs. J. T. Ferguson, Mrs. William Davis, Mrs. E. E. Kennedy, Mrs. May Uhler, Mrs. G. J. Woodward, Mrs. C. L. Beckell, Mrs. Z. Ketchum, Mrs. Kenneth Wooley, Mrs. Walter Sheil, Mrs. Margaret Munson, Mrs. S. S. Banning, Mrs. F. A. Andrews, Mrs. E. R. Wooley and Mrs. I. I. Parker.

Affairs of the Week

Mrs. Russell McDonnel Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Nesbit Kemp, Commander and Mrs. James Reed and Senator and Mrs. Thomas G. Patten.

Dinner and Theater

Among the delightful affairs of recent date was the dinner party with which Col. and Mrs. George J. Denis entertained at the California Club Friday evening, honoring Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Albert Bryant, who returned recently from an extended trip in the East. Mrs. Bryant went east some weeks ago, and Dr. Bryant joined her in New York City just before the Christmas holidays, which they passed there with their son and daughter, Ernest, Jr., and Miss Susanna Bryant. The dinner table Friday evening was centered by an exquisite cluster of corsage bouquets of pink rosebuds, lilies of the valley and sprays of maidenhair ferns. Those included were Dr. and Mrs. Bryant, Mr. and Mrs. Allan C. Balch, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Francis Sartori, Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDonnel Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. James Rathwell Page, and the hosts. After the dinner Col. and Mrs. Denis assembled their guests and motored to the Biltmore Theater to see May Robson.

Dr. and Mrs. Bryant also were honor guests at a charmingly arranged informal tea Thursday afternoon given by Mrs. Allan C. Balch in her apartments at the Biltmore.

Dinner Honoree

Mr. and Mrs. William Spencer Hook, Jr., of West Adams street, are entertaining Tuesday evening with a dinner party in honor of Miss Alice Henry, the attractive young daughter of Mrs. J. J. A. Van Kaathoven, who, with her mother, has recently returned from several years' study abroad.

Motor Trip

Mrs. Teresa Stulb returned recently from a week's motor trip with friends to San Diego and Hotel del Coronado. On the way back Mrs. Stulb stopped for a short visit with relatives in La Jolla.

Home from Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Connor, whose marriage was one of the events of New Year's Eve, have returned from their wedding trip and are domiciled for the rest of the winter in West Adams street. The marriage was solemnized in St. John's Church, West Adams street, Rev. George A. Davidson officiating. Mrs. Connor is attending University of California, Southern Branch, and is an Alpha Xi Delta Sorority member, while Mr. Connor is an alumnus of the same university, and is a member of the Phi Kappa Kappa Fraternity. Mrs. Connor was formerly Miss Lois Hope Chamberlin of this city.

Engagement Announced

Formal announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Vaughn of 1032 South Oxford avenue, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lucille Vaughn, to Bert J. Lyons of 151 Hanchette avenue, San Jose. The wedding will be one of the events of the near future in San Francisco, and after their return from a wedding trip, the young couple will make their home in the former city. Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Florence B. Walker entertained with a dinner party at her home in Kendall avenue, South Pasadena, honoring Miss Vaughn, who left Friday evening for the north. Formal Opening Formal announcement of the opening dinner and ball of the Hotel Huntington, Wednesday evening, the 28th inst., is creating quite a stir in social circles of Los Angeles and Pasadena, especially in the Oak Knoll section, where the stately edifice is located. The opening will take the form of a dinner, entertainment and ball, the main features to be the appearance of the Balalaika Russian Orchestra, a gorgeously costumed band of Russian musicians, directed by M. Dobrohotoff, formerly with the Russian Imperial Orchestra. The immense dining-room of the Huntington will be arranged to resemble a California garden scene.

Home Again

Mr. and Mrs. Henry O'Neil, whose recent marriage was one of the beautifully appointed events of last month, have returned from their wedding trip and are domiciled for the winter at the Gaylord in Wilshire Boulevard. Mrs. O'Neil was formerly Miss Janice Post of Pasadena. Miss Nadine Nellis and Miss Virginia Post, cousins of the attractive young bride, who came from their several schools and colleges in the north to assist as bridesmaids at the wedding, have returned after a series of beautifully planned affairs in their honor. During their visit here they were guests of their mother, Mrs. Gertrude Post Nellis, and Mrs. Charles Nelson Post. Miss Nellis is a student at Miss Ransom's School in Piedmont, while Miss Virginia Post is attending the University of Washington.

Bridge Luncheon

Mrs. W. I. Hamilton entertained Tuesday with a luncheon and bridge at the Mary Louise, complimenting Mrs. John I. Locke of Seattle, who is the guest of friends in Los Angeles this month. The table was arranged in the Chinese Room, and the place cards and favors carried out the oriental colorings. Covers were laid for twelve guests.

Farewell Party

Mrs. Ludwig G. B. Erb of Garden Court Apartments entertained Thursday afternoon with a farewell luncheon and bridge party at the Hollywood Athletic Club, her guests including Mrs. John McKee, Mrs. Harry W. Pearls Have Been Gifts for Ages

Pearls have been highly prized gifts since the dawn of history. In this one thing, at least, feminine fancy has been constant, for the lustrous beauty of pearls maintains an endless charm.

Pearls lend themselves to nearly every kind of jeweled embellishment—necklaces, pendants, rings, bracelets or ear drops. At Brock and Company's you will find each of these ornamental forms set with the choices of Oriental pearls. Both in magnitude and quality, our present pearl collection is the finest in our history.

Visitors Welcome.

Palais de Glace

Preparations are fast nearing completion for the much postponed opening of the Palais de Glace in Vermont avenue, where society is planning to skate and enjoy the many ice sports which have been dreamed of and indulged in after a long cold motor trip into the mountains. From all present promises the ice rink will have its formal opening between the first and fifth of next month, and many plans are being made in social circles to have it an immense success. New costumes are being fashioned and each debutante is vying with her best friend for the niftiest and prettiest costumes. The list of box holders reads like the social register, as its personnel is composed of more than 150 of the four hundrd. The program for the opening has brought to Los Angeles the foremost skating talent in the country. In Harley Davidson and his partner, Carolyn Traske, and Mlle. Margot, fancy skating art has been developed to the peak of perfection, also Charlie Ukaila, speed skating king of Finland. These skaters promise a treat which is being looked forward to with great anticipation. A novel feature of the Palais de Glace will be the tea, coffee and chocolate service which is being arranged, so that by way of the tea carts, every delicacy for refreshment may be enjoyed in the intervals of skating. Visiting in the different boxes also will be quite a feature, and altogether the Palais de Glace is promising to fill a long-felt want in the social whirl of Los Angeles. Those who know how to skate will shine; those who do not will have to learn if they keep in the whirl of social activity, for the rink will be the center of activity for the rest of the winter and possibly well into the summer months. So, skate or learn how to skate seems to be the slogan at the present time.

Visiting Daughters

Mr. and Mrs. Chester L. Whitnah of Canton, O., who formerly made their home in Los Angeles, are enjoying a delightful sojourn in Los Angeles, where they are guests of their two daughters, Mrs. Munro Montgomery (Mildred Whitnah) and Mrs. George Rex Barton (Dorothea Whitnah,) at their several homes in Beverly Hills. Mr. and Mrs. Whitnah also are visiting for part of the time with the former's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Rohrer, at their home in West Adams street. Mr. and Mrs. Whitnah, who arrived just before the Christmas holidays, will not return to their eastern home until some time in February.

Engagement Told

One of the delightful affairs of yesterday afternoon was the bridge and mah jongg tea given by Miss Gladys Miller, Miss Ethel Miller and Miss Marjorie Watkins at the home of Mrs. Lloyd C. Miller, 1769 Tamarind avenue, Hollywood, the house being beautifully decorated with a profusion of carnations and ferns, while the place favors and tally scores at each table carried out a different color scheme in pastel shades of orange, orchid, pink rose, green, lavender, blue and yellow. The rooms were lighted by immense floor lamps and the feature of the afternoon came when, with the giving of the prizes, cards were inclosed announcing the engagement of Miss Watkins to Karl J. Dorsey, son of Mrs. Nancy Ellen Dorsey of 1658 West Fifty-first Place. Miss Watkins, who is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Watkins of 4550 West Eighteenth street, was graduated from high school in Illinois and is a Mu Phi Kappa sorority member, while Mr. Dorsey was graduated from University of Southern California and is a member of Omicron Pi Sigma fraternity. Those included in the afternoon's party were Mrs. Howard Bentley, Mrs. Cambridge Erlund, Mrs. Frank Shellenbach, Mrs. Roger Neal, Mrs. Edward Paine, Mrs. Addison Wells, Mrs. George Robert Green, Mrs. Arthur Herzog, Mrs. Sydney Bowers, Mrs. Howard Olney, Mrs. Alice Harvnot, Mrs. Harold Bishop, Mrs. Donald Roberts, Mrs. C. J. Watkins, Mrs. L. C. Miller, Miss Olga Nelson, Miss Ruth Larimer, Miss Helen McPherrin, Miss Mabel Lockman, Miss Kathleen Bronson, Miss Virginia Bronson, Miss Mary Jane Bronson, Miss Georgia Truitt, Miss Marjorie Kratz, Miss Margaret McIntyre, Miss Catherine Van Tilburg, Miss Rosaline Hill, Miss Ruth Watkins, Miss Meriam Epstein, Miss Jane Davis, Miss Marjorie Carrington, Miss Irene Lyons and the hostesses. No date is set for the wedding.

Sorority Luncheon

Kappa Appa Gamma Alumnae Association were guests at a charmingly arranged luncheon yesterday afternoon, at the Assembly Tea Rooms in South Flower street. Among the hostesses were Miss Marie Lindsley, Miss Margaret Burkhalter, Miss Frances Burkhalter, Mrs. Charles Kaiser, Mrs. Jack Van Dorn, Mrs. Gilbert Quirk, Mrs. Harold Huntsberger, Mrs. Malcolm Campbell, Miss Myrtle A. Masters and Miss Janet Smith.

Engagement Told

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Elna Carber to Capt. William Russell Pinkerton, the wedding to be one of the events of next June. Capt. Pinkerton has been for the last two years instructor at Urban Military Academy and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pinkerton of Jacksonville, Ill. He was graduated from the University of Illinois in 1923.

Honoree at Luncheon

One of the enjoyable events of the coming week will be the luncheon with which Mrs. Stephen A. Vavra is entertaining, Thursday afternoon, at Beverly Hills Hotel, in honor of Mrs. Charlotte Cameron, O.B.E., F.R.G.S., of London, Eng., who is wintering in California. Mrs. Cameron is known as the world's greatest woman traveler and met Mrs. Vavra in Tahiti, South Sea Islands, through a mutual friend, Mrs. George Black, wife of the former Governor of the Yukon Territory, Canada, who is well known here. Mrs. Cameron, who loves California, came this time to assist at the opening of the Palace of the Legion of Honor, which Mrs. Adolph B. Spreckels gave to San Francisco, and as a proof of her devotion presented there her marvelous collection of Egyptian jewels, some of which date back 3000 years B.C. At the luncheon she will give some interesting experiences and later a group of songs will be contributed by Cecil Osik Ellis.

Announces Betrothal

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Kendall of 6430 Del Valle Drive have formally announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Virginia Kendall, to John R. Bentley of Wilmette, Ill. Miss Kendall was graduated from University of California at Berkeley and was a Gamma Phi Beta there. With her family, Miss Kendall formerly made her home in Wilmette, where the romance started. Mr. Bentley was graduated from Northwestern University and is a Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity member. He came to Los Angeles four months ago to make his home. No date has been set for the wedding.

...ing Party

... Miss Gauger entertained ... a delightful dancing party at her home in West Sixth street, the evening being enjoyed in dancing, and a delicious buffet supper was served at midnight. Among the guests were Miss Margaret H. Allan, Miss Delia M. Hartung, Miss Vaughnie Christian, Miss Lorraine MacDonald, Miss Shirley Sue Fox, Miss Beatrice Christian, Miss Peggy Ruth Gauger, Irving Enz, Adrian Spoon, Cecil Bolsom, Charles Riddle, Harold Fisher of San Gabriel, and James Eingate of San Francisco.

Dinner-Dance

One of the enjoyable affairs of recent date was the dinner party and dance with which Mrs. Emma Grassell and Charles A. Cooke entertained at the Maryland, the table being most attractive in its decorations. A miniature transcontinental train centered the long table, all the paraphernalia of railway equipment, including a small terminal and stations being fashioned. A miniature snow-covered mountain enhanced the decorations at one end of the table and small orange groves being the feature of the other end. Each guest was given a long railway ticket which indicated the personel of their dinner partner and the place-cards represented well-known stations of California. Those included were Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Cox of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer R. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Atmore L. Baggot, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hilliard, Mrs. Thomas G. Winnett, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Nickerson, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Swayne, Mrs. John E. Skirk, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Warner, Dr. and Mrs. J. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Felin, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Dye and W. T. Hanford. After the dinner and delightful program, dancing was the feature of the evening's entertainment.

Home Wedding

One of the prettily arranged affairs of the week was the marriage of Miss Hazelle Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul G. Nelson of Twenty-second street, to William G. Tatte, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tatte of Bell, the ceremony taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. Charles Fishburn officiating. Miss Maybelle Nelson assisted as maid of honor and Miss Susan Tatte was bridesmaid, while Floyd Nelson and Victor Tatte attended Mr. Tatte. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a beautiful gown of white georgette over satin, the veil caught to the head in coronet shape by sprays of orange blossoms. She carried an arm shower of brides' roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Following the ceremony a dinner for the assembled guests was served.

Bridge-Mah Jongg

Mrs. Madge W. Hearne entertained at a beautifully appointed bridge and mah-jongg luncheon in the Chinese room of the Mary Louise, Monday afternoon, honoring Mrs. Jack Syers of San Marcus, Tex., and Mrs. W. C. Silliman of San Antonio, who are returning to their several homes after a prolonged visit in Los Angeles and Southern California. The table decorations, favors and place-cards were all carried out in the same Chinese motif and covers arranged for twenty guests.

In the North

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Robey Simons of South Plymouth Blvd., are enjoying a week in San Francisco with a party of friends, returning to Los Angeles Wednesday.

Church Wedding

A wedding of much interest to local society was that of Miss Iva Vivian French, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. French of Covina, to Everett Cayot, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Cayot of South Hoover street, the ceremony taking place in the First Presbyterian Church, Rev. G. A. Briegleb, D.D., of Westlake Presbyterian Church officiating. Preceding the ceremony a brief musicale consisting of a harp solo by Miss Betty Shelton and a vocal duet, Miss Frances Young by Miss Marion Bronson and Miss Ruth Bronson, all of Los Angeles, was given. The wedding music was rendered by Mrs. Henion Robinson. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin, the veil of tulle held in place by orange blossoms and lilies of the valley, and she carried an arm shower of white sweet peas and valley lilies. Miss May French, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, wearing a frock of ombre georgette, the color note being re-emphasized in her bouquet of roses. Little Joan Cutten, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Cutten of Hollywood, in a lavender frock, scattered rose petals in the pathway of the bride, while Jimmie Barnett, small son of Mr. and Mrs. James Barnett of Venice, carried the wedding ring. An aisle was formed to the altar by Miss Ruth Bronson, Miss Marion Bronson, Miss Frances Young and J. J. French, brother of the bride, Leonard Allen, Carl Brown and Harrison Hopkins. Stanley Cayot served his brother as best man. Immediately following the ceremony, the bridal party and entire wedding company adjourned to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was held.

Wedding Announced

Announcements are being received by numerous friends of the recent marriage of Chester O. Blackburn, formerly of Stanford University, to Miss Ina Pocock of Alameda. Mr. Blackburn, who has his A. B. and M. A. degrees from Stanford University, is now carrying out post-graduate work at the Colorado School of Mines in Colden, Colo., through a scholarship financed by the Ventura Refining Company.

Studio Party

One of the enjoyable studio soirees given by Bertha Vaughn at her charming studio in Chickering Building was that of last week, when an informal musical program was presented by Homer Simmons, Electa Ferry, Ruth May Shafner and the hostess, who sang three numbers. A buffet supper was served, after which more music was enjoyed. Those enjoying the evening included Mr. and Mrs. Walter Body, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ferry, Mr. and Mrs. Winslow Fitch, Mrs. E. Luke, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Maude, Miss Nellie Whybark, Miss Cornelia Glover, Miss Ruth Shafner Gardiner Hart, Homer Simmons, Fred Maguire and George Boyd.

Musicale-Luncheon

One of the large affairs of the last week was the beautifully appointed musicale and luncheon given Monday afternoon at the Mary Louise by Mrs. R. W. Clemson and her daughter, Mrs. George Clemson. The tables were grouped about the spacious ballroom and each was resplendant with its huge basket of spring flowers, candelabra and French dolls in pastel shades. Unique place cards and favors marked covers for 100 guests. Following the luncheon a delightful musical program was presented by Mrs. Bessie Howell, soprano, Robert Altar, 'cellist, Mrs. John Walker and Miss Frieda Peycke.

At Country Club

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Craig chose El Caballero Country Club as the setting for an elaborate breakfast party Sunday morning. The breakfast was followed by the second of the series of golf tournaments to be played at this fascinating country club, the high scores being won by R. M. Barker with a tally of 38, which set a new record, for the eighteen-hole obstacle course. A two-ball foursome was won by Mrs. Craig and Mr. Barker, who went into the finals with Miss Joan Rice Burroughs and Rex Goodcell, Jr.

Sorority Party

Los Angeles chapter of Gamma Phi Beta sorority entertained very delightfully Saturday afternoon at a bridge tea at the home of Mrs. Paul Jeffers, 712 Bedford Drive, Beverly Hills. The affair was enjoyed by members of the active chapters of the national sorority at the University of California, Southern Branch, as well as members of the alumnae chapter. More than 150 guests were present. Among those who entertained guests at the card games were Mrs. Paul Jeffers, Mrs. Ralph Shepherd, Mrs. Philip Sterry, Mrs. George Cryer, Mrs. Sperry Stone, Mrs. B. O. Greening, Mrs. A. McFee, Mrs. O. E. Slater, Mrs. Morris Daly, Mrs. George Hunt, Mrs. Richard Bullis, Mrs. E. E. Godfrey, Mrs. Katherine Golden, Mrs. Robert Underhill, Mrs. T. A. Smith, Miss Dorothy Moser, Miss Frances Marten, Miss Jessie Duggan, Miss Lila Hanson, Miss Virginia Kendall, Miss Marion Wylie, Miss Helen Schenck, Miss Jean Oliver, Miss Frances Lucas, Miss Loris Alexander, Miss Pauline Gartzman and Miss Mildred Cleland.

Dinner Party

One of the most enjoyable affairs of New Year's Eve was the dinner party given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Tryon, 526 South Commonwealth avenue, at which the members of the Brownie Club and their husbands were guests. A 6 o'clock dinner was served, the tables being beautifully decorated and, following the dinner, a musical program was given. At midnight supper was served. Those enjoying the evening included Mr. and Mrs. Tryon, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Epling, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Weller, Mr. and Mrs. K. L. Wilcox, Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Noble, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Browne, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Cottle, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Brown, Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Church, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Lockwood, Mrs. Alice Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Colby, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Moses, Mrs. A. Smith, Mrs. Hawksford and Miss Tait of San Francisco.

For Bride-Elect

Miss Anita Brinkmeyer of Hollywood was the guest of honor Saturday afternoon at a luncheon and shower at the Elite, given by a bevy of her school friends. Miss Brinkmeyer will become the bride of Walter Ellis of Santa Barbara early in the spring.

House Party

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Herman of Leeward avenue were hosts at an enjoyable house party in their new home. A delicious supper was served the thirty guests later in the evening. The guests included were Dr. and Mrs. Murray Olstead, newly installed as Rabbi in the new Temple Beth-El, Hollywood, Mr. and Mrs. Rohrlich, Mr. and Mrs. A. Silverman, Mr. and Mrs. A. Morhor, Mr. and Mrs. S. Barr, Mr. and Mrs. H. Altman, Mrs. Whitman, Mrs. Jacobs, Mr. and Mrs. A. Herman, Mr. and Mrs. B. Goldstein, Mr. and Mrs. N. Romoff, Mr. and Mrs. Belansky, Mrs. Jack Altman, Mrs. Waite of St. Louis and the Misses Du Rohrich, Thelma Silverman, Jean Gulshotu, Evelyn Rohrlich and Esther Konoffsky.

Out of Town

Pasadena

Social affairs in Pasadena during the past week have consisted chiefly of small informal parties, luncheons and dinners, among them being the delightful miscellaneous shower at which Miss Peggy Hatcher entertained complimenting Miss Estelle Schaffer. Guests included Miss Lela Sebree, Miss Rose Nash, Miss Emma Ganz, Miss Captola Chase, Miss Jeanne Bobbitt, Miss Marguerite Deutch, Miss Agnes Hansen, Miss Mary Rogers, Miss Goldie Miller, Miss Stella Schultz, Miss Kate Lord, Miss Ethel Willacy, Miss Ida Keenan, Mrs. E. Rupert, Mrs. A. Keefer, Mrs. S. M. Clark, Mrs. A. Haley, Mrs. F. Wagner, Mrs. S. Moorhouse, Mrs. C. C. Farmer, Mrs. E. Waterman, Mrs. B. Lawler, Mrs. Mattie F. O'Reilly, Mrs. H. Yale, Mrs. E. Brorman, Mrs. A. Elliott and the honor guest and hostess.

Hotel Huntington was the scene for a charmingly appointed luncheon and bridge given by Mrs. Thaddeus C. Jones of 1579 Lombardy Road, an elaborate arrangement of sweet peas and ferns making the luncheon table extremely attractive. Covers were laid for thirty.

Celebrating the fourth anniversary of the Flintridge Club there were many luncheons, bridge and mah jongg parties yesterday afternoon, among the luncheon reservations being those of Miss E. Martin, who entertained twenty; Mrs. Kay M. Moorhouse, Mrs. Lynn Reynolds and Mrs. Clarence Webber, who invited sixteen; Mrs. Pendleton, Mrs. C. F. Brokaw and Mrs. C. B. Malone, who entertained large groups.

Mr. and Mrs. Pardee Erdman, who make their home at the Hotel Vista del Arroyo, entertained a group of Princeton graduates at the hotel recently, among those present being Mr. and Mrs. Philip Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. John G. MacConnell, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Purdy and Andrew W. Stewart of Pasadena; Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. South Pasadena

The engagement of Miss Maria Stanley Caldwell to William Fremont Wagner was announced by Miss Caldwell's mother, Mrs. William W. Caldwell, at a charmingly appointed luncheon given at her home, 1849 Spruce street, recently. Mr. Wagner is the son of Dr. and Mrs. A. F. Wagner of Los Angeles. Guests at the affair included Mrs. A. F. Wagner of Los Angeles, Mrs. John M. Olney of Utah, Mrs. Lamont of Wisconsin, Mrs. Clarence White of Pomona, Mrs. Paul Bentley of Claremont, Miss Elizabeth Eakin and Miss Grace Miller of Claremont, Miss Marjorie Bentley, Miss Katherine Cooper and Miss Katherine Millard of Long Beach, Miss Jessie Shephard of Glendale, Mrs. Edith Peterson and Miss Maria Caldwell.

Mrs. Herbert Schaff entertained at a smart luncheon Wednesday. The luncheon table was centered with a basket of blue and gold blossoms, the favors and other table accessories carrying out the same color scheme. Those present were Mrs. Louise A. Walker, Mrs. Charles Ferry and Mrs. George Cecil Cowing of Pasadena; Mrs. Sherman A. Paddock, Mrs. George D. Wheeler and Mrs. John Diephaus of South Pasadena; Mrs. Horace W. Blum, Mrs. John Neal Hogg, Mrs. Harry Smith and Mrs. George Charette of Los Angeles; Mrs. John Bordeman of Rosemead and the hostess, Mrs. Schaff.

Honoring Mrs. Charles B. Boothe of 1515 Garfield avenue, South Pasadena, vice-president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, a reciprocity luncheon will be given at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles, next Tuesday at 1 o'clock. A number of reservations have already been made by local members of the order.

Hallett Gilberti of Pasadena, noted American composer, with Mrs. Gilberti and Mrs. Alice Forsyth Moser, were honored at a luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Manwaring of 1010½ Brent avenue. Places were marked for Mr. and Mrs. Hallett Gilberti and Mrs. Alice Moser of Pasadena, Mrs. R. I. Simpson and Mrs. Arthur Green of South Pasadena, Mrs. R. S. Hoagland of Los Angeles, Mr. Ravanel and Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Manwaring.

Mrs. Seward A. Simons of 1107 Buena Vista street, left recently for Washington, D. C., where with Mrs. John C. Urquhart, she will represent the California Federation of Women's Clubs at a conference of ten women's organizations meeting next week.

Among the delightful after-holiday events was the dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Luckel at their home, 1824 Laurel street. Guests at the affair were: Mrs. John Dolfinger, Miss Nell Birk, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Birk and Jack and Louis Birk of Monrovia, John Ladrick of Cleveland, O., and John Benzing of Indianapolis, Ind.

Mrs. George Parkman Cronk

One of the beautifully appointed weddings of the season was that of Miss Louise Bennett, attractive daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles L. Bennett of Fedora street, and George Parkman Cronk of San Pedro, the ceremony taking place in the chapel of St. Xavier with Rev. Dr. Gooden officiating. The bride was graduated from University of Southern California and is a Delta Gamma, while Mr. Cronk is also graduated from the same university. Miss Dorothy Bennett was maid of honor, Mrs. Frederic Buckley was matron of honor and the bridesmaids included Miss Martha Ann Doerr, Miss Virginia Madison and Miss Pauline Hammer.

Edgar Allan Cruze, Mrs. C. H. Minckler, Mrs. Harry Morgan, Mrs. Charles Noble, Mrs. G. C. Towner, Mrs. Vincent Conroy, Mrs. Jack Gill, Mrs. Jack Williams, Mrs. Otis Graham and Miss Mary Hammon, Miss Betty Bostick and Miss Dorothy Canaga.

Miss Thuel Ress and Miss Viola Hanson were cohostesses Wednesday evening at a miscellaneous shower given at 837 Cherry avenue, as a courtesy to Mrs. John T. Shepard II, better known as Miss Lovella Sandburg. A messenger boy delivered the gifts, admired by all who then turned their attention to hemming linen tea towels for Mrs. Shepard. Featuring the refreshments served late in the evening, was the ice cream in molds representing brides. Guests included twenty-eight friends from this city, Los Angeles and Pasadena.

Prior to the departure of Miss Ida Berry of Honolulu, her mother, Mrs. Maggie Riggs, was hostess to a group of young folk Saturday evening in her home, 14 Maine avenue. Yellow and brown, Hawaiian colors, were employed in the decorations. A coconaut centered the board where places were marked by Hula dancer cards. In connection with the various games was the travel contest, when each guest wrote a description of the country which appealed most strongly to his imagination. Miss Riggs won the prize, a ticket to the island.

Mr. and Mrs. John P. Mills entertained a guest group of sixty, including members of the Charles King players headed by Dudley Ayres and Rose Ludwig, Saturday evening in their Chateau Thierry home which had been elaborately decorated with floral pieces. Punch was served during the dancing in the solarium where a local theater's orchestra furnished the music. Supper was served in the dining room at the close of the festivities.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Hutchinson announced the date, January 28, of their daughter's wedding, Wednesday evening, in their home, 1914 East First street, when Miss Bess Hutchinson will become the bride of Oran Cremer. Pink and lavendar sweet peas centered the prettily appointed refreshment board were gilded nut baskets containing the names and date of marked covers for fifteen.

Members of the Owls' High School Club entertained with their annual banquet Thursday evening in the Oriental room of a local cafe. Rose colored sweet peas, carnations and ferns filled a basket to center the table. The rose shades predominating were carried out in the candles and place cards marking places for twenty-five. Phil Dixon, president of the Owls, acting as toastmaster, presented Prof. David Burcham, who in turn introduced the speaker of the evening, City Attorney Bruce Mason, a Poly High alumnus. Humorous stories given by William Miller, concluded the program.

Nine red blazing candles atop a big birthday cake told the friends of Jack Cornelius, Friday, just how old he is, at the happy affair given by his mother, Mrs. Guy E. Cornelius, in their home, 334 Euclid avenue, Belmont Heights. Carrying out a red and green color scheme in her table decorations, smilax trailed on the cloth and nut cups in the chosen colors marked the places for a dozen kiddies.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Jones gathered about them Thursday evening a guest group of ten at the celebration of Mr. Jones' birthday anniversary, in their home, 2215 East Ocean Boulevard. Bridge was the evening's diversion.

San Fernando

Miss Mabel Duncan of Chatsworth Drive, one day last week entertained a number of friends at a "backward party." The invitations were written backward and everything else of the party was done in an opposite direction. Among the prize winners were Miss Irma Molitz and Miss Margaret Holden. Refreshments were served at the close of the evening. Guests were Mmes. F. W. Williman, Gloria Bobo, Mr. and Mrs. J. Boardman and Misses Lurline Harlow and Bessie Duncan.

Dr. A. D. Houghton of Berkeley is a guest of Arthur Simpson. Dr. Houghton will visit friends in Los Angeles before returning home.

Mrs. J. W. Garner and Miss Clara Walker one day last week entertained the members of St. Simon's Episcopal Church Guild at the Black Cat Cafe. Plans were made for the entertainment of Bishop Stevens on his arrival in San Fernando.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Vane on Hubbard avenue was the scene of a happy gathering last Friday, when they had as guests friends they had known in the East. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. George Cook of La Crosse, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cook of Beverly Hills, and Orton Cary of Orosi, Cal.

A recent social affair was the dinner given at Hotel Porter by Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Porter. The decorations were made by Mrs. F. M. Wright. Sixty guests were present. After the dinner, all went to the Hubbard home, where a varied social entertainment was enjoyed.

Another dinner party of recent date was the one given by Mr. and Mrs. George Waite at their home. Places were laid for Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Waite of San Diego; Dr. O. Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Lymon Waite, Lancaster, and Mrs. Albert Gross.

Van Nuys

Miss Mary Jane Keffer assisted Miss Mary Daniels at a formal tea given last week at Miss Daniels's home on San Vicente Boulevard, Santa Monica.

Mr. and Mrs. William Andrew of East Victory Boulevard, entertained with a dinner and bridge party one day last week. Places were laid for Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Petit and Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Keffer.

Mrs. W. W. Todd entertained last Thursday at her home on Victory Boulevard in honor of Mrs. L. S. Welborn. Among guests were Mmes. George Roessel, Charles Clark, Nathan Hanson, Roland Flower, Stanley Twomey, U. E. McClarey and C. D. Staley. First prize at bridge was won by Mrs. Welborn. The consolation went to Mrs. McClarey.

The Van Nuys Chapter of the Westminster Guild, was entertained one day during the week by Mrs. U. G. Chadeayne and Miss Olive Chadeayne, at their home on Hazeltine avenue. The members present are leaders of the younger social set. They were: Misses Mary Kerr, Betty Farquharson, Edith Bishop, Gertrude Franch, Alta Colgrove, Mary Jane Keffer, Dorothy Van Petton, Marion Plummer, Gertrude Brown, Ina Smith, Isabelle Carlson, Vera Baker, Ruth Godber, Ruth Smith, Gertrude Allington, Elizabeth Inglis, Katherine Stauffer, Mae Drake, Elma Snyder, Irene Chapman and Mrs. H. S. Trotter.

Mrs. Merle Cooper, William Cooper, Mrs. Mamie Cooper and Fred Cooper were members of a reunion party given to Colorado friends in Los Angeles last Tuesday.

Miss Jessie Campbell has returned here after a stay at Long Beach.

Burbank

At an informal supper-dance, Miss Thelma Gibbs entertained a group of her young friends one evening last week at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Gibbs, on Grinnell Drive. Fifteen guests enjoyed the affair.

An enjoyable gathering took place in the Magnolia Park section one day last week and the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. French. Among guests present were Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Grisby, Mrs. Harold Timmonds and Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Monroe.

Last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Koppes entertained a group of friends at dinner. Covers were laid for Mrs. M. J. Spencer, Miss Lillian Monroe and Frank Colstrom, the latter two of Hollywood.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Kirkham last Saturday were hosts to the Saturday Bridge Club at their home on Verdugo avenue. Games were enjoyed at three tables. The prize-

DIAMONDS
of Highest Quality

There's quite a difference in the quality of diamonds and it is asserted by experts that Donavan & Seamans Co. have a collection of the highest quality diamonds obtainable. No purer stones bedeck a royal crown or diadem.

You'll appreciate the beautiful stones to be seen here, all free from flaws or discolorations. They are cut to true standard in order to radiate the best reflective and brilliant qualities and are set in elegant examples of jewel craftsmanship.

Donavan & Seamans Co. always buy for cash and, therefore, maintain a record for selling the finest quality of diamonds at the lowest possible prices.

Discounts or alleged reductions on genuinely perfect diamonds are impossible, because a good diamond always holds its price.

Really, there's great satisfaction and joy in knowing that there is a jewelry company here offering diamonds unsurpassable, at prices so reasonable that no other firm dares to outmatch. Just see the diamonds at this store if you want the highest quality.

The Tuesday Bridge Club was entertained recently by Mrs. Richard Humphrey at her home on Seventh street with luncheon preceding the afternoon spent in playing cards.

Owensmouth

One of the very happy affairs of the past week for the younger set was the theater party and supper-dance given on Wednesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Matthews for their daughter Miss Harriette. Limerick placecards describing the foibles of the guests marked covers for the Misses Patricia Wood, Emma Gidding, Vena Wadleigh, Marjory Howe, Harriette Matthews and Messrs. Olliver Gidding, Wayne Fitzgerald, Robert Bechtelheimer, John Wiley and Arnold Christensen.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Beckstead and son Alan enjoyed a delightful visit in Los Angeles Friday and Saturday. The guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Clemsen, 1657 Victoria Drive. An evening at the theater, a morning of golf with lunch at the Wilshire Country Club were some of the pleasures enjoyed.

Mrs. Ethel Williams is spending the week-end at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. P. Chamberlain, in Santa Paula.

Azusa

The home of Mrs. Walter Heth on San Gabriel avenue was the scene of a most delightful party last Friday evening when the Misses Margaret Alexander and Aileen Dilley entertained with a surprise glass shower in honor of Miss Alice Greninger, who is to become the bride of Paul Kiser of Glendora in the late spring. The house was most charmingly decorated in orange and green. Little Gloria May Robinson dressed as a cupid drew a small wagon laden with gifts into the rooms after the guests had arrived. Dainty refreshments of fruit salad in orange cups, orange cake and orange baskets of candy were served to the following guests: Misses Dorothy Moon, Mildred Davis, Sadie Green, Ruth Smith, Virginia Kuhn, Louise and Marion Kiser, Edith Chandler, Laura and Mary Goalby, Edith White, Martha Junod, Bernice Norcross, Helen Gibson, Violet Miles, Virginia Bonner, Mary Johnson and the Misses Awl.

E. J. Graham, Hugh Morgan, Louie Menard, S. G. Durrel, and M. H. Goslin spent several days this week duck hunting at the Pasuza Duck Club near Pond.

Mrs. E. A. Stevens and Miss Gertrude Helmer and Roy Bradford of Hollywood were the dinner guests, Sunday evening, of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Templeman.

H. F. Moseley is spending the day with his mother, Mrs. Ammer Moseley of San Bernardino.

Oxnard

At the regular meeting of the Oxnard Music Club held at the home of Mrs. L. F. Roussey, Tuesday evening, the subject of the study evening was Scandinavian folk songs and grieg. Mrs. W. J. Booth and Miss Violet Ruben were hostesses and the evening was a most interesting one. A large number of members were present.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Moller entertained at dinner Sunday evening, last, guests from out of town, who included Miss Tulita De la Cuesta, Santa Barbara; Mrs. Anthony Dryamid, Berkeley, and Mr. and Mrs. William Moller and daughter, Christina.

Mrs. Frances Bell, Mrs. Alma Richardson and Mrs. A. I. Richardson of this city are visiting in Long Beach for an indefinite period. While in the beach city they will be the guests of relatives.

Invitations have been issued by Miss Phyllis Petit, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Petit, for a dancing party to be given on the evening of the 23rd inst., at the home of her parents near Oxnard. The affair promises to be one of the smartest of the season for the younger set. The Pirate Orchestra has been engaged to furnish the music for the evening.

Glendora

Fifty members of the Philannea class of the Glendora Methodist Church were pleasantly entertained Monday night at the home of Mrs. B. W. Richardson. There were very enjoyable vocal solos by Mrs. C. B. Shoemaker and a talk on "Friendship," by Mrs. James Reed after which various games were introduced by Mrs. Charles Lewis. The singing of old songs was also a part of the evening's entertainment. Refreshments of sandwiches, salad and coffee were served at a late hour.

Mrs. John Brunjes was the hostess at a 1 o'clock luncheon and social meeting of the P.L.O.'s on Tuesday. Covers were laid for twenty-two.

The C. W. Richardson and B. W. Richardson families with a party of twenty-seven relatives and friends from Pasadena and Alhambra enjoyed a Sunday trip to Dana Point, near San Juan Capis-

A Gleamy Mass of Hair

35c "Danderine" does Wonders for Any Girl's Hair

Girls! Try this! When combing and dressing your hair, just moisten your hair-brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can do your hair up immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy—a mass of gleamy hair, sparkling with life and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance.

While beautifying the hair "Danderine" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, long and strong. Hair stops falling out and dandruff disappears. Get a bottle of "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair appears after this delightful refreshing dressing.—[Advertisement.

frano, where a picnic dinner was served. Later there was a delightful drive through the Laguna Hills.

Although no relation, Pro. Charles A. Lewis and John Lewis have a common birthday and for several years have celebrated together. Last Friday Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis were invited to the Charles Lewis home for the evening and soon in response to the ringing of the doorbell, the two honorees found twenty-two members of the adult Bible class of the Methodist Church present to enjoy the occasion with them. The gathering was a complete surprise to the two men. At the close of the evening ice cream, cakes and coffee were served.

Wednesday afternoon Mrs. John A. Lewis, president of the Aid Society of the Methodist Church, entertained the executive board and the chairmen of the eight sections and their assistants. Those present for the business session and the social hour were: Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Martin Adams, Mrs. Earl Sweet, Mrs. Fred Miller, Mrs. E. E. La Fetra, Mrs. John Zentmeyer, Mrs. Harry Stone, Mrs. Charles Lewis, Mrs. Alfred Inwood, Mrs. C. W. Chamberlain, Mrs. W. S. Taylor, Mrs. Earl Comstock, Mrs. R. W. Richardson, Mrs. W. C. Harder, Mrs. Carl Kuffel, Mrs. F. R. Curtiss, Mrs. Lewis A. Miller, Mrs. Keith Suydam, Mrs. Wirt Williams and Mrs. L. M. La Fetra of Altadena.

San Pedro

With Mrs. Helen Le Boutellier as chairman of the committee in charge, and Mrs. Maude Riesenweber and Mrs. C. M. Thomas assisting, a card party of unique appointment was given by the Woman's Club Wednesday afternoon at the clubhouse. A cleverly-arranged scheme of decorations was carried out in the Chinese motif and the oriental note dominated all the details of appointment, lending delightful novelty to the affair, which was attended by a large crowd of club members and their friends. There were several tables of bridge and five hundred was also played, a collation following.

Entertaining in honor of the bithday anniversary of her husband, Mrs. Scott McIntire was the hostess at a recent enjoyable affair. Several friends were bidden to the McIntire home at 409 North Gaffey street for an evening of cards and pink sweet peas and fern ornamented the rooms. Miss Marion Peck was the winner of ladies' first prize at five hundred and Roy Ferguson received men's first prize, the consolation prizes going to Miss Wanda Hobson and Joe Roberts.

Oriental in all its appointments was the charming and unique affair with which the Point Fermin Library Club entertained recently at the clubhouse. The affair took the form of a card party and both bridge and five hundred were enjoyed, Mrs. Harold Banner winning first prize and Mrs. John Rantz the consolation prize at bridge, while first prize at five hundred went to Mrs. C. E. Taylor, Mrs. Albert Allen receiving the consolation token. Chinese lilies in low bowls graced tables arranged about the sides of the room. Oriental vases added to the beauty of the setting and burning incense also aided in creating the desired atmosphere. The prizes were of Chinese art ware and the collation, served by Mmes. M. F. Decker, F. A. Black, E. F. Goad and B. H. Dietrich, who were the hostesses of the afternoon, was also in accordance with the oriental motif.

Inglewood

One of the interesting social events of the week in Inglewood society was the bridge evening at which Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Rice entertained on Friday evening at their home on Hillcrest Boulevard. The rooms of the Rice home were prettily decorated with early spring flowers and the guests partook of a delicious luncheon at midnight. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene M. Lewis will entertain the same group at their home early in the coming week.

Mrs. Frank D. Parent, Mrs. Clyde Woodworth and Mrs. George C. England united as hostesses on Tuesday of this week and entertained the Inglewood Rotary Anns at a delightfully planned luncheon at the new clubhouse of the Inglewood Woman's Club. After a delicious luncheon at a handsomely appointed table, the guests listened to an interesting talk on the work of the Camp Fire Girls.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Lyman Warner of the Fairview Heights Section entertained on Thursday evening at an informal dinner having as their honor guests Mr. and Mrs. James Bowden of Covina, who have been visiting them for several days.

Mrs. Mark Fish of Cedar street was hostess on Saturday afternoon at a bridge luncheon at which she entertained numerous friends from Inglewood, Los Angeles, El Segundo, and other near-by towns.

Mr. and Mrs. David B. Kaufman of South Maple street have as their guests their niece, Mrs. Chester H. Kaufman, and her sister, Miss Erie Harshbarger, both of Chicago, Ill.

Redondo Beach

The Wednesday Bridge Club was entertained at the home of Mrs. Franklyn J. Tower, with charming decorations in marigolds and cornflowers, and a delicious luncheon served during the afternoon. Tables were for Mrs. L. B. Stern, Mrs. L. J. Perry, Mrs. E. H. Amet, Mrs. E. E. Webster, Mrs. P. C. Ridgley, Mrs. J. C. Gillespie, Mrs. L. J. Hannon, Mrs. William I. deGarmo, Mrs. Beryl Tower, Mrs. Kenneth Tower, Miss Susan Margaret deGarmo and Mrs. Aubrey.

At the Kill Kare Klub on Tuesday evening one of the most charming members, Miss Helen Herrick, popular teacher at the Central School, was the recipient of a miscellaneous shower, delightfully arranged. The engagement of Miss Herrick and Harry Marshall of Redondo, announced a short time ago, has been made the occasion of many pleasant events among friends of the young couple. No date for the wedding has been set. Those present Tuesday were Helen Herrick, Leah McClay, Florence McKenzie, Ruth Hopkins, Bessie Stipe, Margaret Rodecker, Mrs. John Spikes and the hostesses, Miss Frances Latham and Miss Leona Kemp.

Honoring her brother, Dr. William F. Key of Fullerton, who has just returned from a two-years' service in the Greenfield Hospital at Labrador, Mrs. R. H. Gilman entertained with a family reunion over the week-end, the guests including her mother, Mrs. Mary F. Key of Fullerton, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wright of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. David Wright and daughter Bernice of Pasadena, Mr. and Mrs. E. I. Ames of Pasadena and Mrs. Lulu Brewer of Alhambra.

Entertaining her wee friends on the occasion of her fifth birthday anniversary, Mary Elizabeth Perry, small daughter of Attorney Frank Perry and Mrs. Perry, was a winsome hostess, with the old-time circus motif delighting the guests. The gardens of the Perry home, transformed with clowns and banners, formed a charming setting. About twenty shared the happy event.

Quite the most charming event in the week's social calendar was the musical tea with which Mrs. Ellis T. Yarnell entertained on Tuesday afternoon, with Bernice Morrison, pianist, and Marion Beemis Wilson, soprano, of Los Angeles, as artist guests. The program given was most lovely, with the upstairs living-room of the spacious home of the Yarnells, overlooking the ocean, as a pleasant setting. Mrs. Farnham B. Martin, Miss Ione Gale and Mrs. Samuel Austin assisted the hostess in serving.

Placentia

Taking their guests to the Elks' Club at Anaheim for dinner and returning to Placentia later for an evening of cards, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Jacobson and Mr. and Mrs. Lisle R. Morehous were hosts Friday evening to the members of the Jolly Nine Card Club. The progression of cards was enjoyed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson. Five hundred was played. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McFadden took high honors, with Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson securing second, thus proving it to be a family affair indeed. At the next meeting Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Newnes and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Edwardson will entertain. Those who enjoyed this happy evening were Mr. and Mrs. William Barkenstock, Mr. and Mrs. McFadden, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cline, Mrs. Newnes, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Night, Mr. and Mrs. John Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. Edwardson, Mr. and Mrs. Morehous, Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson.

International Relations Day was held Wednesday by the Placentia Round Table at the club home. Vivid pictures of different countries and their relation to the United States were arranged by Mrs. F. M. Dowling. A series of talks were given, each talker being dressed in the costume of the country which was her topic. Music of the different nations was given by Mrs. J. J. Farley and Mrs. Estella Walker. The speakers included Mrs. W. J. Carmichal, China; Mrs. W. J. Newell, Japan; Mrs. W. J. Travers, France; Mrs. J. C. Thamer, England; Mrs. Fred Cline, Ireland; Mrs. W. M. McMullen, Germany; Mrs. S. W. McCulloch, Russia; Mrs. T. L. McFadden, Mexico; Mrs. Herbert Sullivan, Italy; Mrs. E. K. Cuff, South American countries; Mrs. Dowling, the United States. After the program a short talk was given by Mrs. A. P. Nelson of Santa Ana on her work for the county federation with the ex-service men and women. A short reception ended the afternoon. Refreshments were served. The hostesses included Mrs. C. O. Petty, Mrs. C. W. Blattner, Mrs. Ford, Mrs. O. D. Harmon and Mrs. Estella Walker.

Covina

Sprays of almond blossoms in tall wicker baskets were the artistic decorations arranged by Mrs. C. E. Bristow, Mrs. W. S. Sides, and Mrs. William Schaich for the meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club this week. During the business session which preceded the program the club voted to endorse the nomination of Mrs. J. B. Lorbeer of Santa Monica, as district president. In preparation for the Shakespearean reading a double quartette of the Lyric Club accompanied by Mrs. Henry Damerel, rendered very beautifully "Hark, Hark, the Lark," "Who is Sylvia?" and "The Stars Brightly Shining." Madame Ethel Elliott Swan, who is nationally known as a dramatic reader and who is a representative of the University Extension gave with beauty, power and wonderful understanding Miss Clemence Dana's four-act play, "Will Shakespeare," which at its presentation in London was the literary topic of the day. At the close of the afternoon Mrs. W. P. Watts and her assistants served tea.

The flowering shrubs of January were studied at the monthly meeting of the garden section of the Monday Afternoon Club held Wednesday with Mrs. J. C. Pearson of Center street.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Whitehead and Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Lewis were chaperones at the dance of the Junior Auxiliary of the Monday Afternoon Club, which was held at the clubhouse last evening.

Last Saturday afternoon Mrs. John Wilkins was honored by an informal tea given by Mrs. G. A. Leighton.

Miss Carolyn Jennings who has been with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. D. Jennings for a visit of a few weeks, and who Sunday returned to the University of California where she is taking a post graduate course, was the honored guest at a tea given Friday by Miss Helen Broadwell.

Alhambra

The marriage of Miss Edith Everdon, charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Everdon of 502 south Garfield avenue, to Virgil McClure of Sharon, Pa., which was solemnized at 3 o'clock of a recent Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Allen, relatives of the bride, in Hermitage, Pa., has just been announced here. Following a wedding trip through the East Mr. and Mrs. McClure will make their home in Sharon.

Miss Dorothy Pence was a charming hostess Saturday at a bridge luncheon honoring Miss Jean Brown, whose engagement to Gilbert Raymond Karste was announced the past week, and Mrs. Frances Owen (Mary Eckert) a recent bride. The daintily appointed table held covers for twelve.

On Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Sturgeon celebrated their silver wedding anniversary by holding open house to a large company of their friends and an informal reception and supper in the evening. The home was decorated in white and silver, a profusion o' sweet peas being used. Included in the number who called to extend felicitations were a number of friends from out of town.

Miss Jessie Strifler, attractive young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Strifler, was honoree at a dancing party given for her by her parents on Saturday evening at the Athletic Club, the guests numbering over 100 from Los Angeles, Monrovia and this city.

Members of C. E. Chapter, P.E.O., entertained on Thursday at the home of Mrs. Harry C. Richardson, 225 North Hidalgo, Mrs. Fred Turner assisting Mrs. Richardson as hostess. Miss Ella Woodford, who witnessed the last performance of the Passion Play of Oberammergau, gave an interesting talk on the pageant.

Rivera

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Swain entertained at their home on Long Beach Boulevard Thursday evening in compliment to Mr. Swain's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Swain. The time was spent quite informally, some of the guests graciously adding to the pleasure of the occasion with vocal and instrumental music. Those to enjoy the evening, aside from the honor guests and the host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph M. Thynnes, Mr. and Mrs. John Kirkwood, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Barton, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Mendenhall and Mr. and Mrs. Leslie C. Nanney.

Mr. and Mrs. Harland Cate and daughter, Miss Shirley Cate, accompanied by Mrs. Laura Cate and her son Dwight Cate, have returned from an interesting auto trip to Fresno and other places in the northern part of the State. The Cates motored north late in the month and spent the holiday season with relatives and friends.

In compliment to Charles Scherf, a student at Santa Clara College, Mrs. Thomas Gomber entertained at the hospitable Gomber home on the San Gabriel Boulevard Friday evening, the guests being principally college students. Games, music and dancing formed pleasing diversions for the evening. The list included the Misses Evelyn Dellrin, Eva Scherf, V. Sarlen, Helen Stewart of Los Angeles; Miss Marguerite Dyke, Miss Mary Wolf, Hollywood; Leota Pellerin, Margaret Douser, Berkeley; the Messrs. Albert Layman, Frederick Scherf, Andy Andrey, John Schnitter, Murton and Anton Bierman.

Paso Robles

Mr. and Mrs. Norris P. Heaton are receiving congratulations on the birth of a little daughter on Friday. The young lady has been named Patricia Ann.

Mrs. Will Lewis entertained the members of the Monday Bridge Club this week. The afternoon was spent over the card tables and delicious refreshments were served.

Mrs. L. E. Frazier and small daughter, Floy Jane, who have been visiting relatives for the last three months, left Sunday for Miami, Ariz., where they will make their home. They were accompanied by Mrs. Frazier's sister, Mrs. Anita Sherman, who will remain for a visit.

The regular meeting of the Women's Club was held Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. G. L. Sobey gave an interesting book review, and a short resume of the life of the composer, MacDowell, was given by Mrs. Victor Ward and Miss K. Atwood, while a number of his compositions were played and sung by Mrs. J. V. Wachtel, Mrs. A. G. Patriquin, Mrs. Raitt, Mrs. J. Johnston and D. I. Grover.

San Luis Obispo

Mrs. John L. Farley entertained the members of La Torosa Bridge Club at her home Tuesday afternoon. High scores for the afternoon were held by Mrs. William Mallagh and Mrs. C. J. Taylor, with Mrs. Ed N. Kaiser winning the consolation. Dainty refreshments were served at the conclusion of the play.

Mrs. H. A. Gallup was hostess at a bridge luncheon Monday for the members of her bridge club. The afternoon was spent over the card tables, with Mrs. J. L. Anderson and Mrs. A. L. Cunningham winning the prizes.

The Hi-Lassies spent an enjoyable evening Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. H. M. Hunt on Polytechnic Boulevard. Music and games were enjoyed and a delightful repast served.

Bushnell Hughston was host to a number of friends Sunday evening at a stag dinner at his home on Pacific street. Those present were L. F. Sinsheimer, John Norton, A. E. Campbell, C. P. Kaetzel, Ernest Vollmer, L. A. Enos, P. A. Arata, E. B. Hugston and Bushnell Hughston.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Maino entertained a number of friends Sunday evening at a dinner-dance at the Cloisters Inn at Morro Bay. Those who enjoyed the affair were Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Gerdes, Miss Alice Keith, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Menard, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Burroughs, Mr. and Mrs. A. Tognazzini, Oliver Horn and the host and hostess.

Rialto

Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Dresser, Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Dresser and their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. E. Pile and Mrs. E. Schellens of Anaheim, first of the week enjoyed a delightful day's outing. The party motored up Cajon Pass, over the Mountains and on to Saw Pit out in the desert. A picnic dinner was a delightful feature of the trip.

On Saturday Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Weller, Miss Louise Weller and their house guest, George Weller of Kipp, Kan., motored up to the Weller cabin at Strawberry Flats. On the following day Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Dresser, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. E. Harter and son Lawrence joined the company, the family reunion at the Weller cabin proving delightful, indeed. Members of the party report depth of snow at the flats at six inches on the level, but far greater depth in spots where banked or falling in hollows.

Miss Louise Weller, Misses Veryl and Shirley Eastman, Burleigh and Maurice Brimmer enjoyed a drive to Pomona Monday night, where they were joined by Porter Brimmer, all attending the theater.

Friday evening the W.B.A. of the Macabees happily entertained the Sir Knights and their families at Masonic Hall. The large room was beautifully decorated for the occasion and a delightful program enjoyed. Refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Thursday evening the Phi Beta Deltas, of which W. R. Fouts, principal of Rialto Junior High School, is president, were most delightfully entertained by Mr. and Mrs. B. Homer Logue, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Wright and Mrs. R. Stewart at the Logue home on North Orange street. It was called a "kid party," all appearing in childhood costume, the novel appearance of the guests creating no end of fun. The refreshment table was of such height as the little folks best enjoy, the tall Phi Beta Deltas being seated in children's chairs for the repast. The affair was one of the jolliest of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Williams entertained informally on Sunday in honor of their little son John, just 2 years of age. A beautiful pink birthday cake ornamented the table where the birthday feast was served. Out-of-town guests included the little lad's grandmother, Mrs. J. M. Nowlin; his uncle, John Akers, for whom he was named, and Myrtle Hunt, all of Pomona.

Buena Park

Surprising Mr. and Mrs. William Callaway because it was their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary, the "Jolly Neighbors" enjoyed a happy evening Tuesday at the home of the honorees. Games and refreshments formed the entertainment. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Thurman, Mr. and Mrs. George Little, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Scofield, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Callaway, Rev. and Mrs. S. F. Hilgenfeld, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Horn, Mr. and Mrs. George Cole, Mrs. W. W. Johnson, Mrs. Rose Hartman, Mrs. Edwin Martin, Mrs. Fred Bastady, Emmaline Callaway and Miss Dorothy Little. Mr. Callaway is 94 and his wife in 83 years "young."

Intestinal Evacuant

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation which is not only a wonderfully effective and QUICK intestinal evacuant, but which also seems to stimulate the glands of the intestinal tract and to cause expulsion of flatus (GAS). This preparation, known as Adlerika, is a valuable agent for the purpose of cleansing the bowels of matter which has been in the system a long time and which other less effective means have been unable to dislodge. It is often astonishing the great amount of matter Adlerika draws from the intestinal canal—even right after a natural movement it sometimes brings out unsuspected quantities of additional matter. Many times it brings out much GAS, thus relieving pressure in the abdomen. Adlerika is especially valuable when PROMPT action is necessary or to encourage the elimination of metabolic poisons through the bowel.

Diversions of Society

the new year, the Ladies' Aid Society of the Congregational Church convened Thursday afternoon. The records for the past year show a considerable amount of work. The society purchased a piano among other things and paid $100 toward the Community Hall fund.

Riverside

Mrs. Frank Newell and daughter, Miss Florence Newell, entertained at a brilliant dinner-dance at the Mission Inn Saturday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Achilles of Massachusetts, who are here for the winter. Nearly fifty guests were present. The color scheme for the decorations and for the menu were pink and white.

The Alpha Theta Phi of Redlands University entertained at tea at the Mission Inn for the first year girls of the university Saturday. Mrs. Victor L. Duke, wife of the president of the university, the Misses Annette Carlidge and Edith Hill of the faculty, were the patronesses. The president of the sorority, Miss Elaine Moody, and Miss McFee, chairman of the social committee, had charge of arrangements. A delightful program was provided.

Miss Eleanor Hadden played several piano numbers; Prof. C. H. Marsh, dean of the music department of the college, played several organ numbers, in the cloister music-room.

Ices and cakes and tea and sandwiches were served later in the afternoon in the beautiful Spanish Art Gallery.

The Rubidoux chapter of the Daughters of American Revolution had an especially interesting program following the regular monthly luncheon given at the Woman's clubhouse Friday. Papers were given by four of the members relating to the notable Americans whose birthday anniversaries are in the month of January. Mrs. J. R. Gabbert told of Daniel Webster; Mrs. J. E. O'Brien told of unusual incidents in the life of Benjamin Franklin; Mrs. W. H. Ellis told of Alexander Hamilton, and Mrs. C. O. Evans had for her topic, Betsy Ross.

One of the most attractive programs of the club year was given Tuesday at the Woman's clubhouse, when Mrs. E. J. Burr, popular soprano, and Calmon Luboviski, violinist, formerly of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, and also of the Russian String Quartet presented a recital.

Lindsay

Mrs. L. W. Green was hostess to members of the Pioneer Bridge Club on Thursday afternoon at her home on South Mirage avenue. Sweet peas and narcissi were effective as table decorations and in the living-room. Covers were laid for eighteen guests at luncheon, while the remainder of the afternoon was devoted to playing. Guests of the club were Mmes. L. M. Drew, J. B. Moore, Josephine Natzke, Rose Mathes, T. H. Carrell, W. L. Keeley, J. H. Kelly and Mrs. Clarke of Boston, who is wintering with her sister, Mrs. W. D. Allen. High prize for the members went to Mrs. W. D. Allen, while Mrs. H. J. Kelly was the complimented guest.

Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Hess were guests of honor at a family dinner Sunday at the home of Mrs. Hess's mother, Mrs. Mary Graham, in Tulare. As Mr. and Mrs. Hess will leave soon for Berkeley where Mr. Hess will complete his course, majoring in physical education, the gathering was in the nature of a farewell. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Hess, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hess and children, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Nutt and son, Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Hess, all of Lindsay, and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Braxley and Mr. and Mrs. Russel West and children of Tulare.

Orosi

Mrs. Clyde Schleicher was charming hostess to members of the Ladies' Social Club at her attractive home on Palm avenue Wednesday afternoon. Mmes. Jack Hartwell, A. Hart, Clarence Owens, Rhoba Williams and Miss Maurine Crowther were guests of the club for the afternoon, while members present numbered twenty-five. A musical program was given by Mrs. Roscoe Cowan and Miss Lucille Schelicher and at a late hour refreshments were served. The hostess was assisted by Mmes. C. E. Schimer, William Hulbert and Weaver Leavau. The next meeting of the club will be held on February 4. Acting on the entertainment committee for this occasion will be Mmes. Charles McPherson, D. W. Pugh, Wallace Vetter, H. L. Ward and H. J. Kennedy of Fresno.

Miss Mildred Barris and her brother, Loyd Barris, entertained informally at their delightful country home west of town on Thursday evening. Games, music and dancing served as diversion and a supper was served. Those present included Misses Marjorie Cook, Marian Putnam, Vera Price, Maurine Crowther, Grace Deniels, Margaret Furman and Messrs Alfred Putnam, Eugene Montague, Clifford Tatum, Bruce Wilkins, Jere Barton, Hugh Wilkins, Emmett Furman.

Lankershim

About a score of boys and girls of the younger set here last Sunday enjoyed a hike up the Arroyo Seco Canyon to Switzer's camp, where, after dinner was served, various trips from the camp were made.

W. L. Speer of Pittsburg, Pa. last week was the guest of his sister, Mrs. M. C. Jones, of Weddington avenue.

Charles E. Coble, who once resided here but who now is living in Van Nuys, and Miss Helma Dixon, were married here last Wednesday. The couple will live in Van Nuys, where Mr. Coble is with the Van Nuys branch of the city water works office.

Friends of Mrs. S. Othorber are congratulating her on the birth of a daughter.

Mrs. M. A. Cannon of San Bernardino is a visitor at the home of Mrs. L. C. Cook.

Mrs. J. A. Fraser entertained last Wednesday at her home on Denny street in honor of her birthday. A dinner was served to Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Noble, Van Nuys; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miller, Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. Hoose, Lankershim, and Mr. Fraser.

Fullerton

Promising to become the center of school activity in Fullerton the new Ebell clubhouse has already been the scene of a delightful card and dancing party sponsored by the social section, of which Mrs. J. T. Hill is chairman. Five hundred was played by those who preferred the games, and good music was furnished for the dancing. Another of the parties will be held next month with the first-prize winners as host and hostess.

For Drs. Walter and Harriet Bigham, who will leave in a few days on a four months' tour of the world, a beautifully appointed dinner party was given on a recent evening at the Elks' Club. Covers were laid for sixteen intimate friends. Tiny blue ships marked the places and the tables were most effectively centered by baskets in the shape of ships, which held choice winter blossoms.

"Child Welfare" was the keynote of an interesting session held by the Fourth District Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations, which comprises the P.T.A.'s of Orange county. The morning was devoted to the transaction of routine business, and nominations were made to fill vacancies on the federation's official board. Luncheon was served at noon by the hostess association, and afterward talks were given by Mrs. Hugh Bradford, State president; Mrs. W. W. Wilson, State chairman of child welfare work, and Maj. E. J. Marks of Fullerton. A memorial service was conducted for Mrs. Higgins, a past national president who died recently, many beautiful tributes being paid to the woman who worked so faithfully for the welfare of children in the United States.

Garden Grove

Making the meeting more interesting with a debate on the question of a reading and recreation room in place of a park site for the town, the Loyal Helpers' class of the Methodist Sunday school held its annual business meeting and election Monday evening at the church. The officers chosen were: J. W. Steele, president; E. R. Schneider, vice-president; Mrs. E. Chaffee, secretary; J. O. Prior, entertainment. The debate was worded, "Resolved, That a Reading and Recreation room Would Be of Greater Benefit to Garden Grove Than a Park Site." The affirmative was discussed by Mrs. C. N. Franks, P. M. Magnusson and Edward Chaffee, the negative side being J. M. Woodworth, Mrs. J. R. Arkley and George Reyburn. After the debate refreshments were served. Another election was held this week by an organization of this church and Sunday-school boards, which chose Ralph Chaffee of Monroe as financial secretary to assist Frank Monroe, treasurer. The meeting was accompanied by a pot luck supper. Reports were also made and other business attended to.

With the fathers of the organization in charge, the Parent-Teachers' Association of the Garden Grove High School held an enjoyable meeting at the high school Monday evening. A pot luck supper was enjoyed before the meeting. J. O. Arkley was chairman of arrangements. A program was given.

La Habra

Their first visit among the orange groves of Southern California, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Masters of Sabetha, Kan., with their children, Don, Katherine and Edward, were guests over Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Robberson. On Sunday a Spanish dinner was given by Mrs. Robberson. Miss Lilah, formerly of New York but now living in Los Angeles and her niece, Miss Faith Wells were also guests over Saturday night. Mrs. F. M. Cook of Fresno county who is a house-guest at the Robberson home, assisted the hostess. Mr. and Mrs. Cook have been down for some weeks, Mr. Robberson and Mr. Cook taking a business trip up into Death Valley. Mr. Cook is a brother of Mrs. Robberson.

Several guests were entertained at dinner Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Stewart at their home on West Florence avenue. His brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. William Stewart, and the latter's mother, Mrs. Silverthorn of Clearwater, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Smith of Norwalk, and Mrs. Mary Hill of Pittsburg, Pa., were those present. Mrs. Hill, who is spending the winter visiting relatives in Southern California, is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Stewart for the present.

To note the birthday of her sister, Mrs. Clay Moore of Pasadena, Mrs. C. L. Crumrine entertained a group of intimate friends at luncheon Tuesday. Red was the color note for the table. Covers were laid for Mrs. Moore and their mother, Mrs. Anna Brookhouser, also Mrs. John Whitely, Mrs. George Tedford of Los Angeles, Mrs. Neal Cavin of Pasadena, and Mrs. Crumrine.

Imperial Valley

Entertaining in compliment to Mrs. William H. Lavayea, who is leaving Imperial Valley shortly to make her home in Fresno, Mrs. Dorsey Whitelaw and Mrs. Robert B. Whitelaw were hostesses at an elaborate luncheon Friday at the home of the former on Sandalwood Drive, El Centro. Pink sweet peas and bachelor buttons were attractively combined in the table decorations. Bridge was the diversion of the afternoon, the prize scores being made by Mrs. F. D. Jacobs, Mrs. Edgar Nance, Mrs. C. E. Coggins and Mrs. Lavayea was presented with the guest prize. Other guests attending the affair were Mrs. James W. Glassford, Mrs. Forrest E. Kutz, Mrs. A. W. Hale, Mrs. George Anderson, Mrs. Don C. Bitler, Mrs. Robert B. Kepley, Mrs. Leroy Holt, Mrs. Howard P. Meyer, Mrs. Frank F. Anderson, Mrs. Arthur Edgar, Mrs. S. H. Embury, Mrs. Will R. Conway, Mrs. Calvin Mousseau, Mrs. John T. Rice, Mrs. Elmer Todd, Mrs. J. Stewart Ross, Mrs. Fred Nuttall, Mrs. Frank Fosdick, Mrs. Frank H. McIver and Mrs. William Fleming of Calexico.

One of the attractive affairs of the week in Calexico was the mah jongg party with which Mrs. P. P. Anderson entertained Saturday afternoon at her home on Seventh street in honor of her house guest, Mrs. William Hammers of Palms Cal. The mah jongg prizes were received by Mrs. Herman Antholz and Mrs. W. A. Richardson and Mrs. Hammers was presented with an attractive guest prize. At the close of the games refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. George Pulliam. Guests of the afternoon were Mrs. C. S. Anderson, Mrs. E. E. Anderson, Mrs. Herman Antholtz, Mrs. M. C. Atchison, Mrs. Karl Edmunds, Mrs. J. M. Edmunds, Mrs. Luman Ferrell, Mrs. Herbert Going, Mrs. J. C. Graham, Mrs. J. O. Butts, Mrs. Rodney Clark, Mrs. Henry Donahue, Mrs. Dan A. Leonard, Mrs. C. B. Moore, Mrs. T. J. Mitchell, Mrs. Ella Kress, Mrs. James Otter, Mrs. O. A. Pratt, Mrs. George Pulliam, Mrs. W. A. Richardson, Mrs. E. M. Rockwood, Mrs. George Ramsey, Mrs. LeRoy Rockwood, Mrs. Frank Steglitz, Mrs. W. A. Saunders, Mrs. Harry Wright, Mrs. Frank Voigt, Miss Giliva Watkins and the honoree, Mrs. William Hammers.

At a quiet wedding at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Smith of Brawley, Miss Viola Smith and Pruitt Sheldon were married last Sunday afternoon. The marriage service was read by Rev. B. F. Davis of the Methodist Church, in the presence of relatives and a small group of intimate friends. The bride was charmingly gowned in white chiffon, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. After the ceremony the young couple left for a honeymoon to be spent at Coast points. On their return they will make their home in Brawley.

Honoring Mrs. F. D. Jacobs, president of the El Centro Woman's Ten Thousand Club, members of the executive board entertained with a surprise luncheon Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. E. Coggins on Holt avenue. As a mark of esteem Mrs. Jacobs was presented with a beautiful flower bowl by the members of the committee. Following the luncheon the time was spent at bridge. Those present were Mrs. Jacobs, Mrs. A. W. Hale, Mrs. J. Stewart Ross, Mrs. Roy Breedlove, Mrs. S. E. Allen, Mrs. L. C. House, Mrs. Robert Whitelaw and Mrs. C. E. Coggins.

Among the recent social affairs in Calipatria was the dinner-dance given by Mr. and Mrs. William Gunn and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Beall at the Beall residence on Barbara street. The table was adorned with pink blossoms and greenery and unique favors marked the places for Mr. and Mrs. Shelton Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Linn Kellan, all from Riverside; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Smoot of El Centro, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Donohue, Mr. and Mrs. William Wilkinson, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Nutbrown, and the Messrs. L. T. Moorehead, Charles Beale, Harry Beale, Phil Benson, Mr. and Mrs. Gunn and Mr. and Mrs. Beall.

Doctor Tells How to Strengthen Eyesight 50 Per Cent. in One Week's Time, in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Philadelphia, Pa. — Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses, and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simplest rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Another prominent physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." It is sold by all good druggists.—[Advertisement.

by the passing years. On her work bench stood a wonderful "memory box," carved in a design of orange blossoms and lined with ivory satin, in which the bride might lay away her wedding veil, a spray of flowers from her bouquet, and the dainty slippers worn on that day of days when she took the last few steps that led from the old life into the new.

Mrs. Walker's little shop is a fairy place to a spinner of dreams. There isn't a box that you wouldn't be glad to hug to your heart and scuttle home with your treasure. Perhaps she has carved into each one some of the joy she finds in her work and the cheerful philosophy that keeps her smile sunny in spite of her handicap of lameness.

The frosty years have laid their fingers on her hair, but life and joy and hope sparkle in her eyes. And yet . . . she has not walked in four years.

Penwomen's Luncheon

Mrs. Pauline Rice Shields will assist with the special program to be given at the regular luncheon of the Los Angeles branch of the League of American Penwomen to be given at the Writers' Club, 6700 Sunset Boulevard, Tuesday, the 27th inst., at 12:30 p.m. Each member may bring one guest.

Those who won the prizes for the recent story contest include Mrs. Bertha Lincoln Heustis, first, "Two Hundred and Fifty Wave Lengths;" Clover Roscoe, second, "Red Shoes;" Laura Matthews third, "The Bride." In verse writing those who won include Mrs. Heustis, Katherine M. Bouy, Mrs. Hester McCoy, Emily Hughes Wright and Lily Josephine Lewer.

Prize Poem Contest

Offering a prize for the best poem submitted to them by members of the Wednesday Progressive Club, the press and publicity department has begun to receive contributions all of which must be in by February 15. The prize will be awarded at the next regular meeting, the 18th inst. The judges are members of the literary committee: Mrs. Helen Olds, Mrs. Korine Cavell and Mrs. Ellen Crandell.

South Side Ebell

The first meeting of South Side Ebell for 1925 fell on "No Speaker" Day. This meeting proved of unusual interest, as committee reports of curators of study sections, a letter of greeting for the new year from the district president, Mrs. Toll, and other club business were broadcast from a pseudo-radio station, known as "S.S.E." Cadman Opera "Shanewis" on Club Program

"Shanewis," the opera by Charles Wakefield Cadman, which was given high praise a few years ago as the most successful American opera produced by the Metropolitan Opera Company, will be the feature of the next musical program at the MacDowell Club, Monday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock. This opera had two runs at the Metropolitan Theater in New York and won immediate success on its intrinsic merits.

Mr. Cadman has used the results of his valuable labors in preserving American Indian music, by enriching his own music with themes based on Indian melodies, and in a few instances, by the introduction of original Indian songs, such as the Ojibway canoe song.

The artists on the program will be Mrs. Virginia Goodsell Byrne, soprano, who will give selections from the opera; Mrs. Alice Harrison, who will be at the piano, and Miss Margaret Goetz, interpreter of the story. The chairman, Mrs. Elizabeth McCabe Gilmore, a personal friend of Mr. and Mrs. Cadman, will probably give some reminiscences and an appreciation of the composer from her intimate knowledge of his work and his ideals.

In connection with the musical activities of the MacDowell Club, Mrs. MacDowell, at the urgent request of many friends, is conducting a series of classes at the MacDowell Club, for teachers, to preserve the authentic and traditional rendering of MacDowell's music.

The Sunny Side of Selfishness

"Jack! Jack, dear!" The "dear," added rather tentatively, nevertheless fell with decision from Clo's lips in the tone Jack Meredith knew he must heed no matter what the sporting sheet was saying about the match to be arranged with Jack Dempsey.

With an air of resignation, deep and dangerous, he lowered the paper so that he could see his pretty young wife's hands toying with her grape-fruit spoon beyond the bowl of violets on the dining-room table—to hear her say: "I've decided to buy that squirrel coat, Jack." Then, barometer-like noting a portending domestic storm, she added extenuatingly, "It's much reduced in the January sale, you know."

"Clo, I want to tell you right now, that's just the limit. I told you if you bought it that ended our joining the new country club and you agreed that to buy another coat would be selfish."

"Oh, but that was before I heard that great psychologist speak on 'The Sunny Side of Selfishness.' He said it was pathological for old people to be selfish, but young people, he said, had a right to be violently selfish—those were his exact words, Jack—and I'm young, you know I am."

"Not only young, but childish," interrupted Jack.

"And I ought to be allowed to have full self-expression through my ego," finished Clo.

"Rot! How much will a squirrel coat help you to self-expression? Not one gosh-darned bit. You'll more likely express—well, an animal."

"You mean thing, Jack, to call me a cat."

"Oh, Lord," groaned Jack. "I didn't call you a cat," and his tones were so loveless Clo looked in amazement at what her experiment in showing the sunny side of selfishness had brought forth in the man across the table, whom she ordinarily adored, but whom she momentarily hated as her oppressor. Amazement turned to tears and they were copious.

"Clo, darling, please forgive me. I was brutally selfish—please, dear, don't cry," and he was around on her side of the table ready with a napkin to stem the tide which could not wait for a handkerchief.

"Oh—oh—it's all right to be selfish—you, I mean. That's what he said men most of all had the right," she sobbed against the second button of his vest. "But I thought I'd be, too—just for once."

"Just for once! M-m-m. Jack's strokings of her hair did not lose their caress, but they slowed contemplatively. "I want to hear about the whole show of selfishness if it's as good as you've cracked it up. Shoot."

"Well, he said that self is a word held in contempt, but it is the most interesting word in the English language. He said it is the beginning, the middle and the end of all. He said that ego has come to mean something awful; but egoism is a little more respectable than egotism. He said no matter how modest you are (he didn't men you, Jack of course, he doesn't know you, though he is so clever) nevertheless, you are the center of the universe. That is, I am."

"Well, I guess you are, Clo, the center of mine anyway, and you can have your squirrel coat. I wouldn't upset the universe in its center."

"No, Jack. I'd lots rather join the country club."

"I rather guess I get in this somewhere. It's a squirrel coat for mine."

"Of course, Jack, I am yours, but I don't want any fur coat. I want to join the country club, I tell you," and again a storm threatened, this time from a different quarter.

"Clo, since we are one—ego, we'll have both the coat and the club. Selfishness is a great show all right, but as for the sunny side—I don't get you."

Thimble Club Elects

On Thursday, the 8th inst. the Harmony Thimble Club of Helen Jean Christie Tent, Daughters of Veterans, held a meeting at the home of Mrs. Gertrude Irving, 1423 North Coronado street, and the following officers were elected for 1925: President, Mrs. Katherine Kent; senior vice-president, Mrs. Rebecca Dunbar; junior vice-president, Mrs. Cora Wolfgang; treasurer, Mrs. Fannie Hayes; secretary, Mrs. Florence Davelaar; auditing committee, Mrs. Pearl Neville, Mrs. Grace Smith Umstead and Mrs. Mary Norton.

Dean of Women Will Speak on Sorority Topic

Shall sororities be abolished at Stanford? Miss Mary Yost, dean of women of Stanford University, will express the attitude of the administration on this subject at the scholarship fund benefit of the Stanford Women's Club Saturday at the Women's University Club.

Every sorority with a chapter on the Stanford campus will be represented at the meeting. A large number of the alumnae are expected to attend, as they are keenly interested in Miss Yost's viewpoint, which is President Wilbur's also.

From 2 p.m. until 4 p.m. the guests are to play bridge and mah jongg. Tea will be served at 4:30 o'clock. Miss Yost will speak at 4 p.m. Mrs. C. H. Cope, club president, is in charge of the benefit. She will be assisted by the other officers and some of the prominent members, including Mrs. Benjamin F. Bledsoe, Mrs. Verne W. McKinnery, Mrs. James H. Rea, Mrs. Samuel Cary Dunlap, Mrs. Herbert E. Pelton, Mrs. Howard Lewis, Mrs. Otto Wartenweiler, Miss Rose Smith, Mrs. Edwards Laughlin, Mrs. Edward Dean Lyman, Miss Frances Martin, Miss Dorothy Cooke, Mrs. Morris A. Daly, Mrs. Philip Wilson, Miss Ellen Andrews, Mrs. E. H. Knepper, Mrs. Edward Sheahan, Miss Grace Lavayea and Miss Florence Woodhead.

La Camarada Club

Mrs. E. B. Weirick, 6831 Odin street, assisted by Mrs. F. L. Irwin and Mrs. W. E. Ball, will entertain La Camarada Club at its next meeting the 21st inst.

SUBURBAN CLUBS

Redondo Beach

Blanche Friend Austin, vice-chairman of press and publicity for the General Federation of Women's Clubs and editor of the California federation organ, the News, will be guest of honor and speaker at the press luncheon to be given tomorrow at the Woman's Club of Redondo Beach.

Alhambra Afternoon Club

At the morning session of the Wednesday Afternoon Club, the 7th inst., Mrs. O. B. Manchester, leader of the literature circle, reviewed some of the most widely read of the current fiction and gave readings from and comments on a number of books of a more serious nature. Of special interest to Californians is Kate Douglas Wiggin's charming volume, "My Garden of Memories," in its mention of many interesting people of an earlier date who were residents here. "Ariel, a Life of Shelly," by Andre Maurios, and "A Passage to India," by E. M. Forster, were reviewed at length. The latter book has been much discussed, particularly in England, because of its portrayal of the difficulties attending the British rule in India.

Mrs. J. S. Norvall, an Alhambra woman, who has spent thirty-two years in China as a missionary, was the luncheon speaker and had as her theme, "The Old and New China." Personal observation and extensive knowledge of her subject enabled her to give her message very convincingly.

The piano solos given by Mrs. Edna Bradley Ward and the current-events review led by Mrs. Mary Coman completed a notable program.

On the 21st inst. the program will include a group of songs by Margaret Fisher Monson, mezzo-soprano, and violin music by Elsie Manion, with Ampico accompaniment, by the courtesy of Walter David of the Fitzgerald Music Company.

Long Beach Ebell

A review of international affairs was presented in a lecture by Paul Harvey of New York City at the meeting of the Ebell Club of Long Beach Monday afternoon. Preceding the program the club indorsed the candidacy of Mrs. J. B. Lorbeer for the presidency of the Los Angeles District G.F.W.C. Mrs. L. J. Gillespie was presented as the new district chairman of Indian affairs.

Mrs. Charles F. Van De Water announced the opening of the series of radio talks on peace to be given over radio KRON, with Miss Julia Ellen Rogers, member of the Ebell Club, as the first speaker. She also announced the appointment of Mrs. Harry Meldrim as chairman of decoration of grounds. Efforts are still being made to obtain the changing of the zoning of the club property so that

CENTRAL STAFF READY TO SERVE

Capital Headquarters Has Complete Equipment

All Club Women Invited to Share Advantages

Work of State Directors Proves Important

BY LESSIE S. READ,
Federation Press Chairman

"This is your clubhouse! Use it!" Such is the message that Lida Hafford, director of the general federation headquarters home, 1734 N street, Northwest, Washington, D. C., sends to you and every other club woman in America, and for that matter, eighteen foreign countries where the general federation now has members.

The federation recently refused $100,000 for its handsome residence that is just a stone's throw from the British Embassy, in the heart of fashionable Washington. It is a quiet, modest-looking home on the outside, absolutely satisfying on the inside, where any club woman may find: Executive offices, research department, record depository, printing or multigraphing department, distributing point, publicity and information, legislative headquarters, conference center, club residence and a perfect home, beautifully equipped.

There is a tea room and dining-room in connection where one may dine or entertain. Miss Hafford writes:

STAFF IS HELPFUL

"The staff is always ready to assist any club woman in preparing club programs, furnishing data for club papers, supplying ready information on the activities of the general federation, other national organizations, Congress and government bureaus with which we keep in close touch.

"When in Washington visit your headquarters and get in touch with what it has to offer you. A limited number of guests may find here hotel accommodations with the home atmosphere for a period of not longer than two weeks, by making reservation in advance."

Board members, who convened at the capital this month, are remaining over for the "Conference on Cause and Cure of War" in session at this time.

FEDERATION STRENGTH

"Federation of women's clubs has resulted in a new democracy of more than 2,800,000 voters, who," writes Mrs. John D. Sherman, president, "will develop a solidarity that will be practically irresistible."

"It is my hope," continues the president of this new woman's republic, new democracy, "to bring not only State presidents (who correspond to the office of State governors) and all State officers, but every one of the 2,800,000 women in our ranks into intimate connection with the General Federation that every woman will feel it to be her very own. With a greater federation consciousness and a keener sense of individual responsibility all along the line, we shall develop a solidarity that will be, as I said, practcially irresistible.

"There will, with the new administration, be no break in the continuity of federation work. Our plans must keep their steadiness of purpose and we must not fail to carry to completion all projects now supported by the federation.

"In addition we must bear in mind that world conditions challenge us to keep awake to new creative forces and we must hold our organization in all its units responsive to the great new movements as the best possible way to serve our country."

DIRECTOR'S WORK

Who is your State director in the great body of club women? Do you know her? Are you keeping in touch through her, with national issues These are questions every club should ask itself. The general federation director, who votes for you on the national board, is the link that holds the national and State organizations in close relationship with each other, Mrs. S. M. Souders of Montana is reminding members in her State

Her chief work is to increase membership in her State, to keep the national board informed of State club activities, and to keep the individual clubs in her State

JEWISH WOMEN PLAN FETE

Breakfast Program Expected to Attract Throng of One Thousand; Council is Active

The midwinter breakfast of the Council of Jewish Women to be given on Wednesday, at 12 o'clock, in the ballroom of the Biltmore, bids fair to eclipse the yearly luncheon given last September, which was one of the largest functions in point of numbers given by any woman's club in Los Angeles.

Over 600 reservations have already been made and it is expected that 1000 women will partake of the hospitality of this active organization of women. Although primarily interested in the problems of the adolescent girl, the foreign-born mother and child, the problems of Americanization, and in children who are victims of broken homes, the Council of Jewish Women, under the direction of their president, Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith, are sponsoring a series of evening dinner lectures at Paulais's banquet rooms. Subjects for discussion have been "The Triple Alliance—Parent, Teacher, Child," by Prof. Frederick P. Woellner; "How to Measure Intelligence in Children," by Prof. J. Harold Williams of the Los Angeles Diagnostic Clinic, and "Ancient and Modern Day Alchemy," by Prof. William Conger Morgan of the southern branch of the University of California.

Two more evening lectures remain to be given and will be followed by a series of morning talks, furnished by the university extension lecture bureau. A public schools committee, numbering thirty women, has been formed and under the leadership of Mrs. Herbert Baruch will co-operate with the teachers of the non-English child in the public schools.

In order to materially assist the council's thrift shop at 1215 East Seventh street, Mrs. Goldsmith will give a bundle tea in her Hollywood home on the 26th inst., from 2 to 5 p.m., for all council members who come with a box or bundle of garments for the thrift shop. The program for the midwinter breakfast will be given by Salvadore Ordones, piano virtuoso. This musician has been accorded a most enthusiastic reception in Austria, Germany, Mexico and New York City.

"God's Masterpiece," will be interpreted by Mrs. Goldsmith and the program will be augmented by many distinguished honor guests who will be seated at the speaker's table. Mrs. Gus Meertief is chairman of hospitality and Mrs. I. Steinhart in charge of breakfast reservations.

PROGRAM OPENS NEW CLUB HOME

Inglewood Women Happy in Handsome Structure

Civic Leaders Participate in Ceremonies

John Steven McGroarty is Chief Speaker

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

INGLEWOOD, Jan. 17.—Realty and industry were largely represented at the formal opening of the beautiful Spanish type home of the Inglewood Woman's Club, just completed at a cost of $35,000. Frank D. Parent, president of the Inglewood Realty Board, was not only one of the speakers, but was introduced as "Mrs. Parent's husband," because of his wife's manifold activities on behalf of the new structure. She was chairman of the building committee, and was highly praised for her devotion and success in this responsibility. Mr. Parent took occasion to felicitate the club on being the first organization in the community to "own your own home"—that phrase, he added, as a realtor, being a favorite one with him.

Sam Greene, chairman of the open forum committee of the Inglewood Chamber of Commerce, under whose auspices the brilliant occasion was given, is also past president of the Los Angeles Furniture Manufacturers' Association, representing fifty factories in the Los Angeles metropolitan area.

A beautiful highly polished hardwood gavel, bound with silver, presented to him on his retirement from the headship of the furniture manufacturers' organization, was wielded by Mr. Greene at this function for the first time, he said.

The speaker of the evening was John Steven McGroarty, author of the Mission Play, poet, novelist and philosopher of "the green Verdugo hills," whose subject was "How the Club Women Run the Chamber of Commerce," a theme which he handled in his own inimitable, whimsical way.

Another speaker was Mrs. Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith, who delivered the greetings of other women's clubs of the State to the Inglewood women. She was the leading woman in the first cast of the Mission Play, and she, Sam Greene and Mr. McGroarty are all natives of Pennsylvania. Original plans for the building were drawn by Earl W. Porter, secretary of the Inglewood Chamber of Commerce, and working plans and specifications were by Frank M. Goodwin, Compton architect. The contractor was Wierck & Wierck of this city.

informed of national activities. Montana was the very first State to vote universal or direct membership of clubs in the national body, such action having been taken at Butte in 1921. Since then many States have voted such membership. Montana has borrowed a sufficient sum to complete the State's pledge to G.F.W.C. headquarters, obtaining the money from three club women giving notes for the amounts borrowed.

As vice-convenor, (which corresponds to our vice-chairman) of the standing press committee of the International Council of Women. I am finding much interesting reading in the I.C.C., combined third and fourth annual report of the seventh quinquennial period.

We in America are prone, I believe, to think of ourselves well organized and to feel that we should find a way to help organize women of other lands than ours. Which may be true, but it gives us pause to peruse reports of affiliated organizations and find that women are working hand in hand, along organized lines, in Canada, Deutschland, Sweden, Great Britain, Denmark, Netherlands, Australia, including New South Wales, Tasmania, Victoria, Queensland, West Australia, South Australia; in New Zealand, Italy, France, Argentine, Schweiz, Oesterreich, Ungarn, Norway, Belgium, Greece, Bulgaria, Finland, South Africa, Portugal, Iceland, Ukrainia, Estland, Rumania, Mexico, Chile, Cuba, Latvia, Czecho-Slovakia.

In all of these countries the first organized step has been made to remove legal disabilities from women that woman may better promote the welfare of the home and child and enter herself into a greater development that can come only with greater independence. Everywhere in the world—it seems—the leaven of liberty for the individual is working and attacks are being made upon ageold injustices and inhuman laws, made by man for man only.

WORK IN SWEDEN

With very little publicity these organizations are carrying on their labor of love. One finds in Sweden the Fredrika Bremer Forbund, an association that for forty years has taken the lead in all work to raise women's legal status and promote their interests. This association has twenty-four local branches, all of them centers for social work. It has founded and is managing a large agricultural school for women. It has prepared and had presented the Sex Disqualification Removal Bill. As a result, all appointments and posts in civil service, courts of justice, universities and scientific institutions are now with few exceptions open to women on the same conditions as men. A bill, providing for equality of men and women regarding salaries and pension age, is expected to be introduced before the end of this parliamentary session. In September, 1921, the Swedish women obtained full rights of citizenship and suffrage.

Santa Barbara Convention

Plans for the convention of the Los Angeles district, California Federation of Women's Clubs at Santa Barbara, April 14, 15 and 16, are already beginning to take form with the appointment by the executive board of the district of the program committee to plan the three-day session. Mrs. Charles H. Toll, president of the district; Mrs. Eylar M. Fillmore, president of the hostess club; Mrs. William E. Mabee, district chairman of music; Mrs. Grace Kaplun, an accomplished musician of Santa Barbara county; Miss Lley Galpin, district chairman of international relations, and Miss Adah McGorray, district chairman of education, will be responsible for the programs that will make this convention memorable.

furnished the recreation numbers. Of outstanding interest was a play called "The Nest," presented by Mrs. Kathryn Englehorn. Mrs. Englehorn, one of South Side Ebell's own members, was author of the play, and not only produced it, but acted all the chief parts. Books and conversation section will meet in the sun parlor of Vernon Branch Library on the 20th inst., Miss Beatrice Casson, curator. Books and authors flourishing in the "Blood and Tears" epoch of American fiction (1850-1860) will be discussed. Novels from the old school of romance, as pictured by Augusta Evans, Mary J. Holmes, E. P. Roe, Mrs. Southworth, and many others, will be briefly reviewed.

Social service section, Mrs. Frank Spring, curator, will have an all-day meeting on the 20th inst., culminating in a 6 o'clock dinner. Rev. Bromley Oxnam will be the speaker on that occasion.

University Site

Following a complete report by Mrs. Ethel Turner of the education committee of a meeting of representatives from many chambers of commerce of the south offering advantageous sites for the proposed change of situation of the University of California, Southern Branch, the Los Angeles district, California Federation of Women's Clubs, through its executive board, sent a telegram to the Board of Regents of the university urging that they give due consideration to all sites offered and further petitioning that there be no lessening of the general educational program through such a change.

Woman Park Commissioner

Letter of protest were sent by the executive board of the Los Angeles district, California Federation of Women's Clubs, to Mayor Cryer and each of the City Councilmen, objecting to the dismissal of Mrs. Martha Nelson McCan from the Los Angeles Park Commission. Believing that a woman's viewpoint is as necessary as a man's in deciding the matters that come up before the Park Commission and that Mrs. McCan has demonstrated her fitness to continue in her recent position it is the hope of the Los Angeles district federated club women that she may be reinstated.

Wa-Wan Juniors

On Wednesday, the 21st inst. at 2:30 p.m. the Wa-Wan Juniors will hold their regular meeting at 715 South Park View. An interesting program will be given by Pauline Hanna, mezzo-soprano; Margaret Rose Sheet, piano, and a trio composed of violin, Eloise Gebstradt, 'cello, Margaret Stoddard, piano, Coral Atkins. After the program, a social hour will follow and tea will be served.

Highland Park Ebell

"We and Our Government" is the subject of an address to be given next Tuesday morning at Highland Park Ebell Club by Malbone Watson Graham of the history department of Southern Branch, University of California. Club singing will be led by Mrs. J. E. Gribble. Mrs. F. M. Fultz will read "The First Year," by Frank Craven, at a meeting of the drama section. "Early Operas" will be discussed at the music section.

Costumes of special beauty were used last Tuesday morning in the program of interpretive dances by forty-five young pupils from Mrs. L. Fitzmaurice Kelly's classes at Page School for Girls at 4511 Pasadena avenue and from her Eagle Rock studio at the Twentieth Century Clubhouse. The dancing ability of Mrs. Kelly, herself, was shown in her "Rumanian Dance" arranged by Norma Gould.

The book of Exodus was discussed by Miss Winifred Rouzee before the Bible section.

The history and landmarks section enjoyed a trip to La Casa de Cahuenga, the guests of the California History and American Landmarks Club to commemorate the signing of the Treaty of Cahuenga by Lieut.-Col. John C. Fremont and Gen. Andres Pico and their commissioners seventy-eight years ago.

Woman's City Club

The program for the 19th inst. as previously announced through the Woman's City Club bulletin and the newspapers, has been changed due to the illness of one of the speakers and the following program will be presented:

Dr. Frederic Woellner, lecturer in civic education, of the Southern Branch of the University of California, will speak on "Modern Education."

Woman's Press Club

Charles Farwell Edson, Robert Nichols and John S. McGroarty will be the speakers of the day at the open meeting of the Women's Press Club the 20th inst. Nell Martin Graham, chairman, announces that Leetha Journey Post will give a dramatic reading accompanied by Lucile Evans. The music chairman, Elizabeth Gilmore, presents Mrs. Frederic Herrman in a group of colorful songs, Mrs Guy Bush accompanying. The social hour will follow the program with Helen Lukens Gaut and Eva Hamilton Young at the tea tables.

Beverly Hills Club

Miss Aline Barrett Greenwood will give a lecture before the current events section of the Beverly Hills Woman's Club on Tuesday afternoon. The lecture will be in the Heegaard Building.

The well-known American humorist, Donald Ogden Stewart, will appear before the Beverly Hills Woman's Club at their meeting to be held the 23rd inst. A business meeting will precede the lecture hour.

FEMINISTS ADMIRED BY FEW MALES

Speaker Says Doctrine is Resented by Most; Tells of New York Drama

"I am a feminist," declared Dr. Dorothea Moore at the Wednesday matinee luncheon of the Friday Morning Club. "Only women of my age dare admit that they are feminists, at least, not to the men.

"I had the friendship of a distinguished poet at one time. He wrote me a letter several years ago and said that our friendship was over because I had become a feminist.

"Such a man—and he is like thousands of others—expects a woman to be merely a passionate appendage to himself. This onetime friend of mine finally married a sweet little woman with a strong back who did the housework while he wrote articles on syndicalism."

Dr. Moore's remarks on women in general prefaced a talk on plays and players which she saw during her recent visit to New York. She said that most of the women who spoke in public had about onetenth of an idea, while the men, though often vulgar, had something definite to say.

"My trip to New York gave me excellent material for my belief in women," the speaker stated. "There are eight leading women on the New York stage who know what they want to do and are doing it—Ethel Barrymore, Jeanne Eagles, Katherine Cornell, Crystal Hearne, Lynne Fontaine, Nydia Westman, Pauline Lord and Marion Kerby.

"Some of these women are what I would term tigers and the others are actresses. The former is a type of woman who puts over a part by sheer physical energy and beauty, with a certain amount of added technical skill. Ethel Barrymore, who is now playing in a revival of 'The Second Mrs. Tanqueray,' comes under this classification. Katherine Cornell in 'Tiger Cats' makes you hate her. She is a perfect actress."

CINEMA CHIEFS TELL SECRETS

is an illegitimate child, on week days but not on Sundays. In Pennsylvania, as is well known, no actress on the screen may be seen crocheting a pair of baby bootees.

What is right in Ohio is all wrong in Kansas. But we have to appeal to those of the South Sea Islands and China as well as those of Boston, Los Angeles and Cleveland. We can have no theme of race, religion or politics, mixed marriages, capital and labor or child labor.

PICTURES LIMITED

"Novels appeal to the brain, the stage to the ear. But these appeal to all other faculties as well, while pictures are limited to the appeal to the eye alone. And we can't use a whole novel in one picture. Hence the howls of the author and all his followers. The only exception to this is Von Stroheim's production of Frank Norris' 'Greed.' It was thirty reels long and had to be cut to twelve.

"Do you wonder that all of us women who have anything to do with the making of pictures bob our hair so nobody can see how gray we grow?" Miss Dix challenged.

Macey Littson, a business manager in one of the studios, paid a fine tribute to the work of the Federation of Women's Clubs in what it had accomplished.

He had recently purchased Rex Beach's "Wings of Chance" and two other stories of the period of '98.

"I think we have had enough of costume plays for a while and the public is demanding something besides jazz and sex. That period of time was full of interest and so far has not been overdone in pictures.

"You can't have a good director unless he is an idealist. But we business managers have to make his ideals fit common sense and economy. For instance in one of the last pictures the maker said we must have 5000 people in the ballroom scene because there actually were that many in the ball after the armistice in London. But I knew how to make 500 look like 5000, and so we economized there. But you can't economize on your stars, your story, the artists nor on accuracy. If the story is of the Canadian Rockies you can't shoot the scenes in the hills of Hollywood."

Other speakers and guests of honor introduced by Mrs. Florence Moore Kreider, president of the club, were Perley Poore Sheehan, writer, who gave a talk on "The Ideals of Motion Pictures;" Mrs. Hugh Bradford, president of the California P.-T. A.; Grace Frye chairman of motion pictures, L.A.F.W.C.; Mrs. Roger Sterrett, chairman for the University Woman's Club; Dr. M. Jackson, author of "Outwitting Our Nerves," and Mary Stith, chairman of national classifications of films.

South Pasadena

Mrs. F. A. Stone, press chairman for the Woman's Club of South Pasadena, and Mrs. Charles M. Kite, acting press chairman, are arranging for a luncheon to honor South Pasadena and Los Angeles newspaper women in the clubhouse the 21st inst. at 12:30 p.m. Mrs. Kite will preside and several newspaper women will speak briefly.

the club auditorium may be rented for motion pictures.

The program tomorrow afternoon will feature "Italian Scenes in Music," presented by Miss Laurelle Latourette Chase, assisted by Alexander Kisselberg, baritone, recently associated with Louis Graveure, and soloist of the First Presbyterian Church of Pasadena.

East Whittier Club

Activities of the East Whittier Woman's Improvement Club since its organization some twenty-four years ago have been consistently along artistic and cultural lines, although the club has met with marked material success as well. The program given Wednesday afternoon brought out most happily this underlying principle and was presented by Mrs. Ralph M. Thynnes, whose value to music circles is readily acknowledged. Mrs. Thynnes presented Mrs. Samuel Bristol, who gave an illuminating talk upon the appreciation of music, illustrating her text with numerous songs. Mrs. Bristol, a musician of ability, inspired one with her cleverness in discerning the hidden beauties of music. Miss May Edwards, a pianist and 'cellist, who has added artistic merit to many local programs, gave two numbers. Gordon Berger, a Whittier College student and pupil of Prof. Howard L. Hockett, head of the department of vocal music at the college, sang Speak's "Morning," with piano accompaniment by Miss Esther Milhous. Mr. Berger, a freshman, is a baritone of unusual promise, for whom his friends predict a brilliant musical future. Miss Milhous is an accomplished musician, having accompanied many prominent soloists and also the glee clubs of the college in former years. She is on the staff at the college.

Pio Pico Woman's Club

"Educational Legislature" was the interesting subject of an address given Wednesday afternoon before the Pio Pico Woman's Club at its cozy clubhouse on Long Beach Boulevard by Mrs. J. A. Woodinuff, executive secretary of the California Teachers' Association. Mrs. Woodinuff spoke of the modern methods of moral training and also explained some of the measures that are to come before the present Legislature relating to education. The program was presented by Miss Floy Gebhardt, chairman of education.

Preceding the program an attractive luncheon was served by the ways and means committee. These ladies have adopted this method of raising money to pay for the memorial tree which served as a Christmas tree during the holidays and is now to be planted in the clubhouse grounds.

Torrance Club

Members of the executive board of the Women's Club of Torrance are busy collecting the subscriptions made by business men for the new clubhouse, and another committee is engaged in interesting the new members in subscribing, virtually all of the members of a longer period having subscribed. Two entertainments have been arranged for the benefit of the building fund, the first a midwinter dance, which will be given at Moose Hall the 24th inst., and the second, a play, will be given February 14 in the high-school auditorium.

Mrs. Willis M. Brooks, art chairman, will have charge of the program for the next meeting Thursday at 2 p.m. in the Guild Hall of the Evangelical Church. This session will be in the nature of a studio tea and paintings of noted artists will be on exhibition, including the prize picture of the "Yosemite in Winter," in which the club owns a share.

Inglewood Acres

Mrs. F. T. Bicknell will give an illustrated talk on birds and flowers at the next meeting of the Woman's Progressive Club of Inglewood Acres, the 21st inst. She will be followed by Mrs. W. S. Stevens, who will speak on trees. The regular 1 o'clock luncheon will be served. In order to accommodate some of the members the rapidly growing gymnasium class, under the direction of Mrs. Mary Coburne of Los Angeles, now meets on Wednesday evening instead of Tuesday morning.

The informal dances on Saturday night have been resumed and are proving very popular.

Eagle Rock

Next Thursday afternoon the Woman's Twentieth Century Club of Eagle Rock will present Ellis Rhodes, tenor, in an afternoon of songs. He will be assisted by Miss Holly Lash, soprano. Miss Ruth Armstrong will be the accompanist. As Mr. Rhodes made his home in Eagle Rock for many years and is well known in the valley his concert is eagerly anticipated. At 1 o'clock a "get-acquainted luncheon" will be served.

A community meeting will be held at the clubhouse on Monday evening, February 2, to consider the World Court.

The Junior Auxiliary will hold its business meeting Saturday morning, the 24th inst.

HOBBY IS USEFUL

The ability of Ricardo Cortez as a horseman stood him in good stead in "The Spaniard," a Paramount production. One of Cortez's favorite sports is horseback riding, and when the script called for a wild and perilous ride, Cortez was not only on the job but on the horse. He put his mount across streams and over fences. But when he came to a ruined wall he followed the script and took a spectacular fall. Then he ate a free dinner on Raoul Walsh, directing, by putting his horse over the wall three times in perfect form.

—And many others not mentioned here.

SECOND FLOOR

Oriental Rug Sale

THIS great assortment of Oriental and Chinese Rugs, being individual and, in a way, works of art, cannot be priced according to definite groups, but must be given separate prices according to size, kind, history, intricacy of pattern, character of workmanship and so forth.

It is this individuality, however, that gives to each Rug its greatest worth—a worth not to be measured by cost. And in every instance, the price accorded these Rugs is almost incredibly low, in view of the increasing value and scarcity of genuine Oriental Rugs.

The assortment, unusually complete, will include antique Oriental Rugs, Prayer Rugs, Oriental Runners, Hall and room-sized Rugs, small Rugs and Chinese Rugs in almost any size or color.

Of especial interest will be the Antique Oriental Rugs, ranging in size from (approximately) 4x7 to 4¾x8 feet, and offering four low prices: $95, $195, $115 and $125.

For example, an unusually fine antique Tereghan, 4x7, will be $105. And a Karaja, 4x8, will be $115.

A group of Beluchistan Rugs, average size 3x5, will be only $32.50.

Oriental Runners, many sizes, will be $75, $85, $95, $105 and $120.

Anatolian Prayer Rugs, varying in size from 5.6 by 4½ feet, to 3½x6, will be $42.50, $47.50 and $57.50.

Many, many others, so many that they can hardly be touched upon here, will bear prices low enough to merit early attention, Monday.

SIXTH FLOOR

Chinese Rugs

A LARGE collection of pure, Mongolian wool Rugs, deep-piled, lustrous, rich in texture and bearing new, greatly lowered prices.

9x12 sizes priced to begin at $275. 8x10 at $195 and $225.

Larger sizes priced accordingly—for example a Rug 10¼x16, is $625.

Small Scatter Rugs beginning at $28. And 6x9 Rugs at $139.50.

SIXTH FLOOR

Exceptional Price Card Tables, $2.95

A SPECIALLY low pricing of Folding Card Tables will be of decided importance to every Monday shopper at Robinson's.

Low enough to make possible their purchase by twos and threes, they should attract every woman who entertains, occasionally or constantly.

With metal corners, metal tips on the legs, and dark green leatherette tops. Very remarkably priced—Monday—at $2.95.

FIFTH FLOOR

Many Sterling Silver Pieces Notably Low Priced

THE simple elegance of sterling silver cannot be duplicated and when one is fortunate to find it as low in price as this at Robinson's Monday, an addition of several pieces should be made to one's service.

Sterling Silver Comports of an excellent heavy weight burnished style are priced at $7.50.

Sterling Silver Bridal Baskets, 8½ inches high, have pierced edges and engraved handles, priced at $5.50.

11-inch Sterling Silver Bridal Baskets have an artistic engraved design on the body of the basket and graceful engraved handles. At $7.50.

Sterling Silver Salt and Pepper Shakers, in the Colonial fluted design, 4½ inches high, at only $5 a pair.

And 3 pairs of Sterling Silver Salt and Pepper Shakers, individual size, boxed—only $2.50 for the set of six.

Sterling Silver Bud Vases, bright or hammered finish, 6-inch height, at $1.50 each.

FIRST FLOOR

Glassware, New and Economical

A NEW kind of Glassware offers Tumblers and Iced Tea Glasses with a beaded edge — which prevents chipping and gives them unusual durability.

In etched or plain styles, they will be exceptionally priced Monday—as an important part of Robinson's Homefurnishings Week.

Water Tumblers, plain, set of six, only 60c a set.

Etched Tumblers in sets of six, at 75c, 85c and 95c a set.

Etched Iced Tea Glasses, in sets of six, at $1.05 and $1.15 a set.

WOMAN WIELDS ARTISTIC CHISEL

plied her tools busily and a leaf took form under her hands.

"The reaction of different people to this work is very interesting. Sometimes I will do a piece that seems to me the best I've done in many a day, yet it will be passed by with scant approval. Then someone will come, perhaps after years, and only that particular piece of work will satisfy them.

"At other times I will labor over a design and, when it is finished—well, somehow it has fallen short of the beautiful thought I had for it. And, perhaps, the very next day one will come who will take it into her hands with all the loving appreciation we give to some rare bit of beauty. It will be just that to her."

I watched the strong, capable hands deftly carving a flower from the piece of oak on which she was working. They were unusual hands for a woman. Her wrists were round and smooth, the muscles firm from making that chisel do just the thing Florence Walker intends it shall.

As I passed out of the house and down the steps I glanced back to wave a farewell to the snowy-haired woman by the window. Mrs. Walker responded with a flourish of the chisel's handle. It was as though she had signaled me with a fairy wand which she had but to wave and the whole world of ugliness would be transformed into a wilderness of beauty.

OATMAN PLAYERS TO OFFER SHAKESPEARE

Willamene Wilkes, director of the Majestic Theater productions and faculty member of the Marta Oatman School of the Theater, is casting these players in "The Taming of the Shrew," which will open their new Portmanteau Theater on the school grounds sometime in the near future. Heretofore all plays given by students of the school and the Marta Oatman players have been staged at the Majestic Theater, morning and afternoon matinees. The new little theater will make evening as well as matinee performances possible.

Dickson Morgan's class in stagecraft which meets every Tuesday and Friday evenings at 7 o'clock is rapidly building and painting sets for the Portmanteau Theater. Nathan Shindell, Kenneth Gibson and Eldon Bullis are playing in "Just Married," the current production at the Majestic Theater, in which Thomas Wilkes presents Edward Everett Horton.

Publicity Will be Chief Topic of Presidents

Press and publicity will be the general theme of study at the council of presidents of the Los Angeles District Federated Clubs to be held Tuesday at the Hollywood Woman's Club, beginning at 9:50 a.m.

"Club Institute," led by the State and district parliamentarian, Mrs. Charles S. McKelvey; special reports; a study of the child labor amendment by Mrs. C. J. Colden, district chairman of industry and employment in the department of public welfare; a surprise announcement by Miss Eloise Forman, district chairman of community service, and an address on federation matters by Mrs. J. B. Lorbeer, vice-president of the district, will conclude the morning session.

After luncheon, at which club editors of the Los Angeles newspapers and members of the State and district press and publicity committees will be guests of honor, the afternoon program will be in charge of Mrs. Lucille Stephenson, district chairman of circulation, and Mrs. Ethelbert R. Maule, district chairman of press and publicity.

Mrs. Emilie Mann Timerhoff, State circulation chairman, will talk on that subject. Mrs. E. B. Latham, State press chairman, will discuss how presidents and press chairmen can better co-operate. Mrs. Blanche Friend Austin, editor of the California Federation News, will give an address on the requirements of an ideal press chairman. Mrs. Ruth McClintock will elucidate the essentials of news, and Myra Nye, club editor of The Times, will show how the aims of the general federation can be carried out through the local news column.

"Pape's Cold Compound"

Breaks a Cold Right Up

Don't stay stuffed-up! Take "Pape's Cold Compound" every two hours until three doses are taken. The first dose opens clogged-up nostrils and air passages of head; stops nose running; relieves headache, dullness, feverishness, sneezing. The second and third doses usually break up the cold completely and end all grippe misery.

"Pape's Cold Compound" is the quickest, surest relief known and costs only thirty-five cents at drug stores. Tastes nice. Contains no quinine. Insist upon Pape's.—[Advertisement.

BY THE WAY

BY EVA G. TAYLOR

"Did you take a drive yesterday?" was asked.

"No, I joined the parade!" It reached from the mountains to the sea, and from Santa Barbara to Santa Ana. It wound slowly along in a sinuous trail on every highway and boulevard. It merely moved. It was exciting to sit with your hand on the wheel and rest—just to sit. My friend asked: "Do you think we will get there today?"

"I wouldn't venture to predict. We might still be sitting here tonight." It is becoming a great adventure to start out and try to get somewhere. A joyride now is as exciting as a funeral procession.

If one has imagination and a modicum of vision it is an interesting amusement to speculate on our future transportation by automobile. Even one year hence we may all be deadlocked—sitting in a motionless car among several million other unmoving cars inextricably wedged. It might even come to the point where a wrecking crew would be required to dismantle the machines in order to remove them from the dead center prevailing at every street intersection. Yet, how would even a wrecking crew get anywhere? We all know that there is no more room on our highways and we know equally well that thousands of new cars are appearing continually.

Possibly the air will be our only refuge in the future from the street and highway congestion. All our scientific inventions and discoveries have been the result of some need arising or some old condition outgrown. Possibly some fertile brain may devise a way of settling our transportation problems without forcing us back to the donkey-cart and the village lane. As we look at our narrow city streets we can easily trace their origin. Wide streets were not needed in the old pueblos.

Los Angeles is no worse off than New York in that regard. The streets of Gotham were originally cow paths, according to Washington Irving and early historians. Our present difficulties in the way of transportation seem worse because we attract autoists from all over the world. Our position as a tourist city adds greatly to the congestion of our narrow streets and more narrow highways. As our city dads still seem to be taking their pueblo-day siesta we may be obliged to wait a few more years for relief. Perhaps, though, some inventive genius will hit upon a plan to transport us through the air to and from our daily work.

Tradition hints of a mode of conveyance used in ancient Atlantis, long since submerged beneath the waters of the sea. It is said that a basket-like apparatus was always available at any point in the great and splendid cities of that lost continent. Upon entering it and touching a button, or lever, one of nature's hidden forces was released, and the conveyance, called a "valix," mounted swiftly upward and carried one to his destination through the air. Its speed could be regulated at will and it could be left anywhere, ready for the next passenger who might desire to use it. Fortunate Atlanteans! In comparison with that local mode of travel our pretensions to civilized travel seem most barbarous and clumsy. Perhaps, however, when it becomes literally impossible for us to longer move about on the ground, we may take to the air and regain a lost heritage. Won't some genius please help us out?

DOUG LOST AWARD FOR FILM STORY

Judges Didn't Know He Was "Thief of Bagdad" Author Under Pseudonym

Judging by the tone of reports that are echoing westward from New York, there was a bit of fireworks in connection with the awarding of the Adolph Zukor prize of $10,000 to the writer whose story or play made the best motion picture produced in the year ending September 1, 1924.

The award, it will be remembered, was made to Rafael Sabatini for his "Scaramouche," produced for screen by Rex Ingram and released by Metro.

The latest version of the awarding of the prize comes in a letter from Curtis Melnitz, who is acting as special potentate for Josef Von Sternberg's "Salvation Hunters," now being released through United Artists.

"I just saw Robert Sherwood," Melnitz wrote to a member of the Fairbanks organization, "who was on the committee that awarded the $10,000 prize the other day to Sabatini for his 'Scaramouche.' Sherwood tells me that at first the vote was unanimous in favor of the award going to Elton Thomas, author of the story of 'The Thief of Bagdad.' Everything was ready and they tried to get in touch with Elton Thomas, when they found to their surprise that Elton Thomas was merely a fictitious name and that there was really no author of 'The Thief of Bagdad.'

"Mary Roberts Rhinehart, representing the Authors' League of America, insisted that the prize must be awarded to a real human being and not a fictitious person, and it was so decided after a strenuous battle in which Robert Sherwood fought to the last in favor of the fictitious author."

Just why inquiry was not made at the Fairbanks Studios as to who Elton Thomas is is a question that Doug is seeking an answer to, according to studio officials.

"Elton Thomas is my nom de plume," he stated when questioned regarding the matter, "and I am the author of 'The Thief of Bagdad.' In fact, I have written several stories under that name."

Mary Pickford says she is now working on a film story for herself and that she expects to name Mrs. Elton Thomas as the author.

ANITA STEWART FINISHES

Anita Stewart, one of the screen's best-known stars, who, after a period of retirement of almost two years, recently signed for the lead in "The Boomerang," is just completing her role in the B. P. Schulberg picture, which is promised an early release. "The Boomerang" is a filmization of the Belasco stage success which, some seasons ago, ran for two years in New York. Bert Lytell plays opposite Miss Stewart in the screen version.

ACTOR HAS PLAYED VARIETY OF ROLES

William J. Kelly

"Viewing the world as a stage and the men and women one meets as actors, the sense of the dramatic is sure to be heightened," says William J. Kelly. Born in Newburyport, Mass., which furnished much of the dramatic background in the career of Nathan Hale, Mr. Kelly began as a youth his studies at Harvard and speedily became the cosmopolite. He had planned to be a priest, but with a number of other college friends, saw Mansfield in "Beau Brummel" and decided on the stage as a profession.

During his twenty years on the speaking stage, the actor has played every role conceivable and has worn over 2000 different costumes. Mr. Kelly admits a weakness for doublets, hats with sweeping plumes and swords, and names "Romeo" as his favorite role in the old days.

Now Mr. Kelly is giving character roles to the screen. At the present time he is filling an engagement at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in "Proud Flesh," enacting an Irish-American business man who has acquired his wealth suddenly.

Fans Get Chance to Select Star of Wright Story

Principal Pictures Corporation has enlisted the aid of the radio for the casting of their next big production. The decision to start production on "The Winning of Barbara Worth," Harold Bell Wright's best seller, brought about the necessity for the early selection of the girl who is to play Barbara. Sol Lesser and Mike Rosenberg, officials of the producing company, are anxious that this Wright story be brought to the screen with the characters so true to those in the book that the millions of readers will have the story itself transferred to the screen.

So it was that Lesser arranged to talk over the radio on a night last week and asked the help of the fans in the casting of the picture, particularly the role of Barbara. Lesser feels that the fan who goes to see the motion-picture versions of stories he has read is in position to reflect the attitude of the public at large toward each individual story—and give as well the public's visualization of the book characters in the form of some screen star or stars.

"Barbara Worth" is perhaps the most widely read and most popular of all the Wright novels. The romance of Barbara—combined with the thrills in the story, have given this book a circulation of over 2,000,000 copies, and created thousands of new Wright fans.

Lesser's radio experiment is already bringing results—for letters have been pouring into the broadcasting station since the producer's request was made. An unusual amount of interest has been created over the selection of the role, a good part of it probably due to the personal contact established by the talk directly to the fans. As a result, Principal is profiting by the suggestions which are indicative of what every producer is striving for—a key to what the public wants in motion pictures.

'Stop Flirting' to Have Notable Cast for Screen

When Al Christie's next feature-length comedy, "Stop Flirting," goes into production next week it will have an exceptional cast of farceurs. As already announced, John T. Murray, stage star, will have the leading role. Opposite him will be Wanta Hawley, who has already been in one Christie feature, "Reckless Romance," this year.

Murray and Miss Hawley will play the roles which were carried by Fred and Adele Astair when "Stop Flirting" played for two years in London. The play is still on in London, although the Astairs are back in New York in a new show this season.

Hallam Cooley has been signed for another big part in "Stop Flirting," and George Stewart, who was in Christie pictures two years ago, will also be in the cast. Jack Duffy, who was a hit in "Reckless Romance," will play the flirty Italian count, while David James and Lucien Littlefield, who have prominent parts in "Charley's Aunt," complete the line-up of men in the new feature.

Ethel Shannon, who plays opposite Syd Chaplin in "Charley's Aunt," will also have one of the feature roles, and Vera Steadman, long known for her work in the Christie short comedies, will have her first opportunity in a role in a feature, playing the part of Suzanne.

The new picture will be the third in the series of Al Christie features being released through Producers' Distributing Corporation, previous pictures being "Hold Your Breath" and "Reckless Romance."

MONTA BELL CUTTING

Monta Bell is busy at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, cutting and titling his newest picture, "Lady of the Night," in which Norma Shearer has the leading feminine role. Malcolm McGregor, George K. Arthur, Dale Fuller, Betty Morrison and Fred Esmelton, are in the supporting cast.

SPRING

FROM AMONG THE MANY PHASES OF THE NEW MODE, TWO STAND FORTH WITH A DISTINCTNESS WHICH ALMOST OVERSHADOWS THE OTHERS; THE ENSEMBLE—EXPRESSING THE HIGHEST FORM OF COSTUME-HARMONY; AND THE BOYISH FLANNEL OR KASHA FROCK—SPRING'S MOST SOPHISTICATED CONTRIBUTION TO THE VOGUE OF SIMPLICITY.

The Ensemble

WITHIN this group appear sports, street and afternoon modes. Varying in fabric from Kasha, twilled woolens and heavy corded silks, to light printed or plain chiffons and crepes. In such new shades as wigwam, rougette, Chili, carmel, bluette, sawdust, natural and gingersnap.

With straight Coats—long or three-quarter; with tailored, scarf or fur collars; plain or fur-bordered—and vivid Frocks either matching or contrasting with the coat, the Ensemble is Spring's favorite mode.

Some priced at $97.50—others at $125, $150 or more.

THIRD FLOOR

The Kasha Frock

MANY are not of Kasha, but of weaves similar to this fabric—and many others are of flannel or very light twilled woolens.

The clever use of buttons, pleated insets, box pleats, stitched pleats, brilliant wool flowers, silk ties—and even short cavalier capes, give to their fundamental boyishness new meaning and charm.

Lipstick red, green, salmon, pastel tints, natural, beige, scarlet, blue and white. Priced at $55 or more.

THIRD FLOOR

Fur Jacquettes

SUCH an opportune pricing should attract to Robinson's every girl or woman who has fur-coat needs in mind. These Jacquettes are worth emphatically more—as their beauty will testify at first glance.

Silver muskrat, soft silky skins, trimly fashioned into slim, youthful modes—trimmed with bands of squirrel on the collar and the smart puffed sleeves. Some trimmed with red fox.

And all offered Monday at the amazingly low price of just $97.50.

THIRD FLOOR

Silk Lingerie

THIS Lingerie which Robinson's will offer Monday is fashioned of exquisitely fine silks—trimmed with real laces—is superior in every detail, yet will bear exceptionally low prices.

Of crepe de Chine, crepe glad and crepe back satins—trimmed with filet, Irish and Binche laces. In peach, Nile, maize or flesh.

Envelope Chemises to be only $4.95—Monday. And Nightgowns to match, $9.75.

FOURTH FLOOR

Violets—the New Spring Corsage

FRESH, cool violets in colorful clusters will be the smart complement to spring costumes. And Robinson's will offer a large selection of these beautiful flowers at specially low prices Monday.

Exquisitely natural—to be worn on the shoulder or at the belt.

Parma Violets in rich purple clusters. At very low prices—for Monday—50c, 75c, $1, $1.50 and $1.75 a bunch.

FIRST FLOOR

Novelty Gloves at $4.50 a Pair

650 Pairs of Real Kid Gloves, with novelty embroidered cuffs, will be so exceptionally priced Monday that they form an extraordinary opportunity for economy.

Beautifully fashioned from fine skins, the cuffs embroidered in brighter tones, they will include gray, wood brown, beaver, brown, black and white.

All sizes from 5½ to 7½. Amazingly low priced Monday at $4.50 a pair.

FIRST FLOOR

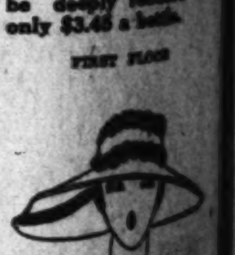
French Perfumes at Half Price

85 Bottles of Imported Perfumes will be offered at just half their regular prices Monday. Exquisite odors from well-known makers.

Regularly priced from $1.75 to $22—at Half Price Monday.

And 288 Bottles of Veolay's Perfumes in Ambre Royal, [illegible] and Valreine odors, will be deeply reduced to only $3.45 a bottle.

FIRST FLOOR



Wide Brimmed Hats at $15

THEIR wide brims foreshadow the coming of bright spring and summer days—their brilliant or pastel shades are the necessary complement to Southern sports wear.

In white and shades of red, fuchsia, yellow, blue, green, Indian orange and others. Trimmed with flowers, cocque feathers or pleated ribbon.

The very low price gives them Monday is Robinson's concession to a delightful mode, $15.

Annual Clearance

more than an ordinary clearance

Begins Its Third Sales-Record-Breaking Week

Monday, January 19

Hundreds of Extra Salespeople, Additional Wrapping and Delivery Facilities

—have been provided to serve the Los Angeles buying-public during this "sale-extraordinary!"

New price attractions—in many instances, a complete change in our program of value-giving—mark this coming Monday as a day that will long be remembered.

These Four Pages Briefly Hint of the Money-Saving Advantages that Await You at The Broadway

We have crowded into these four pages, as many offerings as possible—still, lack of space compels us to leave out many worthy items. In other instances, we have had to give small space to merchandise that really warranted much greater display; possible illustrations, too!

To Avoid Missing an Important Buying Privilege on Perhaps the Very Articles You Need Most—Right at This Particular Time—Look for the Clearance Signs!

A Large Group of Luggage, One-Third Less

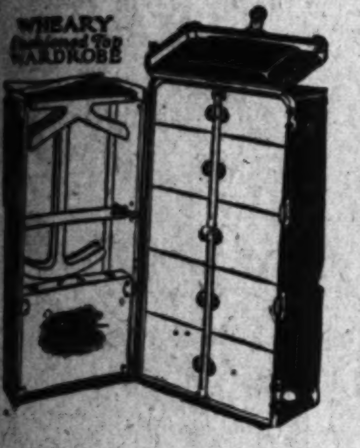
Hat boxes, suit cases, overnight cases, bags, week-end cases in many grades, formerly selling from $12.75 to $42.50, on sale Monday at 1-3 less.

Packing Trunks, $8.75

Metal covered, veneered wood trunks, well reinforced. 36 or 40-inch size, specially priced at $8.75.

Full Size, "Cushioned Top"

Wardrobe Trunks, $49.50



These trunks are built for service of 5-ply, rigid tested construction; equipped with full size hangers, dust curtains, laundry bag, 4 large metal-bound drawers with locking device, washable blue lining and cushioned top. Priced almost one-fourth less at $49.50.

The Broadway—Aisles 6 to 8.

Hemstitched Pure Linen

Cloth and Napkins, $9.50

—This price is for a 66x66 pure linen cloth and six 20-inch hemstitched napkins; for the 66x86 cloth and napkins, $11.50; for the 66x104 cloth and napkins, $13.50. These sets were specially purchased from the mill in Ireland. Their prices mean substantial savings.

16-Inch All-Linen Crash Toweling, 19c Yard

—Linen toweling of this good quality and at this price is an investment in home comfort for the family at small cost.

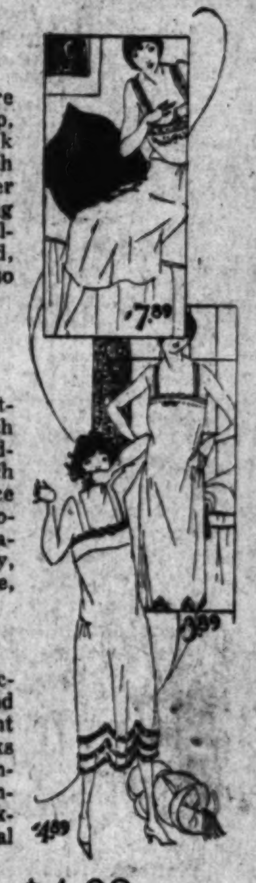
Annual January Sale of Lingerie

Costume Slips Featured $2.89, $3.89, $4.89, $7.89



Radio Silk Slips $2.89

—Some silk foulard slips are also included in this group, some of which have deep silk hems and some finished with lace-trimmed hems. Another attractive finish is scalloping defined with hemstitching. Colors: flesh, peach, orchid, maize, Nile green, etc. Also white.

600 Knitted Slips $2.89

—These are durable, comfortable knitted slips, some of which have attractive designs embroidered on hems; others of which have accordion-pleated flounce at lower edge. There are two-tone, pastel-color combinations, as well as black, navy, brown, green, powder blue, gray, tan, etc.

Slips at $3.89

—These are most satisfactory. Slips of silk foulard and tub silk to wear with light spring frocks. Lace, pin tucks and hemstitching all play important parts in their adornment. One style has a deep, silk-lined hem, trimmed with real filet lace edging.

Silk Slips at $4.89

—Radium, crepe de chine and wash satin were used in fashioning these attractive slips; some are plain and tailory in appearance, being finished with deep silk hems; wash satin slips are trimmed with lace tops and lower edges; one style of silk radium has scalloped hem; another has lace-trimmed or hemstitched points at lower edge. Pastel shades.

Silk Slips at $7.89

—These are of extraordinary value by reason of the weight, yet fine texture of their materials. Deep, shadow-proof silk hems give them sufficient "body." Real Irish lace edging, hand embroidery, netting and Val. lace are daintily used as adornment. Pastel shades and white. —The Broadway—Second Floor.

Venise Lace Bands, $1.35 Yard

—There are 500 yards of these much-sought Venise laces—bands, edges and galoons—and their special Clearance price will of course find favor with women who know their usual prices.

WHAT TO SEE

SING SING ENTHUSIASTIC OVER GEORGE HACKATHORNE'S 'CAPITAL PUNISHMENT'

BY HELEN KLUMPH
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—The Broadway picture reviewers had to go to Sing Sing this [illegible] in order to see a good picture. They went Tuesday night with George Hackathorne [illegible] with Warden Laws, after which "Capital Punishment," a B. P. Schulberg production [illegible] which he is the leading player, was shown to the prisoners at the warden's request. I [illegible] if the picture will find a more enthusiastic audience anywhere.

PLAYERS ARRIVE

[illegible] excitement was caused in [illegible] Central station Monday [illegible] contingent of First Nation- [illegible] arrived. Viola Dana, [illegible] Brockwell, Myrtle and Lin- [illegible] were in the party. [illegible] Mackaill should have [illegible] but she had been kidnaped [illegible] train in Chicago by rep- [illegible] of the newspaper there [illegible] originally ran "Chickie." [illegible] that they simply must [illegible], entertain and bally- [illegible] girl, who was going to play their pet heroine on the screen. Dorothy stood for the photographing, but insisted on hurrying on to New York the very same day.

It was a dismal, gray New York that they found and anyone of them would have been glad to go back to California. Particularly Viola Dana. Viola indulged in a flood of tears the second day she was here, but now she assures me she feels a little more cheerful.

There are more motion-picture players in New York now than I can remember ever seeing here at once before. Richard Barthelmess has returned and is starting work on "Great Music." Frank Tuttle's company came back from Havana the first of the week, and need I tell you that Aileen Pringle is making a tremendous hit with everyone who sees her. Some day she will find a part that brings out the trenchant wit that lurks under her gracious charm and when that day comes I would like to own a theater to run her picture in.

Incidentally, Frank Tuttle has persuaded Ann Pennington to do a dance in his picture. Ann is pretty tired of just dancing in pictures. She wants to be a regular trouper.

The management of "Madame Pompadour" having once dropped Hope Hampton from the cast made frantic efforts to get her to come back to it, but Miss Hampton would not. "Madame Pompadour" is closing after a brief and inglorious run and a lot of people feel that with Miss Hampton in the leading role it might have fared better.

Be that as it may, she is re-

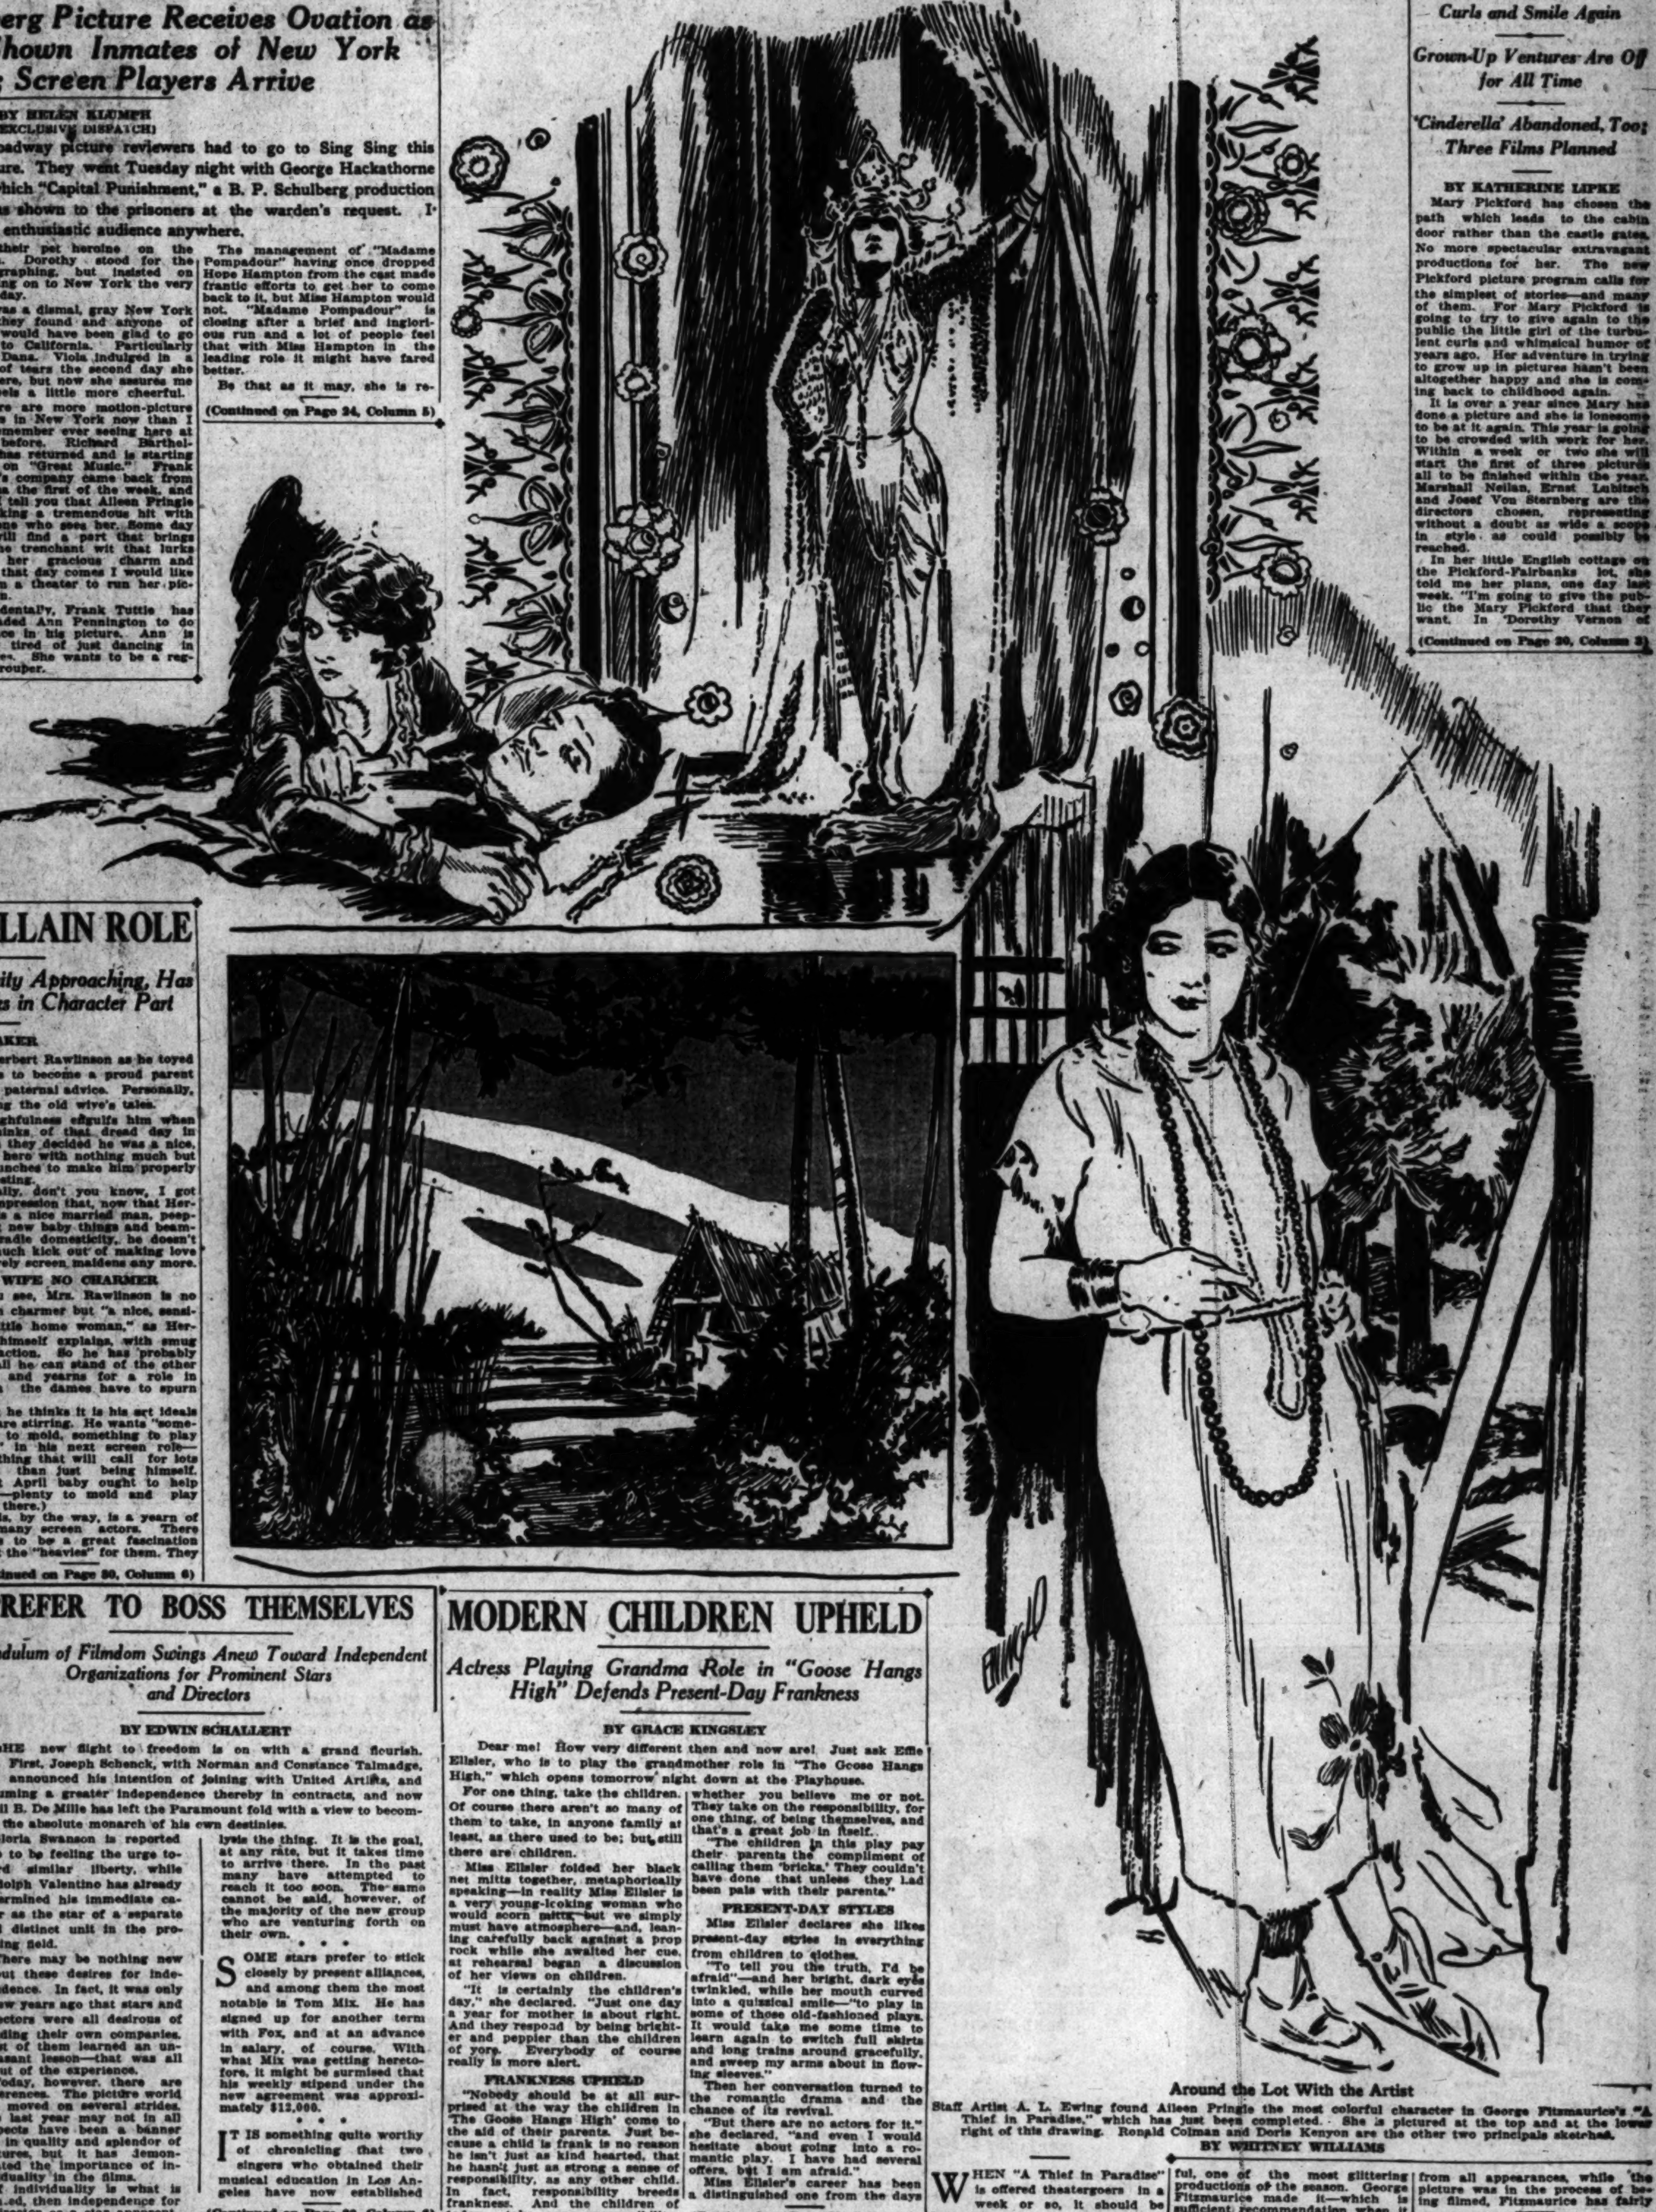
FITZMAURICE SWINGS TO SPECTACULAR ONCE AGAIN

"Thief in Paradise" Goes in for Big, Lavishly Furnished Settings



Around the Lot With the Artist

Staff Artist A. L. Ewing found Aileen Pringle the most colorful character in George Fitzmaurice's "A Thief in Paradise," which has just been completed. She is pictured at the top and at the lower right of this drawing. Ronald Colman and Doris Kenyon are the other two principals sketched.

BY WHITNEY WILLIAMS

WHEN "A Thief in Paradise" is offered theatergoers in a week or so, it should be hailed as one of the most colorful, one of the most glittering productions of the season. George Fitzmaurice made it—which is sufficient recommendation when it comes to artistic backgrounds. And, from all appearances, while the picture was in the process of being filmed, Fitzmaurice has fairly

MARY'S RETURN TO BE AS CHILD

Public Will See Her Beloved Curls and Smile Again

Grown-Up Ventures Are Off for All Time

'Cinderella' Abandoned, Too; Three Films Planned

BY KATHERINE LIPKE

Mary Pickford has chosen the path which leads to the cabin door rather than the castle gates. No more spectacular extravagant productions for her. The new Pickford picture program calls for the simplest of stories—and many of them. For Mary Pickford is going to try to give again to the public the little girl of the turbulent curls and whimsical humor of years ago. Her adventure in trying to grow up in pictures hasn't been altogether happy and she is coming back to childhood again.

It is over a year since Mary has done a picture and she is lonesome to be at it again. This year is going to be crowded with work for her. Within a week or two she will start the first of three pictures all to be finished within the year. Marshall Neilan, Ernst Lubitsch and Josef Von Sternberg are the directors chosen, representing without a doubt as wide a scope in style as could possibly be reached.

In her little English cottage on the Pickford-Fairbanks lot, she told me her plans, one day last week. "I'm going to give the public the Mary Pickford that they want. In 'Dorothy Vernon of

LONGS FOR VILLAIN ROLE

Rawlinson, with Paternity Approaching, Has [illegible] to Hide Good Looks in Character Part

BY ALMA WHITAKER

[illegible] I hope it's a boy," murmured Herbert Rawlinson as he toyed [illegible] in one mind. For Herbert expects to become a proud parent [illegible] and I had a great time giving him paternal advice. Personally, [illegible] I predict a girl . . . knowing the old wive's tales.

[illegible] sort of gather that [illegible] is wallowing in pleasant [illegible] just now—and think- [illegible] the future. And something [illegible] is urging Herbert on- [illegible] and upward. Or those early [illegible] they let him be [illegible] of a week. Wistful sighfulness engulfs him when he thinks of that dread day in which they decided he was a nice, clean hero with nothing much but his punches to make him properly interesting.

Really, don't you know, I got the impression that, now that Herbert is a nice married man, peeping at new baby things and beaming cradle domesticity, he doesn't get much kick out of making love to lovely screen maidens any more.

WIFE NO CHARMER

You see, Mrs. Rawlinson is no screen charmer but "a nice, sensible little home woman," as Herbert himself explains, with smug satisfaction. So he has probably had all he can stand of the other kind, and yearns for a role in which the dames have to spurn him.

But he thinks it is his art ideals that are stirring. He wants "something to mold, something to play with," in his next screen role—something that will call for lots more than just being himself. (That April baby ought to help some—plenty to mold and play with there.)

This, by the way, is a yearn of so many screen actors. There seems to be a great fascination about the "heavies" for them. They

PREFER TO BOSS THEMSELVES

Pendulum of Filmdom Swings Anew Toward Independent Organizations for Prominent Stars and Directors

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

THE new flight to freedom is on with a grand flourish. First, Joseph Schenck, with Norman and Constance Talmadge, announced his intention of joining with United Artists, and assuming a greater independence thereby in contracts, and now Cecil B. De Mille has left the Paramount fold with a view to becoming the absolute monarch of his own destinies.

Gloria Swanson is reported also to be feeling the urge toward similar liberty, while Rodolph Valentino has already determined his immediate career as the star of a separate and distinct unit in the producing field.

There may be nothing new about these desires for independence. In fact, it was only a few years ago that stars and directors were all desirous of heading their own companies. Most of them learned an unpleasant lesson—that was all—out of the experience.

Today, however, there are differences. The picture world has moved on several strides. The last year may not in all respects have been a banner one in quality and splendor of features, but it has demonstrated the importance of individuality in the films.

If individuality is what is wanted, then independence for a director or a star apparently is the thing. It is the goal, at any rate, but it takes time to arrive there. In the past many have attempted to reach it too soon. The same cannot be said, however, of the majority of the new group who are venturing forth on their own.

SOME stars prefer to stick closely by present alliances, and among them the most notable is Tom Mix. He has signed up for another term with Fox, and at an advance in salary, of course. With what Mix was getting heretofore, it might be surmised that his weekly stipend under the new agreement was approximately $12,000.

MODERN CHILDREN UPHELD

Actress Playing Grandma Role in "Goose Hangs High" Defends Present-Day Frankness

BY GRACE KINGSLEY

Dear me! How very different then and now are! Just ask Effie Ellsler, who is to play the grandmother role in "The Goose Hangs High," which opens tomorrow night down at the Playhouse.

For one thing, take the children. Of course there aren't so many of them to take, in anyone family at least, as there used to be; but still there are children.

Miss Ellsler folded her black net mitts together, metaphorically speaking—in reality Miss Ellsler is a very young-looking woman who would scorn mitts, but we simply must have atmosphere—and, leaning carefully back against a prop rock while she awaited her cue at rehearsal began a discussion of her views on children.

"It is certainly the children's day," she declared. "Just one day a year for mother is about right. And they respond by being brighter and peppier than the children of yore. Everybody of course really is more alert.

FRANKNESS UPHELD

"Nobody should be at all surprised at the way the children in 'The Goose Hangs High' come to the aid of their parents. Just because a child is frank is no reason he isn't just as kind hearted, that he hasn't just as strong a sense of responsibility, as any other child. In fact, responsibility breeds frankness. And the children of today take on responsibility, whether you believe me or not. They take on the responsibility, for one thing, of being themselves, and that's a great job in itself.

"The children in this play pay their parents the compliment of calling them 'bricks.' They couldn't have done that unless they had been pals with their parents."

PRESENT-DAY STYLES

Miss Ellsler declares she likes present-day styles in everything from children to clothes.

"To tell you the truth, I'd be afraid"—and her bright, dark eyes twinkled, while her mouth curved into a quizzical smile—"to play in some of those old-fashioned plays. It would take me some time to learn again to switch full skirts and long trains around gracefully, and sweep my arms about in flowing sleeves."

Then her conversation turned to the romantic drama and the chance of its revival.

"But there are no actors for it," she declared, "and even I would hesitate about going into a romantic play. I have had several offers, but I am afraid."

Miss Ellsler's career has been a distinguished one from the days

EUROPE'S FILMS HIGHLY PRAISED

Hollywood Director is Much Impressed by Two

Saw "Der Niebelung" and "Miracle of Wolves"

Declares Industry Here Can Take Some Lessons

While in Europe on his honeymoon Rowland Vance Lee, Fox director, has found time to write back from Rome, where he and his wife are stopping. With half of the Hollywood film colony on tour their letters are followed with a great deal of interest. He writes:

In Paris last week I saw "La Miracles des Loupes" (The Miracle of the Wolves,) the French screen triumph of the year. And last night we saw "Der Niebelung" (The Story of Siegfried,) from the Wagner opera and old folk lore—the largest of the German pictures for this year.

Both were extremely interesting and are a credit to the industry as a whole. The former picture is based on an old legend of the thirteenth century with the historical background of that period. An excellent love theme is introduced into the lives of kings and famous characters. It is a period that I don't think has ever been shown on the screen. The picture is so good that it was shown in the Paris Grand Operahouse—alternating with their regular operatic productions, and with the entire orchestra under their best conductor playing the exceptionally fine score.

MAJESTIC PICTURE

The opera is run by the government and every performance of any kind shown or given there is under the strictest censorship of a committee from the Academie Francaise. It is the first time in history that a film has ever been accorded such signal favor and it should serve as an example for some of our American societies of arts and belles lettres.

The film is majestic, colorful, and moves at an ever-accelerating tempo, reaching a superb climax and terminating quickly thereafter in a thoroughly satisfying manner. It has a sequence where a villainous crew, pursuing the heroine, are attacked by a pack of wolves, which miraculously (the miracle part of the film) do not molest the girl. The suspense and the scenes where the wolves—real wolves—chew these men up is marvelous beyond description. The climax is the storming of a walled city. The city is not a set, but real, and dates from the thirteenth century, is correct as to detail, and there are long shots showing the attacking army descending on the town where one can see the whole town—perhaps one-half mile in circumference. The battle itself is by far the finest battle ever screened. There is none of the idle spear waving, but actual clashes of arms and sickening falls and sword play. The director must have inspired his thousands of actor with the true spirit of their ancestors. It is a real directorial achievement. The picture is in twelve reels and at least eight reels is one sequence—more than the last half.

"BEN HUR" SETS

In defense of our own American methods of production must add that I have seen all of the "Ben Hur" sets and they are certainly larger than anything before constructed and, under the masterful guidance of Fred Niblo, "Ben Hur" will make us all gasp.

All these huge, lavish productions have fairly made my head whirl. It shows that an era that has been dreamed of as coming in perhaps a decade is already at hand.

"In Hollywood, in our own little circle, we are too self-centered and too smug—too confident of our world's cinematic leadership. Outside our gates new, wonderfully creative film intelligences are building mighty pictures, and in doing so are disregarding hundreds of our loved methods and traditions. We must come out of our lethargic state, gird on our armor and fight if we want to hold our title of "World's Film Champions."

DECIDED DEPARTURE

For the first time in her screen career Laska Winters is obliged to depart from the oriental types she has always portrayed on the silver sheet. In Rudolph Valentino's next vehicle, "Cobra," she is a "snake woman," with a costume trailing thirty feet behind her.

HOME FROM VACATION

Forrest Stanley has returned from a brief vacation at Coronado after completing his role of the young inventor in the Universal-Jewel production, "Up the Ladder."

LAVISH SETS MARK "THIEF"

outdone himself in lavish settings and displays.

Fitzmaurice, it will be remembered, was once noted for the splendor of his photoplays and it was occasion for surprise when he made such a film as "Tarnish." In that, he replaced magnificence with grim reality.

In commenting on his return to the spectacular, Fitzmaurice believes that contrast and variety are the essentials of art. Without these two qualities art ceases to exist.

"Because I believe so firmly in the need for contrast and variety in my work, I make it a rule to select stories of the widest possible variance from each other," Fitzmaurice said, between scenes. "It was this belief that led me to follow 'Tarnish' with 'A Thief in Paradise.'

"'Tarnish' is a quietly romantic story with a powerful analysis of a tremendous world problem. Its drama is psychologically intense and its action is drawn against a neutral background. There are no spectacular thrills or lavish sets. There are drama, romance and power, but in this case these qualities are enhanced by the absence of the spectacular and the garish."

"THIEF" EXTRAVAGANT

"'A Thief in Paradise' is the direct antithesis of 'Tarnish.' The story was adapted from Leonard Merrick's novel, 'The Worldlings.' Here vivid action replaces tense psychology. Color and movement are substituted for the essential drabness of 'Tarnish.' Big and lavish sets become a necessity in order to keep in tempo with the story. Polo matches, airplane honeymoons, and the touch of warm color of the South Seas are at sharp variance with the highly emotional drama of 'Tarnish' played in a cheap New York apartment. But each is in perfect key with the story and their wide variety and contrast are a constant inspiration to the director, the scenarioist and the players, who, like Ronald Colman, play in both screen dramas."

The action opens on an island off the China coast—an isle of lost souls. Ronald Colman is introduced as Blake, a derelict, a beachcomber. His fellow-beachcomber, Phillip Jardine, is killed by a shark just as a letter arrives containing money to carry him to San Francisco and to his wealthy father. Rosa Carmino, Jardine's half-caste, common-law wife, persuades Blake to substitute himself for the dead Jardine, who left home when he was a boy. Blake, seeing a chance for another start, finally consents and Rosa accompanies him to San Francisco. She is attracted to him but he is entirely disinterested.

HE LOVES IN DISGUISE

Blake, accepted by the elder Jardine, meets Helen Saville, daughter of Bishop Saville, Noel Jardine's old friend. He falls in love with her but hesitates in declaring himself because of the masquerade he is living.

During a polo game Helen's horse runs away and Blake rescues her. In the excitement he forgets his false position and declares his love.

Jardine, Sr., plans a surprise announcement party to which Rosa secures entrance as a dancer. She treatens to expose Blake. He gives a check for $5000 and orders her to stay away.

On his wedding night, Blake finds he cannot deceive his wife. He starts for her apartment to tell her the whole story, but arrives too late. Rosa has already told Helen that Blake was her lover in the South Seas and shows the check to prove it. Helen hurriedly leaves Del Monte.

Blake follows her to the Jardine home. There he makes full confession to the elder Jardine, nearly breaking the old man's heart. Helen refuses to forgive him, and he attempts suicide as the only way in which to free her from a dishonorable marriage.

Claude Gillingwater has a fine opportunity as Noel Jardine. Alec B. Francis, who plays the bishop, has an opportunity for characterization, as well, and he is rarely disappointing.

VIVID REALISM

In the South Sea Island scenes, a bit of vivid action takes place when Colman struggles with his companion, the younger Jardine, on a raft over possession of a large pearl. The encounter carries both overboard and some very fine pictorial effects have been obtained of the fight under water. A shark kills Colman's opponent and Colman himself barely escapes.

An exotic figure is Aileen Pringle as Rosa. Such a part with Miss Pringle is sure to be something out of the ordinary and her portrayal, from all indications, is deftness itself. Doris Kenyon, too, gives a refreshing portrayal as Helen Saville.

Eternally on the search for novelty in screen entertainment, George Fitzmaurice has introduced an exotic dance staged on the bottom of the sea.

By a combination of photography and set design, achieved by Arthur Miller and Anton Grot, gigantic fish swim about among coral trees and huge sea shells. Even the human participants in the undersea dance make their entrance as divers swimming down from the surface to the immense shell on the ocean's floor, which serves as the hiding place of the stellar feminine dancer who is clad in a symbolic costume of pearls. The dancer is Aileen Pringle.

In order to add to the brilliancy of the picture, the entire set including coral, shells and floor of the sea finished in bright silver and the costumes of the dancers were made entirely of silver and gold cloth. Even the natural flicker of light and shadow, which characterizes scenes actually filmed under water, was reproduced by the technicians.

"A Thief in Paradise" was adapted for the screen by Frances Marion.

MARY'S RETURN TO BE AS CHILD

Haddon Hall' the artistic angle and the costumes were far too important. I'm tired of costume pictures anyway—and so is the public. I'm going to film simple unknown stories which sound like me. I think I know the Pickford the public likes best, and I'm going to film her."

The possibility of recreating "Cinderella" has been definitely abandoned. "I never did want to do Cinderella," Mary told me. "I'm through trying to interpret well-known characters. Everyone has a preconceived idea of what that character should be and no one is ever satisfied. And there isn't any mystery when the plot is known to everyone. I shall never film another book or well-known story. I want to do the simple roles—girls with humor, interest and a bit of pathos. I don't want to grow up ever again."

There was tinge of sadness in Mary's voice as she said it—a bit of mature wisdom which was strangely out of keeping with her girlish appearance. Mary, however, is a very serious young lady. And oh, how pretty she is. The only thing I can think of which gives a proper impression of her, is a story which a group of newspaper men told me. They went boldly out to the studio prepared to ask her some very personal, impertinent questions. The mere fact that she was Mary Pickford was not going to deter them. That was their opinion until they saw her. However when she came to the door of the projection room and said, "Hello, boys," they stared, stuttered, and went away without asking their bold, impertinent questions.

LAST FEW YEARS

"The last few years haven't been my happiest," she told me. "It isn't much fun to be at the top of things. When a person is struggling everyone is willing to make allowances and help, but when you reach the top they are trying to pull you down. On the mountain peak the air is very cold, and it is very lonesome up there.

"Not that I want the struggle again. I like the easy things of life, and it has been fun to have them. But it is so hard figuring just the right thing to do in making pictures. But now I think I have gotten on the right path." And Mary nodded hopefully at me.

A small tragedy has delayed the start of the first picture, however, with Micky Neilan directing. The story planned on was about the daughter of an inventor who lived in a small house by the railroad and kept house for him and her small brothers and sisters. It was Irish and called "Patsy." But just as production was ready to start, it was learned that Colleen Moore was using a similar theme—in fact was filming the same box cars which Neilan had planned for Mary. So they have had to start all over again.

At present they have decided on a story called "The Rooney Family," as Irish as the name and involving an Irish-American girl's attempt to earn her living. Mary will be humorous, vivacious and whimsical—and she will be young.

The second picture contains an interesting angle, for it is to be Irish also with Ernst Lubitsch the German director in charge. As yet Mary hasn't broached the subject to him, fearing that he might not care to direct a picture as far removed from his own nationality and ideas. However she has great faith in Lubitsch and his ability.

Announcement was made sometime ago that Josef Von Sternberg, the young director who presented the novel picture "The Salvation Hunters" was to direct Mary's first picture. It was thought advisable to have Neilan produce that, but toward the end of the year Von Sternberg will direct her in her last picture of the three. The story as outlined by Mary involves a little blind girl in a Pennsylvania mining town. It represents the struggle of the poorer classes for betterment. At present Mary is having a little difficulty in convincing Von Sternberg that a Mary Pickford picture can't be as heavy, gripping as he made "The Salvation Hunters."

"He's so young," explained Mary. "He sees life through dark glasses. He is a very great man. But I insist that the role of the blind girl must have humor and light. Otherwise she would appear a martyr. Even the most drab, self-sacrificing life has sunshine somewhere, if one can only see it."

UPHOLDS CHILD OF PRESENT DAY

when she played Little Eva and kindred roles.

"Do you know this is the fourth old woman role I have had," she explained. "It's rather a good part. The character has a good deal of backbone. And though it is not long, it is important, and you are conscious of granny all the time.

"But I feel almost lost not having everything to do. I had to remember what I heard a great actor say to a young one years ago—'Young man,' he said, 'learn to sit still and act!'

"I had left the stage for many years, my mother was ill and needed me, and my husband was taking care of me—when Arthur Hopkins called me out of my retirement to play the grandmother in 'The Gypsy Trail,' a very good part, and my very first old woman role. After that I did Angie in 'Old Lady 31,' a sweet sort of character which I loved to play.

"Wagenhals and Kemper were having a terrible time finding somebody to play Miss Cornelia in 'The Bat.' They sent for me, and as soon as Mr. Wagenhals saw me, he said, 'You're the very one I want. Let me read you what Avery Hopwood says'—and he took out a letter and read, 'I want a small woman, a woman of refinement, a woman who speaks good English, a woman who can wear pretty clothes, a woman of education—and now you are going to say, Where the h—l can I find one like that? But I must have her.'

"And you," declared Mr. Wagenhals, "are just the woman." So I was engaged and played the part part for three years. It had everything and was delightful to play."

Miss Ellsler looks very young. Her pretty dark brown eyes snap with youthful fire, her pug nose is just as impudent in its upward tilt and her smile as sweet as when she played Hazel in Steele Mackay's good old play "Hazel Kirke."

Many of her friends have remarked, "You look just as you did when I saw you in 'Hazel Kirke,' and that was—

"We won't speak about that," she comes back at you.

She recalled other plays in which she has appeared, one by Bartley Campbell called "Separation," in which Eleanor Carey and Charles Coghlan played husband and wife and Miss Ellsler their daughter.

"There was a funny thing about that," she said. "Miss Carey was not an emotional actress, and they wouldn't let me play anything else then. So in our scene together, the tears would roll down my face, and she would take them on her fingers and put them surreptitiously on her own cheek.

"'What do you mean stealing my tears?' I asked her, and she laughed when she said she didn't have any of her own and she thought they looked well.

Miss Ellsler comes of an old theatrical family. Her mother was Effie E. Ellsler and her father, John A. Ellsler, one of the famous old actor-managers of the West, in Cincinnati, Cleveland and Pittsburg, where his name was a power.

In her earlier days, after graduating from an Ursuline convent—but she used to leave school and play child parts when her father needed her for his company—she was her father's leading woman, though but 14 years of age, playing Juliet, Ophelia, Virginia and such roles. She was afterward with Booth, McCullough and Lawrence Barrett.

"And now that grandmothers are the style on the stage, I'm likely to be busy all the time!" smiled Miss Ellsler as she hastened onto the stage for her cue.

HE LONGS FOR VILLAIN ROLE

want "strong meat" roles, parts that give them an opportunity to expose all their mean traits in the cause of art. Even Noah Beery told me recently that his heavy roles are not heavy enough. For instance, supposing the play to be "Trilby," they regard Svengali, the dirty old hypnotic sinner, as a far more attractive part than Little Billie, the hero. Milton Sills liked being that hard, cruel "Sea Hawk" as well as any role he ever played much more than being the good and noble slum clergyman in "The Madonna of the Streets."

Dozens of them were green with envy at Ernest Torrence's sumptuously roughneck chances in "The Covered Wagon." (Ernest, by the way, is apparently suffering from the reverse complex just now, and wants to be a nice hero.)

So you can picture Herbert home and searching avidly for something rough and vital in his profession. To sort of balance things up, perhaps . . .

themselves as among the successful artists in the eastern operahouses. First, it was Marion Chamlee, who won his laurels there, and now within the last few weeks, Lawrence Tibbetts. Mr. Tibbetts only signed up about a year or so ago, and, due to bad health, was prevented from making his debut for some time after his engagement was announced.

Few American singers have attained such triumphs as they have, and it might well be prophesied that they are not the last from this section of the country by any means who will win such prominence. There is an aspect about Southern California which resembles Italy, the land of song, and as, from that European land, there have sprung some of the richest voices that the world has ever known, so in like manner may this region rival its foreign counterpart.

The thing to be emphasized, though, is that California itself should create a future for the Chamlees and the Tibbettses who may yet come forth. There is nothing gained by having them achieve their fame elsewhere. This fact, among other things, is only another reason why efforts should be concentrated on building for the permanence of grand opera here.

ONE of the most popular figures at Writers' Club performances in Hollywood is an actor by the name of William J. Kelly, but few people who have not seen him there know much, if anything, of his work hereabouts.

I note, however, that he is now playing a character role in "Proud Flesh," which King Vidor is directing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and that he is counting on this as one of the best opportunities that he has had to disclose his talents in motion pictures.

Kelly was prominent as a leading man in New York. He appeared on Broadway, of course, but he also achieved a brilliant reputation while acting in a stock company out in the Bronx, his particular feat during this time being that he received just about as large a salary as a Broadway star and drew theatergoers from all over the town by him performances in a variety of roles.

About six or seven months ago he landed in Hollywood from a tour of Australia, and decided to make his home here, and try the films. So far, however, his only appearance on the screen has been in a lesser role in "Lily of the Dust."

His deft presentations of several leads at the Writers' Club on the stage, culminating with "The Prologue to King Lear," by Franz Molnar, recently, have attracted remarkable attention to him among professional folk, and now it remains to be seen how this sort of advantage will work out for his career in the films.

MITZI IS AT HER BEST IN 'MAGIC RING'

Musical Comedy Star is Coming to Biltmore for Two Weeks' Stay

The varied talents of little Mitzi, coming to the Biltmore Theater tomorrow night for two weeks as the star of Henry W. Savage's new musical production "The Magic Ring," have made her harder to "fit" than many stars of fewer gifts and far less versatility. Mitzi is first of all an actress, with a genius for dramatic and heart-interest scenes as well as for comedy. She is also a singer with a bell-like soprano voice of purest quality. She can dance more gracefully than many a premiere danseuse; and she can impersonate any actor, singer or dancer she has ever seen.

To reveal at their best all these talents has for a half a dozen years been the ambition of the playwright, Zelda Sears. When Miss Sears first met Mitzi at a New York dinner party, she confesses that she was completely captivated by the little artiste's prettiness, youth and radiant personality. This was before she had seen Mitzi on the stage.

After that experience, Miss Sears decided to write a play for Mitzi, and "Lady Billy" followed, in which the dainty star last year completed a three years' triumphal tour. All during this time, Miss Sears and the composer, Harold Levey, have cast about for a plot and score worthy of the widening and deepening talents of Mitzi, who every way in every play, according to Miss Sears, grows better and better.

Mitzi herself, is delighted with her present role, which she says is the best and most varied ever given to an actress. Mr. Savage has surrounded her with a splendid cast, and has made a dazzling production to set off the brilliance of the tiny personage filled to overflowing with inimitable genius.

THREE CHANGES IN LEGITIMATE FARE

Several interesting events occur in legitimate theaters this week. "The Goose Hangs High," one of last season's New York successes, begins an engagement at the Playhouse tomorrow night, at the same time that Mitzi is appearing in "The Magic Ring" for the first time here at the Biltmore Theater. In Pasadena the Community Players will present a new play bearing the champion long-winded title, "If Everybody Had a Window in His House Like This." [illegible] Craig Wentworth wrote [illegible].

Another week and "White Collars" will have completed its first year at Egan's, "Just Married" at the Majestic, "Nightie Night" at the Morosco, and Harry Carroll's "Pickings" at the Orange Grove are the other attractions being held over.

New Features in "Pickings"

Harry Carroll's "Pickings" begins its twenty-first week at the Orange Grove today. Such notables as Will Morrissey, Harry Carroll, Linda, Carol Wines, Vivian Hart, Dorita, Eddie Lambert, Ernest Morrison, Maurice L. Kusell, Grace Claire and Sammy Cohen comprise the cast.

The concert surprise purpose tonight will be a big event, with such celebrities as Harold Roberts's University of Southern California Quartet, Helen Ferguson and Carmelita Geraghty appearing in person and Grace Darmond and Will [illegible] will appear in a one-act [illegible].

Comedy Starts Another Week

"Nightie Night," the comedy at the Morosco, was written by Martha M. Stanley and Adelaide Matthews and was considered one of the biggest hits of the season when it was playing in New York. It begins its fourth week today.

Charlotte Treadway, Harland Tucker, Gayne Whitman, Jane [illegible], John O'Connell, Fannie [illegible], Symona Boniface, Joseph [illegible] and Harry Hoyt complete the cast.

Mitzi Here Tomorrow

A gala affair will be the visit of Mitzi to the Biltmore Theater for two weeks, beginning tomorrow night. This star, under the direction of Henry W. Savage, comes almost direct from her run at the [illegible] Theater in Chicago. This [illegible] starring vehicle is a fantastic comedy with music called "The Magic Ring," and it is said it is the best piece she has had during her career.

The book and lyrics were written by Zelda Sears, while the melodious musical score is from the pen of Harold Levey. This talented pair of writers are the same who wrote "Lady Billy," Mitzi's last offering.

The supporting cast includes [illegible] Marshall, Sidney Greenstreet, Jeanette MacDonald, Caroline [illegible], Adrian Rosely, Duane [illegible], Bessie Birney, Janet Murdoch, Valentine Nierle and a team of very clever feature dancers, [illegible] and Hayman. Besides the principals the company includes a talented and good-looking chorus.

[illegible] Bits of Acts

It is seldom that a group of acts with such varied characters are gathered together on a single bill as that which the Hillstreet will have to offer this week. Among the headline features is [illegible], who is a firebrand [illegible] of the terpsichorean [illegible]. In her supporting company is [illegible] Morelli, violinist, who is a [illegible] winner of the National Conservatory of Music in Paris, and [illegible], harpist. Harry Hines, "the fifty-eighth variety," is a clever comedian. A ventriloquist is [illegible] a vocal trickster. Lester [illegible] these conjurers, who has [illegible] to be commonly [illegible] "post." One of the most [illegible] hits of the season is [illegible] by LeRoy, Talma and [illegible], the prestidigitateurs, who recently arrived from Europe for their first American tour. They offer the last word in mystery performance. Others who will occupy high spots on the bill are Eddie Weber and Marion Ridnor, who sing and dance, and Amazon and Nile, who will present their original novelty offering, "A Tropical Enchantment."

The photoplay divertissements will be headed by Thomas H. Ince's production, "Idle Tongues," in which Doris Kenyon and Percy Marmont are cast in the leading roles. The final chapter of the "Cruise of the Speejacks" will be presented. A news reel and Aesop's Fables will conclude the performance.

"Wild Vampire" New Revue

A musical revue bearing the title of "The Wild Vampire" has been staged by Henry Roquemore at the Burbank this week.

Two acts and eight scenes in which Lee (Bud) Harrison and Jack Miller, with the assistance of the Baby Doll chorus, display their comedy elements to the merriment of the patrons of the popular show shop.

Lou Traveller offers a novelty musical act in the new revue with his jazz band.

Bessie as Chinese Gril

"The Purple Dawn," a drama of San Francisco's Chinatown, featuring dainty little Bessie Love, is the attraction at the Hippodrome this week. Miss Love appears in an appealing role as Mui Far. Her foster father, Wong Chong, tong leader, promised her in marriage to Quan Foo, wealthy merchant. But she, born and reared in America, resists this fate and prays to be allowed to choose her mate according to the American custom. Miss Love has never had a part so suited to her wistful and charming personality. She is shown to great advantage in the part which she so vividly portrays.

The vaudeville program is headed by Dave Vanfield and company, presenting a unique juggling act entitled "Pastimes at the Club." Lillian Tingley, a clever little lady, gives a novelty musical act, Kelly and Craig in their offering entited "Ma Jongg's Chinese Inn," Gene Metcalf, a clever character comedienne in a repertoir of songs, and Three Kays, under the title "Novel Equilibrists," complete a bill of decided variety.

Runs a Year

"White Collars," the Edith Ellis comedy, continues its terrific pace at the Egan Theater, where the fifty-second week starts tomorrow evening. The action of the piece takes place in a Harlem flat, where William Van Luyn, the young millionaire, takes his stenographer-bride to live temporarily with her family.

The worthy array of players includes Craig Ward, Dian Esmond, Ross Forrester, Jacqueline Dyris, Betty Sinclair, Zeliah Covington, Florence Oberle, Carroll Nye and Gordon White.

Human Comedy

A comedy that quietly tears your heart out as the play moves forward to a logical happy ending is said to be found in "The Goose Hangs High," the Louis O. Macloon stage success which opens at the Playhouse tomorrow evening. Lewis Beach has drawn an American family, notable because he avoids both hokum and platitude, and takes his characters straight from life.

Cyril Keightley and Florence McAfee are said to make a fine husband and wife, and the gorgeous old grandmother, jolly realist that she is, is beautifully played by Effie Ellsler.

Lois Austin and Leslie are said to be refreshingly natural as the twins, and they have a handsome, forceful and sincere older brother played by Harry Crocker. Lloyd Corrigan, William Raymond and Phillips Smalley make the most of their parts. The play was staged by Gilmor Brown.

Psychic at Pantages

Leona Lamar, psychic, is the headliner at Pantages this week in her mind-reading act. Miss Lamar is the 19-year-old girl who attracted wide attention a few years ago when she predicted the details of the World War and later foretold the ultimate outcome.

Armstrong and Blondell will appear in their latest laughing success, "From Hollywood," giving a satirical view of life at the movie capital, with some interesting character sketches of various celebrities of the film industry.

Kennedy and Martin take liberties with the superstitions of the colored race, and present a screamingly funny skit called, "Friday the Thirteenth."

Ross and Edwards, billed as "The Original Bull-Garians," present some unique comedy and show what the foreign mind can do with perfectly good English.

Harry and Harriet Seeback present a strenuous athletic act, with plenty of good comedy and some difficult and interesting stunts.

Orpheum Has Nine Acts

Nine acts in a jubilee bill is what the Orpheum will offer this week. The big type goes to Max Fisher and his orchestra and to Clyde Cook. Karaveff, formerly a dancer with Pavlowa, is from the Russian Czarist School and a past master in the art of diversions. Bert Levy, artist, traveler and story teller, is a feature of the new bill. Frank Van Hovn, the mad magician, is due back with his small boys, cake of ice, basket of eggs and all the rest of his fun-making. Howard Kyle, actor, will be seen in a play, "The House at the Crossroads," a real dramatic offering. Frank Hurst and Eddie Vogt are "Profiteering in Fun." Jean Middleton is an expert little violinist, and the Kikutas Japs are wonders in their line of entertainment.

Vaudeville Baby Now Appearing as Film Actress

Times change and so do babies. Seventeen years or more ago, patrons of vaudeville may recall, Hyams and McIntyre, prime favorites of the two-a-day stage in those days, introduced a baby into their numerous acts. It was a lovable baby that used to bubble over with glee at the audiences and blink its wide eyes at the spotlight.

And now, in "Sandra," showing at the Alhambra Theater this week, there appears an 18-year-old girl, beautiful, blond, and just as lovable as the baby of yore.

The takes the role of Mate, winsome and charming flapper, who worships the exotic Sandra, as enacted by Barbara La Marr, and she lends an atmosphere of wholesomeness to the drama of love madness in which she becomes involved. She is identified in the cast as Leila Hyams, and is the same baby of Hyams and McIntyre's vaudeville days.

Leila's life proves that once an actress, always an actress. She made her debut on the stage at the age of 6 months at Hammerstein's old Victoria Theater in New York. Then she went with her mother on vaudeville tours for several seasons, appearing in such old-time sketches as "The Quakeress," "Maybloom," and "Honeysuckle."

Leila is a "discovery" in filmdom, and her work in support of Miss La Marr is so fine that it is doubtful if patrons of the "speakies' will ever see her there again.

ALL NATIONS HELPING

Julianne Johnston Reports Babel of Tongues on Berlin Lot

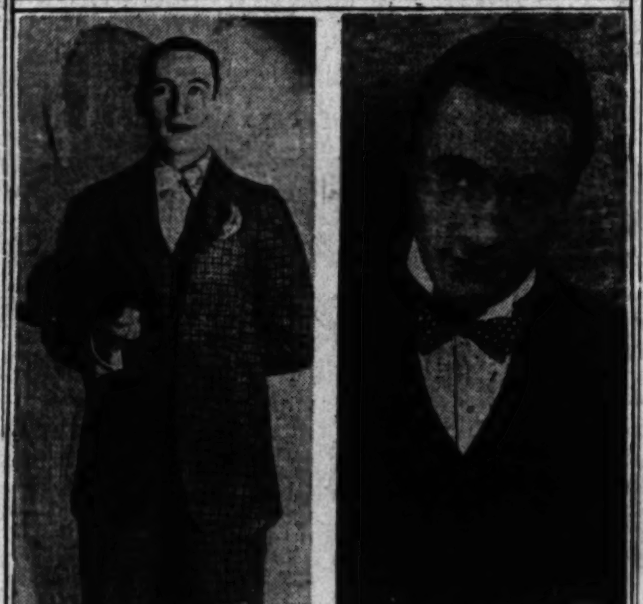
"An international affair," is the way Julanne Johnston describes her present starring vehicle, "City of Temptation," in a letter received by relatives of the American actress, who is now in Berlin.

The picture is being produced by an English company with exterior filming in Constantinople, and exteriors in Berlin. The novel of the same title is by an Englishman, an American is directing, and the cameraman hails from Italy. France contributes a ballet master and a native of Vienna designs costumes and sets. Two Prussian assistant directors bring up the rear guard. The cast includes citizens of a dozen countries.

The graceful Julanne says that Sir Phillip Gibbs, the author, is giving some personal attention to the filming, but that most interesting is the varitongued chatter one hears during filming of the big episodes.

CLOTHES PROBLEM BAFFLED HIM

Freak Styles Not Easy to Find



Rod La Rocque, in the Mode and Out

"TWENTIETH century Americans can't be badly dressed!" This comes from Hollywood, and from a film favorite whose name is synonymous with "what the men will wear."

"It's easy to be fashionable," says Rod La Rocque.

"I never realized how difficult it was to go wrong in our modern clothing establishments. Until Cecil B. DeMille's 'The Golden Bed' my picture experience had been largely concerned with the more conventional types of clothing. I normally played young men more or less 'in the mode' so to speak.

"A clever salesman knows how to direct your attention to the modish thing on which the financial success of his employer's business is based. For 'The Golden Bed' I was assigned to play a young American without breeding or culture, with his own ideas as to what constitutes 'snappy' dressing. To dress this character required four or five times as long as a normal lead. For button shoes alone, I had to visit twenty places. And the cravats that spring in and out and ride at will up and down one's collar—they rank in rarity with blonde Chinamen! Socks of the 1905 vintage with large colored polka dots—now you're speaking of a relative to the great Kohinoor diamond. With the aid of the research department, I finally dressed the part to suit the role.

"The Golden Bed" which features La Rocque, Lillian Rich, Theodore Kosloff and Vera Reynolds, has its world premier at the Million Dollar Theater tomorrow.

SEVEN NEW SCREEN DRAMAS THIS WEEK

With seven new photoplays at as many theaters this week screen fans have more than enough to keep them amused. Charles de Roche and Madge Bellamy head the cast of "Love and Glory," now on the Cameo screen. "The Lighthouse by the Sea," with Rin-Tin-Tin and Louise Fazenda in the most prominent roles, is showing at the Rialto. Loew's presents "Excuse Me," in which Conrad Nagel and Norma Shearer head the cast. Bebe Daniels's "Miss Bluebeard" is on view at the Metropolitan. "Born Rich," with Bert Lytell and Claire Windsor, at the California, and "The Tornado," starring House Peters and Ruth Clifford, at the Forum, are other attractions now on view. Tomorrow Cecil B. De Mille's new picture, "The Golden Bed," opens at the Million Dollar.

Also on view this week are "Sandro" at the Alhambra, "He Who Gets Slapped" at the Criterion, "Romola" at the Egyptian, Dante's "Inferno" at Miller's and "The Sainted Devil" at Tally's

"Excuse Me" at Loew's

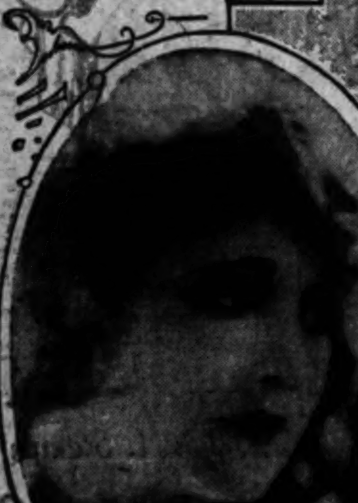
"Excuse Me," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production with cast consisting of Norma Shearer, Conrad Nagel, Renee Adoree, Walter Hiers, Bert Roach, William V. Mong, Edith Yorke, John Boles and Eugene Cameron is the attraction at Loew's this week. Fanchon and Marco's "Pullman Ideas" featuring Oswald's Victor-recording orchestra is the revue. Frisco Nick and his little brother, Scaramouche, and Aimee and Josephine Neli also are on the bill. Other novelties are Sol Lesser's Life production, "The Mosquito," a "Felix the Cat" cartoon, Lipschultz and Loew's State Music Masters and the Pathe and Loew's pictorial news reviews, and a serio-comic fantasia, "A Trip to Coney Island."

GLORIOUSLY FEMININE

Mitzi in "The Magic Ring," Biltmore

Barbara La Marr in "Sandra," Alhambra

Madge Bellamy in "Love and Glory," Cameo



Ruth Clifford in "The Tornado," Forum

Louise Fazenda in "Lighthouse by the Sea," Rialto

Linda in Harry Carroll's "Pickings," Orange Grove

Rin-Tin-Tin Featured

"The Lighthouse by the Sea," the Warner Brothers' picture at the Rialto Theater, is a rushing, pounding chain of adventure in which the canine star, Rin-Tin-Tin, proves himself a hero. Louise Fazenda, as the heroine, carries a touching love story to a dramatic climax with Buster Collier, Jr., Mathew Betz, Douglas Gerrard and Charles Hill Mailes forming a strong supporting cast under the direction of Mal St. Clair.

Several short features and an entirely novel music score arranged by Herman Hiedel, conductor of the Rialto Orchestra, and Arthur Clinton, organist, round out the program.

"He" in Second Week

Victor Seastrom's picturization of the Leonid Andreyev play, "He Who Gets Slapped," is now in its second week at the Criterion Theater. In the cast will be found Lon Chaney, Norma Shearer, John Gilbert, Tully Marshall, Marc McDermott, Clyde Cook, Ford Sterling, Paulette Duval, Ruth King, George Davis, Brandon Hurst and others.

A well-balanced surrounding program has been arranged. It includes a Van Bidder comedy, "The Burglar," directed by George Marshall and featuring Earl Foxe; a Felix cartoon comedy, "Felix Finishes First;" a novelty dance film, "The Phantom Ballet," in which Eleanor Flaig appears both on the screen and on he stage; a unique presentation of he waltz-ballad, "Most of All I Vant Your Love," by Helen right. George Stolberg and the riterion Symphonists and Eu ne Petrovsky, the continental nor singing "Vesta la Giubba," om "Il Pagliacci."

mera Effects Startling

Startling photographic effects re achieved in the filming of lliam Fox's screen version of nte's "Inferno," which is show at Miller's Theater this week. Inferno," the literary classic on ch the picture is based, de bes an imaginary journey made the Italian poet through , where he saw the souls of tals being punished according he nature and enormity of sins while on earth.

De Mille Picture

e picturization of J. M. Bar "Peter Pan," the story of ittle boy "who wouldn't grow closes its run at the Million r Theater this evening. mor ow morning marks the ng of Cecil B. De Mille's lat roduction "The Golden Bed" ast includes Lillian Rich, Rod ocque, Theodore Kosloff, Vera olds, Warner Baxter, Julia Henry Walthall and Robert n.

ed Devil" Back

Sainted Devil," starring Ru Valentino, is the feature at this week. Nita Naldi, Hel lgy, Louise Lagrange, Dag Godowsky, Raphael Bongi orge Siegman and others prominent supporting roles.

and Glory" Pleasing ve and Glory," the Rupert -Universal-Jewel production, showing at the Cameo Thea a delightful combination of good story, pictorial beauty and dramatic strength. It was beautifully photographed by Gilbert Warrenton, rated as one of the ace cameramen of the profession. Perley Poore Sheehan and Robert Davis wrote the story, published as a novel under the title, "We Are French."

Featured in the cast are Charles De Roche, Wallace MacDonald, Madge Bellamy, Gibson, Gowland, Ford Sterling, Pricilla Dean Moran and Charles De Ravenne.

Barbara Stars at Alhambra

Barbara La Marr makes her debut as a full-fledged star in "Sandra," now showing at the Alhambra Theater; the picture shows her in the role of a woman with two natures, a conflict between the contented and home-loving personality and the other nature, which craves excitement, adventure and romance. Bert Lytell is seen in the leading male role.

"Tornado" on Forum Screen

The biggest scene in "The Tornado," the Universal-Jewel at the Forum Theater, depicts House Peters struggling with superhuman determination to break a gigantic log jam that threatens, by damming up the river, to cause the destruction of a little settlement.

In order to obtain the logs and the river together it was necessary for the company to go on location in Idaho, along the St. Joe River.

"The Tornado" was adapted from Lincoln J. Carter's famous emotional melodrama of the same name. Peters is supported by a cast that includes Ruth Clifford, Richard Tucker, Snitz Edwards, Kate Price, Charlotte Stevens, Jackie Morgan, Dick Sutherland and Fred Gamble. King Baggot directed.

Starts Seventh Week

A ten-act prologue in connection with Henry King's production of "Romola," starring Lillian and Dorothy Gish, opened its seventh week last night in Grauman's Egyptian Theater. A novel feature of Grauman's entertainment is the Lilliputians, who appear in a little city all their own in the forecourt of the theater. The midgets, who charm the kiddies, are seen on the stage immediately following the intermission, in a clever fantasy conceived by Sid Grauman.

"Born Rich" Heads Bill

"Born Rich," a First National picture featuring Claire Windsor, Bert Lytell, Cullen Landis, Doris Kenyon, Frank Morgan, J. Barney Sherry, Maude Turner Gordon, Jackie Ott and William Burton, is the feature at the California Theater. Other features of the program are Coster and Hewlett in "A Fantasy of Yesterday," "The Cake Eater," a Will Rogers comedy, and the California Concert Orchestra, under Carli D. Elinor's direction. In addition there will be the California Tropical Revue and "Local Laughs."

Bebe at Metropolitan

"Bluebeard" is now a perfect lady—"he's" no longer a man! Bebe Daniels proves this in her role in the Avery Hopwood farce, which in photoplay form is called "Miss Bluebeard," instead of "Little Miss Bluebeard," at the Metropolitan Theater this week. The story depicts the loves of a French actress. Robert Frazer, Kenneth McKenna, Diana Kane and other players are in the cast.

June Purcell, "The Radio Girl," in person and other stage offerings augment the program.

Mission Closes Tonight

Tonight the Mission Theater, which will shortly be wrecked to make way for an imposing office building and theater, will close its doors. The program will consist of Barbara Bedford in "The Tie That Binds," and Wesley Barry in "The Printer's Devil," both of which have been delighting audiences during the past four days.

RING SKILL VALUABLE TO PLAYER

Cullen Landis Had Early Ambition to be Pugilist; Now Fights in Films

Cullen Landis, one of the members of the cast of "Born Rich," the First National picture now playing at the California Theater, decided when a boy that he would become a pugilist. He admits that the chief reason was the stories he read of the fortunes a prize fighter can make in a single bout, and determined that that would be an easier road to wealth than trying to separate Wall street from part of its roll.

But it was not as simple a matter to break into the pugilistic circle as he had imagined, so he turned his affections toward the cinematic world.

However, Landis is not sorry for the intensive training and hardships he went through to fulfill his ambition, for they have stood him in good stead.

It is a rare picture that doesn't contain a fist fight or two, and Landis, therefore, has been able to acquit himself in a professional manner when the author nonchalantly write in a bloody fight scene.

His most difficult one, however, was that in which he engaged in "Born Rich." The director, Will Nigh, was not satisfied merely with a fight to the finish; he wanted a prolonged battle until both the combatants dropped from sheer weariness—without a decision. Landis still smiles sadly when he thinks of that fight.

Others in the cast of "Born Rich" are Claire Windsor, Bert Lytell, Doris Kenyon, J. Barry Sherry, Maude Gordon and Frank Morgan.

SECOND NATURE

Lucille Lee Stewart has already become adept at using a cash register and making quick change in her role of cashier of Schnitzler's Cafe in New York, the first set of the big production of "Friendly Enemies," featuring Weber and Fields, which George Melford is making for Belasco Productions, Inc. Miss Stewart is really more than a cashier in the story, however, and is the center of a big intrigue and in apparent collusion with Stuart Holmes as the heavy.

COMEDY OF TRAVELERS ON SCREEN

"Excuse Me," Stage Farce of Sleeping Car, Promises Fun at Loew's State

With a record of being one of the most successful of stage farces, and promising to duplicate this success on the screen, "Excuse Me," is the attraction at Loew's State Theater this week.

Those who saw the footlight version will remember the scenes on the Pullman car, in which every variety of traveling incident happened in quick succession.

In the film Norma Shearer and Conrad Nagel appear as the distraught lovers, who, in order to catch the overland train, didn't have time to get married, and now cannot find a minister aboard.

This is Miss Shearer's first comedy role. She was last seen as Consuelo in Victor Seastrom's "He Who Gets Slapped." Mr. Nagel, usually a serious player, sacrifices dignity in "Excuse Me" to appear as a demisimp."

Renee Adoree plays the part of Francine, a friend of the hero, Walter Hiers is the colored porter, a role that is famous in theatrical annals. John Boles, the concert baritone, who recently became a screen actor has the part of Lieut. Shaw, one of the hero's cronies.

The role of Jimmy Wellington, the traveling salesman who manages to carry along a continual preprohibition "bun" and gets into continual trouble, is played by Bert Roach. Others in the cast include William V. Mong, Edith Yorke, Eugene Cameron, Fred Kelsey, Paul Weigel and Mae Wells.

The story adheres closely to Rupert Hughes's original idea, although the author has expanded the incidents in several places to take advantage of the camera's larger scope.

WARRENTON IS CHOSEN DENNY'S CAMERAMAN

WILL HANDLE PHOTOGRAPHY OF NEW COMEDY DRAMA FOR UNIVERSAL STAR

Gilbert Warrenton, Universal cameraman, has been assigned to Reginald Denny's next starring vehicle, "I'll Show You the Town," a comedy drama film. It is being directed by Earl Kenton of the Jack Dempsey series. An all-star cast will support the star.

This production makes the third consecutive Denny film in which Warrenton has had charge of the cameras. His photography in many Universal films has received favorable recognition from local critics as well as eastern reviewers.

"Oh, Doctor," at the California last week, and "Love and Glory" at the Cameo this week are cinematographic achievements to the credit of Warrenton.

RIALTO GOSSIP FROM THE EAST

turning to pictures. She will co-star with Lionel Barrymore in "Fifty-Fifty" for Associated Exhibitors, and in the cast will be none other than Louise Glaum and Maurice, the dancer. Maurice appeared with Bebe Daniels in "Miss Bluebeard" and evidently liked the camera so well that he is going to seek a career in pictures.

Johnny Walker is quite elated because an American release has already been secured for the pictures he is soon to make abroad. Now he is sure that he wont have the experience of most players who make pictures abroad. The usual course of events is that some player who is only moderately popular here goes abroad and is paid $1500 a week. The temptation to make one more picture there and still one more gets them. The pictures are never released in this country and by the time players return not only the public but many of the directors have already forgotten them. I wonder what the fate of Julanne Johnston will be when she comes back.

Peggy Joyce is to appear opposite Johnny Walker in his foreign-made pictures, the plan to star her individually having been abandoned for the present at least.

The De Mille negotiations are, at the time this is written, still shrouded in mystery, but everyone seems to expect him to join United Artists. That brings up an odd situation. D. W. Griffith, who has tasted the bitterness of working as an independent producer is looking forward to working for Paramount and having all the advantages of a big corporation behind him, while De Mille, departing from Paramount seems to be headed for the very sort of company that has proved disastrous to Mr. Griffith. But Mr. De Mille is a better business man that Mr. Griffith and then too, United Artists with Joseph Schenck at their head are a far more powerful organization than they were in the days when Mr. Griffith struggled with the others to keep the craft afloat.

BETTY BRONSON COMING

Betty Bronson is leaving us to return to Hollywood next Monday, having bowed and smiled and made pretty little speeches to hundreds of theater audiences, organization meetings and luncheons given in her honor. Her greatest day was when her own home town turned out en masse to pay her honor. She had gone out to Trenton to help their local hospital drive but I doubt if anyone even thought of the hospital's campaign. Everyone was intent on seeing Betty. A banquet attended by 500 guests was given in her honor, and the Mayor and the Governor spoke praising her work highly.

The best of the week's pictures on Broadway is "Her Night of Romance," starring Constance Talmadge, and that isn't saying much. Constance herself is delightful and so is Ronald Colman, but the comedy is too thin to be spread out over five—or is it six—reels. As a three-reel picture it would have been a riot of fun. As it is there are long, dull stretches. However, the audiences at the Capital Theater seem to enjoy it immensely and it is drawing great business.

Samuel Rothapfel has bocked "Greed" for the Capital Theater next week in spite of that picture's disastrous business at its first run. It was one of those pictures which revived the old joke about the audience going home in a taxicab. "Sundown," however, almost equalled the low-attendance record held by "Greed." I understand that there were twenty-eight paid admissions in the house during one entire day and evening.

"If I Marry Again" is responsible for a flourishing new organization. Everyone who objects to having Anna Q. Nilsson killed off in the third reel of a picture and who is willing to promise that in such event they will leave the theater where such a picture is playing, is eligible. I didn't join until after seeing "If I Marry Again," so I was able to see all of that and I am rather glad. I always have a feeling that if there is any emotional value in a story at all, Jack Dillon will drag it to light. "If I Marry Again" gave him only moderately good opportunities and so the result is only fair. Doris Kenyon made a delightfully pretty heroine and Anna Q. Nilsson, of course, was splendid. But the cast carried deadweight in the persons of Lloyd Hughes, Frank Mayo and Hobart Bosworth.

Frank Mayo does infinitely better in a hectic affair playing at the Broadway, called "The Price She Paid." One can hardly believe that the same man played both parts, one is so dull, and the other so charming. Alma Rubens is the star of "The Price She Paid" but it is nothing to rave about. Just another picture.

"Locked Doors," directed by William De Mille, written by Clara Beranger, and played by no less a person that Betty Compson, is simply awful. It is one of those things charged with subtle symbolism. Evidently somebody thought the subtle treatment wasn't enough so they followed it up by hammering every point in. The only good thing about "Locked Doors" is that it brought Theodore Roberts back to us and, as evidence that many people were as glad to see him again as I was I am happy to report that a rousing spontaneous chuckle rippled through the house at his first appearance and this was followed by hearty applause.

Blind Audience "Sees" Screen Canine Drama

One of the most interesting experiments to be made of late was when over 300 blind people, "witnessed" a motion picture at the Piccadilly Theater in New York. This experiment was made by the New York American and Warner Brothers, and from their reports it was a huge success. The method used was by enterpretative music and word explanation from the stage as the picture was unreeled. Every detail was explained, and the audience seemed to feel and get the tense and slack moments, as well as their more fortunate friends.

A story featuring an animal was chosen, "The Lighthouse by the Sea," because of an experience Lee Duncan, the owner of Rin-Tin-Tin had in Indianapolis a year ago, when he took the dog, at the request of a theater manager, to a State institution. This was the first time the blind children had ever had a chance to "see" a dog, and especially one they had heard about. Mr Duncan had the dog go through some of his tricks for those who could see, and they in turn explained to the others.

It was with this in mind that the above experiment with "The Lighthouse by the Sea" was tried and its success may lead to further development.

CHILDREN'S ENTERTAINMENT

The Marta Oatman School of the Theater announces a performance next Saturday morning, the 24th inst., at the Majestic Theater at 9:30. The program will consist of playlets and dances by members of the junior department of the school. The program is especially arranged for children.

Printing Art Not Invented When Dante Was Bard

Although the "Divine Comedy," Dante's great allegory, is estimated to have been finished by the poet somewhere between 1314 and 1319, A.D., it did not reach general popularity until about 150 years later. This was because it was not in type until 1471, that being the year the invention of printing reached Florence, Dante's birthplace. Of course, Florentines and others were not strangers to Dante's genius even prior to that time, but most of his fame had been spread by word of mouth, principally by lectures delivered in the churches.

Two other natives of the city of Florence who did much to advance Dante's renown, attained world-wide fame themselves. They were Michaelangelo the great sculptor, and Giovanni Boccaccio, author of "The Decameron," who were ardent enthusiasts of the works of Dante.

Michaelangelo became as a boy a profound student of the poet, and later, when an unsuccessful appeal was made by the city of Florence to the Pope to sanction removal of Dante's bones from Ravenna to Florence, he was among the first signatories. The poet died at Ravenna, after exile from Florence for political reasons. Although his death mask was removed from Ravenna to Bargello, a few of his bones and their coffin are still in Ravenna in the monastery of Classe, piously preserved in a room filled with Dante relics and literature. His tomb elsewhere at Ravenna is a shrine visited by thousands yearly.

"Inferno," one of the three great allegories which form the "Divine Comedy," is the basis for a highly dramatic and spectacular film of that name, now showing at Miller's Theater.

DRAMA BOASTS LONG TITLE

Pasadena Players to Offer Modern Work Bearing on Problem of Machine Age

Marion Craig Wentworth's new play, "If Everybody Had a Window in His House Like This," will have its premiere on the stage of the Pasadena Community Playhouse, tomorrow night. This is Mrs. Wentworth's first dramatic work since she challenged the country's attention with "War Brides," several years ago, in which Nazimova starred.

More and more, the Pasadenans are going in for original productions. In their new playhouse, which is to be ready in the spring, they plan to make a feature of doing unproduced plays. Unless a piece seems to have money-making possibilities, it is hard for the dramatist to get a try-out. Here is where the Community Playhouse hopes to make itself useful.

As explained by the author, "If Everybody Had a Window in His House Like This," is a searching symbol of present-day civilization. It is written in seven scenes, in the new expressionistic form. Through an absorbing story of a great artist and his daughters it forcefully asks the question:

"Toward what is this age of machinery and money-making whirling us? What is to become of beauty and the life of the spirit?"

Through Leif Thorvald, the maker of windows, Mrs. Wentworth gives reply. In the Pasadena production, Gilmor Brown will play the leading role besides directing the play. It has matchless production possibilities. The scene of the magic window created by Thorvald, for correcting the outlook on life will be one of great beauty, as conceived by Robert R. Sharpe.

A large cast is required for the play. Among those who will be seen in it are Helen Staats, Florence McNally, Robert Loofbourrow, Paul Fort, Bram Nossen, Jack Buell, Harold Cross, Edward Moon, Howard Coffey, Edmund Gray, Gilbert Sperry, Helen McMasters, Mrs. Robert Loufbourrow, George Tapper, John Johnson and Mary Beaton.

The long title of Mrs. Wentworth's new play, "If Everybody Had a Window in His House Like This," has caused considerable discussion. Without doubt it has the distinction of being the longest title of any play produced, there being ten words where as the ideal is a combination of three. However, at present there is a tendency toward longer names, as for instance "Six Characters in Search of an Author," "They Knew What They Wanted," etc. The Community Playhouse play committee considered a number of substitute titles for Mrs. Wentworth's play, but decided in favor of the original because of its whimsical rhythm and originality.

This unique drama will be given every night this week and Saturday matinee. Members of the Pastors' Union of Pasadena will be guests of the Community Players at tomorrow night's premiere.

VENTRILOQUIST IS CUE STAR

The announcement that a ventriloquist is coming to the Hillstreet Theater next week is in itself no great novelty, but when that announcement is coupled with the name Lester, it assumes a real significance, because Lester is a master of his art. In ventriloquism, Lester is as supreme as Paderewski is in pianistic art or Houdini in the realm of the black magic.

In his spare time, Lester has two avocations—the first billiards; the second, farming. Lester is a champion billiard player. A champion billiard player is one thing; one who shoots with his eyes blindfolded is another. He is equally proficient at shooting with sight or without sight. So if there are any local billiard champions, they have a novel treat in store for them if they want to arrange a match with the ventriloquist and perhaps be beaten blindfolded.

Lester is also a farmer. Every summer he goes up to his rural abode near Rhinelander, Wis., to forget about footlights and ventriloquism, but somehow or other, temptations to use his art for his own amusement are so frequent that he often finds himself in the role of an unconscious comedian.

"I was walking down a road one day," says Lester, "and saw a neighbor girl milking a cow. I asked her if she thought her cow would mind if I had a drink of milk, and she answered that I might ask the cow. Imagine her surprise when a voice that seemed to come from the cow said, 'Sure give him a drink. What's a little milk between friends.'"

Ventriloquists, more than any other kind of stage performers, have in their art a constant source of amusement to themselves as well as to their audience, says Lester, and those sufficiently clever find an inexhaustible store of harmless fun at the expense of their less gifted kin.

HOTEL LOBBY REPRODUCED

The lobby of the Ritz Carlton Hotel in New York was reproduced in minute detail for the Corinne Griffith production of "Declasse." It occupied the entire length of the largest inclosed stage of the United Studios, where this production is being directed by Robert Vignola.

M. Asher, vice-president of the Corinne Griffith productions, obtained the photographs of the lobby from the main office of the First National Pictures Corporation in New York, whose headquarters are directly across the street from this famous hostelry. The technical department made a faithful reproduction not only in size but in details of the smallest decorations. The uniforms worn by the bell boys, clerks and doormen are identical.

Many who are familiar with this lobby, seeing it on the screen, will believe that these scenes were photographed in New York. Although it is quite possible to take scenes such as this in the locale in which they are laid, it is far better to reproduce them on the stage of the studio. The elimination of certain parts of walls and ceilings makes better lighting effects and more varied shots possible.

The settings throughout this picture were designed and executed by J. J. Hughes, who has made a special study of English architecture. The interiors are faithfully reproduced after the manner of the English aristocracy.

AIR MAIL BROUGHT MAKE-UP

Dagmar Godowsky is probably the first motion-picture actress to receive her make-up by airplane mail from California. When Miss Godowsky prepared for her role in Rudolph Valentino's latest picture, "A Sainted Devil," showing at Tally's this week, she found her supply of grease paint almost exhausted. Her favorite brand of this important base for screen make-up is manufactured in Los Angeles, and is not for sale anywhere else. Miss Godowsky wired her order to the manufacturer in California, and two days later a dozen tubes of the desired shade of grease paint were delivered by air mail service at her dressing-room in the Paramount Long Island studio.

"A Sainted Devil," with an all-star cast playing in support of Valentino, is said to be even better than "Monsieur Beaucaire."

PLAYS SPANISH ROLE

Eleanor Boardman is playing a Spanish role for the first time in her picture career. Miss Boardman has the leading feminine role in "Proud Flesh," Lawrence Rising's novel, which King Vidor is directing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

CANINE STAR NOT SPOILED

Even though he is a popular film star with his name flashing in electric lights and receiving great bunches of fan mail, Rin-Tin-Tin remains absolutely unspoiled.

No artistic temperament mars his disposition, and all his fellow-players are loud in their praises regarding his patience and consideration during the making of motion pictures. Perhaps his sense of humor helps him keep his balance, and perhaps he views life as a great game of sport. Anyway, Rin-Tin-Tin, the canine star, is one of the best beloved members of the Hollywood motion-picture colony.

Rin-Tin-Tin's fame came rather suddenly, though he had been diligently preparing for it through many months of intensive study.

Following his brilliant work along the American front in the Red Cross service during the World War, Rin-Tin-Tin came to the United States with his owner and trainer, Lieut. Lee Duncan. Because of his remarkable understanding of human moods and emotions, it soon became apparent that his talents should be directed toward the films.

In his latest picture, as the dog hero in "The Lighthouse by the Sea," Rin-Tin-Tin proves again and again that he can do anything that is possible for a canine to do. The manner in which he masters his part is almost uncanny. Not only does he seem to understand what is required of him, but he seems to respond to directions as readily as do the human actors playing with him.

This is evidenced several times during the thrilling action in "The Lighthouse by the Sea," now showing at the Rialto Theater and in which Rin-Tin-Tin does some remarkable work.

Others in the cast are Louise Fazenda, Buster Collier, Jr., Douglas Gerrard, Mathew Betz and Charles Hill Mailes.

Actor Gives Up Mining Game to Re-enter Films

That motion-picture making has triumped over mining is true, at least in one instance, the case in point being that of Elmo Lincoln, who left the film colony several months ago to supervise production and the movement of lead and silver from his mineral holdings in Southwest Arizona to the smelters. While actively engaged in putting things at the mines in systematic order, Lincoln has been deaf to calls from various film producers asking that he come back to the cinema fold.

Now with his business interests running at even keel, he has returned to Hollywood and is considering several offers, among which is a personal appearance tour in connection with one of his early Tarzan pictures.

"Nineteen twenty-five promises to be a banner year in the film world," says Lincoln, whose last appearances on the screen were a male lead in "Fashion Row," starring Mae Murray, and as lead in Marshall Neilan's "Rendezvous," "and the lure of the screen has won over my mining interests, now that I have the latter in shape."

Grauman Show is Attractive to Organizations

Parties of members of clubs and various fraternal organizations in which seats are reserved in blocks, are attending Grauman's Egyptian Theater in increasing numbers, according to the theater management. Every night, say the officials, they are called upon to set aside seats for two or three groups representing members of organizations attending the theater in a body.

"The Lilliputians," in a miniature municipality, erected in the forecourt of the theater, prove a special attraction, judging by the groups which linger in the forecourt before entering the theater, and the questions with which the attendants are plied. The midgets also are seen on the stage immediately following the intermission in a fantasy conceived by Sid Grauman.

The historical interest of the magnificent ten-act prologue, which depicts festive times in Florence, Italy, apparently is of special interest to the club members. Grauman faithfully has reproduced the lavish costumes of the days of the Medici in a setting of medieval splendor, in connection with entertainment by artists in their respective lines.

Henry King's attainment in accurately presenting the immortal love story of "Romola," starring Lillian and Dorothy Gish, is a strong attraction to the studious club members, to judge from the comments heard, say the management.

SEEK CREATIVE TALENT

AMERICAN COLLEGE SALON OFFERS MANY AWARDS

The American College Salon, a newly organized club of which Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith is president, has the aim of encouraging creative talent, and for that purpose will offer a prize of $100 for the best original composition submitted by a composer under the age of 25.

The award is known as the Larrimore Trippett prize, from the donor, and is to be given annually, increasing as the club grows. Walter Henry Rothwell, Adolph Tandler, Gertrude Ross and Mrs. J. J. Carter are to be the judges, and all of the manuscripts must be in the hands of Mrs. Carter before April 15.

The other prizes offered by the American College Salon this season include the Gene Stratton poetry prizes, first prize $100 second $25; the Albert Schindler prize of $100 for the best one-act play; the American College Salon prizes of $25 each for the best etching and piece of sculpture; the Jewel Marks prizes of $25 for the best essay on "The Soul of America"; $25 for the best art poster and $25 for the best magazine cover design in color.

The judges for the creative art prizes are E. Roscoe Shrader, John Hubbard Rich, A. B. Frost, and Mrs. Nelbert Chouinard, and all work is to be sent to Otis Art Institute. The judges for the short story and one-act play prizes are Prof. P. H. Houston, Dr. Dorothea Moore, Mrs. Milton Sills, Elizabeth De Jeans and Prof. Fredrick Blanchard. Manuscripts are to be sent to Prof. Houston at the University of California, Southern Branch. The judges for the Gene Stratton poetry prizes are Prof. Anthony Blanka, Samuel Clover, Miss Grace Dennen, Mrs. H. D. Noyes and Mrs. Chester W. Brown. The poems are to be sent to Mrs. Goldsmith at 2200 Canyon Drive Hollywood.

Mirovitch Program

Under the auspices of the Italian Club, Alfred Mirovitch, who has long been recognized as one of the more brilliant pianists, will be heard in recital the 26th inst., at Philharmonic Auditorium. The Chopin B Minor Sonata which he will play, has recently been recorded for reproducing piano. The program follows: Prelude and Fuga in A Minor (Bach-Liszt;) Pastorale (Scarlatti-Tausig;) Sonata in A Major (Scarlatti;) Chopin Group; Fantasie in F Minor, etudes Op. 10, No. 3 and No. 7; B Major Nocturne, A Flat Polonaise and the B Minor Sonata; Sgambati's "Nenia," Tango (Albeniz-Godowski,) Moment Musical (Schubert-Liszt;) Racoczy March (Liszt.)

Biltmore Recital

Emma Fitch, dramatic contralto, will sing the program listed here at the Biltmore Ballroom the 22nd inst. She will be assisted by Frank Nagel and Ruth Wilson, accompanist and violinist. "Lungin del caro bene" (Secchi,) "Che fiero costume," arietta from opera "Etocle" (Legrenzi, 1625-1690;) aria from the modern opera, "Der Tote Stadt"—"Marietta's Lied zur laute" (Korngold;) "Meine Liebe ist gruen" (Brahms;) "Verborgenheit" (Wolf;) Violin solo, "Walther's Prize Song" from "Die Meistersinger" (Wagner;) aria: "Ah, Mon Fils" from "Le Prophete" (Meyerbeer;) "Les Papillons" (Chausson;) "Le Nil" (Leroux;) violin solo, Ballet Music, "Rosamunde" (Schubert-Kreisler;) "At Night" (Rachmaninoff;) "The Little Shepherd's Song" (Watts;) "Vale" (Russell;) and "Ecstasy" (Rummell.)

Merola in New York

Gaetano Merola, operatic conductor of the Los Angeles and San Francisco Civic Grand Operas, has arrived in New York from Italy. He is arranging contracts with leading artists of the Metropolitan for the Pacific Coast season in October. He will be in Los Angeles soon.

Children's Concert

Guy Maier, pianist, will open the Kathryn Montreville Cocke Children's Artist Course Saturday afternoon the 24th inst., at the Gamut Club. These concerts are being given by artists of national and international repute, and are so arranged as to be attractive to children of the most impressionable age. The artists explain certain of the works which they perform.

"Sunset Trail"

It is expected that Cadman's "Sunset Trail" will be given in June by the Los Angeles Oratorio Society. It was recently heard in Denver, where it scored a phenomenal success.

Miss Zoellner Will Marry

Antonette Zoellner, first violinist of the Zoellner Quartet, will soon become the bride of Earl Chapman, who resides in Sunland. She has but recently recoverd from a serious operation and illness, and is now in much improved health.

Why Tibbett is Successful

The following is copied verbatim from the current Musical Courier: "The most astounding news we have heard for many a day is that Lawrence Tibbett, hero of the 'Falstaff' revival and a mere singer, is able to play on the piano any orchestral score at sight. Paolo Gallico vouches the truth of the statement."

Mr. Tibbett, it will be remembered, whose home was Los Angeles till but a year or two ago, recently scored extraordinary success at the Metropolitan in New York. Mr. Gallico is a pianist who was heard in the Bowl last summer, and who conducted a master class at the Olga Steeb Piano School.

Lyric Club

The program of the Woman's Lyric Club for their second concert on Tuesday evening, February 10, at Philharmonic promises to be another treat for lovers of ensemble singing.

A little over twenty years ago this enterprising organization started with a membership of sixty-five public-spirited women, and by their earnest endeavor they have brought this club to its present high standard, with an active membership of over 135 women. Upholding its high ideals the Woman's Lyric Club soon became one of the representative organizations of the country.

Fearlessly delving into the mass of women's part-song literature of past and present, they are ever bringing to the fore the intrinsic beauties and spiritual forces for their department of the musical art, and are indefatigable in the pursuit of their original ideals.

At this forthcoming occasion Alberto Salvi, hailed today as perhaps the greatest concert harpist in the world, will appear.

Prof. J. B. Poulin, conductor and director, and Mrs. M. Hennion Robinson, accompanist, have guided the club through many artistic programs and have done wonderful work in encouraging and promoting musical culture in this city.

Maier and Pattison Next Week

Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, who will appear in concert for two pianos on Tuesday evening, the 27th inst., at the Philharmonic Auditorium, are outstanding figures in their chosen field of music. Lee Pattison has made a number of arrangements of compositions for two-piano performance, among them the coronation scene from the "Boris Godounoff," and the "Concerto Pathetique" of Liszt, for which he not only made the arrangement for two pianos, but the orchestral score as well. In decidedly popular vein he has recently published a fox trot song, "The Land of By and By."

This renaissance of the art of two-piano playing has given fresh impetus to present-day composers, several of whom have written compositions dedicated to Maier and Pattison, among them Leo Sowerby, at present a member of the American Academy in Rome; Leopold Godowsky, John Alden Carpenter and others. On the program which they will present here the modern school of music will be amply represented. Many numbers that are decidedly novel and out of the ordinary are promised.

Putting the sense of humor into piano recitals of the highest order is not an anomaly. Guy Maier and Lee Pattison have done it and have created a tremendous success wherever they appeared. A whole repertoire of gay, witty, sprightly numbers is at the fingertips of these pianists. This combination of artistry and instrument makes a unique appeal in that it delights the nonprofessional audience without in any way sacrificing artistic standards.

Heifetz 23rd and 24th Inst.

Jascha Heifetz will arrive in Los Angeles next week, for two recitals, the 23rd and 24th inst., at Philharmonic Auditorium.

Heifitz is still a king among violinists. In his first fall recital at Carnegie Hall, New York, this season the usual throngs were turned away and standing room only was sold out weeks before the concert. Throngs applauded this youthful Russian until his list of encores was almost as long as his set program.

Mr. Heifetz will give entirely different programs at his two recitals.

Cadman Music Orchestrated

Charles Wakefield Cadman's oriental suite, consisting of four numbers; "The Desert's Dusty Face," "Underneath the Bough;" "Within the Potter's Shop" and "Merry with the Fruitful Grape" has been published by the Boosey Company of London. It is arranged for full symphony orchestra.

Mr. Cadman has accepted the invitation of the Capitol Theater of New York City to be the guest conductor when his two works, "The Thunderbird Suite" and the "Hollywood Suite" are presented there in March. The Hollywood Suite has recently been orchestrated by Modest Altschuler.

Fine Trio Program

The Los Angeles Trio, May MacDonald Hope, pianist and founder, Sylvian Noack, violinist, Ilya Bronson, violoncellist, will be heard in their third concert of the season Thursday evening at the Ebell Auditorium.

The trio will be assisted by Emile Ferir, solo violinist of the Philharmonic Orchestra.

The program offered is of exceeding interest to both student and public generally. Besides the G Minor Quartet for piano, violin, viola and 'cello, a work of great inspiration and dramatic beauty, they will play the seldom heard C Minor Trio by Mendelssohn, and three movements of the Arensky Trio.

Three Arts Club

This afternoon at the Three Arts Club, 987 Magnolia avenue, Dr. Dorothea Moore will speak on "My Impressions of Some New York Plays." Beatrice Fenner, composer and writer of verse, will give the program next Sunday. She will be assisted by Ruth Mae Shaffner, soprano, and Laura Grissing, violinist.

Ross Compositions Heard

The Hollywood Musicians' Club gave a program of the compositions of Gertrude Ross at the Hollywood Library Wednesday evening. J. Melville Avery, baritone, sang, "Three Songs of the Desert." The clever three-act play, "Prunella," by Granville Barker and Lawrence Horseman, was read by Corinne Ross. Miss Ross is a most capable and engaging young reader. Mrs. Gertrude Ross has composed incidental music to this, which she played, and which added materially to the interpretation of the number. Annis Howell Robinson, soprano, was heard in three numbers and several encores. Her voice is sweet and of good volume. Mr. Avery, who sang with fine expression throughout, closed the program.

Violinists in Recital

On Friday evening the 23rd inst., Joseph Zoellner, Sr., founder of the Zoellner Quartet, will present several of his artist pupils in a recital. The concert will be held in the recital hall of the Zoellner Conservatory of Music, 1250 Windsor Boulevard. Many of the students appearing in this recital have made successful professional appearances.

Among the numbers to be heard are "Prelude and Allegro" (Pugnani-Kreisler,) "Nocturne, No. 2, Op. 9" (Chopin;) "Twenty-third Concerto" (Viotti,) "Ninth Concerto" (De Beriot,) "Legende" (Wieniawski,) and movements from concerti by Mendelssohn, Max Bruch and Vieuxtemps.

Grieg Concerto at Symphony Pop

The seventh popular concert which the Philharmonic plays next Sunday afternoon maintains the fine standard already set.

Edna Gunnar Peterson, who makes her appearance as soloist, has already established herself in the front rank of artists. She has appeared as soloist with some of the finest symphonic organizations in the world, including the Berlin Philharmonic, Chicago Symphony, Minneapolis Symphony, St. Louis Symphony, the St. Paul Symphony and at the Hollywood Bowl. Miss Peterson is play the Grieg Concerto for Pianoforte in A Minor, Opus 16.

The complete program is as follows: Brahms overture, "Academic Festival," Op. 80; Grieg Concerto for Piano in A Minor, Op. 16, Edna Gunnar Peterson; Berlioz from Symphony No. 3, "Harold in Italy," Op. 16; Ravel, "La Valse," a choregraphic poem; Dubois, "Xaviere, Entra' Acte-Rigaudon;" Wagner, overture, "Rienzi."

They Blend Melody, Harmony, Rhythm and Counterpoint

Erna Rubinstein Hungarian violinist

Guy Maier and Lee Pattison in Two-Piano Event.

Jascha Heifetz, violinist

Frederick Herrmann, bass

Emile Lancel, Mezzo-soprano

Los Angeles Trio, May MacDonald Hope, pianist: Sylvain Noack, violinist: Ilya Bronson, cellist.

Rubinstein is Youthful Violinist

Erna Rubinstein, like Jackie Coogan, is growing up. When this young violinist plays at the Philharmonic Auditorium on Thursday evening, the 29th inst., she will be almost 18 years of age! At this age she has achieved a pinnacle in her art seldom reached by the most gifted. She has appeared as soloist with the greatest European and American symphonic orchestras.

This is Miss Rubinstein's fourth American tour. She came to this country with Willem Mengelberg, the Dutch conductor who conducts the New York Philharmonic each season for a number of performances. When Mr. Mengelberg first heard Miss Rubinstein play at the age of 15 he was so pleased by her virtuosity he immediately engaged her to play with his orchestra in Amsterdam. So great was her success he engaged her for an entire tour of Holland, after which she made her debut in New York with the Philarmonic Orchestra.

Woman's Symphony

Henry Schoenefeld, who for the last twelve years has wielded the baton of the Los Angeles Woman's Symphony Orchestra, has arranged a rare program of orchestral numbers for the first concert of this organization, to be held on Wednesday evening, February 4, at Philharmonic Auditorium.

This orchestra is one of the oldest organizations on the Pacific Coast and, under the leadership of Mr. Schoenefeld, has progressed continuously. Apart from presenting artistic programs, encouraging and promoting musical culture, the principal object of this club is to give women musicians opportunity for studying symphonic music.

The outstanding feature of the first concert will be the appearance of Frederic Huttman, American dramatic tenor, as soloist. Mr. Huttman has enjoyed a successful career in Europe, having sung there under almost every conductor of note, and he recently appeared with the local Philharmonic Orchestra.

Conductor Henry Schoenefeld's contributions to American symphonic music have won him honors both here and abroad.

Concert Postponed

The concert to be given by Frances Mae Martin, pianist-composer, and Ruth Shaffner, soprano, at the Hollywood Conservatory will take place February 14 instead of the 24th inst., as previously announced.

Steeb School Activities

A recital given by the advanced pupils of the Olga Steeb Piano School will take place on Wednesday evening, the 21st inst., at 8:15 o'clock, in the auditorium of the Ebell Club. This will be the last recital of the first semester. The new semester opens February 2.

Karl Krueger, late of New York and formerly of Vienna, Austria, is planning to open a class of opera coaching at the Steeb school in February, which will last fifteen weeks. He will also accept students in orchestration.

Mr. Krueger is said to be exceptionally well qualified to handle this prospective undertaking, being a musician of marked ability and experience and of a catholic musical taste. He received his conductorial apprenticeship under Nikisch and Weingartner, and through them and Robert Fuch he became an assistant conductor at the Vienna Opera, where he worked with many world celebrities and absorbed the traditions of the opera.

Herrmann to Sing

Frederick Herrmann will sing for the Southern California Women's Press Club the 20th at the open session of the month. He will sing a classic group, also a recent composition of Mrs. Guy Bush and one by Mrs. Maybelle Dyer and Mrs. Elizabeth McCabe Gilmore, and one by Mrs. Letha Probst and Frederick Herrmann. A group of American composers will finish the program.

Mr. Herrmann has been active in entertaining the disabled veterans at Sawtelle in varied programs. He is one of the best-prepared resident musicians. He is a post-graduate of the Chicago Musical College. Having received a bachelor-of-music degree he furthered his studies in Europe for two years, and has had many years of experience in teaching in colleges and schools in the South and Middle West.

Bronson Song Program

The Misses Marion and Ruth Bronson of the Carl Bronson artists will be presented in the first joint recital of the season in Music-Arts auditorium of the Music-Arts Studio Building on Wednesday evening, the 21st inst. A considerable part of the program will be given over to the presentation of vocal duets, including compositions which have not been heard on recent concert programs. These selections will be chosen from a number of well-known composers, among whom are Schumann, Nevin, MacDowell and others, all of whom have written most interestingly for two voices.

The concert will be presented under the direction of Carl Bronson, and Miss Nell Stegner will preside at the piano.

Coleman Chamber Music

The next Coleman Chamber Music Concert in Pasadena takes place Thursday evening. Blanche Rogers Lott, pianist, the Marquarre Ensemble, Henri de Busscher, oboeist, and O. W. Hoffman, English-horn player, Philip Memola, oboeist, will take part. Included on the program will be a Beethoven Trio.

Lancel-Fitch Recitals

Emelie Lancel, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in recital tomorrow evening in the ballroom of the Biltmore Hotel. Miss Lancel possesses a voice of such range as to be effective in the alto role of "Gioconda" as well as Siebel in "Faust," generally sung by a soprano. She has appeared several seasons in concert and opera with success. Assisting her will be the English actress, Ethel Ransome, who will read a scene from Sheridan's "School for Scandal." Walter Wenzel, pianist, will play two groups of solos. The recital is the first of a pair, the second of which takes place Thursday evening, and is to be given by Emma Fitch and assisting artists. Tomorrow's program follows:

"Nature's Adoration" ....Beethoven
Aria, "Les Huguenots" ....Meyerbeer
Miss Emelie Lancel
"Waldesgesprach" ....Schumann
"Volksliedchen" ....Schumann
"Sapphische Ode" ....Brahms

Rimski-Korsakov's "Sadko"

The Bay Cities Music-Association Chorus, under Modest Altschuler, has begun practice of the second tableau, or act, of Rimski-Korsakov's opera, "Sadko." This number will be one of the features of the association's next concert.

"Sadko," the opera, has been little given outside of Russia although the composer's symphonic poem of the same name is better known. The reason is said to lie in the strictly national character of the libretto, which tells the story of this fantastic hero of Russian folk-lore. The opera has never been performed in America, but selections will be heard in New York this winter for the first time, as well as here in Los Angeles by this chorus. The presentation of music absolutely new to America such as is this, is one of the main policies of Mr. Altschuler, directing the Bay Cities chorus.

CARRERAS, PIANIST, TO PLAY IN AMERICA

The Italian pianist, Maria Carreras, is again to be heard in America. Following her enthusiastic reception last season, she is planning New York recitals and a tour of the country. Mme. Carreras is one of the foremost women pianists and a great favorite in Europe. She has made over 1700 public appearances in the last twelve years—a record unequalled by any other pianist. Recently she made two recordings of her playing; W. F. Bach's Organ Concerto in D Minor, transcribed by Von Zadora, and "Galhofeira," a Brazilian dance by Nepomuceno. The latter work was secured by Mme. Carreras two years ago on her tour of South America.

At present Mme. Carreras is active in raising funds for a monument to her compatriot of the piano, the immortal Busoni, whose death a few months ago was an irreparable loss to the music world. This is to be placed in the Liceo Musicale in Bologna.

ECHOES OF MUSIC ACTIVITY HERE

One of the most brilliant private musicales of the season celebrated the reopening of the Charles Farwell Edson studio last Sunday evening at 2020 Toberman. Mme. Alma Real was heard as the feature of the evening. Besides several operatic numbers and a brilliant selection of Spanish songs, Mme. Real also rendered "The House of Dreams," by Mr. Edson. The reading of selected poetry by the host added further to the enjoyment of the evening.

Another of the informal teas which are being held by the Bertha Vaughn studios for pupils and their friends, took place Saturday afternoon. These prove a splendid way of students mutually enjoying each other's work.

Artists, musicians and literary folks from Los Angeles will be gathered in the new home of the Los Angeles Opera and Fine Arts Club, corner of Menlo and San Marino, on the evening of the 24th inst., for a reception, dinner and program in the auditorium of the clubhouse. During the coming year many musical and dramatic programs will be enjoyed by the members and their guests. The reception will be the first in the new quarters.

Friday evening the 23rd inst., a musical stag party will be given for the boys of the Nature Music School, and their fathers.

The kindergarten training department of the Nature Music School opened last week. The aim of this course is to prepare young women to intelligently and sympathetically direct the activities of young children in school or in their own homes.

The program which will be played by the Ambassador Sextet this evening in the Ambassador lobby, under the direction of Josef Rosenfeld will include "La Juive," Halvey; "Wedding Bells," Linke; "Dedication," Schumann, and "Dance of the Hours," Ponchielli.

SAN CARLO COMING WITH MANY STARS

A return engagement of two weeks will be played by the San Carlo Grand Opera Company beginning February 23, when Fortune Gallo will present his organization in a repertoire of favorite operas under the local management of George L. Smith, in conjunction with the Elwyn Concert Bureau.

Complete in every detail, the organization of 100 artists, musicians, choristers, stage hands and business staff, en route on the special train, which carries the scenic equipment, properties and lighting effects of the twenty-six productions being carried this year, will descend upon Los Angeles in full festive attire.

With names like Alice Gentle, Anne Roselle, Josephine Lucchese, Bianca Saroya, Stella De Metta, Mary Kent, Manuel Salazar, Gaetano Tommasini, Demetrio Onofrei, Mario Basiola, Mario Valle, Pietro De Biasi, Natale Cervi, Francesco Curci and Maestro Fulgenzio Guerrieri, supported by the fine choral ensemble and symphony orchestra, local opera-lovers can depend upon hearing their favorite operas sung by the best procurable talent.

DANCERS STEPPING LIVELY

The Ethel Abbott Dancing School is one of the oldest of its type established here, and is presenting fine dancing programs at clubs, recitals and private affairs. Sylvia Welling, Cornelia and Lois Kennedy, three very promising pupils, executed some difficult and pleasing numbers at one of the local lodges last week.

FOUNDS DOWNTOWN MUSIC INSTITUTION

Jacob Weinstein

Jacob Weinstein, pianist and teacher, founder of the new Southern California Conservatory of Music, has taken several studios in the Music-Arts Building, and is now enrolling pupils. The conservatory not only boasts a distinguished faculty, but also offers classes in various theoretical branches headed by university teachers.

Many of the teachers come from the ranks of the Philharmonic Orchestra, and teachers of special instruments are well qualified to head their departments.

The vocal department includes Frederick Hermann, Felicia Romanowska and William Picher. Violin teachers are Robert Martin Staples, Valdemar Seliger, Julius Bierlich, William Zarkin, Eugene Powers and Theresa Bessler.

Careful attention is given to the piano departments, and, including the founder, May MacDonald Hope, Desider Vecsei and Francis Kendig teach advanced work, with Karolyn King, Lewis, Nina Horner, Lena Schneider, Vera Slavin, Dave Klatzin and Rose Stone teaching beginning and intermediate students. Special classes in interpretation are being planned.

Fritz Gaillard and Earl Bright will teach 'cello, and Ernest Huber double bass. Flute and clarinet teachers are Ondre Maquarre, Icilio Miccoli and Pierre Pierrier. Alfred Kastner is to teach harp. William J. Kraft and Roy Brignall are to have charge of the organ department. Harmony, history of music and dramatic departments have also been arranged.

Russian Artists Plan Schools of Song, Dance Here

Art and cultural circles in Los Angeles are keenly interested by Dr. Alexis Karl's announcement that Chaliapin, the Russian tenor, and Anna Pavlowa, premiere danseuse, are intending to settle in this city and open institutions.

Dr. Karl is president of the Russian Art Club, organized recently to preserve and foster the growth of the brilliant art of the White Empire. Since the fall of the Zcaristic regime Russian art has been dispersed to the four corners of the earth. Many of its leading and most talented disciples have found a haven in Southern California, and more are following. In the years to come the influence of this Old World culture will undoubtedly be felt in the daily lives of the people and will result in California taking the lead in the art life of America.

Pavlowa and Chaliapin are but two of many world figures who have chosen Los Angeles for their home in recent years. Theodore Kosloff denied himself the plaudits of multitudes in every civilized country to live here; Annette Kellerman deserted her own country Australia and the screen and stage to devote herself to the development of Southern California women; Edstrom, internationally famous sculptor, now lives on a high hill in Hollywood. A far cry from the picturesque wildness of his native Scandinavia and the courts of Europe.

FRATERNAL AFFAIRS

well attended by Odd Fellows and Rebekah members.

Southwestern Rebekah Lodge conducted an installation ceremony last Thursday evening at the Odd Fellows' Temple. Miss Ethel Rosen, in accepting the Noble Grand chair, promised to carry on the good work of the retiring Noble Grand. A committee will be appointed to start a membership contest, and the entertainment committee will, at a later date, announce the program for the season's entertainments.

Community Lodge, No. 469, of 130½ South Pacific Boulevard, will conduct a public installation of officers and give an entertainment on the evening of the 20th inst.

America Rebekah Lodge, No. 371, I.O.O.F., 1720 South Flower street, conducted a roll call of members last Tuesday evening. Tuesday evening next there will be a short lodge session, after which Catherine Funk, Deputy President of district No. 60, and her staff, will proceed to Watts to install the newly elected officers of Sunny South Rebekah Lodge, No. 323.

W. B. A.

Mrs. Belle M. Bernard, Deputy Grand Commander of the State of California, Woman's Benefit Association, assisted by Mrs. Ettie Silver and Mrs. L. Patterson, acting as ladies of ceremonies, installed the following officers last Tuesday evening: Commander, Mable Fay; Lieutenant-Commander, Kate Healey; Past Commander, Mertie Eastman, Junior Commander, Gertrude Latham; Chaplain, Hattie Suttle; Record Keeper, Grace Miller; Financial Secretary, Pearl Rule; Collector, Gertrude Rutherford; Lady-at-Arms, Glenn McGriff; Sergeant, Bessie Heininger; Sentinel, Mona Montanya; Picket, Maude Bain; Queen's Adviser, Jessie Miller; Publicity Reporter, Caroline Clark; Captain of the Guards, Lottie Bastain; Color bearer No. 1, Myrtle Taylor; Color Bearer No. 2, Louise Roseberg; Musician, Hattie Schneider.

The installation was followed by a program consisting of a piano solo by Miss Schneider and a dance by Miss Parks.

MODERN WOODMEN

There will be a general meeting of Modern Woodmen of America at the hall of Golden State Camp, 845 South Figueroa street, Wednesday evening, the 21st inst., for the purpose of obligating a large class of candidates from the various camps in the county, and to listen to addresses by Director S. S. Tanner and General Attorney Truman Plantz of Illinois. These neighbors are particularly anxious to meet members who hale from the Sucker State, whether they still hold their membership in their old camps in Illinois, or have brought their cards to one of the camps in Los Angeles.

ORDER OF FORESTERS

"Boosters" of the Independent Order of Foresters met in the banquet room at the Foresters' Building last Monday evening and made plans for the Frank E. Hand class to be initiated this spring. More than 100 live workers in Court E. G., No. 33, were present, inspected the prizes that have been offered and told of work accomplished. High Chief Ranger Dr. C. B. Dickson was chairman.

There has been an apparent rivalry between the three Companion Courts this month as to which would have the most beautiful installation of officers. Their ingenuity has been taxed to the limit to have the most original features in this annual event. Companion Court E. S., No. 34, installed Tuesday evening at Benevolence Hall, was elaborately decorated for the event. After a business session, visitors were admitted and the officers were installed, Dr. C. B. Dickson, High Chief Ranger, acting as installing officer. After the ceremony a program was given by the Cowie Scottish Pipe Band and others. Officers installed were: Court Deputy, Jennie Hoodman; Court Physician, Dr. E. F. Boyd; Past Chief Ranger, Elizabeth Marsh; Chief Ranger, Charlotte Marks; Vice-Chief Ranger, Helen Pellow; Orator, Anna Gruebnau; Musician, Marian Newman; Financial Secretary, Bessie Hoodman; Recording Secretary, Gertrude Goodman; Treasurer, Sarah Alloway; Senior Woodward, Hattie Brown; Junior Woodward, Lulu Belle Everett; Senior Beadle, Gladys Manning; Junior Beadle, Gussie Fodor; Trustees, Cora Nale and Mary Marlowe; Finance Committee, Mary I. Dunkerley, Elizabeth Marsh and Teresa Pearson.

A party consisting of High Chief Ranger Dr. C. B. Dickson, High Secretary S. G. Dunkerley, Deputy T. C. Harvey and a delegation from Court Glendale went to Santa Paula last Friday and installed the officers of that court. They were assisted by the drill team of Court Santa Paula.

Welcome night, which falls on the second Tuesday in each month, was well attended last Tuesday evening. Court E. G., No. 33, extends a special welcome to all who have received the degrees during the preceding months. Those present were much interested in the new health conservation plan which is to be established this year as announced by Supreme Physician Dr. C. B. Dickson.

STATE SOCIETIES

The second annual midwinter picnic will be at Sycamore Grove next Saturday. North Dakotans will note change of date. The officers will offer the usual picnic attractions, including county registers, badges, basket dinners and program.

Dr. George H. MacNeill, president of the New York State Society, announces the January meeting in the Disabled Veterans' Hall next Thursday evening. Dancing will follow the entertainment.

The second rally of the Nevadans under the leadership of President Edgar T. Fee will be given at the Disabled Veterans' Hall tomorrow evening, with a popular program and dancing.

Dr. John Frederick Clark, president of the "Hoosier" bunch, promises "something different" for the Indiana Society next Tuesday evening at the Fraternal Brotherhood Building. Dancing will follow the program.

Oregon State Society resumes monthly socials with a big rally next Saturday evening at the

THE NEW

IN STORES AND HOMES

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS

By Olive Gray

Dot Spotted:

Polka dots strive for supremacy in the new silks offered for spring and summer. Soft weaves, satin or twilled of surface, are shown in all the popular colors and combinations of color, with dots, large and medium, grouped in geometrical designs or sprinkled measuredly over the surface. Such silks will lend themselves admirably to draped effects, to flares and flounces such as the mode will demand for the new season's frocks, tunics and sports dresses.

Pleats Multiply

The numerosity of pleats, frills and flounces, upon many of the new gowns, together with the insistent demand for the slender silhouette, call for reduction to the utmost svelte-line, in the figure thus swathed. If Fashion's exactions continue along this line, we shall be sighing for the taste of some aboriginals, who consider of utmost beauty their women who rank highest in avoirdupoise. Buying a wife by weight may, in time, be discovered to have advantages; especially if reduction costs mount as decrease in flesh increases. At present, the man who would flatter, has learned well his lesson and will always greet a woman with: "I scarcely knew you—you have grown so slender—haven't you lost much in weight?" And he looks innocent of the fact that every feminine member of his household speaks only in the language of reduction. "I never eat this." "No, not a spoonful of that—it increases weight!" "They say potatoes—" or "They say one must not."— Chiefly prohibitory are the admonitions, and yet the grocery bill does not seem to reach a very svelte-line.

The Mauve Family

Lavender, no longer confined to attire for elderly ladies, has developed into a distinct fad for spring clothes and millinery. Whether in thistle-bloom, or in shades verging upon a deeper purple, this artistic tone, finds favor in many realms. An especially likable color for spring and for summer, this so-natural tint goes well with the many revivals in mode, striving for adoption. In shimmering silks for full-skirted gowns; in quaint pokish millinery shapes; in Godey Bookery of all sorts, the lavender tints are ideal. Then, too, our friends who have studied color effects in relation to character and to soul development, declare the purples are favorable to growth in the invisible things of life. If you do not possess a purple aura, you may at least simulate one in your habiliments, and possibly thereby cultivate the tendency toward the better qualities of your being.

Your Dollar

Have you dollared? I mean, have you earned the right to one of those brotherly hundred cents, by telling how you have saved or benefited by patronage of that store now celebrating its fiftieth anniversary. Interesting and inspiring are many of these stories, and that they have the ring of sincerity adds to the human value of the brief recitations. The statements made, augment the feeling that a store bringing forth such eulogies must perforce be reliable, having stood upon its strong foundation for so many years.

More Convenient

She who has become so addicted to the vanity box that she hesitates to relinquish the convenience of such a carry-all, will find justification in the new and smaller boxes offered among the new. Patent leather and many novel fabrics in this line are presented, the inner space affording ample room for the many articles which women like to have at hand while shopping or visiting. Some have the top till, wherein are housed the appliances of beauty, without which no well-cared-for woman ventures forth. Prices are far lower than for several seasons, while quality is enhanced, promising longer life for such accessories than heretofore.

"It's a Boy"—Or Is It?

First glimpse, one can scarcely tell by the dress of the small person whether it's a boy or girl. Skirts are so short, so straight, so narrow; trousers are so full, and so far above the knee; legs are so open to conviction, either way, with the much abbreviated socks that truly one must ask whether Bobbie or Dorothy stands before one in usual habiliments.

Fashion Springs Spring Modes

Braided wool in sand, orange and black makes cunning cuffs for a beige frock.

An evening frock of peach-colored moire is worked all over with crystal beads.

The new sports sweater has a tight band at the hips, giving it a bloused effect.

A delightful skating costume consists of a scarlet jacket worn with white breeches.

A pleasing combination for southern wear is cream and dull-green crepe de chine.

For a warmer clime is a plaited white skirt, a matelasse coat and a tiny white hat.

It holds true for all the new frocks that fullness is brought toward the front.

One smart hat brim is very narrow at the back and widens to turn up saucily in front.

Interest is given to a dark dress by the use of tasseled shoulder tabs of braided wool.

A shirred trimming of tan-and-brown silk is used at one side of a brown faille hat.

Tunic blouses are growing slightly shorter and showing more of their underskirts.

The new skirts have godets or circular inserts placed in the front at knee or hip length.

A long line may be given to the short evening gown by a sash which falls below the hem.

The moire silk vanity bag for evening may be studded all over with colored stones or rhinestones.

SMILES, GRINS AND GUFFAWS

Will Rogers in "The Illiterate Digest" Steps Into the Ranks of the Humorists and Makes Lively and Impertinent Comments on the Passing Show

BY LILLIAN C. FORD

THE ILLITERATE DIGEST. By Will Rogers. Albert & Charles Boni, New York.

A book heralded as the meditations of the most popular humorist of America is one to give us pause. When we consider further that the author is likewise cowboy, lariat artist, movie actor and the big hit of the Ziegfeld Follies, we pause again. Then we take the plunge and open the book.

On the artistic frontispiece, the work of Nate Collier, we are given the keynote of the book. It is "Our Policy is 'Nothing is Good.'" Then, indeed, we realize why the publishers call Mr. Rogers a philosopher.

We have the word of the author that some consider him a realist, who "has drawn with meticulous detail a picture of contemporary life, while others more observing see in him a great symbolist." At any rate, we can agree that "his juggling of correct words and perfect English sentences is magnificent, and that his spelling is almost uncanny."

According to Gov. Allen of Kansas, Mr. Rogers is "the only man in America able to tell the truth about our men and affairs." How Mr. Rogers got his monopoly on the truth deponent sayeth not—probably by evolving a formula that enables him to deliver pungent and provocative and ironic slams wrapped in a grin.

In the eloquent introduction to the book, written by the author, we are told that "this book should have been long before now on the book shelves of every reader of worth-while literature in the English-speaking world, in addition to being well worn in our best reference libraries, and should have been already translated into every known and unknown tongue." The reasons for the delay are twofold: First, because it had not been written, and, second, because it had no introduction. Both of these lacks being now supplied, both book and introduction are made available to an applauding world.

The jaded reader who cannot find smiles, grins or guffaws, according to his nature and breeding, in these pages, should abandon literature and take to cross-word puzzles. From the "Two Letters and a Dedication" with which Mr. Rogers raises the curtain to his last tribute to the curative waters of his birthplace, Claremont, Okla., he never halts in his rapid-fire brand of humor.

He has an exhaustless exuberance, an amusing disregard of facts, a love of absurd exaggeration, a fine scorn tempered with pity for Prohibitionists, Congress, Ford cars, Bryan, song writers, after-dinner speakers, and not a few others. In fact, in his reactions to American life he is oddly akin to H. L. Mencken, that sage critic who is likewise a humorist.

Of the song, "Yes, We Have no Bananas Today," Mr. Rogers remarks: "If we had had a man like its author to write our national anthem, somebody could learn it." Of his hurt feelings because he, who claims to have chewed more gum than any other living man, was not permitted to enter the Wrigley estate; of his brilliant idea of reassembling all the gum chewed in this country and remodeling it; of how the eclipse was observed at Tia Juana; of the neglect given the California climate in the newspapers; of his brilliant promotion scheme for establishing surf clubs in the Middle West; of his mastery of the Brisbane method of writing; of the Hollywood scandals; of how to eat soup and how to select corsets; and, above all, of that Democratic convention in which "the death from old age among the delegates was about offset by the birth rate," Mr. Rogers writes here in a way to cheer and stimulate.

THE LAND OF HEART'S DESIRE

LOWER CALIFORNIA UP TO DATE. North and South Districts of the Peninsula. By Aurelio de Vivanco. Privately Printed, 350 South Figueroa Street, Los Angeles.

In these days of national restlessness it is not uncommon to hear men complain of the lack of opportunity. The cry is that there is no longer a frontier. All the cheap land, it is pointed out, is taken up. All the gold, silver and oil are either in the hands of the big companies or the fields wherein it might be found are worked out. We have supposedly reached the final and farthest fronter.

But to the wide-awake man, longing for a tussel with mother nature, there are still as many opportunities as of old. And these chances are not "away out in the West" either. He does not have to cross a continent in a prairie schooner, or go round the Horn in a leaky, unseaworthy, sailing ship to find these new and almost unlimited opportunities for wealth. In fact, he can get into the very heart of one of the richest of undeveloped regions possible to imagine in a second-hand, $75 tin lizzie, and he can, in less than two working days' travel, reach this land of heart's desire—namely, Lower California. Here at our very doors, lies one of those fairy lands of promise, rich in fertile acres, valuable timbers, petroleum, gold, silver probably copper and coal and other products of the earth that are fairly crying for development. If the things produced on land do not appeal there is the sea with its almost limitless supply of succulent fish, or if he would mix romance with business he may dredge the deeps for pearls in true South Sea fashion. If he longs for a quiet life there is sheep ranching or goat ranching or he may choose any of a dozen congenial occupations.

Lower California is close at hand. It is just feeling the first stirrings of commercial and agricultural life. It beckons to the brave and offers rewards far in excess of the wildest dreams of the most imaginative adventurer. All of which is deduced from skimming "Lower California up to Date."

In this generously illustrated volume Aurelio de Vivanco has presented in graphic form the vast resources of the peninsula that forms our southern boundary. He tells in an interesting way of the plans which are being formulated and the projects that are being carried to completion, all of which spell progress with a capital P. Of the orderly and at the same time rapid progress that has recently been made he acquaints us fully. He gives credit in a generous measure to the Americans who, by their energy, courage and enterprise, and by spending of vast sums in developing their projects, have contributed to the commercial and agricultural progress of Lower California.

This book, containing over 500 pages, is a perfect mine of authoritative information as to the history, geology, orography, hydrography, natural resources, present state of development, possibilities and in fact all essential data for the student or casual reader interested in this wonderful region, so near at hand, but of which we as a whole know so little.

The book is published by the author, Aurelio de Vivanco, whose office is located at 350 South Figueroa street, Los Angeles. Anyone interested in Lower California, either from a business or pleasure standpoint, will find this book both interesting and valuable.

The book is printed in both Spanish and English. The translation, which is at times quaint, is by H. M. Moran.

VESPERS

This little poem is from A. A. Milne's book of children's verse, "When We Were Very Young" (E. P. Dutton & Co.,) a charming collection of poems for and about tiny tots, most of which first appeared in Punch. This poem was in the Library of the Queen's Doll House:

Little boy kneels at the foot of the bed,
Droops on the little hands the little gold head.
Hush! hush! Whisper who dares!
Christopher Robin is saying his prayers.

God bless Mummy. I know that's right.
Wasn't it fun in the bath tonight?
The cold's so cold and the hot's so hot.
Oh! God bless Daddy—I quite forgot.

If I open my fingers a little bit more
I can see Nanny's dressing gown on the door.
It's a beautiful blue, but it hasn't a hood.
Oh! God bless Nanny and make her good.

Mine has a hood, and I lie in bed,
And pull the hood right over my head,
And I shut my eyes, and I curl up small,
And nobody knows that I'm there at all.

Oh! Thank you God, for a lovely day.
And what was the other I had to say?
I said "Bless Daddy," so what can it be?
Oh! Now I remember it. God bless me.

Little Boy kneels at the foot of the bed,
Droops on the little hands the little gold head.
Hush! hush! Whisper who dares!
Christopher Robin is saying his prayers.

THE COUP D'ETAT

A romantic story surrounds "The Secret of the Coup d'Etat' which Putnam's issued recently under the editorship of the Earl of Kerry with a foreword by Philip Guedalla. The book is a collection of letters which passed on the eve of the coup d'etat which made Napoleon III the little Emperor of the French between Napoleon, his half-brother, the Duc de Morny, the Count de Flauhault and various other of the conspirators. For years, while historians sought to record the true facts surrounding the conspiracy, the letters lay hidden among the archives of the Earl of Kerry's family, which is descended from Flahault. It was only recently that they were brought to light. They throw a new light on the parentage of Napoleon and leave no doubt that Morny was the son of Flahault. Incidentally, they bring to light new facts concerning Victoria and Palmerston.

RECENT BOOKS

THE HIGH ROMANCE. A Spiritual Autobiography. By Michael Williams. The Macmillan Company, New York.

This is a new and revised edition of an earlier work, with a supplementary chapter giving some account of the author's activities during the interim. We are also told of a still earlier story of the author's checkered career written while that lover of infinite variety was temporarily experimenting with various forms of what he now describes as "neo-paganism." Through newly revived religious scruples the author renounced his fundamental intention of unhampered self-revelation and, therefore, excised much of his matter, relegating this to the religious confessional, where he came to believe that it properly belonged. He also concluded that the genuine "high romance" is not the full and candid revelation of the self with the view of thus assisting in the creation of a better social order by exposing the vicious effect on human character of the older system, but is rather a quest for an acceptable answer to the question of whether God exists and, this gained, to further ascertain His relation to men. Michael Williams found what he sought in the dogmas of the Roman Catholic Church in which he had been baptized, instructed and confirmed, but from which he had later lapsed into a succession of forms of the aforesaid neo-paganism. Since, as he says, "to get other people to share his convictions is the prime desire of the convert," the latter portion of this work is duly devoted to that end.

Although apparently lacking the decisive gift of ordered lyric utterance, Michael Williams is nevertheless a miniature Poe. He belongs in the Poe category by virtue of his consuming love for and his keen desire to create beauty, while his nature is also saturated with morbidity and ruled to his hurt by wayward emotions, appetites and passions. Such easily swayed and deflected natures almost inevitably crave the support of a strong temporal organization with many binding rules and regulations. To individually meet and master temptations, "make these crouch beneath his feet, and so be pedestaled in triumph" is not their ideal of spiritual duty.

MARBACKA. By Selma Lagerlof. Translated by Velma Swanson Howard. Doubleday, Page & Co., New York.

Marbacka is the long-descended name of a small Swedish estate, which was the birthplace of the celebrated Selma Lagerlof. Miss Lagerlof tells us that it was originally a mere hill sater or "cow-camp" to which the milch cattle of some valley farmers were driven for summer pasture and where a hut or a number of huts were built for the use of the attendant dairymaids. The author conjectures that a young couple with small means, who were attracted to the place by its fertile soil, running stream and extensive prospect became its first permanent settlers. Early in the eighteenth century it was inherited by a clergyman and then came down through a line of farmer-pastors, but was finally inherited by the author's grandmother, who broke the clerical tradition by marrying one Daniel Lagerlof, who was "in trade" and so remained for several years after his marriage, occasionally visiting his family in their mountain home.

Lieut. Lagerlof, Selma's faher, was a genial, kind-hearted and honorable man, much esteemed in the community, but by no means a wizard of finances. However, he managed to keep his estate intact and it is now the property of his gifted daughter. In this series of sketches she describes with wit and charm the members of her immediate family, the old servants and the occasional visitors. Many amusing incidents are related which touch upon the ancient Scandinavian superstitions and traditions.

The final chapters are devoted to a pathetic comparison of the delightful celebrations of her father's birthdays during his lifetime, when the whole community came uninvited to his home in order to do him honor and present their good wishes and contrasts these happy occasions with the recent centenary of his birth, when his daughter journeyed alone to place a wreath on his neglected grave.

GOLDEN BALLAST. By H. de Vere Stacpoole. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.

Mr. H. de Vere Stacpoole might be accused of literary taxation for revenue only. Picking up "Golden Ballast," expecting pulsing pages of glorious description and the rest of the Stacpoole stock in trade, we find what?—a good story, some likeable characters and a mystery which leaves off being a mystery just about as soon as it starts.

No, we are not quarreling with Mr. Stacpoole; we are merely saying as politely as possible that "Golden Ballast" is not up to his usual mark. But then Mr. Stacpoole has set a pretty high mark with "The Blue Lagoon," "The Garden of God" and the others of that long line of stories whose scenes are laid amid familiar waters.

"Golden Ballast" concerns one Richard Sebright, a demobilized soldier at loose ends; Sheila Dennis, who is lovely and capable and all that; Larry, her shadow, an Irishman of parts; Wilfred William Corder, who has more money than he knows what to do with; various other more or less shadowy characters, and the mystery of the "Baltrum," which is found doing houseboat service off Hildesditch with bars of gold as ballast.

Sebright is seeking a small boat and adventure, finds the gold, takes Sheila and Corder into his confidence, and finds adventure in full measure in trying to sell the gold after Corder has bought the boat. The story shifts quickly across the Atlantic to Havana and thereabouts. As for the mystery of the gold, how it came to be used as ballast, and why the two original owners of the boat are found dead under mysterious circumstances, all this we leave for the reader.

EXIT DONALD OGDEN STEWART

Now, as a matter of fact, we do not mean that Mr. Stewart is leaving our midst. He has, in reality, just arrived, but we are merely trying to be funny in Mr. Stewart's own way by saying just the opposite to what we mean.

Our humor is, we admit, forced; forced by the fact that the word "arrives" will not fit in a two-colmn headline.

Mr. Stewart's own brand of humor is not of this variety. It is spontaneous, lively, laugh-provoking. But like all good humor it carries a sting in its tail.

Grant Overton in his "Authors of the Day" gives what he aptly calls "A Parody Outline of Stewart," with the life of that struggling young author written by himself. We give the following extracts from it for the enlightenment of those of our readers who have not read it.

"Donald Ogden Stewart was born in Columbus, O., on November 30, 1894. . . . At the age of 14 he was sent to the Phillips-Exeter Academy because it was a good preparatory school for Harvard. In the fall of 1912, Mr. Stewart entered Yale.

"Mr. Stewart was graduated in 1916 and selected a certain large public-service corporation as the scene of his future success. It was his desire to start at the bottom and work up; the first half of this wish was readily granted him. After a brief, inspiring visit with the head of the corporation, Mr. Stewart was sent to the Birmingham (Ala.) office. . . . While in Birmingham, Mr. Stewart took a keen interest in his job and read the complete works of Anatole France, George Moore, Fyodor Dostoievski, Henrik Ibsen, Gustav Flaubert and many others. He also intended to read the Alexander Hamilton business course, but did not quite get around to it before he was sent to the Pittsburg office.

"In Pittsburg, Mr. Stewart took a keen interest in his job and read the works of Leo Tolstoy, Friedrich Nietzsche, G. B. Shaw, Thomas Hardy, Joseph Conrad and others. . . . He was just on the point of reading the Alexander Hamilton business course when he was sent to Chicago. Aften ten months in Chicago, Mr. Stewart joined the Navy. . . . This experience was invaluable and Mr. Stewart came out of the great war a deepened man.

"His old position with the great corporation awaited him and Mr. Stewart went back to the work of the world in the spring of 1918. He was sent to the Minneapolis office, where he took a keen interest in his job and read the works of H. G. Wells, Havelock Ellis and H. L. Mencken; met F. Scott Fitzgerald, and led two cotillions. He was also preparing to take up the Alexander Hamilton business course when he accepted employment in Dayton, O., with a financial organization.

"He spent a delightful year in Dayton, where he learned to play golf, and read the works of Max Beerbohm, Saint-Beuve, Casanova, Swift, James Branch Cabell, James Huneker and William Congreve. On December 30, 1920, he read the first volume of the Alexander Hamilton business course, after which he decided that he wanted to go in for literature." He went.

WHERE IS ANGKOR?

There seems to be some uncertainty as to the location of the deserted city of Angkor of which so much has been written lately in magazines and newspapers and which is also the subject of one of the season's best travel books, "Angkor the Magnificent" by Helen Churchill Candee. Angkor is situated in Cambodia, once a powerful kingdom in extreme southeastearn Asia, bordering on Siam. Cambodia is now part of the general French Protectorate of Indo-China. The country has scarcely been explored and little was known about it until the mystic ruins of Angkor were found, indicating a high order of civilization that had been left centuries ago to perish in the encroaching jungle.

THE SPACIOUS DAYS OF SPAIN

"The Conquest of the River Plate," which Doubleday, Page & Co. publish, is the history of that South American wilderness, into which Cunninghame Graham penetrated as a youth in quest of high adventure in the unexplored heart of a new continent. The memories of those glamorous years which led him to write "The Conquest of New Granada" color this record of the conquistadores who blazed a trail of conquest in the new world during the spacious age of Portugal and Spain.

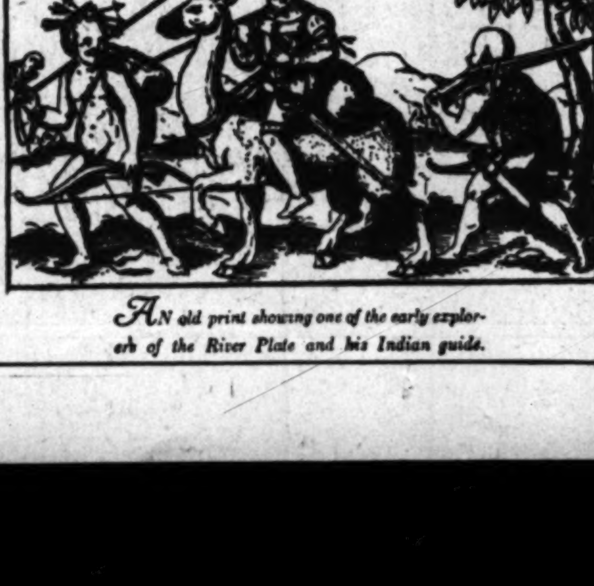
In an ingenious apology to the critics, Mr. Graham states that it has been his object "to present some of the conquerors of the River Plate as human beings, and try to show that, taking into consideration the times in which they lived, they did not differ greatly from ourselves.

"We lay the flattering unction to our souls, that our adventurers in the spacious days of Queen Elizabeth were on a different moral plane from that on which the adventurers of Spain and Portugal strutted their little hour. The same belief, but altered for national consumption, is held in Portugal and Spain, and in their histories (tell it not in Gath) the Englishman quite often is the villain of the piece, and he deserves to be, for their historians pick out the Northerner's ill deeds and pass his better actions over, just as we do in writing of Pizarro or Cortes.

"Still, it is a dogma of our historic faith that we were never as those Spanish publicans.

"If by good luck, I have been able to present an unbiased picture of the curious events and of the extraordinary men of whom I treat, my labor will not have been lost."

The book is illustrated with a series of old prints showing incidents of the conquest of the Plate Valley.



An old print showing one of the early explorers of the River Plate and his Indian guide.

LITERARY GOSSIP

Frederick Warde, in collaboration with Prof. B. F. Sisk of Columbia University, has prepared a work intended for use in our public schools, entitled, "Shakespearean Studies Simplified." The association of Mr. Warde and Prof. Sisk is a happy combination of actor and scholar. The former for many years was an impersonator of Shakespearean characters, on the stage, the latter an experienced teacher in universities and superintendent of public schools. The book is being published by Bunker Molyneaux & Frost, Inc., Fort Worth, Tex.

Louise Jordan Miln who has helped interpret for western readers the beauty and charm of the East, tells in her new book "The Soul of China" a touching incident of a woman's devotion to her cats. There are no old maids in China for every girl is married to some one or some thing. Su-Feng Ts'z-an, was married to an antique vase. In her loneliness, she lavished all her love on a family of cats and when she was forced to sacrifice them so children might live during a terrible famine, she raised a pagoda to their memory. It is a temple of malachite and jade and one of the oldest and most curious in China, for in every carved edge, cats of ivory and majolica with jewelled eyes and gold-tipped whiskers form a perpetual reminder of their mistress's love.

Kuno Franke in an article in the Atlantic Monthly recently said, "The constantly widening influence which Count Herman Keyserling, as the outstanding intellectual figure of today, is exerting upon the German mind seems a pledge that the remaking of the national type for which he and his kind are working is bound to become a reality." Over a year ago Count Keyserling's "Travel Diary of a Philosopher" had sold over 50,000 sets in Germany. Now J. Holroyd Reece has made an authorized English translation of this work which will be published simultaneously early in 1925 by Jonathan Cape in London and Harcourt, Brace & Co., in New York.

Readers of Edith Wharton's Old New York have found singularly delightful the first of the four books—that entitled "False Dawn—the 1840's." Its story of the young man whose artistic taste ranged beyond the canons of his generation charms by its picture of the lover of the Italian primitives' paintings, and also of his family and friends who thought such tastes madness. As a matter of fact the story is a delicate and subtle underwriting of a situation that comes about wherever taste and appreciation of the arts is in process of development. All of which is brought to mind by the fact that Mrs. Wharton's story, "False Dawn," is being used by the Art Department of one of our big colleges as supplementary reading conducive to appreciation of the art of the Italian primitives.

E. P Dutton & Co. have in press and are expecting to issue early in the coming year the autobiography of Samuel Gompers, "Seventy Years of Life and Labor," completed so shortly before his death.

"A Child's History of the World," that history for nine-year-olds "and up," has been reprinted recently, the Century Company reports.

Laurence Stallings, literary editor of the New York World, has been saying some very striking and cordial things about that unique book of children's verse, A. A. Milne's "When We Were Very Young," which the Duttons recently published. Giving his readers some advice about what books to buy for their small sons and daughters, nephews and nieces, he said of the Milne volume: "In the event you buy this book for your small niece, you might give her a celluloid doll from Woolworth's and keep the volume for yourself, reading it aloud to her sometimes when she calls. It is the most distinguished contribution to child literature since Walter de la Mare's 'Peacock Pie.'"

In "The Lyric West" has appeared an interesting review of the new volume of verse by Nellie Burget Miller, "In Earthen Bowls." Mrs. Miller is a poet of the West; in fact she is poet laureate of her native State, Colorado. "In Mrs. Miller's volume beauty is predominant," says this reviewer. "Although her poems presuppose a definite philosophy, they do not present philosophical problems; although they manifest a keen observation of the facts of life, they do not present these facts in the manner of the realists. Here is a poet, simple, wholesome and real, singing her joys and griefs in genuine lyrical poetry. Here is lyric poetry in the true sense if we mean by lyric both musical and personal. Easy fluency and melodiousness mark her verse; there is an utter absence of anything learned or sophisticated. There is at once a certain elevation and a certain simplicity."

Minton, Balch & Co. have announced for early publication the English translation of "Lenin" by Leon Trotsky. This is put forth as a truthful picture of the great leader, a frank criticism of the soviet government and a startling expose of its weaknesses. The publication of this book in Russia is now considered the real reason for Trotsky's exile.

Andy Adams, author of "The Log of a Cowboy" and "Reed Anthony, Cowman" (Houghton Mifflin Company,) writes in The Southwest Review, "The cattle industry was a primal factor in winning the West, and has proved to be an inviting field for pen and pencil. Several societies in various western States are now gathering the State's legends and thus lending a valuable aid to a future literature." Mr. Adams himself is a well-known writer of cowboy stories about which those who know the old West say "They are as true pictures of ranch life as any yet written."

Donn Byrne's "Blind Raftery" has reached its twenty-first thousand, the Century Company reports.

STORIES ABOUT STORY-TELL

Ford Maddox Ford Gives His Personal R[illegible] Joseph Conrad and Sherwood Anderson R[illegible] Reminisces of His Struggle for Self-Ex[illegible]

BY THOMAS F. FORD

JOSEPH CONRAD. A Personal Remembrance. By Ford Maddox Ford. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

When the silence closed over Joseph Conrad and the ship that bore his great soul dipped over the horizon and into the vasty deeps of the unknown English literature lost one of her modern master craftsmen. But though his golden pen, from which flowed winged words, is stilled many volumes richly laden with the fruits of his genius remain and his vogue as a teller of tales increases.

For years Conrad was but a name to the great bulk of readers. Only a few of the most discerning among the critics were at all cognizant of his work. But gradually he emerged from obscurity and took his place among the elect; then as time passed he became more widely read, till finally his last book, "The Rover," inched into the best-seller class.

The present book by Ford Maddox Ford, the subtitle to which is "A Personal Remembrance," is not a formal biography, but a series of informal and gossipy sketches in which the writer, who was both personal friend and collaborator of Conrad's, gives us a picture of the great romancer that reveals him, not as a remote high god of letters, but a struggling and harassed human being, meeting life's frustrations much as many of his great characters met them, and like them finally giving up the ghost with a brave, if slightly bitter, smile.

"Conrad was Conrad," says Mr. Ford, "because he was his books. It was not that he made literature; he was literature, the literature of the Elizabethan gentleman adventurer . . ."

There is much in the book concerning the novel "Romance," in the writing of which Mr. Ford collaborated. It appears from this account that the tale was originally written by Ford. He, at Conrad's suggestion, a suggestion apparently inspired by Edward Garnett, agreed to undertake a rewriting of the novel, Conrad to do the part of it having to do with ships and men of the sea. There is a wealth of humor in Mr. Ford's account of his reading his original draft of the story to Conrad, who, it appears, groaned and ejaculated at the many false notes he seemed to find in the work done by Mr. Ford.

Some idea of the drudgery Conrad made of authorship may be gained from Mr. Ford's account of Conrad's spending two whole days in pondering, analyzing and discussing the use of the words "azure" and "serene" in the following sentences in "Youth," one of the short stories in the volume of that name: "And she crawled on, do or die, in the serene weather. The sky was a miracle of purity, a miracle of azure." In such a case the average sloppy writer might have chosen the words "blue" or "calm." But not Conrad. These two words just fitted his purpose, giving the proper cadence and the exact shade of meaning.

Conrad labored over his work. He first thought out his words in French, now and then reverting back to his native Polish, and then it was necessary to express the thought in English. He seems to have been obsessed with the notion that the English language was a rich and perfect vehicle for thought expression and not the poverty-stricken makeshift that it is when words are essential to the expressing of delicate shades of meaning.

While Mr. Ford has given us a great deal of himself in this work—too much it seems to me—he has nevertheless given us the very marrow of Conrad the man. His picture of Conrad, his body wracked with pain, his very soul tortured and harassed by his financial difficulties, is one that makes us ashamed for mankind. It will pour into the laps of its merchant princes wealth, power and position, but its artists are left to eat out their hearts in penury and want.

The writer's purpose, as stated in the foreword, was to write, not a formal biography, but to project Joseph Conrad as [illegible] he revealed himself [illegible] being during many [illegible] intimacy. RECENT DOINGS AMONG WRITERS

Forster is delighted and somewhat astounded by the success of his "Passages to India" in America. Considering the remoteness of the theme to the interests which America has at heart, and the fact that it is at the same time a theme which should interest all thinking Englishmen, the fact that it has had a larger sale in America than in England could not have been predicted by the cleverest prophet. Harcourt, Brace & Co., who published it early this fall, report that it is now in its tenth printing and that the demand for it is steadily increasing.

"Beau Geste," a vivid adventure story of the French Foreign Legion by Capt. Percival C. Wren, is a January publication of the Frederick A. Stokes Company. Capt. Wren, himself, has served in the French Foreign Legion and an earlier story of the Legion—"The Wages of Virtue" containing some of the same characters is now appearing on the screen. The author has also been a trooper in a crack British cavalry corps and during the late war served as a captain in the Indian army. He has given a true and exciting picture of courage, self-sacrifice and wild adventure in the almost incredible life led by the mercenaries of the Legion.

George C. Henderson, whose book "Keys to Crookdom" is just out, is a newspaper man whose investigations of crimes and criminals have given him the extraordinary knowledge of crooks and their ways displayed in his book. He has played an active part in the detection of many criminals. Only recently a court put the finishing touches on the career of a "degree seller," who endowed him as a doctor of divinity while the criminologist was investigating mediumistic frauds. After Mr. Henderson had used this degree to learn the secrets of a clairvoyant gang, he asked the District Attorney to issue a warrant for the degree seller. After the District Attorney had investigated the case, he said: "Congratulations, Dr. Henderson." And the astounded author learned that the degree he had bought was legal under the lax State laws and that, willy nilly, he was a reverend doctor with all the rights pertaining thereto.

Minton, Balch & Co. announce for publication some time in February "Big Crops from Little Gardens," a book on vegetable gardening by A. B. Ross. Mr. Ross, who is an authority on gardening and a former agriculturist of the United States Department of Agriculture with a knowledge based on the practical experience of twenty-five years, has made a departure from the usual gardening book. This volume, which explains technically how a small plot of ground may be made to yield four times the normal crop, should be an extremely useful guide to all vegetable gardeners and an inspiration to the scientific farmer.

The Century Company announces a third printing of "With Lawrence in Arabia."

A German translation is now being made of Jim Tully's hobo autobiography, "Beggers of Life," (Albert and Charles Boni) and it will be published by the Fischer Verlag. The translator Ulrich Steindorff, has also done the translations of Kipling and Mark Twain's autobiography into German.

MORELLI BACK

Naldo Morelli has just returned from a brief vacation at San Diego following his completion of the featured role in "The Son of Cain."

Love Triangle Bobs Up Even in Film of Horses

"The eternal triangle—"

The critic, satirist, judge and philosopher have all wailed about the tendency of mankind toward getting mixed up in three-cornered love plots. It's terrible, positively, they say—as they run out to lunch with their private secretaries.

Although it is the avowed intention of Hal Roach, in making the second spectacle picture with Rex, the king of wild horses, that "Black Thunder" shall be the most beautiful drama of the year 1925, it is possible that a few of the more astute of America's critics will see in the love story of two wild horses a most pointed satire on the "eternal triangle" that authors so commonly exploit.

This is what one might call a subtlety, if one felt analytical. Anyway, "Black Thunder," directed by Fred Wood Jackman, is the story of a splendid black stallion of the hill country, a beautiful grey mare and a horrible "speckled" horse who is indubitably the "heavy." And right at the present moment Hal Roach, F. Richard Jones, his supervising director; Warren Doane, general manager; H. M. Walker, title editor; Thomas Crizer, film editor; Jackman and other leading lights of the lot are not quite settled on the question as to whether "Black Thunder" should be a tragedy—or have a happy ending!

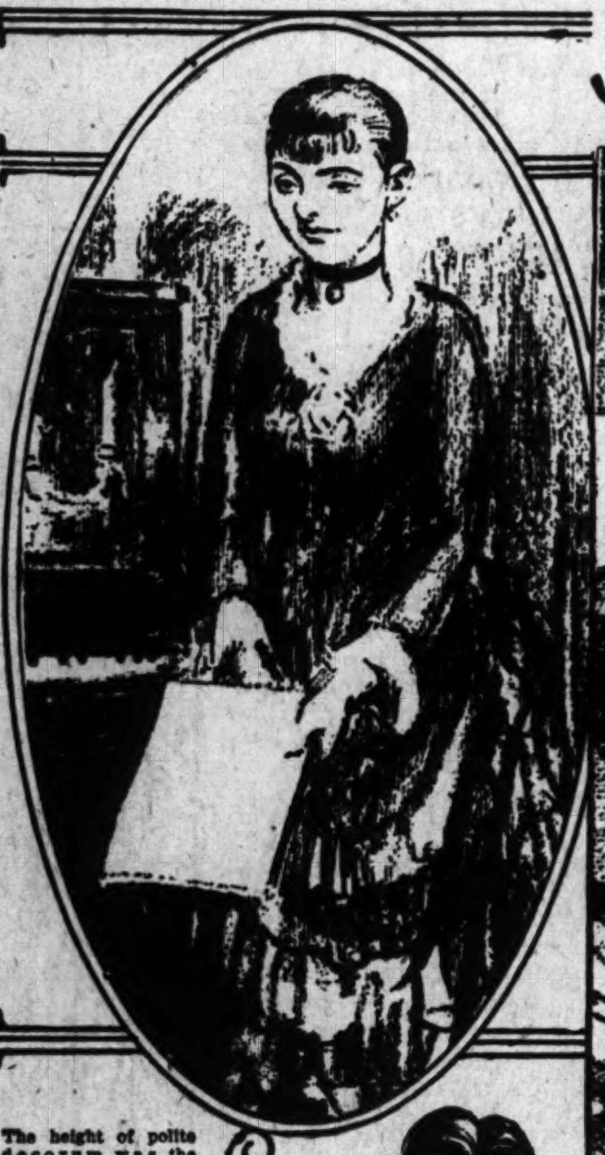
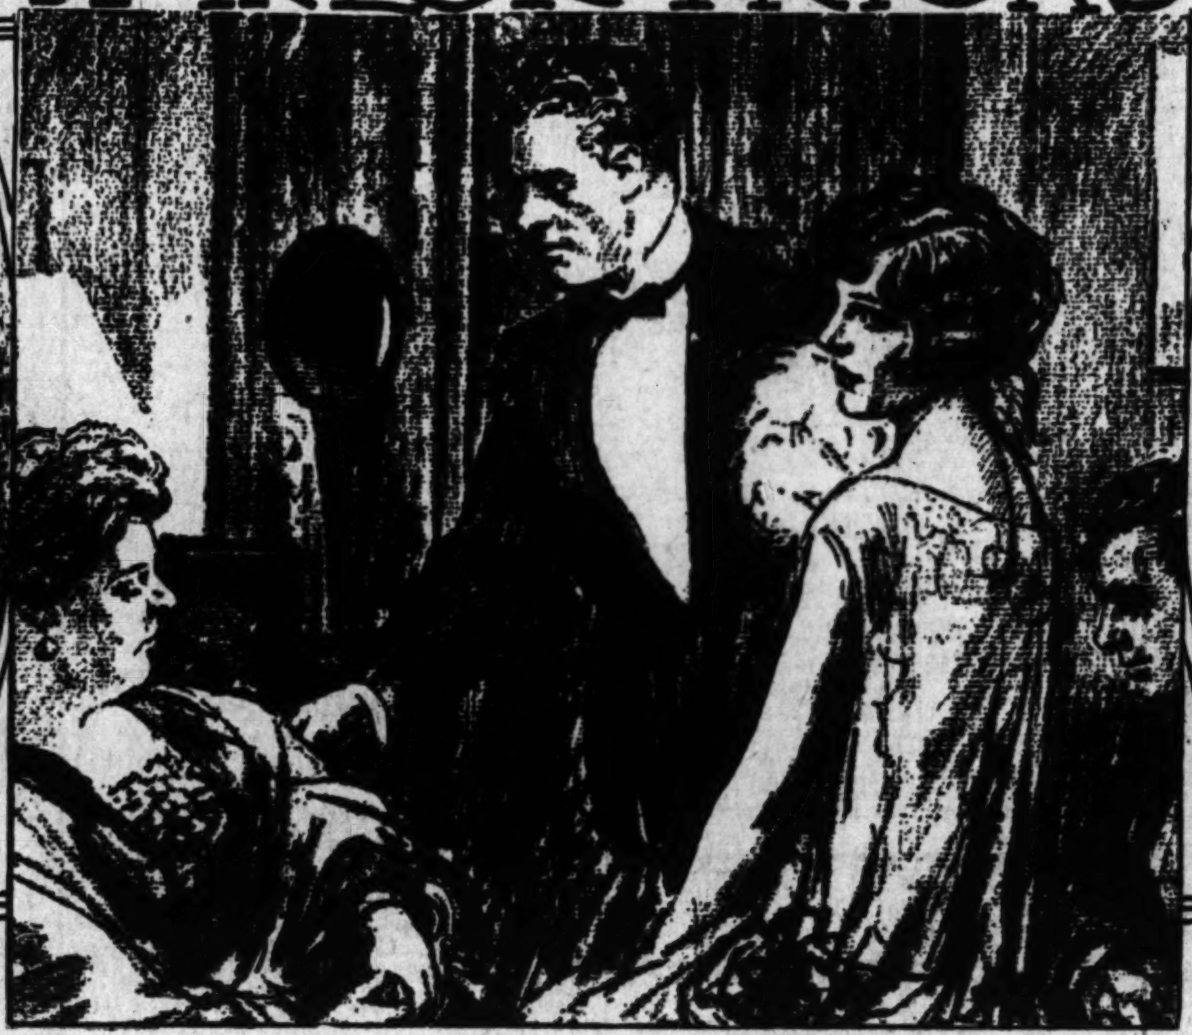
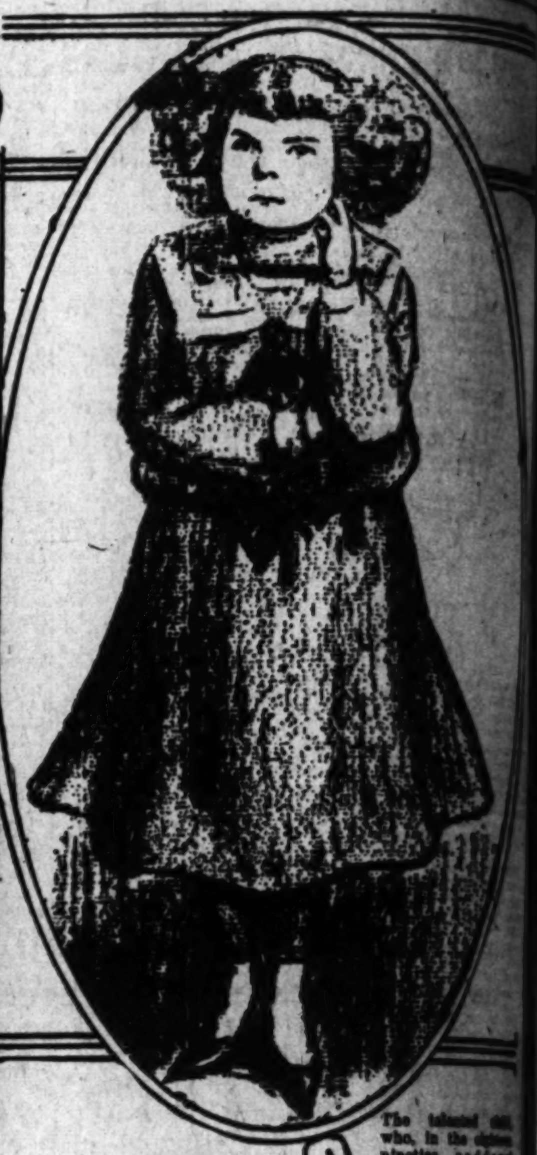
PARLOR TRICKS



The height of polite decorum was the young lady of the late eighties who played trick pieces on the piano at the behest of her hostess. "Carnival of Venice" and "Moss Roses" were always asked for, with "Listen to the Mocking Bird" (with variations) as an encore.



In 1925, no matter what brand of parlor trick you possess, it won't do you a bit of good, that is, unless you get on the broadcasting end of a radio. That's your only chance of a hearing.



The talented child who, in the eighteen nineties, saddened many a drawingroom group with tragic recitations. She was strong on "The Burglar's Child."

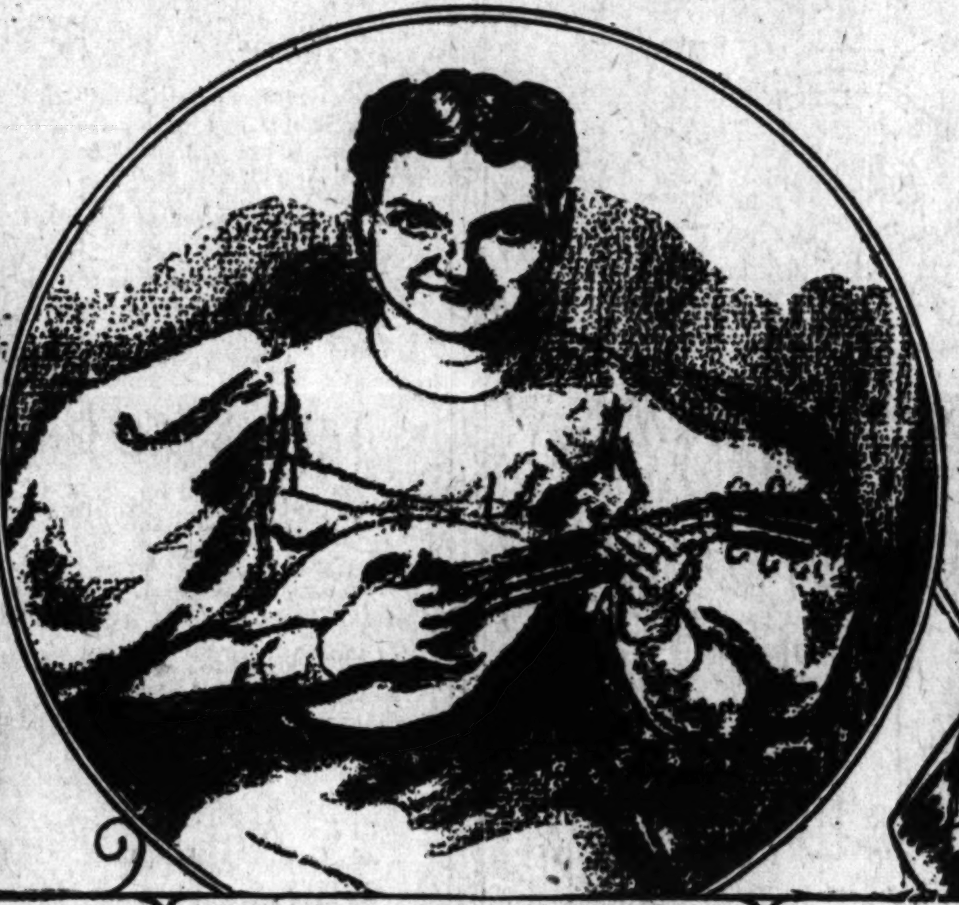
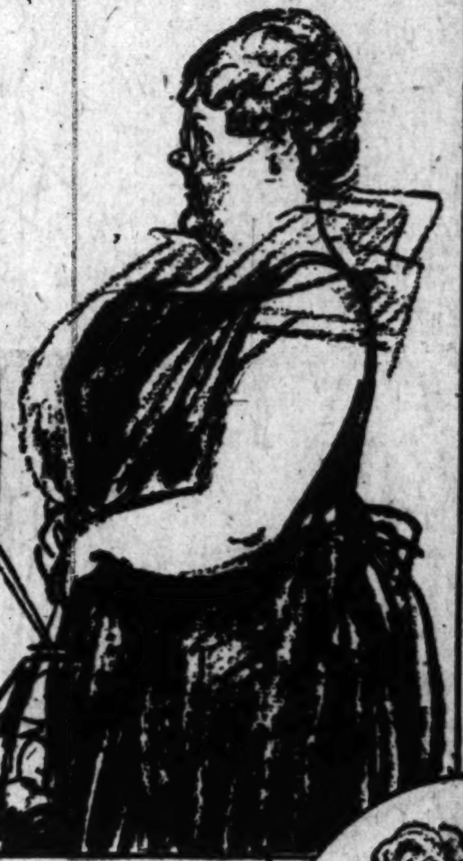
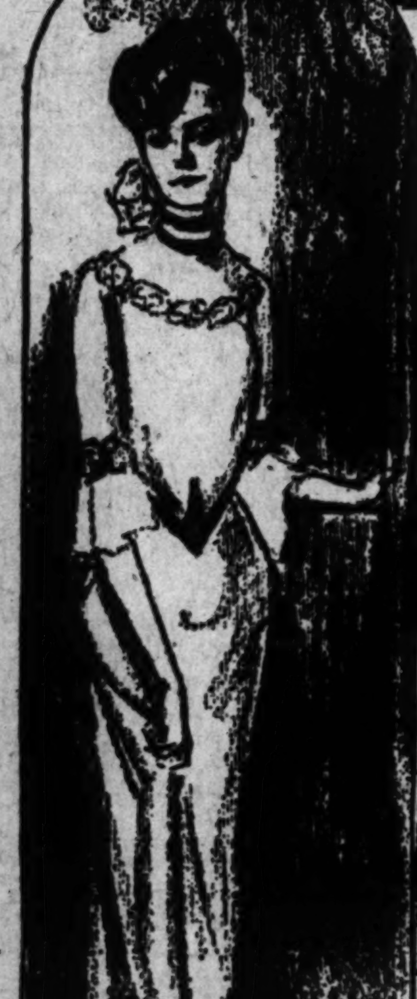
Twenty years ago, there were talented young men who could get up and give an imitation of almost everything from a steam roller whistling to another steam roller — to a buzz-saw sawing timber, or a gramophone. They were in great demand.



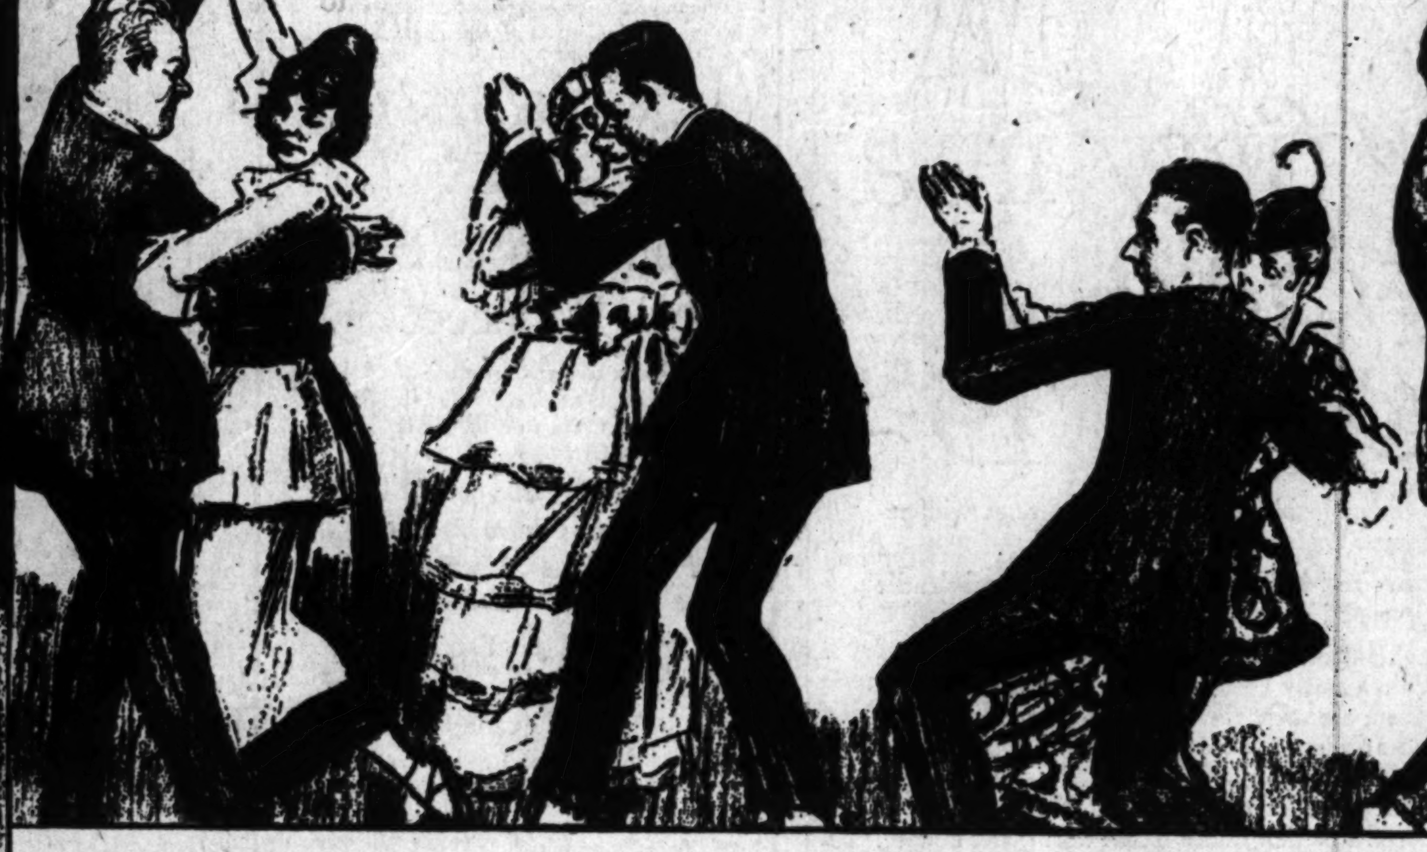
In 1895 the mandolin and a sweet girl graduate just seemed to go together. This lovely, lovely Wellesley girl is playing her own accompaniment and singing, "First She Gave Me Candy, Then She Gave Me Gin," etc., which was considered very roguish in 1895.



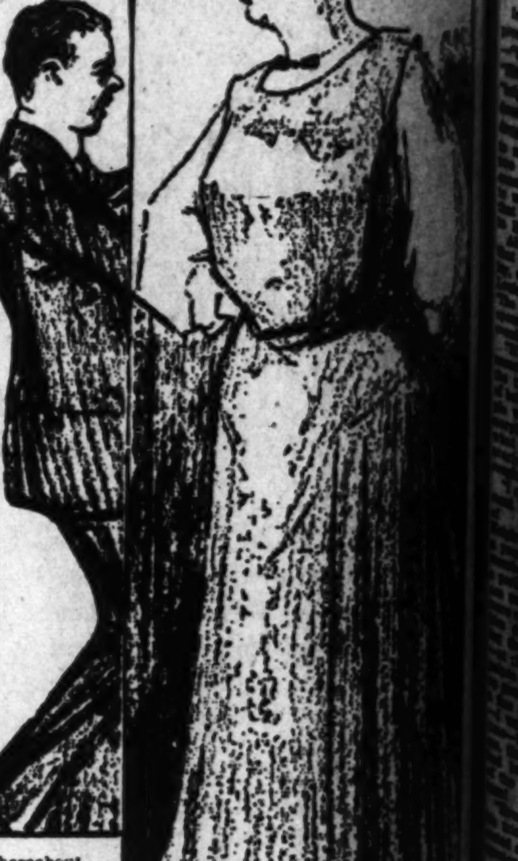
The big noise, so to speak, in 1918, among those who could be relied on to entertain — was the war knitter. She had it on good authority from her [illegible] buck private [illegible]timately, that all the nurses at a [illegible] army hospital had been convicted of pro-German tendencies and had been taken out in the back yard and shot one morning at 4 a.m.



The drawing room soprano of 1902 was always ready to do her share when urged. No classic stuff for her. She knew what the boys liked,—gave them "Nancy Brown" and "Good Old Summertime." The big hit, however, was, "Mary Green, Sweetest Little Girlie Ever Seen, Light and Airy, Like a Little Fairy," etc., etc.



In 1914, parlor tricks were at their trickiest. The young bloods of the period who knew all the intricacies of the tango and maxixe were in great demand at tea dances.



The popular authoress of 1908, or thereabout, used to give readings from her works to a select few and once started it was hard to stop her.

STAGE STAR SUCCEEDS IN VAUDEVILLE

Howard Kyle, Veteran of American Theater, Will be Seen at Orpheum

Vaudeville audiences, according to Howard Kyle, the American actor, at the Orpheum this week in Paul Gerard Smith's one-act play, "The House at the Crossroads," have a spontaneity and loyalty unparelleled by audiences of the legitimate theater. In all his years of the stage, says Mr. Kyle, and his years on the stage have been many, he has never found a more gratifying response than he is meeting on his present engagement.

"It is a real delight to play to vaudeville audiences," Mr. Kyle says. "They are so genuine and they react so sincerely to what they see and hear. If they like you, you know it. They are not afraid to demonstrate their approval, and they are not ashamed of their emotions."

Mr. Kyle, who has been on the stage since he was a youth, is steeped in the traditions of all that is best in the theater. He belongs to that class of actors who reach the high places by years of steady climbing, rather than by sudden and eccentric leaps. He spent twelve seasons playing Shakespearean and other classic repretoire, and augumented his acting experience by intensive study outside the theater.

After he had served what he refers to as his "apprenticeship," he joined the company of the famous Mme. Modjeska and remained with her for three seasons. Mr. Kyle was characterized by the famous foreign actress as "the most versatile actor she had ever met."

When Mme. Modjeska presented Sudermann's "Magda" for the first time in the English language, Mr. Kyle created the role of the rector, playing opposite the star in the title role.

Mr. Kyle is famed for having originated the part of David, the boy hero in "Way Down East," which played for two years in New York. He also achieved great note in the title role of Clyde Fitch's beautiful play, "Nathan Hale," in which he made a coast-to-coast tour over a period of three seasons. Although that was many years ago Mr. Kyle still has "Nathan Hale" friends all over the country, who are delighted to see him on his vaudeville tour.

Among his other notable achievements have been a tour through the South and West in a revival of "Rosemary," and joint stardom with Rose Coghlan in a revival of "Diplomacy," for one season.

In addition to his accomplishments as an actor, Mr. Kyle is also a playwright. He appeared at the old Madison Square Theater, New York, in the star part of his own play, "The Greater Lover," based on incidents in the life of Mozart, the composer.

Farce Comedy at Majestic in Its Third Week

At the Majestic Theater this afternoon that seagoing farce comedy, "Just Married," will begin the third week of what is announced as a limited engagement.

The play is attracting capacity audiences, for it teems with that sort of amusement that makes a theatergoer's evening an entertaining one. Its theme of a slightly bibulous young man getting into the stateroom of a young lady is one that always makes for plenty of fun, and "Just Married" is no exception to the rule. The lines of the play are extremely funny and the situations the kind that arouse hilarious laughter.

Edward Everett Horton as the tipsy young man keeps his audience in an uproar throughout the entire action of the play. It is an ideal role for Horton and he makes the most of it. Dulcie Cooper is delightfully appealing in the role opposite Horton and convinces one that "love at first sight" is no misnomer.

The supporting cast includes such players as Barbara Brown, Thomas Chatterton, Henry Shumer, Fanchon Everhart, Winona Wilkes, Walter Emerson and others.

"Outward Bound," the dramatic sensation of London and New York last season, is announced as the next attraction at the Majestic.

Star Distressed by Gift of Bear From Argentine

Ruth Clifford, who is playing this week in Universal's production, "The Tornado," at the Forum Theater, is worried. About a week ago she received a notice from one of the steamship companies that plies coastwise to South America that there was a crate for her at their San Pedro offices. The notice went on further to say that the company would be very much obliged if she would come down and claim it as soon as possible.

Naturally, Miss Clifford was curious to find out what was in the crate and she lost no time in presenting the notice. Imagine her consternation to find that the present was from a gentleman by the name of Ramon Maria Manuel Gonzales Jesus Corillo y Santiego, living in Buenos Aires, who requested that she accept the gift from him in admiration of her screen beauty.

Strange sounds issued from the crate and when it was opened, what should appear but a cub bear! Miss Clifford was delighted with the gift, but when she took it home the bear refused to be friendly with her two Angora cats. She loves the cats and wants to keep the bear, but Ramon Maria Manuel Gonzales Jesus, etc., neglected to send any instructions with his gift.

DOROTHY MAY LEAVE

Dorothy Dwan has been invited to take part in a peageant of independence which will be held in Philadelphia early this spring. The eastern metropolis is Miss Dwan's birthplace and the motion-picture-theater owners of the city want her to head the cinema section of the pageant in conjunction with the Quaker premiere of her first feature-length production, "The Wizard of Oz." Miss Dwan hasn't decided whether she will make the trip or not.

NEW COUNCIL IN FILM CITY

Body Acts on Building Program Planned by Universal to Extend Over Eight Years

Universal City this week went into the hands of a new administration. The "city council" patterned on the City Council of a municipality, and under which all structural work, street work and general improvements are handled, was reorganized with Julius Bernheim, general mangaer, as "mayor" and Norman Sprowl, business manager, as council chairman.

The council consists of Councilman Elmer E. Sheely, city architect, in charge of all architectural plans and Arthur E. Shadur, city engineer, in charge of waterworks, sewers, lights and power and public utilities; Archie Hall, in charge of building permits and inspection; Councilman Witt Deming, safety engineer, and Councilman Bert Martin, city surveyor, in charge of all building lines.

This council, organized exactly as the council of a larger city, will sit on all projected improvements, which embrace a construction program for the next eight years.

MAYOR APPROVES

Every project is passed on at a council meeting, and a procedure is adopted with Sprowl, as assessor, tax collector and treasurer, passing on the finances involved. The project is, when completely worked out, sent to Bernheim, as mayor, for final approval.

Universal City is a little island of land entirely surrounded by the city of Los Angeles, but itself separate from the larger municipality: Universal has its own police force, with Oscar Martinson, former police chief of Minneapolis, as chief, and its own fire department, of which Arthur Shadur, city engineer, is ex-officio chief.

EXPANSION PROGRAM

The problems the new council is now handling are the series of permanent structures just started as the first unit in a $50,000 expansion program. These include a new stage, 150 by 300 feet in dimension and 50 feet high, to be the largest stage in the industry; two movable technical stages large enough to accommodate the replica of a battleship deck, a new steel wardrobe building, a new water system and underground electrical and telephone conduits.

The new expansion program, which deals only with permanent buildings, covers a scope of eight years, with permanent structures to be added every year. The first unit is being hurried in preparation for the forthcoming $5,000,000 production schedule for this year.

the original saying, in England, was 'the goose honks high'—meaning that the wild geese were taking wing for the southland, signaling the approach of winter.

"Later the phrase was changed to 'the goose hangs high,' indicating that everything was serene. Just where they hung the goose to guarantee their serenity I have been unable to discover."

Whether the geese, "honk" or "hang," the fact remains that Beach has written an exceptionally sparkling commentary on American life, and it is excellently played by a Louis O. Macloon company, which includes, besides Keightley in the role of the father of the family, such personable player folk as Effie Ellsler, Florence McAfee, Phillips Smalley, Leslie Fenton, Margaurete Cullen Landis and others.

VAMPIRE ROLES MORE FUN BUT PAY IS LESS

Screen heroines receive more money for their efforts, but the vampires have more fun, it is said. So Lilyan Tashman, who has played both types is now at a loss, for she has reached that point in her career when she must choose one or the other. Having just completed a featured vampire role in "Declasse," Miss Tashman has two engagements for new pictures offered her. In one she will be a leading lady, in the other a vamp. She likes the latter roles better because they generally require more acting ability—but the other roles pay better.

FERGUSON BACK ON SCREEN

Casson Ferguson is making his screen comeback in "Cobra," in support of Rudolph Valentino. He has an excellent part in this Ritz picture.

JEWISH ART THEATER IS SUCCESSFUL

Vilna Troupe of Players to Give Two Productions Weekly Here

The Vilna Troupe of Jewish players will present two productions weekly for the remainder of this season at the Gamut Club Theater. This policy is a result of the general support of the art theater movement among local Jewish people. Plays in Yiddish will be put on at the Gamut Club every Wednesday and Sunday evenings.

The Vilna Troupe, organized in the town of Vilna, Lithuania, eight years ago, has played in Berlin, The Hague, Paris, London, New York and other capitals. Upon its original Los Angeles appearance some time ago at the Biltmore Theater, the company was induced to contract for a year's stay on the Pacific Coast by a number of local people, who were instrumental in organizing the Yiddish Art Theater Association of Los Angeles. The movement has met with instantaneous support, and in addition to its series of productions locally, the troupe has played successful engagements in Fresno and Sacramento, and will appear at San Francisco and San Diego within the next two months.

Ellis Ranen, formerly with the Rockefeller Foundation and the American Red Cross, and a noted Jewish author and lecturer, is guiding the destinies of the theatrical company.

"The establishment of a permanent Jewish art theater in Los Angeles is now assured, with the success of the Vilna Troupe," declared Mr. Ranen. "We have completed negotiations through which we will take over our own theater, and are waiting only for possession for the consummation of the deal. With this foundation, we will be enabled to encourage Jewish playwrights, composers, writers, and other artists who, under present conditions, are unable to command a hearing."

Large Program is Planned for Century Films

With a program of fifty-four subjects scheduled for release during the current year, Century Film Corporation will enjoy greater production activity at its local fun-film plant during the ensuing year than it has in several years.

This is the announcement of Julius Stern, president and general manager of the concern, who is now actively supervising all activity at the Century lot.

Five units will contribute to the 1925 schedule of releases. Wanda Wiley, Edna Marion, Eddie Gordon and Al Alt will each be starred in a series of twelve productions, while little Arthur Trimble will be featured in a group of six "Buster Brown" pictures.

Sig Neufeld, production manager of Century, has already put the new schedule into effect, and the various comedy units will be kept active, with little intermission for several months to come.

"We are rushing production this year so that exhibitors may preview our comedies before booking them," explains President Stern. "Heretofore it has been the custom of exhibitors to buy comedies blindly. They would contract for a series of pictures not knowing just what they were going to receive from a quality viewpoint."

HER NEW USE FOR CANDY

Some people buy candy for the love of eating it. Madge Bellamy, film star, buys candy with tin foil around it, gives the candy to children and moulds funny little animals, "Jabberwocks" and the like, out of the tin foil. It's her idea of a good time.

During the filming of "Love and Glory," the Rupert Julian-Universal-Jewel production now playing at the Cameo Theater, Miss Bellamy became queen of the "nursery" group of players in the picture because of her generosity. She plays the featured romantic lead in the picture and a dozen or more youngsters have minor parts in many scenes.

Every day she would buy a lot of chocolates and distribute them to the children. Then, while they gathered around her, she would make animals out of the tin foil and tell them fairy stories.

"Love and Glory," an intimate story of romance and adventure, has its setting in a picturesque French village. It is an adaptation of the famous novel, "We Are French," by Perley Poore Sheehan and Robert Davis.

Featured with Miss Bellamy are Charles De Roche, Wallace MacDonald, Gibson Gowland, Ford Sterling, Priscilla Dean Moran and Charles De Ravenne.

CHILD CRITIC OFFERED EXPRESSIVE OPINION

The first words that Baby Helen Hoge, 3-year-old screen starlet, ever spoke on a stage were "You are the bunk," and the line was purely impromptu. It happened in Chicago. Little Helen had been called on the stage by Gus Edwards, famous vaudeville star, to take a bow with him. Edwards had noticed the little tot in one of the front seats of the theater, and was struck with her poise. It was Helen's first appearance before so many people, and Edwards was taking a delight in teasing her on the stage—in vain. Helen never said a word. After asking several questions, which Baby Helen didn't deign to answer, Edwards finally said: "Well, Helen, how did you like my act tonight?"

"You are the bunk!" was the quick reply, and when he couldn't change her opinion of himself the noted revue artist retired with his find amid the roars of the audience.

WORKING HERE AGAIN

Bess Meredyth has started work on her first script since returning from Rome, Italy, where she made the adaptation and wrote the script for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "Ben Hur." The new story which will occupy the attention of the scenarist has been titled "Nothing to Wear." It is to be a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, directed by Hobart Henley.

OF ART AND ARTISTS

BY ANTONY ANDERSON

The Breaking of Nations

Only a man harrowing clods,
  In a slow silent walk,
With an old horse that stumbles and nods,
  Half asleep as they stalk.

Only thin smoke without flame
  From the heaps of couch grass;
Yet this will go onward the same
  Though dynasties pass.

Yonder a maid and her wight
  Come whispering by:
War's annals will cloud into night
  Ere their story die.

COLOR OF MEXICO IN CLARK PICTURES

Undaunted by the vaccination laws of Mexico City—he must have itched all over for a few days—Alson Clark set out, last year, to search for the end of the rainbow. That is to say, he journeyed into Mexico, where color lies everywhere in broken heaps, and where all the artists has to do is to gather it up by the brushful and arrange it beautifully on his canvas. For in Mexico a picture almost paints itself.

Almost, but not quite. Though the materials are everywhere at hand—though nature set the end of her rainbow here—it is really only the artist who sees them with appreciative eyes. Only the artist can pick up the broken bits of natural beauty and arrange them into the perfect mosaic we know as a work of art. The artist must choose and discard, even in Mexico, perhaps especially in Mexico.

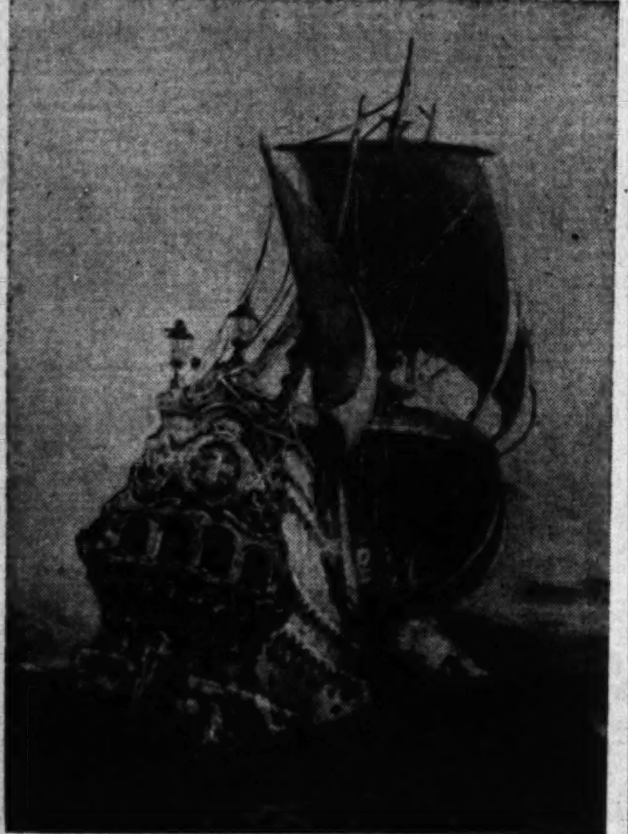
Twelve of Alson Clark's canvases are now on exhibition in the Biltmore Salon. We may rejoice in the fact that all twelve are from Mexico City and cities and villages near by. None is out and out landscape. Each has the "human interest" that goes with architecture, with hovels and old walls, churches and palaces, streets and the traffic in them.

For, though Alson Clark often paints landscape remarkably well, his finest and most intimate touch is always to be found in his street scenes. Here his strongest, as well as his tenderest sympathies as man and artist find expression. These are what he truly loves with an abiding passion. He has painted Charleston, New Orleans, and many cities of France, but never more delightfully than he has painted the cities of Mexico. For it was there, as I said, that he discovered the enchanted spot, where the rainbow becomes earthbound.

The color of Mexico is like a bouquet picked at random from a luxuriant garden—rose and blue, vermilion and green, lavender and yellow, in haphazard combination. So, at any rate, we are led to suppose from Clark's pictures, though we may also suppose that his arrangements of all this prodigality of color are not in the least haphazard. For, though all his canvases are brightly hued, each has its own harmony. Clark discovered red roofs to be as beautiful as the heroine of "So Big," found cabbages, and he makes good use of his knowledge in such pictures as "The Roofs, Cuernavaca," and "Roofs, Cuernavaca," which, in spite of similarity in titles, are not much alike except in the places devoted to roofs.

But if our artist found the tiled roofs of Mexico beautiful, he found the old gateways and old street corners even more so. Here is beauty of line as well as beauty of color, for if Spain borrowed much from the Moor, Mexico borrowed everything from Spain, adding an Aztec or Inca ornament or two on her own account, as in "Carmen Gate," with its sleeping donkeys, picture positively oriental in effect; in "Cathedral Gate," white-clad figures seen against rose color; in "Morelos Vista," with its grill railing; in "The Lure of the Fonda," walls washed with pink and orange.

"Soly Ombra," gives us the warmest of sunshine on a gateway, the deepest of shadows in the foreground street. "Street Corner, Mexico City," shows us colors that are duskily red and deep orange. "The Road of Cortez" offers us a panorama of red roofs, green wooded valley and distant mountains of lapislazuli—the colors that Mexico plays upon in all their delicate and vibrant gradations, the colors that Alson Clark arranges with such skill and understanding on his canvases.



"Spanish Galleon," by Frederick A. Pawla

This attractive and unique canvas is on exhibition in the Cannell-Chaffing galleries, the work of one of the painters of Santa Barbara.

COSMIC ROMANCE OF THE REDWOODS

The Sequoia Gigantia, whose roots were knitted deep in the soil of France, and which lived to be 7000 years old, is now to be found only in beautiful petrefactions. There are no more redwood trees in France. But the Sequoia Sempervirons traveled westward, stopping for some thousands of years in Greenland, then seeking the warmer latitudes of California, its habitat ever since that remote day. A rather stunted offspring is living and thriving on a small island near Japan. And these are all the redwoods now left in the world.

But California still has a great many of them, and a "Save the Redwoods League" has been formed to preserve for another ten thousand years these stately monuments to cosmic energy. Some of out Sempervirons are over 3000 years old—the original native sons and daughters of California. In Humboldt county they march in solid phalanx for thirty miles along a highway near Eel River. But the strip of land they are forced to occupy is too narrow for their sustenance; it must be widened by public purchase. You can imagine the need when you realize that almost every soldier in this magnificent army is 300 feet tall, with a girth of seventy-five feet.

Art and the Sequoia have, it is to be feared, very little in common. This unbending giant becomes a refractory model, never lending itself gracefully to the artist's scheme for a picture. Most artists, indeed, let it severely alone; they are overawed by its towering grandeur. Not so Martella Lane. She has lived for ten years at Fortuna, within a stone's throw of the redwoods, and she has learnt to love them with such deep devotion that her love has conquered her fear. She paints pictures of them standing singly or in battalions, that her records may carry her own enthusiasm and love for the Sequoia Sempervirons to others, thus making Save the Redwoods League a force as mighty as the tree itself.

Mrs. Lane is now in Los Angeles. An exhibition of a dozen of her paintings of the redwoods is being held in the new gallery just opened by Kanst on the topmost crest of Hollywoodland—a most appropriate place for such an exhibition, since it commands a panoramic view of all the landscape glories of Southern California—cities, valleys, hills, mountains and ocean.

Martella Lane is an earnest worker for the league. With her talks and pictures, the one full of romantic information and data, as well as practical suggestions, the other glowing with the color and light that play around the redwood forest's immensities, she is making the league grow in membership with remarkable rapidity, and we are now assured that the standing army at Eel River will never be disbanded—will never, indeed, lose a single soldier.

It will perhaps be your privilege to hear Mrs. Lane, for she spreads beneficent propaganda everywhere—in schools and at all the women's clubs. By the same token, you are hereby urged to join the Save the Redwoods League.

WATER COLORS AT THE INTERNATIONAL SHOW

England, Sweden and Germany have contributed admirable water colors to the number of fifty-five or sixty to the fourth international exhibition at the Los Angeles Museum. The other seventy numbers are American.

Whether our native water-colorists or those of Europe are the better remains an unanswered question, mainly because no adequate answer is forthcoming. Their methods of work are not radically different, their approach to a given subject is very much alike. The Europeans, like the Americans, show a marked and increasing tendency toward the use of clear washes of color, employing the paper for lights. They seem to feel that if one wants to use opaque color one might just as well pick up the oil brush and be done with it.

Though illustrations are not numerous in the present exhibition, those that are shown are remarkably attractive. Among them is a series of nine by Cecile Walton, charming and imaginative interpretations of Polish fairy tales. Some of the decorative studies are also very beautiful in rhythm of lines and placement of colors.

The contributors from San Francisco, San Diego, Seattle and Denver should have been spoken of last week. Some very good things come from all these places. From San Francisco we have Rowena Weeks Abdy's "Mission San Juan Bautista," Ray Boynton's "In the Park," Cora Boone's "A Breakfast Room," William Gaw's "Point Lobos," Florence Alston Swift's "Adobe Cottage," Calthea Vivian's "Kelp Burners," William Watts's "Rich Man's Funeral." From San Diego, Hope Mersereau Bryson's "Hollyhocks," C. A. Dunn's "In the Valley of Tizapan, Mexico," C. A. Fries's "Before Sunup," Leslie Lee's "Sunset Effect, Desert Canyon" and "Canyon Stream, Desert Mountain," Annie H. Pierce's "Dahlias." From Seattle, Elizabeth Cooper's "The Liner," Alfrida

"Old Timer," by Henry L. Richter

One of the water colors in the exhibition of the Water Color Society of California held at Los Angeles Museum to the end of the present month.

Menard has six or seven medium-sized canvases emanating a very calm Olympian atmosphere. They are precisely and punctiliously painted. Besnard surprises with three canvases, all superior to the one at the Carnegie International. "A Summer Afternoon" is languid in mood, painted with fine reserve in a low scheme. "The Torch" is an interesting extreme of the other, high in color scheme and impressionistic.

Sureda has some remarkably intense heads from Algiers.

Devambez's "Struggle of the Angels and Demons Around St. Anthony" and his "Popular Theater" reveal him as a fanciful satirist and a satirical realist, as well as a fine painter.

And I could go on and on, as one does there through finely lighted and hung galleries, past the many concentrated inspirations of painter and sculptor, while from an adjoining gallery come soft melodies of an organ.

NEW TALENT FOUND IN SIERRA MADRE

On Wednesday, the 14th inst., an exhibition of paintings was held at the Woman's clubhouse in Sierra Madre representing all local talent, much of it hitherto undiscovered.

Fourteen canvases were shown by Dr. Lloyd Krebs, among them "Alone in God's Country," a scene from Arizona. Studies from Laguna Beach and a large study of rocks and pines and deep blue bay at Carmel, were particularly fine. Trees in the autumnal tints of the East were also notable features of Dr. Krebs's first public exhibition.

James N. Hawks showed an interesting still life of russet pears and Japanese persimmons. Harold F. Roberts, still life paintings and a number of original designs. Catherine S. Tuttle, a group of charming water-color flower studies. Borman, eighteen water-color landscapes of California. Ella Shepard Bush, a group of miniatures, including her well-known portrait of Robert Browning.

Examples of bookbinding, with its craft implements, were exhibited by Leah P. Fletcher. Handmade jewelry and other craftwork by Helen Sadler Starr. Decorative panels by Mrs. Bonodalle.

An excellent exhibition of school art arranged by the supervisor of art at Sierra Madre, Miss Susted, contained cut-paper original designs and fine examples of pottery. A large exhibit of the work of students, ranging in age from 7 to 17, in the Estudio de la Hermosa Vista complete the list.

This is the germ of an are movement which means much to the city of Sierra Madre, which will soon have an active art club.

The "bid sale" at Stendahl's is moving along at a fine pace and offering little excitements of its own. Some of Southern California's best painters are represented in the show. I have hitherto made no remarks about any of the pictures, feeling that to do so might be unfair. Though why I should suppose that my opinion could possibly have any weight with a prospective purchaser, I'm sure I don't know. Next Sunday, however, I may say something, since the "bids" will be practically all in.

An article by Rose E. V. Berry on the work of Guy Rose, "A Painter of California," appears in the January number of the International Studio. It is profusely illustrated, one of the illustrations, "Point Lobos," being in full color. Another painting by a Los Angeles artist, Kathryn Woodman Leighton's "Grinnell Glacier," which is shown at the Biltmore Salon, has also won the honor of being printed in color; it appears on the cover of the current number of California Southland.

FRIENDLY COMMENT BETWEEN OURSELVES

We have Frank Geritz's word for it that the joint exhibition of etchings and block prints which he and Arthur Millier will open tomorrow at Cannell-Chaffin's will be voted the best show of their energetic career. We don't doubt it, for they always "keep a-moving." Geritz, by the way, "begs to announce" that he has just moved into an interesting new studio overlooking Echo Park, 701-B North Belmont avenue, and that this afternoon he will be "at home" to all his known and unknown friends.

There's a popular superstition—founded on experience—that a woman must never be caricatured. If you make her look funny or grotesque she'll proceed to make you look funnier. Then how does Harry Carr get away with it in his delightful page in every Wednesday's Preview? For the pretty stars are certainly caricatured there by Bob Day's sly and slithery pen. Which reminds me that Joseph Greenbaum, who's as clever as Bob, once tried it on one of his women friends. She never forgave him. He never came to her house again. What charm against danger does Harry wear?

The sudden death last week of George Bellows, at the early age of 42, is a distinct loss to American art, for he was one of the most gifted and original of our sons. As a painter he combined beauty with tremendous power, and he dealt with crowds and types with all the sardonic verve of a Goya. It was fortunate that Furman of the Biltmore had a collection of his amazing lithographs in his possession. These are now on exhibition in the salon. Later, a more comprehensive exhibit of Bellows's work in black and white will be held there.

Friday Morning Club has made a most discriminating selection from the fourteenth annual show of the California Art Club. But the canvases were far too numerous for one exhibition in the Friday Morning Club's gallery, so they have been divided into two sections. The second instalment has just begun showing. You will find many of your favorite canvases there.

Southwest Museum exhibitions are always attractive. The one now running consists of works from the Art Alumni of the Arthur Dow Foundation, University of California, Southern Branch. The quality of the work shown proves the beneficent value of the Arthur Dow Foundation—a tribute to the far-reaching influence of this famous instructor in art.

Weeks ago I typed an article on the rise of the modern block print, but exhibitions of all sorts have been so numerous that no place could be found for it. However, I hope to run it very soon now. And you are thereby reminded that an unusually attractive showing of block prints is held at the Public Library by Bessie Ella Hazen. Do you ever read Louise George's California Life? If you do, study and enjoy the cover, which holds a fine block paint by Frances Gearhart, a print that is sometimes issued in one color, sometimes in another, but always effectively.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY MINIATURE PAINTERS

At the annual meeting of the California Society of Miniature Painters, held last week in the rooms of the Friday Morning Club, the following women were elected officers for the coming year:

President, Laura M. D. Mitchell, 207 South Fourth street, Alhambra; first vice-president, Martha Wheeler Baxter, Santa Barbara; second vice-president, Marie Marguerite Frechette, San Diego; secretary, Gertrude Little, 4417 Prospect avenue, Hollywood; treasurer, Ella Shepard Bush, 223 West Laurel avenue, Sierra Madre.

Arrangements were made for the annual exhibition to be held in the Biltmore Salon from the 21st inst. to February 15. From there the exhibit will proceed to the gallery of the Friday Morning Club.

Any new or visiting miniature painters who wish to submit work for this exhibition may obtain cards from Miss Laura M. D. Mitchell, president.

Beauty Sleep is Newest Fad in Hollywood

Count that day lost whose low descending sun doesn't find some new innovation in Hollywood. Now it's the beauty sleep.

The late Anna Held had her famous milk baths and now Anita Stewart has introduced the beauty sleep.

All the Hollywood girl stars are taking it up, especially since they learned Miss Stewart adopted the custom on the recommendation of a physician who told her it was the greatest beauty preservative known.

Miss Stewart, since she began work in the B. P. Schulberg production, "The Boomerang," in which she is being supported by Bert Lytell, found that the newer methods of efficient production of pictures in record time are not only fatiguing but seem to make the actors and actresses look drawn at times.

Consequently she consulted her physician who advised her to take a beauty sleep of at least thirty minutes every noon, whether she is working or not but under no circumstances to miss the sleep if she is before the camera.

"It was impossible for me to take the nap at first," said the Schulberg star, "but after the first five days I dozed away and since I have no trouble. And the results have been wonderful. I always feel refreshed for my afternoon scenes and when I have to work at nights I stand the strain without trouble.

10% Less for 2 More Days —MONDAY & TUESDAY!

Liberal Credit

If it is more convenient for you to pay for your stove in regular monthly payments throughout the year instead of all at one time, talk it over with us. We will be glad to arrange liberal credit terms for your convenience.

JUST two final days when you can make this saving yours! It's a once-in-a-long-time-chance to be able to get such radical reduction on All A-B models. Choose the style you wish and the price will be 10% lower than usual—but only for two more days. Every stove of the usual A-B perfection—the non-rust Wilder metal ovens—the patent gas-saving, heat-centering burners—the scientific exactness of every detail of construction—these can be yours and at 10% less than the usual moderate prices if you choose your stove Monday or Tuesday.

This Small Model $39.35

IT IS WORTH WHILE to hurry your selection when you can get this range, usually $43.75, at such a saving. If you need a small stove this is the ideal model. Cabinet type, oven size, 13x20, white dirt pan, broiler pan, splashers and white doors and all the famous A-B perfections. The same model without the white splasher regularly $39.75, and in semi-porcelain $53.50—now..10% less

A Popular Size at $64.15

USUALLY $69.59 and now $64.15—Of course you want to buy at once when you can save so easily! The oven size is 13x20 and yet the range is compactly small. An addition to any kitchen with its glistening white surfaces as you see it here. The famous A-B features embodied in its construction assure long life and satisfactory service. In black with white splasher, usually $51.50—in semi-porcelain, usually $62.75, both models now......10% less

Roomy & All White $116.55

AND ON A larger stove you save all the more! This fine big stove for example, is usually $129.50—This saving of $12.95 is worth while. Oven size, 20½x16⅛ and either right or left as you wish—glass doors at no extra expense. Here it is shown in glistening snow-white porcelain. This same style in black with a white splasher, broiler pan and doors regularly $75—now...10% less

With a Warming Closet $144

PERHAPS you need the convenience of a larger stove and a warming closet as you see it in this model. You can save $16 if you buy this range in the next two days. See this model—all easy to clean white surfaces, oven size 20½x16⅛, with the convenient food and warming closet above. Included, of course, are all the features that make A-B the acme of perfection in gas ranges—and during this Clearance offered at..........10% less

Let Your OLD Range Help Buy You a NEW ONE!

If your stove is not giving satisfactory results—if it is old or worn or too small—send for our appraiser. He will tell you its worth and make you a liberal allowance on it towards any New A-B range at Barker Bros.

SALESMAN

Don't Overlook This Fact.

There is a sales campaign "on" in Los Angeles which is getting the money and there is absolutely no reason why you should not get your share.

Not stocks, units, real estate nor memberships, but something absolutely new, where sales resistance has been reduced to a minimum.

Your ability to tell the simple truth in a straightforward manner, and a willingness to follow instructions, are only requirements to assure you big success.

Many individual salesmen have made thousands of dollars during past few weeks and several high-caliber men are earning upwards of $5000 per month.

Direct leads will be furnished to four or five high-class security salesmen with some clientele of their own.

Come in and let's talk it over. This is unquestionably the greatest sales opportunity in Los Angeles and has already put hundreds of salesmen on their feet financially. Come early to our ground-floor location, 1056 SOUTH BROADWAY.

I WISH to interview a member of the Masonic fraternity or affiliated bodies in the following cities: Los Angeles, Fullerton, Anaheim, Santa Ana, Whittier, Riverside and Monrovia.

Experience and other qualities must indicate that you are fitted to take over the work of our membership committee in your territory. The qualifications are Executive Salesmanship and the ability to command $5000 per year or better. Only one of unquestioned standing in their community will be considered.

Phone Membership Office, Los Angeles, BRoadway 4444, for appointment.

CEMETERY SALESMEN

SALESMEN

Meet some of our producers—they are not "high-powered" whirlwinds, yet they are earning big money, from $50 to $500 per week, and UP. They just tell a straightforward story of how rapid turnover makes big profits on small sales—and it is easy to close. Come and and meet these people, ask them if they are making the money we say they are. Since January 1st, 1925, these producers have earned for themselves:

Bairnsom	$1619.80
Bailey	250.00
Barnes	275.00
Bernhart	500.00
Buckhart	1700.00
Campbell	400.00

SALESMEN

Here's something out of the ordinary.

Do you know you can make more money selling the right kind of real-estate than any other commodity? We have that kind. CLOSE IN, fully IMPROVED, great building activity, high-class neighborhood, everything right for a successful sale. We furnish solicitors for our salesmen, advertising, co-operation of sales manager and tract manager, pay top-notch commission, cash at time of sale. Our proposition is DIFFERENT from the others. You must have a car and be live, wide-awake with some experience, not necessarily real estate. A real opportunity to make money.
OLIVER & CARVER
1240 Pacific Mutual Bldg.

A MESSAGE TO REAL ESTATE SALESMEN.
Are you discouraged? Have you lost confidence in the real estate market or in yourself? The chances are that the fault is not yours (it isn't the market,) but the difficulties under which you are selling, location, price, too many salesmen and lack of proper support; I have three residential subdivisions located close in, everything built up around them, price way below anything in that locality heretofore offered; my sales force is limited to a few men per tract, varying according to size; co-operation all that can be expected; I need 5 more men to complete my force; you may be just the man. H. A. DOHARR, 601 National City Bank Bldg., VAndike 5505.

WOMEN'S ATHLETIC CLUB
829 S. Flower St.

EXCLUSIVE SHOPS
On ground floor

Unusual type of building. The club membership of about 2000, and seventy guest rooms, mean a group of worthwhile possible customers.

Flower St. is fast developing as an exclusive shopping district. In this block there is now a height limit hotel and the new L. A. Gas and Electric Bldg. visited by several thousand people daily.

SEVEN STORES OF VARIOUS SIZES TO LEASE

Attractive fronts, large windows, room for mezzanine, separate concrete basements, delivery entrance.
A most unusual opportunity for the firms fortunate enough to secure these shops. Nothing similar in the entire city.

DEPENDABLE USED CARS

IT IS MORE IMPORTANT TO MAKE A FRIEND THAN TO MAKE A SALE. THE SMALL PROFIT WE WOULD MAKE BY SELLING YOU AN UNSATISFACTORY CAR COULD NOT COMPENSATE US FOR THE BAD WILL THAT SUCH A SALE WOULD ENGENDER. WE WANT YOU A SATISFIED CUSTOMER OR NO CUSTOMER AT ALL.

FOR YOUR PROTECTION MAKE YOUR USED CAR PURCHASE FROM A REPUTABLE DEALER.

ANNUAL MEET OF BOARD OF TRADE

Tulare County Organization Elects Officers

New Irrigation War May be Started

Season Was Good One for Lindsay Distdict

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

VISALIA, Jan. 17.—The Lindsay-Strathmore irrigation district has added to its former application to the State division of water rights a request for permission to divert also from the St. Johns River as well as the Kaweah River, which alone was mentioned in the first request. This application was made September 10 but notices have just been received here. It and other applications now pending will be bitterly contested by property owners in the Kaweah district.

This action recalls the bitter legal fight of the Tulare Irrigation district against the Lindsay-Strathmore irrigation district for waters of the Kaweah delta. Superior Judge Albert Lee Stephens of Los Angeles county now has the case under advisement.

Sub Johnson of Visalia, president of Tulare county Board of Trade since its organization, was re-lected to that office at the annual meeting here. A. E. Miot was renamed secretary and F. W. Velie of Porterville was relected vice-president.

Considerable time was devoted to discussion of the huge relief map of California, unveiled at the Ferry Building, San Francisco, some time ago. It was the belief of the board that proper location of towns in the San Joaquin Valley is not shown and opinion was expressed that money being spent for the map was not justified under the present plan. Secretary A. E. Miot was instructed to take the matter up with the California Development Association, relative to suggested changes and improvements, before the organization continues with its expense allotment.

Among more important works of the board for the year were: Mass meeting called in conjunction with the farm bureau to outline a means of continuing the State water survey; subscription to the State relief map; work on the Sierra-to-the-Sea highway; attendance at the western division, United States Chamber of Commerce meeting, in Los Angeles; increased exhibits and lectures at the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce headquarters; representation at traffic rate hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission and the usual boosting through distribution of booklets and pamphlets.

J. Sub Johnson was named to represent the board on the West Side Highway Association, which is sponsoring construction of a new road from Tracy down to the West side.

RANCHER NOT GUILTY

VISALIA, Jan. 17.—A verdict of "not guilty" was returned by a jury trying the case of Fred Stuckert, formerly an orchardist near Kingsburg, on a charge of embezzling about $400. The charge was sworn to by A. T. Hine of Kingsburg.

Stuckert was brought back from Stockton after he had abandoned his orchard and resumed his trade of a plasterer. He was accused of failing to deliver four tons of peaches to the California Peach and Fig Growers in 1924, to have sold them otherwise and thereby to have defrauded A. T. Hine of Kingsburg out of the money which Hine claimed was due him and which, he declared, was to have been paid him by the peach association.

LINDSAY, Jan. 17.—Fruits of all kinds going out of Lindsay during 1924 totaled 3037 cars, according to records of the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe railroads. This included 2484 cars of oranges, 278 cars of grapes, 150 olives, sixty pomegranates, twenty-nine of grapefruit, twelve plums and eight lemons. Of the oranges 2089 were navels belonging to the season just closed.

This is an average of more than eight cars of fruit a day moving from the Lindsay district. If made into a long train they would extend a distance of twenty-five miles and would require a combined power of more than seventy-five engines to start them rolling.

It is estimated that with average prices which prevailed for the different fruits, that a conservative total of more than $4,000,000 should be returned to the community this year. Out of this will come cost of production and delivery to the railroads.

Lindsay district holds an important part in making Tulare county seventh in government figures for counties of the United States in value of agricultural products.

COMPLETES EXPERIMENTS

PORTERVILLE, Jan. 17.—Having completed five years of experimental work in Tulare county in soil analysis, irrigation and other cultural problems of the citrus industry, Gordon Surr, of the orchard management department of the Riverside Citrus Experiment Station, has returned to the south.

Surr conducted his experiments at the Ball-Emery grove southeast of Porterville, where he had seven acres under supervision; on a five-acre grove of the Kaweah Lemon Company at Lemon Cove, and in the Lindsay district.

Surr came to Tulare county from Riverside in November of 1919 on a five-year contract entered into by representative fruit exchanges, packers and shippers of the county, and the citrus experiment station. While Porterville constituted headquarters the greater portion of the time, he also conducted a laboratory at Lemon Cove for the past year and a half. He took as many as 479 soil samples and estimated that he traveled 50,000 miles by auto in this experimental work. He will complete data secured here after returning to the experimental station which will be published in bulletin or booklet form. This bulletin is awaited with interest by citrus growers.

Born in London, Surr came to America with his parents in 1884 and located at San Diego. He held several responsible positions in geology and kindred subjects, opening a private laboratory at San Bernardino which he operated for several years before becoming associated with the Riverside experimental station in 1915.

TO DEVELOP COTTON

PORTERVILLE, Jan. 17.—J. A. Harris, Imperial Valley cotton operator, who is starting a large cotton development project here, has begun leveling operations on an extensive acreage west of here. Two carloads of horses just arrived from Imperial Valley will be used in this work.

Harris also plans construction of a gin and oil plant on the Southern Pacific right of way in Porterville. In addition to the large acreage secured by him personally, or through associates, the Chamber of Commerce is said to be seeking another 1000 acres for cotton planting this season.

The southern cotton man and his party are inspecting other valley points before leaving for Los Angeles.

SEES CUT IN AIR MAIL COST

Congressional Witness Tells of New Plane That Can Carry Seven Times Present Load

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—An air-mail plane with a capacity seven times that of vehicles now in use has just completed successful night flight tests at the hands of the Postoffice Department, Clarence B. Chamberlin, president of an aerial express service at Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., testified today before the Congressional subcommittee investigating the nation's military and commercial air resources.

The new craft, said Mr. Chamberlin, uses a standard Liberty motor and with an improved body and wing structure, promises to cut the cost of air-mail transportation from $2.63 per ton mile to 65 cents per ton mile, as compared with an estimated cost of about 25 cents for similar service by land.

The witness described the improved mail ship as a combination of features which enabled it to descend at low speeds and by steep angles; to glide great distances in case of motor failure, and to maintain a speed of 135 miles an hour. It had a safety factor higher than craft now in use, said Chamberlin.

Today's session of the subcommittee concluded its hearings here. It will be resumed at Washington next Monday and, unless the appearance of important new witnesses requires its return to New York for additional testimony, a report will be ready for Congress by February 13.

Dr. George Bothezat, Russian inventor, exhibited to the subcommittee today motion pictures of the Bothezat Helicopter in helping to develop which the government spent $225,000 and was severely criticised by airplane makers.

Augustus M. Herring of Freeport, N. Y., said he had flown a glider at Croton, N. Y., in 1894, and a compressed air-power airship at St. Joseph, Mo., in 1898, said it was a waste of money for the government to experiment with full-size craft. Models could be built for a few dollars which will demonstrate within 1 or 2 per cent the merits of newly designed machines, he said.

Howard C. Elliott, chairman of the board of the Northern Pacific Railroad, testified that the steam and electric land lines did not fear competition in the air, although, he said, motor trucks and motor busses had cut heavily into railroad business because they escaped proportionate taxation.

Another witness was Godfrey Lowell Cabot, a cousin of the late Senator Lodge, and president of the National Aeronautical Association.

ACT ON SITE OF SUBWAY TERMINAL

Pacific Electric Men File Plea for Permit to Sell Hill-Street Lot

As the second step toward the construction of the subway terminal building on the site of the present Pacific Electric Hill-street station, the Pacific Electric yesterday applied to the State Railroad Commission for authority to sell the Hill-street property to the Subway Terminal Corporation for $705,000.

The transfer involves a portion of the 141-foot lot on Hill street now owned by the railway. The property extends through to Olive street.

According to the application the Pacific Electric proposes to retain part of the land, including a first basement twenty-nine feet below the street level and a twenty-eight-foot approach from the sublevel to Hill street. The company also proposes to reserve a strip of the property facing on Olive street, 141 by 194 feet, for waiting-room purposes.

Science Study Promoter Talks at High Schools

In the interest of humanizing science and stimulating an interest in scientific discovery, Alexander Williams, Jr., representing the Chemical Foundation, Inc., of New York City, has been addressing students of the junior and senior high schools of the city during the last week.

In addition to the talks to high-school students throughout the United States, the Chemical Foundation organizes contests in the different cities. Students who enter may submit a theme on the relation of chemistry to agriculture and forestry, health and disease, advancement of science for national defense, enrichment of life, and in relation to the home. These themes are submitted to a State committee which selects the twelve best for consideration by the Chemical Foundation committee. From the essays sent in by the different States six winners are chosen.

The prizes offered for the six best essays are scholarships for a full four-year course in any college or university which meets the approval of the Chemical Foundation committee. The prize-winning students are not required to take a science course, but may choose literature or liberal arts.

These scholarships were created by Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Garvan of New York City, who are also supplying the funds for the purchase of simple science books for public libraries, and the libraries of schools and colleges.

Stewart Estate Appraised and Tax Determined

Appraisal of the Lyman Stewart estate was completed yesterday by State Controller Riley and the State inheritance tax fixed at $2987. The bulk of the tax will be paid by Mrs. Lulu M. Stewart, the widow, who was bequeathed $97,340. The entire estate is valued at $255,607. Three children and seven grandchildren will share in the estate, and the Bible Institute will receive 25 per cent of the property, which is exempt from taxation. Mr. Stewart at the time of his death, September 28, 1923, was chairman of the board of directors

Fifth Street Car Franchise is to be Sold

The Board of Public Utilities yesterday recommended that a franchise be offered for sale for a double-track street railway line on Fifth street from Olive street to Flower street, and this report will be adopted and in due time the franchise will be sold to the Los Angeles Railway.

This will mean the removal of the tracks from Olive street between Fifth and Sixth streets, and the cars now using them will proceed west on Fifth street to Flower, thence south on Flower to Sixth and thence west on Sixth street. Ultimately the Fifth-street tracks will be extended westerly to Beaudry avenue.

CLIPPER'S FATE IS SEA ROMANCE

Survivor Relates Thrill of Midocean Fire

Owes Escape to Queer Turn of Sailor's Luck

Eight of Crew Perished in Open Boat

Those days have passed forever, when the tall clippers under the Starred Banner ruled the seas. Still, scattered about the earth, there are many of the old-timers who remember when the kick of the wheel and the slant of the deck in a gale meant something about the sea that the steel pulse of a wallowing steamer never can.

And of all these old fellows, whose salt-soaked hides won't let them stay ashore, there is one, down at Los Angeles Harbor, who seems startingly to typify the Sailor of the Sail. There is in his yarns a poignant touch that makes you feel he actually carries in his heart the fading heritage of those glorious days of the clipper ship era.

He is Capt. Patrick Ryan, now master of the schooner yacht Aurora, one of the finest craft of that grand sport born of the old windjammer days.

Fate, a few years ago, gave Capt. Ryan the great honor of the final fade-out that ended forever the glorious story of the clipper ships. Here is his chapter:

LAST CLIPPER

The clipper ship Aryan, launched at Phippsburg, Me., in 1893, was the last wooden sailing ship built in America. In her heyday she was as great a beauty as the Young America or the Flying Cloud and made a great name for herself in the Cape Horn trade between New York and San Francisco. Her beautiful lines and raking spars, surmounted by skysail yards, made her as haughty a ship as ever passed in the Golden Gate.

Early in the present century, after she had been condemned at New York, she was bought and refitted by Eugene P. Carver of the famous Maine shipping family, and placed back in trade, that there might be at least one of the old American clippers still on the seas. During the World War she was sold again, to L. A. Peterson of San Francisco, and placed in the Australian trade.

On June 2, 1918, the Aryan sailed from San Francisco on what was to be her farewell voyage. Capt. Hilmar Larsen was on her poop and "Paddy" Ryan was her mate. Before either of them saw San Francisco again their ship was to be burned under them in midocean, with a loss of eight of her crew.

"Paddy" Ryan, a sail-ship man since he was big enough to grab a clew line, was to be the last man over the rail of the last of the American clippers.

FIRE IN HER HOLD

The Aryan, with a cargo of flax and tallow, sailed from Wellington, N. Z., for San Francisco on December 18, 1918. Early on the morning of the 24th she was bowling along before a stiff westerly with skysails set when fire—the greatest fear of sailing-ship men—was discovered in her after-hold. She was a wooden ship, dry as tinder from the salt gales of twenty-five years, 600 miles from shore and laden with an inflammable cargo.

At 9 o'clock the flames broke through her after-hatches and climbed into her rigging and a half hour later the entire after section of the ship was in flames. At 10 o'clock Capt. Larsen gave the order to abandon ship, the crew taking to the three boats.

To a queer twist of Fate, coupled with a sailorman's superstition, Capt. "Paddy" Ryan owes his life.

Capt. Larsen took command of No. 2 lifeboat, assigned Mr. Ryan No. 1 and ordered Mr. Graham, the second mate, to No. 3. Just after his own boat had been lowered, however, the captain remembered that "Salty Sam," the ship's cat, had not been taken off and ordered Mr. Ryan back to bring him off—it being a seaman's superstition that if a cat be left aboard an abandoned ship her crew will never make land.

FRAIL CRAFT START

As a result of the mate's going after the cat, the captain took command of No. 3 boat, shifted the second mate to his boat and left No. 2 for M. Ryan. The three lifeboats put away from the ship and headed west for Chatham Island, bucking a heavy cross-sea that threatened every instant to swamp the tiny craft.

After dusk of the first day the lifeboat in command of the second mate, and carrying eight men, was never seen. The log of the mate, written in a notebook soaked with the brine of the South Pacific, finishes the chapter in graphic fashion:

December 24th, 4 p.m.—Captain took observation and gave position to each boat. All three boats were together, then set course W1-2N by compass for Chatham Island.

6 p.m.—Second mate's boat last seen at dusk, also saw the loom of the fire from the burning ship on morning of 25th, distance about sixty miles.

December 25th, 3 a.m.—Sailing side by side with captain. Fresh breeze and cross sea, boat shipping heavy seas. By the time got righted and on course No. 3 boat out of sight ahead. Ugly cross sea running from southard with easterly swell. Boat needing careful attention at both sheet and helm.

Two days later the survivors of the Aryan reached Chatham Island and were subsequently returned to San Francisco. The second mate, Thomas Graham, and the seven other men in his boat were never heard from.

Capt. Ryan had served five years on the Aryan, four of them under Capt. James McLaughlin and had made two passages around Cape Horn on her. He has been around "Cape Stiff" eight times, by the way, during his career as a sailor and has been twenty-one years in windjammers, including such famous of the latter-day square-riggers as the Harvest Queen, Eva Montgomery, the Erin, the Chillicothe and the Moshulu.

He has had a colorful career, spiced thoroughly with those hardships that only an old-time square-rigger man knew, but the great moment of his life was when he threw his leg over the rail of the old Aryan with the flames licking at his fingers and with "Salty Sam" under his arm—the last man to tread the deck of the last of the old clippers.

AIR RESERVISTS FLY

Pursuit Squadron Takes First Cross-Country Trip

BY C. N. BURGER
First Lieutenant, A.S.O.R.C.

The first cross-country flight of the new year for the Four Hundred and Seventy-eighth Pursuit Squadron, United States Air Service Reserve Squadron, with headquarters at Clover Field, Santa Monica, took place over the last week-end, when five planes and ten pilots and passengers left that field for Bakersfield. The return flight was made the following day.

Pilots and passengers who participated in the flight were, First Lieutenants Frank Barber, Harry Watson, Dean Farran and William Finley; Second Lieutenants Leonard Thomas, Charles English, K. K. Kinney and V. A. Grant; Sergt. H. A. Fieldhouse and Private C. H. Walkey. Lieut. H. G. Kenyon of the Regular Army Air Service and commanding officer of Clover Field, accompanied the reserve flyers in his DH-4 plane, with Fred Brown, chief mechanic of the field as his passenger.

The party was joined at Bakersfield Saturday by Col. Frank P. Lahm, Regular Army air officer of the Ninth Corps Area, who was en route from San Diego to his headquarters at San Francisco by automobile. A delegation of Bakersfield's prominent citizens met the flyers on their arrival. Several proposed sites for a municipal airport field were inspected and recommendations were made by the army men.

After an informal dinner, the Bakersfield theaters and several dances held open house for the men.

The flight home Sunday morning was made in unusual time, requiring a little less than one hour and twenty minutes, which is fast time for the training type planes used.

Cross-country trips will be a regular part of the training plans for the Four Hundred and Seventy-eighth Pursuit Squadron and for the Five Hundred and Tenth Attack Reserve Air Service Squadron this year, and much valuable data as to emergency landing fields, sources of gasoline supply, and other valuable data are expected to result. The headquarters of the Five Hundred and Tenth Attack Squadron is also at Clover Field.

Regular training for United States Air Service Reserve officers at Clover Field is entirely voluntary on their part, and from time to time is entered into enthusiastically by approximately 100 reserve officers in this vicinity.

Master Sergeant John H. McCabe of the Regular Army Air Service, was recently ordered to Clover Field from Crissey Field in San Francisco, and has been placed in charge of all the flying at Clover Field, both civilian and reserve, by the commanding officer. An operations office has been erected on the field where all pilots are required to register upon arrival at the field and upon departure therefrom.

Lieut. Oakley Kelley of cross-country-in-one-day-flight fame and Lieut. J. R. Miller of the regular establishment arrived at Clover Field last Monday en route to San Diego from Portland. A stop overnight was made. The following day the lieutenants again visited Clover Field, en route to their home in the north. Capt. A. G. Houghton and Lieut. L. L. Williams arrived during the week from San Diego in a De Haviland 4 plane for a short stay.

* * *

A board of Regular Army Air Service officers composed of Lieuts. Clarence P. Kane, Horace S. Kenyon, Jr., and C. C. Moseley convened last Tuesday at Clover Field, ordered to meet by the commanding general of the Ninth Corps Area, to examine applicants for appointment to a "flying cadet" course. Six candidates appeared before the board, who, if accepted for the cadet course, will be sent to Brooks Field, San Antonio, for preliminary flying training and then sent later to Kelley Field also in San Antonio for advanced training. If they pass successfully all examinations and meet all of the requirements of the flying cadet course, they will be discharged after being given commissions as second lieutenants in the Air Service, Officers Reserve Corps. Those found unqualified or unsuited for the duties of a flying cadet will be discharged from the service and will not be required to serve the unexpired portion of their enlistment period.

Wide Powers to be Given Zone Bodies by Bill

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 17.—Assemblyman Scofield, Los Angeles, will introduce a bill which will prohibit the erection of buildings of more than thirteen stories in height and will also provide for the creation in cities, counties and incorporated towns throughout the State of districts or zones in which zoning commissions would have sweeping regulatory powers.

Zoning commissions, under the provisions of the proposed measure, would be empowered to prescribe the space that must be occupied on the lots within the districts by buildings, would have the power to inspect regularly, order and enforce repairs or changes in construction in such buildings.

The bill is intended to correct conditions of congestion on the streets in certain areas within cities and promote safety from fire panic and other dangers.

SANTA CRUZ VOTES TO HOLD BEAUTY PAGEANT

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SANTA CRUZ, Jan. 17.—This city will hold a beauty pageant this year, it was made known today when the ballots were counted in connection with a refernedum held under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce. The vote was 135 in favor of the pageant, and 131 against.

MAY REPAIR CAPITOL

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) Jan. 17. Repair of the State Capitol, a building valued at $10,000,000 and which for forty years has had no overhauling, is under consideration by the State Board of Control. Fifty thousand dollars will be required to put the building in shape, according to Capt. W. R. Hendrickson, chief building in-

SCIENTISTS FIND DATA IN MEXICO

Pomona College Men Tour Lower California

Chain of Six Volcanoes is Among Discoveries

Fertile Expanses Reported in Ensenada

Returning from their motor journey nearly 200 miles below San Diego in Lower California, members of the Pomona College scientific party tell of many interesting experiences and new data procured in the interest of science. The party left Claremont late in December on their scouting tour which precedes several similar trips to be taken by scientific expeditions from Pomona College in the future.

A host of interesting facts were gleaned from the trip. Members of the geological group under Dr. A. O. Woodford, spent a day in the San Ysora Canyon iron mines that are rich in valuable ore. They also found an interesting fossil bed at San Quintin, 175 miles south of San Diego, making an excellent collection that will be added to the present geological collection at Pomona College.

Perhaps their most interesting find was an elevated plain very similar to the plain on which Perris, Cal., is situated. This plain is especially peculiar in that it is a flat surface of erosion that at some time by the earth's violent action has been uplifted. This is believed to be a new scientific discovery in the Baja California section.

Another queer formation noted by them was a line of six volcanoes, each approximately a mile apart, near San Quintin. According to Dr. Woodford, they are believed to be of much more recent formation than any of the extinct volcanoes found in certain sections of California and Mexico.

CACTUS SPECIMENS

The botanical study group of the party failed to gain much new knowledge on plant life as it was too early in the season, but several specimens of unusual cacti were found and brought back to Southern California by Marcus E. Jones. Another group of sociological students under Dr. William E. Hilton report finding several species of animal and insect life that are believed to be new.

Wright M. Pierce, official photographer of the trip, took several interesting photographs of old missions found along the route.

Two old missions constructed under the direction of Father Junipero Serra were found, one at San Vincente and the other at San Domingo. The latter is reported in much better condition than the old ruins at San Vincente. Both missions and surrounding country were carefully studied by Prof. Jose Pijoan, a member of the Pomona party.

FRUITFUL COUNTRY

In speaking of the country found below Ensenada, members of the group state that it is very similar to that found in San Diego county. Dr. A. O. Woodford commenting upon the section believes that it should become just as fruitful and productive as San Diego county if the people will gain confidence and trust in their present government. The scenery is especially beautiful and the bay at San Quintin is similar to the San Diego Bay.

The farther south the party went the more friendly they were received. At Ensenada they were given a royal Spanish dinner by the Mayor of Ensenada. Residents up and down the coast were exceedingly gracious and nothing but glowing reports of their treatment is given by members of the party.

The economic condition of the country is reported as fair. No frost has ever been reported below Ensenada and that section possesses a great future in the development of agriculture. Gasoline, although it sold at 30 cents a gallon in Ensenada, rapidly increased in value as the party went south until it retailed at 60 cents at Johnson's Ranch, nearly 186 miles below Tia Juana.

Roads are in fair condition and only minor trouble was experienced by the group. Six cars were used, each car being a unit in itself. An abundance of wild game was easily found along the route and the men were well supplied with fresh meat. Because of the overabundance of game the Ensenada section is becoming quite well known to Southern California hunters, many of whom have visited the section leaving Los Angeles Harbor on small boats.

Those who made the trip were: Dr. A. O. Woodford, Dr. Bruce McCully, Dr. Jose Pijoan, Charles Anderson from the University of California; Marcus E. Jones, Wright M Pierce, Dr. William E. Hilton, James Hamilton, Stewart Hinckley, Roger Walden, Ray Gillingham, Clifton Johnson, Selwyn Rich, Michael Pijoan, Howard Small and Pall Mathewson.

BOND OF CONVICTED SWINDLER DISSOLVED

EX-HEAD OF BANKING FIRM IS ORDERED BACK INTO CUSTODY

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—John J. Eiseman, recently convicted of illegal sales of stock of the Bankers' Mortgage and Discount Company, was taken into custody today and his bond of $50,000 dissolved when he was summoned before Superior Judge Louis Ward.

The judge said that the five bondsmen had represented themselves as owning property aggregating $500,000, whereas its value was not enough on which to base the bond. He directed that a charge of perjury be brought against the bondsmen. They are Theodore E. Purner, George E. Freeborn, Ollan F. May and Charles Lindebaum, with properties in Imperial, Tulare, Riverside and Madera counties, respectively, and Roy D. Stevenson, the location of whose property was unknown to the court.

Eiseman was found guilty on several counts and sentenced to more than forty years' imprisonment. As vice-president and general manager of the discount company, he was charged with having engineered stock swindles throughout California, the amount reaching thousands of dollars.

NEWS OF SOUTHERN COUNTIES

UNIONS WOULD TIE UP TOWN

Labor Leaders Issue Threats at Santa Barbara

Electrical Contractors Are Firm for Open Shop

General Strike of Builders May be Result

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SANTA BARBARA, Jan. 17.—A general strike of union laborers engaged in the building trades is threatened to break Monday morning if thirty-five nonunion electricians imported by the Santa Barbara Electrical Association are put to work at that time.

The lockout of journeymen electricians became complete today when the California Electric Company, the largest concern in the city, joined with the other contractors and paid off their men.

Another meeting of employers ended early this morning in which they decided not to yield, but to stand firm for the open shop.

"They will split the town wide open," a prominent union official said today, "if they insist on bringing in nonunion men. The building trades laborers are completely organized and they will not work on the same job with nonunion men."

Union officials charged that the trouble started several months ago when the electrical contractors organized an association to increase the cost of electrical work.

Last night's meeting of the contractors was attended by Jay Smedley, secretary of the Building Trades Council, who was told to inform the laborers that the contractors will 'stand firm to hire and fire whom we choose.'"

The contractors, according to Lewis I. McGeary, who presided at the meeting, told Smedley that the electricians' union had attempted to dictate to them in the choice of men, and that they were determined to maintain free choice.

Asked if they favored the American plan or open shop, the contractors asserted that what they wanted amounted to the same thing.

"If the contractors do not see the light and take the men back at once they are going to lose money," a labor official said today.

"There is no question of wages involved in the controversy, but there will be if the employers wait to negotiate with the union.

"Building is almost at a standstill because of the lockout and the pressure will be so strong on the part of general contractors that the electrical association will have to make peace to insure continued activity.

"If they don't do it, 1000 or more men will be out of work next week."

YOUNG MATRON DIES

Death Calls Prominent Ontario Woman

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ONTARIO, Jan. 17.—Mrs. Edna Ledig Draper, wife of Edward Blake Draper and popular young matron, died last night at a private hospital, 757 Nocta street, after an illness of several months, at the age of 32 years. Mrs. Draper, who before her marriage some eighteen months ago, was Miss Edna Ledig of Upland, was vastly popular among the younger set of that city and Ontario. She was a member of the governing board and an active and tireless worker in the Community Players.

Besides the widower, she is survived by her mother, Mrs. Bertha Ledig, and two brothers, Alfred and Wesley Ledig. Funeral services will be held at Draper's chapel Monday at 2 p.m., with Dr. Charles F. Seitter officiating, assisted by the Rev. M. M. Horsch. Interment will be in Bellevue Cemetery.

POMONA BOY VICTIM OF ACCIDENT, BETTER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

POMONA, Jan. 17.—Bobby Hodges, 11-year-old son of Mrs. Margaret Hodges, 453 West Center street, is making slow progress in his recovery from injuries sustained yesterday in a fall from a telephone pole.

The boy had climbed a pole to a point where a guy wire was made fast below the cross-arm when he lost his hold and fell to the pavement. His right shoulder, on which he struck, was crushed by the impact and his head was severely bruised. There is a possibility of concussion of the brain, it was reported.

REFUSES TO ROB MAN WITH ONE ARM

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Jan. 17. — An artificial arm saved W. L. Marston, 539 South El Molino street, from being robbed by two bandits here last night, according to reports filed with the police.

Marston was accosted by the armed men on South Michigan avenue. When told to throw up his arms he was able to put but one up. Finding their victim had but one arm the bandits jumped in their own car and sped away.

ACCIDENT VICTIMS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BAKERSFIELD, Jan. 17.—When the car in which they were riding overturned on the highway about four miles south of Bakersfield shortly before midnight last night, Miss Elva Price of Maricopa; Miss Elva Mallachowitz of Caliente, and Perry Morris of Bakersfield were badly injured, and Ray Johnson of Maricopa was painfully bruised and cut.

Miss Mallachowitz, who is a student of the local high school, is in the Mercy Hospital suffering from a dislocated hip and lacerations about her head and arms. Mr. Morris is also confined to the Mercy Hospital with a severely lacerated leg and other minor injuries.

JAIL ENDS SERIES OF TROUBLES

Blythe Man Divorced, Arrested, Tries to Die, Sent to Prison All in a Few Days

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

RIVERSIDE, Jan. 17.—William Reese likes action. At least, such would be the deduction because of a series of events which ended with his trial in Superior Court on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon, his conviction of simple assault and his subsequent sentence to sixty days in the County Jail.

Reese first came into public notice a few weeks ago at Blythe while Department One of the Superior Court was in session there. Superior Judge George R. Freeman granted his wife a divorce and a few hours later Reese is said to have threatened the woman with a gun. He was arrested, taken to the Blythe branch of the County Jail, where he attempted to end his life by cutting his throat with a razor.

As a result of his asserted action against his wife Reese appeared for trial before Judge Freeman yesterday. According to the testimony, after Mrs. Reese had obtained her divorce Reese went to her restaurant, opened a suit case, and is said to have taken out a revolver and to have threatened her life.

He denied making any threats and said he opened the suit case to show her a gun he had purchased to shoot coyotes with on a trip to Arizona.

Following his arrest by Constable R. P. Brooks, Reese is said to have slashed his throat with a razor while in jail. Medical aid was summoned and a few stitches served to put him back in condition.

The jury which heard the case yesterday was out about half an hour. Reese waived time for passing sentence after he had heard the verdict announced and was given sixty days in the County Jail.

Leonard J. Difani, Deputy District Attorney, was in charge of the case for the State.

Says Parents Are to Blame for Bad Boys

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

RIVERSIDE, Jan. 17.—Increase in crime among Riverside boys and girls and the fact that the average age limit has dropped to 12 years for girls and 14 years for boys, were the outstanding features of the annual report of Probation Officer C. W. Mathews just completed. Home training, or the lack of home training, is regarded by the probation officer as largely responsible for this condition, who declared in his report that "Parents are surely shirking their individual responsibility and in many cases are passing it up to the State."

Probation is a success, in the opinion of the probation officer. He declared that "the failures we have had on probation during the last year are largely chargeable to the lack of co-operation of the parents."

To give an indication of the work done by his office, the probation officer's report asserted that 315 cases have been handled during the year, of which 74 were settled out of court. Of the 241 cases, 180 were juvenile and 61 adult. Of the 180 juvenile cases, 44 were girls and and 136 were boys.

HONOR SENATOR FLINT

Country Club Unveils Oil Portrait of the Founder of Flintridge

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Jan. 17.—An all-day program in celebration of the Flintridge Country Club's fourth anniversary, which was featured with an invitational golf tournament, musical tea and a number of bridge and mah jongg parties, was climaxed with a stag dinner this evening at which time a portrait of ex-Senator Frank P. Flint, president of the organization, was unveiled and presented to the club.

The portrait of Senator Flint was painted by Arthur Cahill, well-known California artist. The presentation of the artist's work was made by W. P. Jeffries when all male members of the Flintridge club were assembled at dinner. He was assisted in this ceremonial by Ralph Reynolds, A. J. Hosking, W. H. Harrison and J. Tod Cook, members of the "testimonial" committee.

The Flintridge Country Club was completed in January, 1921, and today's fete was in celebration of this event as well as a tribute to Senator Flint, who founded the organization and who has served as its president ever since.

The celebration began this morning with an invitational golf tournament for women. In the afternoon the men members of the club took possession of the links, while the women were entertained with a musical tea, and card parties.

Since the organization of Flintridge Country Club four years ago it has experienced a rapid growth both in members and improvements. The improvements include a new swimming pool, additions to the golf links and erection of a new men's grill which was used for the first time tonight.

Members of the club who had charge of the stag dinner and entertainment included Warren R. Flint, George E. Marshall, Lynn Reynolds and Frank Lloyd.

NEW DEPUTY CONSTABLE

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

LANKERSHIM, Jan. 17.—Andy Pruitt, special night officer, has been appointed by the Supervisors as deputy constable for the Lankershim district under Constable Fullerton. Before coming to Lankershim Mr. Pruitt was a Sheriff of a county in one of the eastern States and is experienced in his duties. The new appointment was made under a civil service examination held here last November.

TO IMPROVE AIR SERVICE

Squadron Commander Cites Present Needs

Advocates Use of Modern Mother Ships

To Use New Fighting Craft at Hawaii

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 17.—Lack of tenders or sea-going mother ships, capable of meeting the requirements of the aircraft squadrons of the Battle Fleet is a decided handicap in the attainment of the highest efficiency for naval aviation and its value to the Battle Fleet, in the opinion of Capt. Stanford E. Moses, commanding the aircraft squadrons based at the Naval Air Station here.

Such lack in the past has retarded flight operations of the Navy on this Coast, he said today, although in other respects naval aviation has made splendid progress.

The aircraft squadrons attached to the scouting fleet in the Atlantic, he said, have accomplished more along strictly fleet aviation lines than have the squadrons based at San Diego, because the eastern aviation units have more tenders.

Capt. Moses, a keen tactician and a thorough student of naval aeronautics, believes that the fundamental need of the Battle Fleet at present is a well developed, well trained combination bombing and torpedo squadron operating not from the shore base but from tenders or the battleship themselves. Before the end of 1925 the fleet air force commander hopes to have such a squadron operating in the Pacific, equipped with either modified torpedo planes of the world cruiser type, or the long-range CS, the latter capable, under favorable conditions, of a sustained hop from San Diego to Diamond Head. With such a squadron and with a few more sea-going aircraft tenders Capt. Moses believes fleet aviation will have made an important forward stride.

Capt. Moses is planning to test to the limit the efficiency of the air force under his command during the forthcoming battle maneuvers of the United States Fleet in Hawaiian and Southern California waters.

"Every officer, enlisted man, and every plane that can be transported to Hawaii will be employed in these air maneuvers," said Capt. Moses. "We plan to sail from San Diego for Hawaii on or about April 2 and will remain in the vicinity of Honolulu until the fleet returns from Australia in late September. The most comprehensive operating plans yet outlined for the aircraft squadrons will be carried out during the six months we are absent from San Diego. Land planes, seaplanes and, I hope, the dirigible Shenandoah, will be used in the aerial strategic excise."

The aircraft carrier Langley, the tenders Aroostook and Gannett and the collier Jason will be utilized in transporting the San Diego Air Squadron to Hawaii.

Squadrons of bombing and fighting planes will be catapulted from the Langley's broad flying deck to attack the fleet during the Hawaiian problems. It is to train fleet airmen for the battle exercises off Hawaii that the carrier has been carrying on experimental flight training off Point Loma during the last month.

Valley Booster Organization to Raise Guaranty

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

VAN NUYS, Jan. 17.—The aims and accomplishments to date of the Greater San Fernando Valley Association were presented to a group of representative Van Nuys business men last night by President A. Z. Taft; Secretary John Renfrew, Robert Hanley and others at a dinner in the Holly Shopping Center Building. Announcement was made of a comprehensive campaign to be conducted in the near future to raise the necessary funds to carry on the work of the organization and to conduct a general publicity and advertising drive for the valley as a whole.

Mr. Taft, who is one of the leading real estate men of Los Angeles and who has extensive holdings in San Fernando Valley, spoke on the major projects the organization is now concerned with.

Among these are the building of Riverside Drive, completing Victory Boulevard, making the Sepulveda-Saugus improvement, widening of Cahuenga Pass and Ventura Boulevard, extending Vine avenue to come out at Dark Canyon, the Coldwater Canyon and Benedict Canyon projects, sewerage system for San Fernando Valley, flood control problems and the laying out of parks and playgrounds in the valley under the City and County Planning Commission programs.

Following discussions by various speakers who eulogized the work of the association, it was stated that a guarantor's fund of $10,000 was needed to finance work in hand. This fund is to be in $100 units to be subscribed by various towns in the valley. Before the meeting closed several units of the fund were taken by Van Nuys citizens.

HEADS SUPERVISORS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HANFORD, Jan. 17.—At the annual meeting of the San Joaquin Valley Supervisors' Association held in Sacramento Supervisor T. E. Cochran of Corcoran, Kings county, was elected president. Stanley Abel, Supervisor in Kern county, was re-elected secretary. It is reported that the new chairman is planning to hold the July meeting of the association in Hanford and it will be one of the first important meetings held in the city's large Auditorium, which is just being completed.

JUDGE CRAVES INTRODUCTION

Wants to Meet Gentleman Who Appropriated His New Auto Tire

[By a "Times" Staff Correspondent.]

LONG BEACH, Jan. 17.—In the course of a business day there passes before the bar of justice in Police Judge Helwig's court, a long line of bootleggers, check kiters, vagrants, drinkers, traffic violaters and the like, but there is one individual that Judge Helwig wants to see before him more than all these others.

If he comes into court all other business will likely stop and Judge Helwig will devote all his time and attention to this individual, for some time, somehow, last night, that much wanted man removed a brand new spare tire from Judge Helwig's brand new automobile.

"I want to be introduced to the gentleman just as soon as it can be arranged, and I want the introduction to take place across the bench in the courtroom," Judge Helwig said significantly today.

City Joins in Last Tribute to H. F. Brey

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PORTERVILLE, Jan. 17.—Business houses of Porterville were closed this afternoon from 2:30 to 3:30 in tribute to H. F. Brey, 76 years of age, pioneer lumberman, and one of the community's most highly esteemed citizens, whose funeral services were being conducted at that time at the Masonic Temple.

Private services for the family were conducted by Rev. L. A. Wood, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, from Loyd's Chapel, at 1:30.

Mr. Brey, a native of Ohio, was engaged in lumbering in Northern California and Nevada before coming here thirty-five years ago, serving as president and secretary of the San Joaquin Lumber Company, afterward founding the Porterville Lumber Company and the Brey-Wright Lumber Company. He died at the family home here Wednesday night, following a long illness. He is survived by his widow, two daughters, and a nephew in this city, also two sisters in San Diego.

He was a member of the Masonic and Elk lodges of this city and the Knights Templar Commandery of Visalia. Mr. Brey was an organizer of the Porterville Chamber of Commerce and was instrumental in securing aid from Andrew Carnegie for construction of the Porterville city library.

The body was escorted by a number of friends to Fresno for cremation.

TO ABOLISH SMOKE

Residents of Citrus Belt to Petition Law Makers

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHINO, Jan. 17.—A petition condemning "smudge" and designed to be presented to the State Board of Health will be prepared and circulated through the city of Chino—after which it will be forwarded to all of the cities in Southern California which are in the citrus belt, it was decided last night at the meeting of the board of directors of the Chino Chamber of Commerce.

The type of orchard heating which creates the black oily smoke was condemned in a discussion at last night's meeting and the decision to prepare and circulate the petition followed. In addition to the decision to prepare a petition, resolutions were adopted condemning smoke from orchard heating and it was voted to send a copy of these resolutions to the State Board of Health and another to the Board of Supervisors of San Bernardino county.

STRUCK BY TRAIN

Elderly Pomona Man Is Badly Injured

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

POMONA, Jan. 17.—Crossing the Union Pacific tracks at First street and Garey avenue this afternoon, D. A. Hall, 733 Wisconsin street, walked in front of the eastbound Los Angeles Limited, was struck and hurled to the street clear of the tracks. He suffered two compound fractures of the right arm, one above and one below the elbow, possibly a broken collar-bone and possible serious internal injuries. He was treated at the Pomona Valley Hospital.

Mr. Hall, 68 years of age, had parked his automobile on Garey avenue north of the tracks. Trains were moving on both of the Southern Pacific tracks and Mr. Hall, watching the former, walked in front of a slowly moving Union Pacific train.

SAFE LOCKS DEFY VISALIA EXPERTS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

VISALIA, Jan. 17.—"Wanted a safe cracker," might well read the appeal of Postmaster A. M. Becker of Visalia and assistants.

No "swag" would be guaranteed as they do not know what is within the new safe which has arrived for installation in the new Postoffice Building, but which has so far defied their efforts to open.

The combination arrived a day after the safe reached Visalia, but evidently it's the "right safe and the wrong combination," as they do not work together.

OFFICER TAKES SLAP AT KLAN

District Attorney Appeals for Legislation

Would Make Membership Open to Public

Says Organization Hinders Law Enforcement

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN BERNARDINO, Jan. 17.—Advocating the enactment of a law to open to the public the membership lists of "secret organizations," Dist.-Atty. George H. Johnson has forwarded letters to Senator Ralph H. Swing and Assemblymen Isaac Jones, and A. R. Beck, the San Bernardino county legislators at Sacramento.

The prosecutor states that in his opinion the law should require the filing of articles and rules of the secret organizations, their aims, plan of operation and purposes.

"The principal reason for an enactment," writes the District Attorney, "is that we have recently discovered that a certain organization within our county has made a strong effort to dictate to public officers and especially law enforcement officers, what their duties are and how their duties should be performed."

Dist.-Atty. Johnson's letter continues:

"To have a secret band of individuals engaged in harassing and attempting to dictate to the public officers is bad public policy and if the right of free speech permits such activity, it would seem that the public is at least entitled to know the name and purposes of such organizations and who the individuals are."

Although the prosecutor issued no statement with his letter, he did not deny he referred to the Ku Klux Klan, whose membership is kept secret by the vow of individual Klansmen.

"In many instances," the letter continues, "we find members of this certain organization have themselves attempted to assume the duty of enforcing the law without any attention to the regular and duly constituted officers or while ignoring such regular officers as much as possible."

REDLANDS CHURCH GROWTH HAS BEEN LARGE, SAYS REPORT

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

REDLANDS, Jan. 17. — At the annual meeting of the Congregational Church, the pioneer church of the city, held today reports were made showing that giving for benevolence has tripled in the last eight years and that the new parsonage, which was just completed about a year ago, will be fully paid for in a few months' time. The church is almost entirely out of debt.

The church now has 598 members. Total operating expenses during the past year were $10,559.42. The total amount given for benevolences was $11,949.46.

The officers elected for the coming year are as follows: Miss Bertha King, clerk; C. F. Welcott, financial secretary; D. N. McLeod, treasurer; E. R. Fisher, Sunday-school superintendent; John M. Nicholson and W. T. Darby, deacons; Miss M. E. Cornwall and Miss May Moore, deaconesses; G. S. Hinckley, Dr. K. L. Dole, Dr. M. J. Sweeney, G. E. Sucher and G. M. Bartlett, directors; P. M. Smith, chairman of ushers. "The Use of Having a Church" was the subject of an address given by Dr. Luther Freeman of Pomona.

CLAIM RESORT IS NOT A HOMESTEAD

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BAKERSFIELD, Jan. 17.—It is possible that Patrick H. Furlott, reputed a wealthy Hollywood building contractor, may lose his elaborately furnished mountain home near Lebec in the Cuddy Valley, according to Earl Bagley, United States Commissioner here, who conducted an examination into the matter. A formal hearing resulted from the complaint of C. L. Brown, who asserted that Furlott had not lived on the homestead site within a period of six months except to entertain friends on outing parties at the lodge.

Furlott countered by testifying that he had spent some $15,000 in building and furnishing the mountain lodge with a radio, piano and luxurious furnishings. Ultimately the case will be decided in the United States Land Office at San Francisco. A decision is expected February 5.

GIFT TO SWEETIE MAN'S DOWNFALL

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

GLENDALE, Jan. 17. — With the arrest this morning, in a Los Angeles rooming-house of Henry Karwoski, about 20 years of age, Glendale police believe they have captured one of a gang of sneak thieves and housebreakers who have been raiding homes in this and adjacent cities for several months past. The arrest followed finding of a watch which Karowski is said to have given his sweetheart, who lives near Glendale.

DIES FOLLOWING OPERATION

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

VAN NUYS, Jan. 17.—A. Manns, 71 years of age, unmarried and residing on East Friar street, was interred yesterday in Oakwood Cemetery, Chatsworth. He died earlier in the week following a major operation at Hollywood Hospital. He resided here with a sister, Mrs. Catherine E. Lay. Rev. Howard Clark of the Methodist Church had charge of the funeral services.

GEM IN CANDY BOX RETURNS

Diamond Ring Lost in Yule Gift is Restored to Pomona Woman

[By a "Times" Staff Correspondent.]

POMONA, Jan. 17.—During the Christmas season Mrs. Al Charle, wife of a local confectioner, had charge of preparing the Christmas boxes of candy, and while thus engaged lost her valuable diamond ring. Exhaustive search failed to reveal the missing jewel until today.

W. F. Payton, upon ascertaining that Mrs. Charle was the rightful owner, returned the ring to her. He stated that it was found by Mrs. R. A. Church of Escondido, a friend to whom his wife had sent a box of candy purchased at the confectionery. She returned it to Mr. Payton with the request that it be returned to its owner.

Adventure Ends When Officers Arrest Youths

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN BERNARDINO, Jan. 17.—Arrested at Amboy, half-way between Barstow and Needles last night, following a dramatic dash across the desert, four Colton young people, none over 15 years of age, are en route to the detention home here today in the custody of officers.

They are Dick Peck and Charles Johnson, both 15, and Thelma Dodson, 13, and Lenoa Petes, 14. The quartet left their homes in Colton Thursday night, bent on adventure.

Taking a new sedan automobile owned by H. B. Johnson, father of one of the boys, they sped across the desert. The boys had taken extra clothing, presumably for the girls to wear. At Ludlow the quartet stopped to get gasoline. Tom Murphy, a Ludlow merchant, furnished them with gasoline and suspected that they were runaways. He wired officers ahead. At 7 o'clock last night the quartet was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Tom Morgan at Amboy and are en route here today.

What charges will be filed against the youths has not been determined. Parents of the runaways were in conference today with Probation Officer George Larmore. Because of the tender ages of both the boys and the girls the cases will probably be heard in Juvenile Court.

PROHIBS PROTEST TEA AND COFFEE

TOO MUCH CANDY, TOO, SAY WEARERS OF THE WHITE RIBBON

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

UPLAND, Jan. 17.—Members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of San Bernardino county were on record today as being opposed to jazz music and dancing among students and the excessive consumption of tea, coffee and candy throughout the nation, following an all-day session of white-ribboners at the First Methodist Church here to commemorate the fifth anniversary of the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Speakers of the day included Mrs. Elsie Giles, county president, of the W.C.T.U.; Rev. W. Earl Smith, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Ontario; Rev. Charles A. Kent, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Upland; Rev. S. M. Lehman, pastor of the Upland Nazarene Church; Capt. Philip Lawton of the Salvation Army, and fifteen county W.C.T.U. superintendents, all emphasized the fact that notwithstanding the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment, the work of the prohibition organization is only just begun.

"The greatest contributor to disrespect for law in the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment," declared the Rev. Kent, in addressing the assembled women, "is the ignoring of the law by men and women in high places of respect and responsibility in society and the government."

The meeting opened with devotionals led by Mrs. J. J. Atwood, which was followed by prayer by the Rev. Lehman, after which Mrs. R. E. Jones sang "It's in The Constitution and It's There to Stay," and "John Barleycorn, Good-by." Nearly 1000 women attended the noon luncheon which was served by the members of the Upland union.

ADMIT CLUB TO FULL MEMBERSHIP

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

GLENDALE, Jan. 17.—Officials of the Parliamentary Law Club of Glendale have been notified by the executives of the General Federation of Women's Clubs that the local organization has been admitted to membership of the federation, taking its place as a unit in the district and State and general bodies. Mrs. Julia D. Phelps, for twelve years president of the W.C.T.U. of Los Angeles county, was the principal speaker at yesterday's meeting of the club.

NEW LIBRARIAN IN WORK AT REDLANDS

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

REDLANDS, Jan. 17.—Miss Mabel Inness, recently elected to the position of librarian at the A. K. Smiley Public Library, has taken up her duties here. Miss Inness comes to Redlands from the Department of Public Research of Philadelphia. She is a graduate of Knox College anf of the library school of the University of Illinois.

SAN DIEGO COMPANY IN NEW HOME

Bay City Building and Loan Association Dedicates Its $75,000 Building

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 17.—The Bay City Building and Loan Association, one of the most substantial of the city's financial institutions, oepned its new $75,000 building today with an elaborate dedicatory ceremony.

Entertainment of various kinds was provided, floral tributes sent by friends and patrons of the company added beauty to the scene, and the general expression of confidence by the public made the event one long to be remembered in the business circles of the city.

Among the popular attractions of the day was Hatch Graham of Los Angeles, whose renditions over KHJ, The Times radio station, have made him well known all over Southern California. Kipling's poem, "The Ladies," made famous by Graham over the radio, was the one continually demanded request number.

A feature of the day was a record-breaking deposit made by Baron Long, former Los Angeles hotel man, now managing director of the U. S. Grant Hotel at San Diego. Mr. Long gave $25,000 into the keeping of the company, which is the largest deposit ever made in San Diego in a building and loan association by a person other than a director or officer of the company. The account not only established a record, but was the first money received in the new home.

The officers and directors of the San Diego association are all old-established and successful local business men, John B. Starkey, the president, being a pioneer San Diegan, and heading as well the Starkey Investment Company. The officers and directors are: J. F. Thomas, vice-president, president of the Crescent Realty Company; Alonzo De Jessop, vice-president, of J. Jessop & Sons; Harold B. Starkey, secretary-treasurer, of the Starkey Investment Company; Gordon Gray, attorney; Milton F. Heller, vice-president and general manager of Heller's, Inc.; Emil Klicka, president of the Klicka Lumber Company; James D. Forward, secretary-treasurer of the Union Title Insurance Company and the Union Trust Company; Albert H. Merrick, manager of the S. M. Bingham Company.

Wife of Local Broker Sues for Divorce

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SANTA BARBARA, Jan. 17.—Laura M. Starbuck of Santa Barbara has brought suit for divorce against John A. Starbuck, bond broker of Los Angeles and San Francisco, charging cruelty.

Mrs. Starbuck charges cruelty upon the assertion that her husband compelled her to "listen to lengthy discourses upon the possibility of mentally eliminating the nervous system." According to the complaint Starbuck has an annual income of $40,000.

A HOME IN BEAUTIFUL WEST HOLLYWOOD WITH A VIEW FROM MOUNTAINS TO THE SEA
WHERE VALUES ARE INCREASING

About a year ago an experienced builder supervised the construction of a permanent home, but an unexpected change of plans makes it necessary to sell at far less than present value.

It is of Spanish type, two and three stories, arranged in two large flats with an apartment for janitor's family. One flat brings a nice income and as the janitor lives there, the owner can be away, knowing his home will be taken care of.

The large corner lot is conservatively worth $10,000. The building is of reinforced concrete, built like a thermos bottle, cool in summer and warm in winter. It is put up to stay and while all materials were bought at wholesale, quality was considered before price. It cost $24,000. The furniture, oriental rugs, etc., cost over $6000.

If it suits you, the price for everything is $38,000, payable $20,000 cash and you can move in. Telephone, owner, MR. McCLINTOCK, ATlantic 2980, for an appointment if you have the cash, as no trades will be considered.

WONDERFUL HILLSIDE HOME
No. of Hollywood Blvd., off Highland.
New 2-story stucco of 7 rooms.

SOUTH COAST PARK.
IN ALL THE STATE NO PLACE LIKE THIS.

This beauty spot, so highly favored by nature, is constantly attracting homeseekers, avocado, bulb, flower and vegetable growers.

Opened for market for the first time January 27, 1924, South Coast Park at once attracted experienced Southern California ranchers and specialists.

Yes, you'll be surprised when you look this over. You will find more than 80 acres in bulbs and flowers, many tracts in avocados, winter vegetables, many poultry ranches, any many nice houses; an excellent water system bringing water from Lake Hodges at three cents per 100 cubic foot. And just think! Today you can buy this fine land with ocean view at from $450 per acre. Close in acre tracts $850.

Terms 10% cash and 10% yearly.

Come and join a growing community. You'll be glad you came.

Directions: Drive on Coast Highway, 8 miles south of Carlsbad, 7 miles north of Del Mar, direct to South Coast Park Tract office, and see our Mr. Reynolds, or call on or write

POULTRY RANCHES—
For Sale

WANT A POULTRY RANCH? Come to the country and talk to "country folks" about it. We live in the country, like the country and everything we have is invested in the country. When you've bought a place from us we are going to be your neighbors and you will get "neighborly" treatment right from the start.

Getting down to business we give more attention to chicken ranches than any other kind of property and have more to show you than all the town agents put together. We suggest, therefore, that you come at once to our office and let's look them over.

How do these sound?

2 acres, new five-room house, new chicken equipment for 750, near school and street car. Only $6750, $2500 cash.

1 acre, new four-room house, ideally located with 400 chickens, $6500, $1500 cash.

½ acre, 285 layers, three-room house, $4000, $1500 cash. Near school and street car.

7000 layers, five acres of land, 11-room colonial mansion, $55,000.

1000 layers, 1 1-10 acres, nearly new house. It's a bargain at $10,000, reasonable terms.

IF YOU WANT TO SEE ALL THE BEST IN CHICKEN RANCHES, whether your pocket book is "lean" or "fat" it will pay you to give us a few hours of your time. Come any day that suits you. We are always on the job.

A NATIONAL organization consisting of [illegible] members only from all parts of the U. S. with home offices in Chicago, want to get in touch with a local man of high moral character to represent the West Coast. Party selected must be able to invest $1000 and will automatically become a member of Board of Control, who meet quarterly at the home office. I can satisfy the most skeptical as to the soundness of the enterprise and earnings of at least 72% the first year and much more thereafter. Strictest investigation solicited and will be made of the party selected. Address P. O. Box 1455, STATION C.

SAFETY AND PROFIT.
An outstanding financial house of Los Angeles desires the services of a mature gentleman of reasonable means, who can devote at least a part of his time to duties of a dignified character. This is an excellent connection for a man who wishes to retire from active business, but would like to keep in touch with business affairs in such a way that his investments would be absolutely safe and yet earn excellent returns, and where only a portion of his time would necessarily be occupied in the business. Address S, box 377, TIMES BRANCH.

UNUSUAL opportunity for investment in the 8% cumulative fully participating preferred stock of a finance corporation that is placing a limited amount of its capital stock open for public subscription. This is an established business and this stock has an earning power of 20% above dividend requirements. If interested in safety, stability and profits, kindly make inquiry at once for full particulars. Address T, box 485, TIMES BRANCH.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.
We want a man with pep and ambition. One who can see a business deal. The markets for our products have already been created. We have proven it. References exchanged. Party must have $5000 and a desire to make good. To such a party, either silent or active, we have a safe conservative, big money maker. Give phone number and address in reply. Address J, box 291, TIMES OFFICE.

$5000 FOR $3000.

PARTNERSHIP business is dangerous unless founded on a solid basis of competency and right thinking. I need a partner in a very high class candy business here in Beverly Hills. Everyone in Beverly Hills knows of Aunt Sally's home-made candies. We are well established and have everything in the way of candy equipment. Now in order to succeed financially in our endeavor we must open an exclusive candy shop. To accomplish this we need money, lots of it. Therefore I want to get in touch with a prospective partner, preferably a scientist, who will finance this undertaking. I make the candy, solicit orders and deliver to our customers daily. Therefore, it is evident that a great volume of business is impossible along these present lines. For appt. phone ARTHUR T. HALL, 584105, 357 Clifton Way, Beverly Hills.

COOLIDGE AIDE LOG CABIN BORN

Everett Sanders to Succeed Slemp March 4

Hoosier Farmer's Son Worked Way Through College

Good Record in Congress and in Last Campaign

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Everett Sanders of Terre Haute, Ind., will go to the White House March 4, on which day he will complete his fourth term in Congress to become secretary to the President.

C. Bascom Slemp, who has resigned to become a member of a law firm in Chicago, plans to retire within two weeks and go on a vacation to Florida before taking up his new work. Mr. Sanders expects to complete his term as a member of the House of Representatives, although in the meantime he may render some service to the President.

Mr. Sanders is the second Indiana man ever to become secretary to a President. The only other Hoosier to serve in this position was Elijah Halford, once editor of the old Indianapolis Journal, who was secretary to President Benjamin Harrison.

FRIENDS SURPRISED

For some time it has been known to Mr. Slemp's friends that he contemplated quitting soon, but information that Sanders is to become his successor came as a surprise. Mr. Sanders, who did not seek re-election to Congress, had planned to resume the practice of law in his home town. He had intended to retire from official life because of the financial sacrifices involved, but he could not well decline the flattering invitation from President Coolidge to become his secretary. To be chosen as secretary to the President is an especial compliment because of the intimate, personal nature of the appointment.

"From an Indian log cabin to a position in the White House," might well describe the rise of Mr. Sanders. It was in a log cabin on a small farm in Clay county, Indiana, that Sanders was born March 3, 1882. He was one of nine children, four of whom survive. His father was James Sanders, a highly devout and religious man, who farmed six days in the week and preached on Sunday in the country Baptist Mission Church in Lewis township, Clay county. Everett Sanders is a member of this rural church in which his father preached twenty years ago. One of his brothers is now the minister of this church, although he is a coal miner six days of the week.

Mr. Sanders worked on his father's farm as a boy, attended the country schools and then worked his way through the Indiana State Normal School at Terre Haute. While attending the Normal he worked during spare hours as a salesman in the J. B. Walsh Shoe Store, Terre Haute. At the Normal he met Miss Ella Neal of Jasonville, Ind. The result was a romance resulting in their marriage soon after they completed their course of study in preparation for teaching. Both were teaching school when they were married in 1903. Mr. Sanders taught a country school in Clay county and then in the city of Brazil.

A year after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Sanders enrolled as students at Indiana University. They were at the University for three years, Mr. Sanders completing his law course in 1907. Then they went to Terre Haute, where Mr. Sanders entered the practice of law.

RAN BOARDING CLUB

At Indiana University Sanders was captain of the basketball team and president of his law class, but he was a "barb"—a nonfraternity man. He made his way through the university by running a "boarding club" with Mrs. Sanders as one of his thirty boarders and paying for her own meals. He also worked in a Bloomington shoe store then conducted by Ed Whetsell.

Mr. Sanders met with success in the practice of law at Terre Haute. He continued to practice until he entered Congress March 4, 1917, where he has since served with distinction. His first important vote after entering Congress was on the resolution declaring war. He is at present one of the members of the Steering Committee of the House of Representatives and also one of the most active members of the important committee on interstate and foreign commerce. He has been an advocate of sound legislation, repeatedly taking the lead in fighting measures that smacked of radicalism. Mr. Slemp was one of Sanders's colleagues until he became secretary to the President when Mr. Coolidge was called to the White House. They have been good friends.

President Coolidge was first attracted to Sanders by his service in the House. In the recent campaign William M. Butler, Republican National Chairman, now a United States Senator, appointed Sanders chairman of the speakers' bureau at Republican national headquarters. He gave a good account of himself in this work. When Mr. Coolidge came to the Presidency he sought the services of a man with experience and acquaintance in the House for his secretary. His own personal contacts had been largely with Senators since he, as Vice-President, had been presiding officer of the Senate. He chose Slemp as a talented man who, because of his service in Congress had friendly relations with House members. Now the President chooses a man with the same experience for his new secretary.

APPOINTMENT PLEASES

Mr. Sanders's appointment caused elation among his Congressional colleagues with whom he has enjoyed personal popularity. Democrats joined with Republicans in expressing general approval. All Hoosiers in Washington have special pride in the recognition that goes to Sanders. Senator James E. Watson and others of the Indiana congressional delegation spoke words of praise for Sanders and, with an appreciation of his ability declared the President could have drafted no more capable man for the place. Mr. Sanders has experience, ability, tact and a personality that is pleasing.

Mr. Sanders is as thrifty and frugal as President Coolidge is reputed to be. He and Mrs. Sanders have lived simply in a modest apartment during their residence in Washington, and always have lived within their means. As an evidence of the Sanders economy it is told that when he was a country school teacher his salary for a nine months' term was $495 and from this he saved $350 as a nest egg for a bank account. It might be added, however that in addition to his salary as a teacher he received an extra 10 cents a day because he dispensed with a janitor and did the daily job of building the fires and sweeping out the school house.

M'VEY REACHES SHANGHAI

Admiral Assumes Charge of American Naval Forces Assembling There for Emergency

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SHANGHAI, Jan. 17 (midnight.)—Admiral McVey of the United States Yangtze patrol arrived in Shanghai tonight from Hankow, taking charge of the American naval forces now assembling on the Shanghai water front in preparation for an emergency. Three additional gunboats heading for Shanghai from Manila are expected here Sunday, bringing the naval force of the Americans, British, French and Japanese to twenty warcraft, with several hundred marines and sailors for landing if necessary.

Owing to the serious situation at Nanking, an additional boat has been sent there and American and British marines landed in that city last night to protect the American missionary and business property, and in addition a boat has been stationed at Chinkiang, where the fighting is now on.

Admiral McVey stopped at Nanking on his way down the river. He reports heavy troop movements from the north, with the transport of artillery and munitions, indicating that Marshal Lu is receiving ample support from the Peking government. Marshal Lu has about 12,000 troops now engaged with an equal number of Gen. Chi Hsieh Yuan's troops near Chinkiang and among Marshal Lu's forces there are considerable Russian whites, with more on their way down from Tien-Tsin.

The Shanghai situation is uncertain, owing to persistent reports of the deflection of Marshal Sun Chian Fang from the alliance with Gen. Chi, reports having it Peking bought off Marshal Sun with a promise of amnesty and permanent governorship in Chekiang. Although Marshal Sun has sent troops to the aid of Gen. Chi, he also is moving troops from the Shanghai area back to Hangchow at the same time, which is the cause of speculation.

Earlier reports of the presence of Atman Semienoff, former Cossack leader in Shankhai, are confirmed and although the reason is unknown, it is believed he is associated with the recruiting of Russians from the refugees here for service in Gen. Lu Yung Hsiang's army.

LAND LOAN BILL GIVEN APPROVAL

Senate Informed Plan to Aid Settlers Not Adverse to President's Budget

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Administration approval of the bill introduced by Senator Kendrick, Democrat, Wyoming, proposing government loans to settlers of reclamation projects now under construction, was transmitted to the Senate Reclamation Committee today at the opening of hearings on the measure. Secretary Work gave his support to the measure, and Director Lord of the budget made it known that the program did not conflict with President Coolidge's financial plans.

While a majority of the committee expressed favor toward the loan provision of the bill, Senator Kendrick volunteered to revise the measure to eliminate sections providing for government ownership of the lands.

Under the revision, the measure would propose loans up to $3000 for settlers on the basis of 60 per cent of the improvements made by the settlers or cattle owned.

Interest at 4 per cent would be charged. Land would be obtained, however, under provisions of the present law.

SEEK LEVY AGAINST BANK STOCKHOLDERS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 17.—The old William H. Schafer bank episode, which sent two men to prison and involved fourteen banks in Minnesota, was reopened in Hennepin County District Court yesterday when more than 100 stockholders of the Mortgage Security Company of Minnesota, a Schafer company, went into court as defendants in 100 per cent stockholders' liability action.

The suit, by A. V. Darelius, as receiver for the company, asks that full liability be enforced against stockholders, and involves a sum of more than $100,000. The case went to trial before Judge H. E. Dickinson after a three-year delay. The suit was filed three years ago after the Schafer bank failures.

STREAMS FREEZE TO BED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WISCONSIN RAPIDS (Wis.) Jan. 17.—The Consolidated Water Power and Paper Company has been forced to cease operations for an indefinite period due to the low water in the Wisconsin River. Other mills in the Wisconsin River Valley have been forced to resort to steam for power. Lack of seepage from small tributaries which are frozen to the bottom, together with the heavy ice on the Wisconsin, is given as the cause.

DIES IN DENTIST CHAIR

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HASTINGS (Mich.) Jan. 17.—While sitting in a dentist's chair, Leonard H. Evarts, 65 years of age, retired manufacturer, expired. He had been suffering from heart trouble. Mrs. Evarts was with her husband when he died. He came to Hastings from Grand Lodge about twenty-five years ago to assume management of the Hastings Table Company.

BOOTLEG POULTRY ASSAILED

Dealers Score Practice of Rebilling Product from Embargoed States

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—"Bootlegging" of poultry from embargoed States by shipping it to unembargoed States, where shipment for immediate slaughter is permitted, and then rebilling it to New York as poultry from unembargoed districts, was charged and assailed at the conference of the poultry trades here today.

The conference adopted resolutions declaring that a serious situation existed because of poultry disease and loss, and of resultant embargoes. It resolved further "that it be the sense of everyone engaged in the industry that they strictly abide by any regulatory measures that may be applied either by State or national associations" looking to the control and eradication of existing pulmonary disease among poultry. It pledged co-operation with the Federal Department of Agriculture and recommended that State control measures be made to conform with the regulations of the Federal department.

L. B. Kilbourne, president of the National Poultry, Butter and Egg Association, which called the conference, said a resolution should be passed against "bootlegging" chickens.

"Was this conference called for the benefit of New York?" demanded a dealer.

"It was called for the benefit of the industry," said President Kilbourne.

"Then let New York watch the thing for themselves," said the leader.

Members of the trade who had advocated recognition, control and eradication of poultry disease rather than minimizing its extent regarded the resolutions adopted as a constructive step.

CHILDREN PAY TOLL OF AUTO ACCIDENTS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

GRAND RAPIDS (Mich.) Jan. 17.—Three hundred thirty-six persons were injured and twenty-one were killed in traffic accidents on Grand Rapids streets in 1924, according to Safety Director James Sinke. One out of every 309 children attending school was injured or killed in automobile mishaps. The highest casualty record, when ages are considered, was established among children 5 years of age. Six of this age were killed and fourteen injured.

GAME FISH KILLED BY LOWERED WATER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LUDINGTON (Mich.) Jan. 17.—Thousands of game fish, including black bass, have been killed as a result of the lowering of the level of the water thirty-eight inches in Hamlin Lake. Hunters brought the report to Ludington that some of the fish have been frozen in the ice. Men with automobiles drive into the bayous, chop out the fish and fill their sacks. Other fish are found beside logs trying to bury themselves in the muck. K. B. Matthews, president of the Isaak Walton League, is investigating.

MINNESOTA MAY BAR MARRIAGE OF UNFIT

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 17.—Efforts to restrict marriage to persons physically and mentally fit will be made in the Legislature this session. Senator William C. Zamboni has introduced a bill in the State Senate requiring a physician's certificate before a person may be granted a marriage license. Another bill, now in preparation, would establish a State board of eugenics to prevent marriage of persons who are "insane, epileptic, or in some degree feeble-minded."

KENTUCKY PROMISED RAILWAY CAR SHOPS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PADUCAH (Ky.) Jan. 17.—New shops, which will employ from 2500 to 5000 men, are to be built by the Illinois Central Railroad at Paducah, President Charles H. Markham announced. Construction will begin at once and the work will be completed this year. Mr. Markham said more than $6,000,000 woud be invested in the improvements, which will include a locomotive building shop, a locomotive repair shop, a car building plant, a car repair shop, carpenter shop, wood mill and store room.

The twenty-fourth annual Detroi Automobile Show threw open it doors Saturday night in Conven tion Hall. The mammoth buildin stretching from Woodward to Cas avenue, with a total of 180,000 square feet of floor space, as much as is contained in the Armory which housed the New York show has been transformed into a gar den. The exhibition is the most pretentious yet staged by the De troit Automobile Dealers' Associa tion.

Production of passenger cars and trucks in 1925 promises to exceed the output for 1924, and to closely approach the record year 1923. This forecast is based primarily on the probabilities that the spend ing power of the United States will, in the current year, be the great est in the history of the country, estimated at $76,000,000,000) and the fact that the effective demand for automobiles is limited prin cipally by the ability of people to purchase and maintain them.

Another factor that adds to fa vorable prospects for 1925 is the present strong position of the in dustry brought about by a dem onstration in 1924 of qualification for business leadership, which has been responsible for the rapid and sustained growth of the motor

IBANEZ PERILS HERRIOT'S RULE

French Cabinet's Fall May Follow Present Stand

Loss of Socialists' Support Present Prospect

Full Retreat on Prosecution Seems Only Alternative

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

PARIS, Jan. 17.—The offensive against the present regime in Spain waged by Vicente Blasco Ibanez, the Spanish author, has placed the French government in a more embarrassing situation than the Spanish directorate.

Recent developments in the French Parliament have made it seem clear that the Herriot Cabinet will either have to make a complete retreat from the stand it has taken on the prosecution of Ibanez under the French law for his attacks on King Alfonso, or fall. The entire Socialist party of 105 members is pledged to vote for the bill introduced in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday calling for repeal of the law under the provisions of which the prosecution of Ibanez was begun.

The proceedings were instituted after the Spanish Ambassador had made representations to Premier Herriot. The government yesterday easily disposed of Deputy Paul Laffont's interpellation on the Ibanez case by relegating it to the bottom of the order of the day through the solid vote of the governmental majority.

The Herriot Cabinet has remained in power since the election in May of last year only by the support of the Socialists. Should the government oppose the repeal of the law, making it a question of a vote of confidence, the opposition vote of yesterday, numbering 225, augmented by the 105 votes of the Socialists would place the Herriot Ministry far in the minority.

In refusing to discuss the Laffont interpellation yesterday, Premier Herriot said: "The text of the law is clear. I am at my post to apply the laws, not to interpret them."

The opposition Deputies point out that this statement leaves the way open for a graceful exit by the government from a difficult position.

RANGERS OF TEXAS FACE ELIMINATION

District Court Rules Law Creating Famous Force is Unconstitutional

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

AUSTIN (Tex.) Jan. 17.—The Texas Rangers, credited with being one of the most fearless law-enforcing organizations found anywhere in the world, and America's first constabulary force, today is threatened with elimination. A District Court yesterday ruled that the law creating the ranger force is unconstitutional and enjoined the organization from further ranger activities.

For more than ninety years this group of men, originally numbering 150, never more than 1000 members, and at present but fifty, has had a record of enforcing the law to the utmost. Organized first to protect homesteaders in the wilderness of Southwestern Texas, its work has been changed to suit the times and of recent years it has been apprehending law violators and criminals. For the first time since its inception its work was at a standstill today.

The history of the ranger force extends into the provincial days after Texas had declared its independence from Mexico and before the republic of Texas was organized when the land between the Sabine and Rio Grande rivers was considered "no man's land."

Constabularies in Pennsylvania, New York and other States were patterned after the Texas Rangers who have a motto of "get your man." The Royal Northwest Mounted Police of Canada also is said to have had its inception as the result of the Texas force.

GAMBLE TAX SUIT TO BE HEARD TOMORROW

The State of California has a $300,014 interest in a hearing on Judge Fleming's calendar, in the Superior Court, for tomorrow.

The question before the court is whether David B. Gamble, millionaire soap manufacturer, was a resident of Pasadena, or of Cincinnati, O., at the time of his death, [illegible] 25, 1923.

California inheritance tax authorities will attempt to show he was a resident of the State, so that they may proceed to collect a tax of $300,014.

NEW LOS ANGELES TRAFFIC CODE GOES INTO EFFECT NEXT SATURDAY

ALL OLD CITY REGULATIONS GO INTO THE DISCARD

Central Traffic District Formed; Pedestrians Are Given Rights But Must Obey Signals

BY CLARENCE R. SNETHEN,
Los Angeles Traffic Commission

Next Saturday, the 24th inst., Los Angeles motorists will have a new traffic ordinance to obey. This is the ordinance prepared by Miller McClintock, traffic consultant for the Traffic Commission, and unanimously adopted by the City Council. This ordinance is a complete traffic code in itself, and replaces all past traffic ordinances. It has been greatly simplified and makes uniform all regulations; therefore no motorist has an excuse for not understanding the law.

One of the principal changes is the creation of a new district known as the Central Traffic District.

This is bounded by Ninth street on the south, Figueroa to Fourth on the west, Fourth to Hill on the north, then up Hill street to Temple on the west; thence north from Temple on Broadway to Sunset, and bounded for the entire length by Los Angeles street on the east. This district corresponds with the old congested area.

Following are the principal provisions of the ordinance:

TURNING. At intersections other than those in the Central Traffic District right turns may be made with or against signals, but at all places must be made from the line of traffic nearest the curb.

Left turns may be made only from the line of traffic nearest the center of the roadway. Cutting corners is prohibited.

Double left turns are prohibited in the Central Traffic District and in business districts between the hours of 7 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Left turns are prohibited from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the following places:

Into or out of an alley or driveway in the Central Traffic District or business district.

At the intersection of Hill street and Sixth and Seventh streets.

At the intersections of Broadway and Fifth, Sixth and Seventh streets.

At the intersections of Spring street and Fifth, Sixth and Seventh streets.

At the intersections of Main street and Fifth, Sixth and Seventh streets.

DETROIT, Jan. 17.—California and Michigan with 21.9 and 20 per cent, respectively, showed the greatest gains in the number of cars and trucks purchased during 1924, among the first ten States. New York still leads in registration with 1,412,660, of which 1,186,- [illegible] are passenger cars, but California is a close second, with 1,321,- [illegible] and is less than 10,000 behind in passenger cars, while Ohio, with [illegible]; Pennsylvania with [illegible] and Illinois with 1,390,- [illegible] are the only other States in the 1,000,000 class.

The largest numerical gain was [illegible] in California, with New York second with 197,408.

The twenty-fourth annual Detroit Automobile Show threw open its doors Saturday night in Convention Hall. The mammoth building extending from Woodward to Cass avenue, with a total of 180,000 square feet of floor space, as much as is contained in the Armory, which housed the New York show, has been transformed into a garden. The exhibition is the most pretentious yet staged by the Detroit Automobile Dealers' Association.

Production of passenger cars and trucks in 1925 promises to exceed the output for 1924, and to closely approach the record year 1923. The forecast is based primarily on the probabilities that the spending power of the United States will, in the current year, be the greatest in the history of the country (estimated at $70,000,000,000) and the fact that the effective demand for automobiles is limited principally by the ability of people to purchase and maintain them.

Headlight Campaign in San Francisco Causes Many Arrests

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—Hundreds of motorists are being arrested every night in San Francisco and the San Francisco Bay region by officers operating under the State Motor Vehicle Department who are stopping automobile drivers in droves on the streets and highways and citing those with glaring and misadjusted headlights to appear in court. The arrests are being made in a State-wide campaign being carried on by the Motor Vehicle Department.

While many motorists are not in favor of the campaign, safety council authorities here are expressing approval of the drastic action being taken against the headlight menace.

"It is a splendid move," said Dr. Charles B. Hebrecht, head of the public relations department of the California State Optometricts' Association.

"Glare from approaching automobile headlights is so strong that almost all automobile drivers are momentarily blinded at frequent intervals on the city streets and county highways and the lives of pedestrians and motorists are constantly in peril."

Scenic Views of Los Angeles County Public Playground

WEEK-END recreation seekers are finding Los Angeles County Park the land of heart's desire even during the winter season, when snow may be expected in this new public playground.

The park covers an area of 540 acres on the Mojave Desert side of Mount Baldy, where the big pines are to be found. It is accessible by two roads—one known as the Lone Pine Trail turning west from Cajon Pass just north of Cajon; the other road going in from Palmdale. Both are reported in good condition by the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

The park has been increasing in popularity since its opening late last summer. The county acquired the ground more than two years ago and has been steadily developing it with the view of making an ideal place for outing parties.

OLD-TIME COURTESY IS URGED BY MAYOR

"Courtesy week!"

It started yesterday in Los Angeles, according to an announcement by Mayor George E. Cryer.

"Excuse me" is to be the slogan for this week in and about Los Angeles and the Mayor's campaign is backed by the Police Department street railway company, Automobile Club of Southern California and the Federation of Women's Clubs.

"Let's apply some old-fashioned horse-and-buggy courtesy to our present-day motoring," urged Cryer in announcing the special drive.

Highway Board Will Maintain Link of Desert

Maintenance work will be done by the California Highway Commission during 1925 on 133 miles of desert highway between Mojave and Independence, connecting the paved highway to Los Angeles with improved State highway in Owens Valley, Inyo county.

This is the announcement of State Highway Commissioner Nelson T. Edwards of Orange, who said that funds to undertake the work have been included in the maintenance budget of the engineering department for Division IX, in which the road is located.

The road will be straightened, widened and dragged and some surfacing will be done if funds prove sufficient.

FIVE MILLION CLUB MEMBERS VISUALIZED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Visualizing the status of American motoring when there are 5,000,000 organized car owners, the American Automobile Association is formulating plans far in advance of the times along with plans already under way for present and near-future use, according to a statement issued this week at the organization's headquarters in this city. Special emphasis is laid upon organizing car owners to carry on an effective campaign of public safety and to assist in expediting traffic movements.

Motor Truck Expansion is Gotham Topic

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Expansion of the motor-truck operations of the New York Central Railroad was predicted by G. C. Woodruff, general frieght agent of the road, at the open motor truck convention held at the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce offices here.

Another feature of the meeting was the recommendation that a committee of experts from both manufacturers and operators of commercial vehicles would be appointed to get basic facts of motor truck cost operation and to outline a cost-accounting system.

Gordon Lee of California, speaking for F. R. Fageol of the Fageol Motors Company, predicted the use of motor busses in every city in the United States of 1500 population or over.

YEAR'S PRODUCTION OF CARS, TRUCKS HEAVY

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Automobile production for December as estimated from shipping reports to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce today totalled 211,665 cars and trucks.

This brings the total United States production for the year to 3,560,813. The Canadian figures of certain companies, however, are not included, so that the grand total is estimated to be over 3,650,000.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—For the first time in history of radio invention, a device was used to unite an international meeting by providing facilities for speaking several languages at once at the conference of Mexican automotive mission held at offices of National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Translations of the English addresses were given in the adjoining room and transmitted in the foreign language to those from abroad by means of earphones.

Good will toward Mexico and appreciation of its highway problems were expressed in a resolution unanimously adopted at the conference.

CALLES REPRESENTED

Efforts are being made in Mexico to link up the various communities by highways of a type consistent with present resources and capable of serving largest part of population, according to S. Alatriste, who represented President Plutarco Elias Calles and Ministry of Commerce and Industry in Mexico.

Highways are also needed as feeders to railways of which there are relatively few for as large a country as Mexico. More adequate financing to carry out road programs, however, is necessary in opinion of Sr. Gustova Alana, publisher of El Automovil en Mexico, and William K. Boone of Jalapa, Mex.

STATE ASKS BIDS ON COAST ROAD GRADING

Bids have been called for by the California Highway Commission for the grading of the only section of the Coast Boulevard not already completed or under way between Santa Monica and Oxnard—the Arroyo Sequit to Las Flores Canyon unit on the Los Angeles county coast.

The bids will be opened February 9.

This is the announcement of Highway Commissioner Nelson T. Edwards of Orange.

Completion of this unit and the grading contracts now under way will open the Coast highway all along the ocean front from Santa Monica northward to Oxnard. The section just advertised is through the famous Ridge Ranch, and is 16.3 miles in length.

ARROWHEAD TRAIL LINK GETS FUNDS

San Bernardino County to Aid Nevada in Work on Short Cut

BY PAUL LOWRY

Another important move in the all-important but necessarily somewhat slow task of smoothing the interstate path of transcontinentalists en route to Los Angeles has just been taken.

This was the appropriation last week by the Board of Supervisors of San Bernardino county of $12,000 to develop and improve the road between Yermo and the Nevada State line—a cut-off link of the Arrowhead Trail.

The action of the San Bernardino county officials, according to dispatches from San Bernardino, was taken in conjunction with a project by which, it is stated, Nevada State highway officials will spend $75,000 in grading and surfacing the highway across that State.

Despite the fact that the Arrowhead Trail has been with the exception of its sections near Los Angeles and most of the Utah link in relatively bad shape since its inception, the route from Salt Lake City to Los Angeles has proved popular with interstate motorists for two reasons.

First: The highway traverses a most interesting section of the West: following the old Mormon trail through the quaint town of St. George, Utah, offering a handy side trip to Little Zion Canyon; and in Nevada and California giving a glimpse of the arid but luring Mojave Desert.

Second: When the average motorist leaves the East for California, in nine cases out of ten, he is bound for Los Angeles, and, wishes to get here as soon as possible. The Arrowhead Trail is ninety miles shorter than any other route from the East and North to the Coast, it is declared by San Bernardino officials.

Nevada road crews will begin work Monday, it is stated, and San Bernardino county workers within a few weeks. It is purposed to have the work done by early spring in time for summer travel.

GLOBE PILOTS TO DIG UP ONE BUCK

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

GLOBE (Ariz.) Jan. 17.—The City Council has passed an ordinance prescribing that each local driver of a motor car shall procure a license, for which a charge of $1 a year will be made.

It is expected that better check will be afforded by this on drivers, as the fee is considered merely nominal.

ROAD MARVELS ACCOMPLISHED

Highway Builders Disclose Huge Program

Fat Appropriations Are Now Anticipated

Figures Prove Magnitude of Auto Traffic

Highway traffic in the United States has increased so rapidly in the last few years that some of the statistics which have been collected seem hardly believable. For example, it was announced recently that during the summer months a volume of traffic amounting to 300,000,000 passenger miles per day was carried by the highways of the country, according to figures disclosed at a recent meeting of the American Road Building Association in Chicago.

Inasmuch as the railroads of the United States handled a volume of traffic amounting to 600,000,000 passenger miles per year, the importance of the highway in national development can hardly be overestimated.

Under the Federal aid system, which has been in existence for a number of years, new roads are being built in every section of the country which are paid for through the co-operation of the United States Bureau of Public Roads with the various State highway departments.

At the present session of Congress, it is probable that $80,000,000 will be appropriated for Federal aid during 1926. This money will, of course, be distributed among the States, each State matching the amount received from the Federal government and using it for the construction of roads approved by the United States Bureau of Public Roads of which Thomas H. MacDonald is the chief.

MUCH ROAD WORK

In every part of the country roads are being built and there is hardly a State which is not engaged in some notable highway project.

The State of New Jersey is building a new bridge across the Raritan River which will cost nearly $4,000,000 and which will handle traffic which on a busy day amount to nearly 18,000 vehicles. This bridge has been designated by the Legislature as the Victory Bridge.

In Uath the State is building with the assistance of Federal aid a highway across the great Salt Desert known as the Wendover Road. An unusual feature of this project is six miles of construction extending across the salt beds which are subject to flooding to a considerable depth. The depth of the salt varies, but averages about three feet. The embankment for this section of road was made by a trenching machine. Wooden culverts through the embankment are used to equalize the water level on both sides, at the times of year when the salt beds are flooded.

ILLINOIS ACTIVITY

Illinois, in the center of the country, has just finished project No. 9 which is a road 143 miles in length extending across the State and following the route of the Old National Trail from Marshall, near the Indiana line, to the western border of Illinois at East St. Louis. This is an important link in the nation's highway system.

Many other big highway projects, such as the Pacific Highway in California, and the new bridge over the Savannah River, which will make a new route to the south, also are being put through. One after another, the weak links in the country's chain of highways are being strengthened.

Put Your Hat in the Ring for This

One of the real "show cars" of the new line of Rickenbacker six-cylinder cars, offered in addition to the eights, is this swagger closed car which just has arrived for display in Los Angeles.

MAC says:---

Only about one-fourth of the power of most motors is used in propelling the car. The rest is dissipated in overcoming friction—a great part of it lost in AVOIDABLE friction due to improper lubrication!

This reveals very plainly why it is so necessary to keep a car always running under the height of lubricating efficiency.

Hundreds of Los Angeles car owners are finding that it pays them to pass the responsibility of keeping their cars properly lubricated over to me. My 12,000-mile service gives them the advantage of special service rates, discounts on lubricants, and a positive guarantee to replace any part that goes wrong from lack of lubrication while a car is in my care.

CALIFORNIA WINS AGAIN

industry. We refer to the manner in which the manufacturers effected the change from a period of overproduction to a period of underproduction without the unsettlement that often accompanies such a transition.

SOME OVERSPEEDED

Motor-car manufacturers at the outset of 1924 generally expressed the opinion that if production in 1924 should closely approximate that for 1923, the year would be regarded as a general satisfactory one. Individually, however, plans were made for an increase in production and by March passenger cars alone were being produced at the rate of 4,200,000 cars per year and the output of passenger cars and trucks was running at the rate of over 4,500,000 cars and trucks per year.

It was quickly realized that the country in a period of readjustment could not absorb production at this rate and steps were immediately taken to revise schedules downward with the result that by midsummer cars were being bought by users at a much faster rate than they were being delivered to dealers.

The result has been to re-establish a healthier situation in the trade from which it is expected substantial benefits will accrue in 1925. This condition in the industry, combined with the general prospect for increased prosperity, makes the outlook very bright.

PRODUCTION OVERDONE

The automobile business in 1924 was much better than it has been given credit for, declared C. S. Mott, vice-president of the General Motors Corporation. "General Motors sales to users have been less than 10 per cent under 1923," he added. "Production was overdone last year, which made necessary an underproduction later to balance up. The overconfidence of both manufacturers and dealers a year ago was responsible for this, which led to a shrinkage of profits, employment and confidence. The year 1925 will start with normal stocks and indications point to a volume of sales equal to 1923. Production will be closely controlled and the financial and credit position of our dealers will be greatly improved.

"Labor and material prices are more likely to go up than down and radical price cuts are not justified by future prospects or obtainable volume."

Automobile manufacturers have reason to feel satisfied with 1924 and optimistic about 1925, said Walter P. Chrysler, president of the Maxwell-Chrysler Motor Corporation. In Chrysler's opinion, the used-car problem is becoming less and less serious, inventories at factories and in the hands of dealers are small and the close of 1924 finds the motor industry in good physical shape.

"Dealer relationships were particularly satisfactory in 1924," said Mr. Chrysler. "Most dealers made substantial profits and no manufacturer can be regarded as successful unless his dealer is contented and that means making money.

"The coming year should be a good year. It will not be a boom year but it will be a year of safe, sane, substantial business. Production of motor cars is getting on a more scientific basis.

"This country is about to witness a wave of city rebuilding. It is inevitable. Our cities were planned in the days of horse-drawn vehicles and slow-moving carriages and wagons. And this is the age of motor cars. All of which means that cities must be rebuilt and readapted and that is going to mean good times.

"Here and there a city or county or State is going to stem the tide of events by penalizing the motor car owners. To do that is to discriminate against the man who uses the best means of transportation. For, after all, the motor car is simply a means of transportation and must be regarded as such."

Sales of Paige sixes increased more than 100 per cent in 1924 over 1923, according to figures just compiled by the distribution department of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company. "We attribute this demand increase to the public's appreciation of the Paige, as one of the fine cars of the age," says Harry M. Jewett, president of the company.

"With the success of the Jewett assured at the start of 1923 we endeavored to bring before the automobile buying world proof of our claim that Paige was equal to any of the quality-built cars on the market."

Franklin Manufacturing Company announces the promotion of Ralph Murphy to works manager and E. S. Marks to chief engineer. Murphy has been with the Franklin company continuously for fifteen years, and until the time of his promotion had been in charge of engineering and acting as assistant to the vice-president.

Marks for four years has been assistant designing engineer.

"In the natural sequence of things, I cannot look upon 1925 with anything other than with the greatest optimism so far as the motor-truck industry is concerned," said O. W. Hayes, president of the Republic Motor Truck Company. "On every hand the signs for one of our most prosperous years are not lacking.

"We have come to learn that the motor-truck industry is so vitally and closely knitted into the very fabric of our industrial and commercial life that whatever affects the latter is bound to have a similar reaction on the former. The motor truck is a big part of the actual production forces of the nation. Therefore, when our national industries, prosper, the motor-truck industry has work to do and the truck market booms. When conditions are not good, the demand for trucks lags and the market consequently falls off. Everything points to a prosperous year."

FIVE-CENT GAS TAX PROPOSED IN ARIZONA

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PHOENIX, Jan. 17.—According to report, the coming Legislature will be asked to raise the gasoline tax in Arizona from the present 3 cents a gallon to 5 cents, this with expectation of placing the burden of support of the roads wholly on the motorist, possibly cutting all road taxes from the budget.

The measure drafted is said to turn the entire sum over to the State. It is urged that this gallonage tax is about the only way that the tourist or nonresident may be charged for use of the State's highways.

NEW TRAFFIC CODE READY

At the intersection of Los Angeles street and Seventh street.

CROSSWALKS. Pedestrians have right of way in crosswalks. When a pedestrian signals by holding hand palm out toward traffic, the drivers must permit pedestrian to pass before entering crosswalk.

JAY-WALKING. Pedestrians must not walk in roadways other than at crosswalks if such action interferes with movement of vehicles. Pedestrians must cross roadways by the most direct route, and in the Central Traffic District and in business districts may cross only by crosswalks. Pedestrians must obey traffic signals.

STANDING PROHIBITED. Vehicles shall not stand by the curbs which are painted red.

LOADING ZONES. Vehicles must not be stopped longer than is necessary to load and unload at curbs painted yellow. Three minutes maximum allowed for passengers and twenty minutes for merchandise.

PARKING PROHIBITED. Vehicles shall not be stopped longer than is necessary to load and unload at any place in the Central Traffic District between the hours of 4:30 p.m. and 6 p.m. Same limit is for loading zones.

PARKING LIMITED. Vehicles must not be parked for longer than forty-five minutes in the Central Traffic District, nor for longer than one hour in a business district between the hours of 7 a.m. and 6 p.m., nor at any place in the city for longer than thirty minutes between the hours of 2 a.m. and 4 a.m.

PARKING POSITION. No vehicle shall be parked closer than two feet to any other vehicle, nor other than parallel with and within one foot of the curb except where angle parking is required by the police.

RIGHT OF WAY. Vehicles must be removed from tracks as soon as possible after signal by motorman.

OVERTAKING STREET CARS. Vehicles must not be driven past moving street-cars within 100 feet of an intersection being approached. Vehicles shall be stopped to the rear of the nearest door of a street-car loading or unloading passengers. Vehicles after so stopping may proceed with caution if there is a marked safety zone in the roadway. Vehicles must remain standing while the car is loading, however, where there is no safety zone.

Mountain spring water is piped to all parts frequented by campers and many roads and trails have been completed.

A unique feature of the new county playground is that the thirty miles of road making accessible the west side of the park were constructed by honor prisoners from the County Jail. The precedent established by the State was followed by the county in allowing prisoners an opportunity to work in the open at useful labor, for which they are paid at the rate of 50 cents a day, in addition to being clothed, fed and housed comfortably.

NOW SNOW CLAD

The last storm covered the park with a blanket of snow, but this did not remain except in the coldest spots, although an altitude of some 7000 feet is reached and nippy evenings are the order during the winter months. But many Southern Californians so rarely see snow that many are expected to take advantage of the park in winter after a storm.

It is the intention of the County Board of Supervisors to keep the roads open and in good condition so that the park may take its place as an all-year playground for residents of Southern California.

HIGHWAY COMMISSION OPENS NEW STATION

A permanent station to be the headquarters for maintenance work in the vicinity has been established in Santa Barbara by the California Highway Commission, which has completed purchase of a tract of land 130 feet by 343 feet on West Haley street, near the intersection of San Pasqual street.

BIGGER MOTOR IN NEW SIXES

Rickenbacker's Models Now Much Alike

Coach-Brougham is Added to Eights

Improvements Under Hoods Announced

The Rickenbacker six-cylinder line is continued for 1925 with a larger and materially improved engine, it was announced at the New York Auto Show, and last week the first of the new models arrived for local display.

A coach-brougham has been added to the vertical eight line, which otherwise is continued without change. Balloon tires are standard equipment on the six and optional at no extra cost on the eight, it was noted.

As a result of the changes made in the six, its design conforms very closely to the eight, and many parts of the two engines are now interchangeable.

The piston displacement of the engine has been raised from 218.6 to 236.4 cubic inches by an increase in the cylinder diameter from 3 1-8 to 3 1-4 inches, with the result that the car is now said to be able practically to duplicate the acceleration of the eight, factory tests having shown a high-gear pick-up from five to twenty-five miles per hour in less than seven seconds.

The engine is also said to operate more smoothly on all speeds, due partly to the change from a three-bearing crankshaft to a dynamically-balanced seven-bearing design.

The novel method of camshaft lubrication employed in the eight has been incorporated in the six-cylinder engine. The shaft is supported in six bearings on a longitudinal compartment which is maintained full of oil by overflow from the pressure relief valve and by splash from the crankcase. The inner wall of this compartment is of such height that the crankshaft operates continuously in a bath.

No changes have been made in the chassis except an increase in the steering-gear reduction to give easier steering with balloon tires.

The six bodies are all done in the popular two-tone color scheme, with the darker shade covering the top of the hood and forming a belt-line panel extending clear around the bodies. The tops are black. The colors used are maroon on the phaeton, blue on the coupe and sedan and green on the coach-brougham.

The coach-broughams are comfortable five-passenger, four-door closed bodies. The rear quarters are covered with leather and have landeau irons. Space is provided at the rear for a trunk, which is included in the equipment of the eight. The upholstery is tan worsted in a shade to match the exterior finish.

Yes, Sweeties Like Curtains, Says Top Man

"The upholstery of any car will eventually wear out. When it does, judging from the interiors of thousands of cars hereabouts, motorists seem to think it is either too costly to recover them or that it cannot be done," says C. C. Eichenhofer, proprietor of the Atlas Auto Works, 1338 South Hope street, complete body reconditioners.

"When a car's upholstery has seen its best days, there are two solutions. One is to cover up this shabbiness by installing seat covers, or by having new upholstery made. Both are easily and inexpensively done. Carpets wear and shred out more rapidly than upholstery, because of the hard usage they receive. When this happens new carpets can easily be made.

"The majority of cars do not come equipped with roller curtains, which protect from the burning sun and from inquisitive people. Women with tender complexions bewail this fact, and to lovers it is criminal negligence on the part of the maker. So many calls have we received for curtains that we have included this work to give motorists a complete body reconditioning plant under one roof."

'CANNON BALL' CHIEF TESTER

Fearless Baker Will Pilot Eddie's Stuff

Holder of Transcontinental Record Honored

Work Will be Similar to That of Flyers

"Cannon Ball" Baker of Los Angeles, known as a meteor of the motor industry, has been appointed chief test pilot of the Rickenbacker Motor Company, Detroit.

Baker's new title, it was announced in eastern dispatches, has been borrowed from the lingo of the flying field. It fits him exactly because his fearlessness and his dare-devil exploits class him with the [illegible] clan rather than with the more prosaic coterie of auto race drivers.

"For the benefit of the layman, it may be explained that in aviation parlance a 'test pilot' is a man of such skill and instinct that he will attempt to fly 'anything with wings, a prop, and a tail skid,'" the announcement states.

"So when a new plane is offered the government a 'test pilot' is assigned to see if it can get off the ground and stay in the air.

"This class has three or four [illegible].

"[illegible] Harris and Macready are two of the best and most famous.

"[illegible] Lees is another but he is a civilian, whose services are [illegible] by inventors to try their new [illegible].

"His admirers say Lees would fly a kitchen table or a barn door if it had power enough and he a [illegible].

"'Cannon Ball' Baker's work is similar to that of Lees.

"He will drive an automobile [illegible] over any road—up or down any hill, night or day, at the utmost speed of which it is capable."

Baker has participated in more than [illegible] long-distance motorcycle and automobile grinds, crossing the [illegible] continent sixty-eight times. These performances have carried him over more than three-quarters of a million miles or an average of thirty times around the world. Since the beginning of his career he has traveled an average of eighty-two miles per day.

In [illegible], through mud, fog, rain, [illegible], desert sand and [illegible] mountain trails, Cannon Ball [illegible] an automobile from New York to Los Angeles in four [illegible] hours and forty-three [illegible], establishing a new transcontinental one-man-driving record which has never been broken. Many other drivers have looked at the record with jealous eyes, but [illegible] thought that Baker's time will stand until he, himself, decides to knock off a few hours.

Baker first gained recognition in motor circles, when he was one of the hard riding, daring motorcycle racing boys. During his [illegible] years of activity in this hazardous sport, he had many narrow escapes but always, through the kindness of Dame Fortune, he came out with only minor injuries.

In later years when he began to grow too heavy to snake his two-wheel racing mounts around the curves, he quit the motorcycle game and entered the motor-car field. At constant intervals during the last seven years he has startled manufacturers and the public with the amazing performances that he has been able to extract from a motor. Almost every year he has completed a performance that has been declared an outstanding achievement, and it is expected that 1925 will be no exception.

Having driven successively the fastest and hardest cars he could find, and needing a superlative mount in his quest for more words to conquer, Baker chose the Rickenbacker.

Thousand Miles a Week in This Car

D. H. Chapman of the National Automobile Club, photoed here with his Oakland six, kicks the car over the road at the rate of 1000 miles a week, he says, covering a territory from San Miguel and Tia Juana in the south to Yuma and Bishop.

PRICE REDUCTION ON AUBURN CARS

Coincident with the arrival in Los Angeles the past week of the new Auburn English coach came a letter from the factory to the White Auto Company, local distributors, authorizing a reduction in prices on sixes and the eight-in-line series.

The reductions, according to O. R. Fuller, president of the company, range from $150 on the 6-43 coach, to $395 on the eight-in-line brougham. Detailed, the other reductions to be applied are: On the sedan, $200, and English coach, $300, both being models embraced in the eight-in-line series.

Full equipment, with balloon tires, four-wheel brakes and bumpers, is included at the new prices.

Mileage of This Motor is Monster

Between July 28 and November 29, 1924, an Oakland touring car ran up a mileage total of 19,502 miles over every conceivable kind of road to be found in California, while in the service of the National Automobile Club, it has just been disclosed here.

"The Oakland touring car which I am driving," says D. H. Chapman, district representative of the National Automobile Club, "has averaged more than 1000 miles a week since the first day we received it from Reeve Gartzmann, Inc.

"In the first five months the mileage showed at 19,502 and since that time it has been increased to such an extent that the average per week is well above 1000 miles. This is a most remarkable showing when you understand that more than 50 per cent of this total was run up over country and desert roads.

"The Oakland that I drive is used on the territory in this district which extends from San Miguel south to the Mexican boundary, then east to Yuma and north to Bishop. It is in this district that some of the worst as well as some of the best roads of California are found.

"Since July 28 the Oakland has been in constant use and subjected to the intense heat of the desert, rain, sleet, snow, sand storms and mud. During this period it has not lost one minute from service.

"For twenty-five years I have been connected with some part of the automotive industry and have in that time driven practically every make of motor car, both foreign and domestic and I have yet to find one that ever excelled the performance of this Oakland."

SEEKING SAFETY

TUCSON, Jan. 17.—Enthusiasm is reported over a Safe Drivers' Club, initiated by the Daily Citizen, with active support by many local automobile supply firms, which are distributing the radiator emblems. United effort is to be made toward checking reckless driving in this section.

FAST RUN MADE

PHOENIX, Jan. 17.—A Hudson, lately was diven from Phoenix to Long Beach in thirteen hours and thirty minutes, not running time. The driver was Paul P. Barnes, a Long Beach tire man.

AUTO FREIGHT LINE

PHOENIX, Jan. 17.—Though objections to the paralleling service were made by the Southern Pacific, the State Corporation Commission has granted a franchise for a motor freight service between this city and Case Grande.

This Camshaft Makes Valves Quite Silent

"The camshaft on the Ruggles truck is forged integral, heat treated, hardened and ground. The cam form is such that the tappet clearance is gradually taken up before the opening point is reached, making almost noiseless valve operation. The bearings are large enough to permit the removal of the shaft without interference from the cams. These bearings run in removable bronze bushings, pressed in the crankcase. The valve tappets are of mushroom adjustable type, and are provided with removable guides," says L. P. Poyer of D. F. Poyer & Son, Ruggles truck distributor here.

"The manifold of the Ruggles truck is of the hot-spot type, one piece, and is the final result of numerous experiments to arrive at a manifold that would furnish dry gas yet without loss of efficiency at heavy loads. It is neither complicated in design nor difficult of manufacture. Excellent gas distribution is obtained through a very wide speed range.

"The four timing gear set is made of two steel and two cast-iron helically cut gears. Due to the rigid construction and the large shafts and bearings employed the gear set is very quiet. Hardened thrust plugs with adjustable screws in the front cover take up the end play of the idler shaft and camshaft, the thrust being taken by special washers placed between the gears and thrust faces on the crankcase. Both idler shaft and accessory shaft are provided with babbitt-lined removable bushings. The large size of this shaft and the babbitt-lined bearings do away with the trouble almost invariably found on engines using a smaller shaft and bronze bearings. All the oil from the relief valve is discharged over these gears, insuring long life and freedom from excessive wear."

TRAILER-BOAT SUCCESS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PHOENIX, Jan. 17.—The Phoenix trailer boat has returned after a spin into California, where it was launched on Salton Sea and on Eastlake Park in Los Angeles. On the road a speed of thirty to thirty-five miles an hour was maintained without trouble. The driver was one of its inventors, B. H. Gibbs.

How to Prepare it for Camping Tour

By E. H. Scott

Tips on Choosing Camp Sites and Radio Set for Tour

All over the country are dotted camp sites maintained by various towns and communities. Before you start, in addition to a good road map, secure a camp site guide that gives the location and lists the facilities available at each camp, for some of them are much better than others, having not only running water but electric lights, shower baths, etc.

While these camp sites are fine they are usually very crowded and an independent camp in some quiet spot along the road is to be preferred if you can find a place that is near good water, has a certain amount of shade and a level spot for the tent. Do not stop near a sluggish stream or a low lying spot or you may find your life made miserable by mosquitoes. Do not forget to take a bottle of citronella or other liquid that can be used to drive away these pests. A few yards of mosquito netting takes up little space and usually proves very useful, especially if your tent is not provided with mosquito doors and windows.

Before you leave a camp, be sure to clean up carefully and do not leave a pile of opened cans and papers scattered about. You know that you enjoy camping in a nice clean spot and if every camper would clean up properly before he left a camp, it would add to everyone's pleasure.

If you use a wood fire for cooking purposes, be sure to see that it is built in such a way that there is no danger of its setting fire to dried grass or trees in the vicinity, and be sure the fire is out before you leave the camp.

KEEP CAMPING SITE NEAT AND CLEAN—BURN OR BURY RUBBISH

To get the most out of a camping tour, do not make plans to cover more than 100 miles a day. In fact it is better to just plan in a general way where you are going, then when you come to an interesting spot, you can stop for as long as you like and enjoy it.

By the time you have all your camping equipment loaded, you have added about half as much weight on the car as the weight of the driver and passengers amount to. This means that when the car is on the road, it is carrying about half as much more weight than its normal load amounts to. This is another reason why you should take things easy. If you drive over 25 miles an hour with an overloaded car, you are liable to have plenty of trouble before your tour is finished. If you have a lot of weight at the rear, you may possibly strip a gear in the rear axle if you suddenly accelerate the engine when the car is going slowly.

Let in the clutch gently and open up the throttle gradually so that the car moves off smoothly. If you let in the clutch with a bang and speed up the engine so that the car jumps forward with a jolt, you are putting a very severe strain on every part of the driving mechanism and this kind of start is especially bad for a car when it is overloaded.

Last season a radio set was carried by thousands of campers and provided one of the most enjoyable experiences of the whole tour. The writer used a very small compact set that can be built complete with dry cell batteries in a case 12"x7"x8". This little outfit with a loud speaker unit and a piece of cardboard rolled into a tube brings in stations within a 50-mile radius quite clearly, and brings in stations up to 500 miles on the head phones.

A GOOD PORTABLE RADIO SET WILL PROVIDE MANY HOURS OF ENTERTAINMENT

Use small lattice wound variometers and mount the sockets for the U. V. 199 tubes on a piece of spongy rubber. For an aerial use a length of flexible lamp cord about 150 ft. long and weight one end so that you can throw it over the branch of a tree. For a ground connection, solder a piece of the wire to an iron stake 12" by ½" round. This circuit is very selective and efficient and is a good set for permanent use as well as for a camping tour.

HARDY FLAYS AUTO POSTERS

Universal Law Against "Evil" Urged

Olds Head Waxes Warm on Subject

Vision-Obscuring Curtains Also Condemned

No one knows why the bathing girl on the windshield has grown to be so popular—but there she is, alone or in groups, fat or thin, seductive or comic. And wherever she is, she continues a hazard, because she shuts off a certain amount of view, and makes a "blind spot" that may very well be just enough to cause an accident. Unimpaired sight is man's most blessed sense, and why anyone, any time, anywhere, anyhow wants to deprive himself of its fullest possible measure is something that seems to me impossible to understand.

In the foregoing words, A. B. C. Hardy, member of the Traffic Planning and Safety Committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, and president of the Olds Motor Works, assailed this week in an interview the 'windshield sticker' habit.

"In the old days of chivalry, if a knight wanted to make an especial impression on his lady fair," he said, "he sometimes went into battle with a patch over one eye, under a vow that he would not remove it until he had done some great deed of valor. It is a matter of fairly easy guess that the mortality among these temporarily one-eyed knights was fairly heavy.

FOOLISH LADDIES

"Foolish as these gentlemen were, they at least risked only their own skins—and lives—for their opponents had all the advantage. But the man who partially blinds himself by blocking off part of his vision while he is driving an automobile is risking not only his own life, but the lives of other people—and that's the important thing, for many of the idiots who plaster their windshields with posters could very well be spared. In fact, their removal would do away with a very perceptible hazard in public safety.

"The automobile is a servant—not a toy—and it should be equipped to serve. Dangling red devils, and all the rest of the trash that is sold to hang inside automobile windows constitute a driving hazard and ought to be prohibited by a universal law, as they are now in several States. It seems a remarkable thing that it should be necessary to enact legislation to keep a man from deliberately shutting off part of his own eyesight, but that is what has been forced upon the States by the double short-sightedness of some of their citizens.

AND BAD CURTAINS

"Those cute little curtains that are affected by certain drivers are equally to be objected to. Aside from the fact that they constantly offer an undesirable obscurity to the occupants of the automobile, they shut off the driver's vision to the sides and to the rear—and that's the thing that counts. There are times—at beaches, for instance—when curtains are a good thing; but they ought not to be made a screen for impropriety, and they ought not to be permitted to interfere with a driver's vision while he is responsible for guiding his car.

"If a driver needs anything in the world, even before average intelligence, he needs a clear vision ahead, behind and at the sides. The modern automobile as it reaches the owner offers him this. And anything that interferes unduly with it is to be condemned."

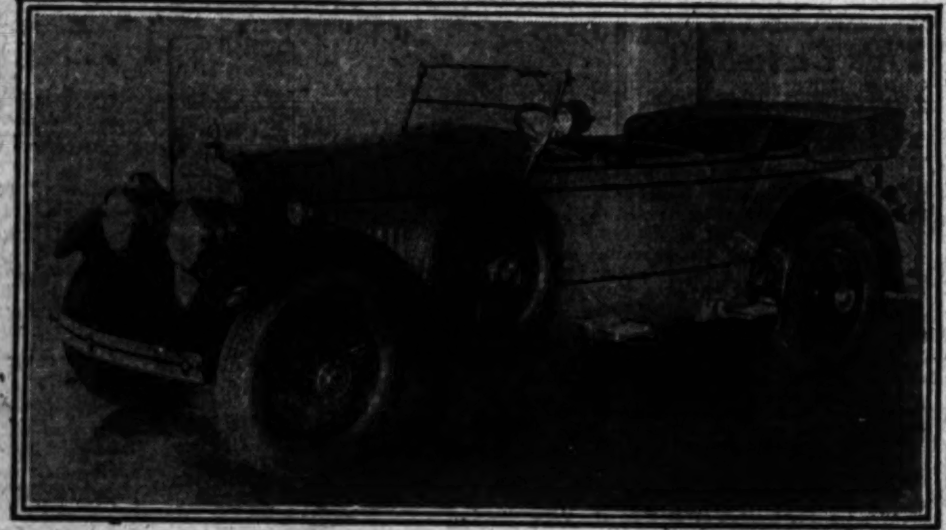
Displayed in Private Motor Salon Here



Walter L. Elbe, Cunningham eight distributor, is showing this ultratailored sport touring car in the private salon of new Cunninghams which opened Thursday at 1330 South Flower street.

CAR SALON OF EIGHTS IS OPENED

Inspired by Imported Auto Exhibit, W. L. Elbe Launches Show

Inspired by the imported car salon, held recently at the Commodore Hotel, New York City, which he personally attended while at the Gotham Silver Jubilee national automobile show, Walter L. Elbe, distributor for the Cunningham eight, last Thursday launched a private salon of Cunningham eight motor cars at his showrooms, 1338 South Flower street.

New-body style of the 1925 series, of which there is a total of twenty different open and inclosed models, were put on display, and visitors at the salon expressed keen interest in the new motor and chassis designed by David Ferguson, reckoned one of America's foremost automotive engineers, especially of the finer-car class.

"Many radical changes in the motor and chassis, new to the automobile world, the new braking system designed by Ferguson; the superb coach work and finish, which are not excelled by the finest that Europe can produce—these things make for really superb motor cars that astound all who see them," said Elbe yesterday.

The Cunningham distributor added that, after seeing the exhibition of imported cars in New York City, and the reception which they met, he decided that, inasmuch as his own line contained cars the equal or superior of the foreign-made vehicles, he should increase his original order for cars in 1925.

The salon will be continued all this week, it is stated.

Continuing with the location of the former Walter M. Brown Motors, Inc., former retail dealers and distributors, at Washington Boulevard and South Figueroa street, and the Hollywood branch location as well, the factory branch, patterned after the "model" branch operated by Durant in San Francisco, has already taken over the sales and service of Star and Durant motor cars.

Tom R Johnson

The Los Angeles organization is headed by H. W. Curtis, sales director of the Durant Motor Company of California, who has already gathered together his Star and Durant sales and service forces and the branch is in active operation.

Curtis announced yesterday the appointment of Tom R. Johnson as sales manager of the new Los Angeles factory branch of the Star Motor Company. Johnson is widely known in the motor car sales field in Los Angeles and was sales manager for Walter M. Brown prior to the establishment of the Star branch.

The service department of the Star organization will be in charge of T. H. Herlihy, formerly connected in a similar capacity with the Down Town Chevrolet agency. Herlihy has had many years' experience in the automobile business and his marked success as a service executive led to his choice by Curtis in the formation of the new Star organization.

T H Herlihy

It is believed by factory officials that a direct-factory branch, under the supervision of factory officials, will fill in Los Angeles and Southern California a long-felt need, because of the high regard in which factory branches in the larger centers are held, and because of the great reception which has been given the San Francisco branch by Star and Durant owners and by motorists generally. The idea of factory contact with the owner appeals in a great way to motor-car owners, De Vaux said in making the announcement, and without question the Los Angeles branch will meet with great success.

The factory branch retail sales department has arranged a complete display of the new models of both Durant and the 1925 Star with the "million-dollar motor," which is being featured by Star dealers all over the country.

STYLE LEADERSHIP ASCRIBED TO JORDAN

"Style leadership has always been a powerful factor in the progress of the Jordan company, and leadership in ideas means leadership in material success," said Harry Lord of the Southern California Jordan distributing plant in discussing automotive advancement.

"This is not boasting, but facts that are backed up by the belief of hundreds of Jordan owners right here in Los Angeles," said Lord.

"Many Jordan ideas came out ahead of the times and have proved their value by developments. Jordan started business in August, 1916, when most cars were either black or blue and all the talk was mechanical. Jordan started style talk, and look at cars today."

FETES BATTERY MEN

Elmer Wallace, manager of the Consolidated Battery Company, 1510 Santa Fe avenue, entertained members of the battery and electrical craft of the Los Angeles Automobile Trade Association last week with an informal supper in connection with the craft's regular monthly meeting.

SIRENS SOUND MERCY SIGNALS

Speeding City Autos Guard Lives, Property

New Cars Give Augmented Public Protection

Police and Fire Heads Get Latest Models

When the Gamewell signals set [illegible] a-clanging in the fire station, [illegible] emergency calls flash into the [illegible] stations in Los Angeles, it [illegible] but an instant until sirens shriek [illegible] traffic gives way to blue and [illegible] cars that roar down the avenue [illegible] on a mission of saving [illegible] lives and property.

The drivers of these cars are [illegible] whose nerve is steel, yet who [illegible] to cars they drive to function perfectly as they zig-zag through the traffic lanes at high speed, or come to sudden stops [illegible] danger cuts from side streets.

Today the police and fire departments are experiencing a new efficiency in motor cars for hard service. These cars for the most part have now been in use for several months past in both divisions of public safety of Los Angeles, and have won the confidence and [illegible] of the men who use them, and of the officials who purchased them after making tests. The services these cars already have given have involved the saving of life and property in every section of Los Angeles.

Chief of Police R. Lee Heath and Fire Chief Ralph Scott both decided months ago that the service given by the Studebaker cars which had been used in their departments was not only satisfactory but really phenomenal, and when the new duplex-phaetons were announced by the Paul G. Hoffman Company both officials made an inspection and tests at once.

Now there are ten big sixes in use in the police department, and [illegible] special sixes in use in the fire department. The police cars were chosen by Capt. Charles L. Sweeney, purchasing agent for the police department.

Chief Heath himself is driving a new big six sedan, equipped with hydraulic four-wheel brakes. Central station has three big sixes which are used as speed cars, and one big six equipped with a patrol body. The Hollywood, Lincoln Heights and University police stations each have a big six speed car and the University station has a big six ambulance.

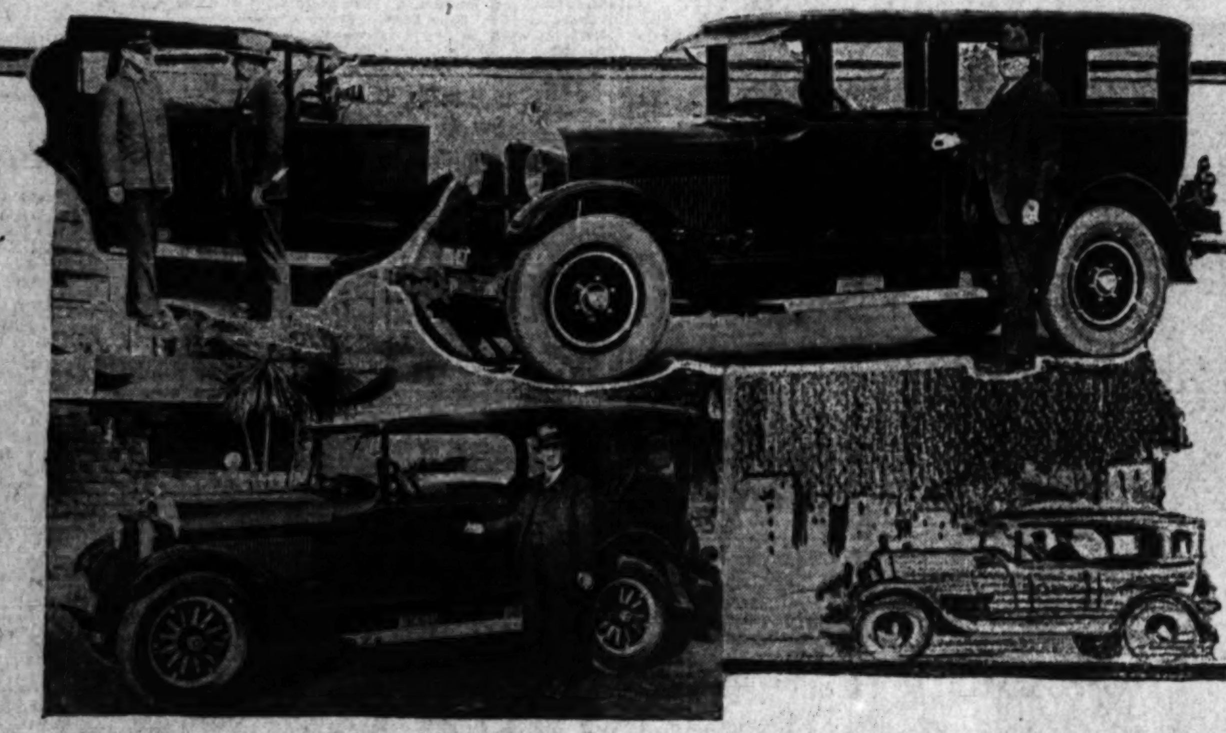
Another big six is now being equipped with an ambulance body for use at the Newton station. All the new police cars are also equipped with hydraulic four-wheel brakes.

The fire department is using four special six roadsters for battalion chiefs and squadron heads, and three special six touring cars.

"The duplex-phaetons especially have won the police officers," said Chief Heath, "because they can be converted instantly from open to closed cars with just a motion of the arm. The officers are given protection and comfort in all weather. The four-wheel hydraulic brakes insure absolute safety in the worst kind of traffic, and the balloon tires insure traction on the most slippery surfaces. The Studebakers were chosen because they gave satisfaction and the right kind of service demanded by police officers who must act quickly, and feel confident they will get where they want to go, in absolute safety."

"The new Studebakers have proved their real value in the fire department," said Chief Scott," because they have speed, endurance, hang to the road no matter how rough the going is, and will stop just as quickly as it is possible to stop with the four-wheel brakes under hydraulic pressure. The firemen have tried the Studebakers, and are thoroughly satisfied they will always give the same degree of service as they have to date."

Traffic Halts as These Cars Shriek Through Streets



Glaring crimson head and spotlights, or distinctively shrieking sirens, announce the approach through crowded metropolitan Los Angeles lanes of these Studebaker six-cylinder police and fire vehicles. Upper left, Fire Chief Ralph Scott, and Gerald Sullivan, Paul G. Hoffman Company salesman; upper right, Police Chief Heath and his new Big Six Studebaker sedan with hydraulic four-wheel brakes; below, Capt. Charles L. Sweeney, purchasing agent for the police department.

ANGELENOS ENJOY BIG AUTO TRIP

Three Months' Journey in Northwest Called Perfect One

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sellinger of Los Angeles feel quite proud of the performance of their Apperson six sedan. They just returned to Southern California after a 5500-mile trip, which took them as far north as Vancouver, British Columbia. At no time, they reported, did they have a bit of motor or tire trouble.

Their itinerary included Lake Crescent, Seattle, Portland, Port Townsend, the beautiful Columbia River Highway, Willows, Sacramento and other points between the State capital and Los Angeles.

"Mr. and Mrs. Sellinger were gone approximately three months," explained Clifford Mutchler, sales manager of the Apperson Motor Car Company, Southern California Apperson distributors. "They averaged between twenty and twenty-one miles to the gallon of gasoline and used practically no oil or water. The various grades held no terrors for them—the driver stepped on the throttle and that was all there was to it.

"Before leaving Southern California the speedometer showed between 1500 and 1600 miles."

In talking about their trip, Mr. Sellinger declared their hardest driving was on the way home.

"We ran into snow and rainstorms continually," he said. "However, we did not use a skid chain even on coming over the mountains. In the Siskiyous we ran into a blizzard—the car was covered with ice and snow, and we were in this kind of weather almost to Willows. But in spite of the rigorous climate we did not have to stop for chains. In Redding there was about nine inches of snow.

"In our opinion there is no scenery anywhere on the trip which can surpass that of the Columbia River Highway. One cannot appreciate it until he has driven over this wonderful concrete ribbon which parallels the Columbia River for miles and miles, passing so close to many of the water-falls that their spray often moistens near-by automobiles.

"The mechanical leverless gearshift is the greatest thing I have ever used. Shifting in the mountains with it puts the Apperson in a class by itself for this kind of driving. I wouldn't be without a car that has one of them for anything after our trip and the way it worked."

LOW-PRICED CLOSED CARS OF HIGH VALUE

Heralding the Peerless six line of closed cars at their new low delivery prices announced two weeks ago, as the greatest high-grade closed car value now offered by any manufacturer, discriminating buyers throughout the country are turning to these cars, according to a wire just received by Stanley W. Smith, head of the Southern California Peerless distributorship, from D. A. Burke, president of the Peerless Motor Car Company.

It is pointed out by Smith that these cars are not special coach bodies, designed and manufactured to sell at these low figures, but the regular Peerless six sedans and coupes which, since their introduction a few months ago, have found their way into the hands of a host of satisfied owners.

Coachmanship of New Auto Given Praise

Exemplifying the very highest grade of coachmanship of which Stearns designers are capable, Lynn C. Buxton announces the newest Stearns sedan for five, powered by the big six sleeve-valve Knight engine.

While no radical changes are apparent in the new Stearns-Knight models, Buxton pointed out that there are many little improvements, additions and refinements which always are of importance to the choicy motorist.

The same general body lines, prophetic of a foreign and domestic combination in finest motor-car style, characteristic of all Stearns cars, are retained; but this new sedan seems to be both more compact and still roomier.

Buxton says this effect has been obtained by a painstaking study on the part of Stearns' engineers and designers in eliminating all excess weight and at the same time utilizing every possible inch of space for passenger comfort.

REGULAR RANCH

"How would you like to have a 470-acre ranch in California?" asked Harold L. Arnold. "It might include some hills, a fertile valley with a little river, several ranch houses and barns and an orchard or two. Suppose this ranch was under a roof—it would then just be equal in area to the factory floor space under roofs where the Lincoln is made."

HIGH POWER IN NEW CAR

Factory Tests Here Show Motor Flexible

"Million-Dollar Star" is Given Praise

Real "Multicylinder Class" Claimed for Car

Making power, as well as economical operation, among the predominating features of the new 1925 Star cars, the "million-dollar motor," one of the latest developments in automotive engineering and proved by successful tests to be a still greater advancement for the new Star cars, is announced by the Durant Motor Company of California.

The new power plant is said to place the 1925 Star car among the leaders in four-cylinder motors manufactured today. According to factory engineers, the uninitiated will have a hard time distinguishing its operation from that of multicylinder power plant, because of the many refinements that have been made to greatly increase the power.

Brought about by gradual development rather than any sudden change in manufacture, the new motor, which has been tested in thousands of miles of actual operation, will win even higher favor for Star car among light-car owners, it was said yesterday by Walter M. Brown Motor Company, distributor, who is featuring a display of the new car.

POWER TESTED

That the power of the new motor will be forcibly brought before the motoring public during the next few months, factory engineers are devising tests that will be held by them and by dealers all over the western territory. Several informal tests, under the supervision of newspaper men in Oakland have revealed the "million-dollar motor" as having remarkable qualities for power and acceleration built into it.

In one of these tests, actual timing of acceleration showed a pick-up of from five to twenty-five miles per hour in second gear, in four seconds, a record that is believed never before been equaled by a light four-cylinder motor.

Now low prices are announced simultaneously by the factory, affecting all models of the 1925 Star motor cars.

EVEN BALLOONS

All models are equipped with four-wheel brakes, of the locomotive type, which have already proven successful on thousands of Durant-produced cars; balloon tires are standard equipment on some models, and optional on others.

The need for four-wheel brake equipment is becoming more and more evident in the light-car field, according to Walter Brown.

This, it is stated, is because of the fact that in light cars, the utmost in braking is necessary because there is but a minimum of weight inherent in the car to hold it on the road with a severe application of the service brake. This is not the case with heavier cars, which are pointed to as bearing out Star's contention, even with the additional weight of the larger cars, which have joined the ranks of four-wheel-brake users in great numbers.

Announcements of other 1925 models show that Star is still the only light car in its class to have standard equipment of four-wheel brakes.

The refinements are announced by factory executives as illustrating the "progress that has been made in automotive engineering, as well as the possibilities in volume production, in so reducing manufacturing costs as to permit the use of materials and workmanship formerly found only in cars of higher price classes.

TRIES NEW CAR

Louis Chevrolet, who with Harry A. Miller, shares the honor of being the only race car builder to win the Indianapolis 500-mile international sweepstakes twice, drove one of the new Jewetts about the streets of Detroit soon after the announcement of the new models.

Most of the civilized people of early times had few tools, the supply being limited generally to knives, hoes and weapons. This was because practically all of the great countries of ancient times were deficient in natural supplies of iron.

MORE MILES PER CAR

BY RAY McNAMARA

With the idea in mind that personal comfort and position in drivers' seat contributes largely to safety, can you imagine anything more annoying and dangerous than side curtains flapping in the wind; driver trying to hold the curtain with one hand and steer with the other, or badly discolored and patched curtain lights through which it is impossible to see? Torn curtains and loose curtain fasteners on the motor car, aside from the dangers of colds, pneumonia and accidents, look very sloppy and a car in such condition on the boulevards plays the part of a tramp in the eyes of the motoring world.

I don't believe there are any new cars on the market this day and age minus curtain rods. However, to the users of older cars not having this convenience, they would be surprised after a little investigation how cheaply such an arrangement can be built into a car.

Shops specializing on top and curtain repairs are available now even in the smallest towns where celluloids can be replaced, torn curtains and fasteners can be repaired or replaced as the occasion demands at a very nominal sum.

ALTERING CURTAINS

When the front curtain design does not afford clear vision to right and left you can have the lights altered to suit your convenience when curtains are being repaired. The old curtain serving as a pattern for form can be left with the trimmer and when ready it will require only a few minutes of your time for the fasteners to be located properly or altered to provide a more secure curtain mounting.

An economical handy man with a sewing machine in his domicile can repair and alter the curtain design very easily. By sewing a hem in the vertical edge of curtains where the door opens a place is formed for the curtain rod. The rods can be made from three-eighths inch cold roll steel and metal sockets for holding same in door can be purchased at most any hardware store. After shaping rods to their respective doors they should be painted or plated to prevent rust, then marked so that you will not have to guess which door they are for. The same applies to curtains; these should be marked right front, left front, and so on.

In connection with leaky tops, remember that so long as you have a foundation for top, recovering is a comparatively cheap operation. However, do not select the cheapest material, for these water stain at the seams for several inches each side and develop leaks very quickly. It seems that the drill or fabric to which the waterproof coating is applied on cheap material has a wick action which tends to draw the water in and discolor the underside for a large area near tacks and sewed seams. The same applies to side curtain material, particularly around the seams where celluloid lights are sewed in. I have seen some cheap curtain jobs where water works in fast enough to drip.

KEEP OUT WEATHER

A good grade of heavy waterproof material is more important on side curtains than on roof, also a good thick grade of celluloid should be used and the lights should be arranged so that they do not bend or buckle when the doors are opened and closed.

The trouble with most curtain designs is not enough fasteners are used. With a sufficient number of these properly spaced and located, closed-car comfort is very closely approached. This also distributes the strains imposed by high winds and renders the fastener eyes less liable to tear.

I never fully realized the danger of curtains flapping in the wind until a year ago while traveling in Arizona by auto stage from Jerome to Prescott. The drive is approximately thirty-eight miles over mountain and valley and the regular driver on this occasion did not show up so an idle barber was assigned to carry us to our destination safely. Having formed an acquaintance with the nature of the mountain road a few days before when I came in with an automobile dealer who was a careful driver, I cinched a seat on the right side of the stage car, or, in other words, on the inside away from the precipice as a matter of safety at least until I could get a line on the operator. Leaving Jerome, a mining town situated halfway up the mountain with seven and a half miles to go to the summit, we started out in the rain, and it seemed that the driver's curtain just would not stay fastened. He persisted in running twenty-five miles per hour up the winding dangerous slippery road holding the curtain and driving single-handed.

FEELS NERVOUS

Occasionally on the short straightaways he would take his hand off the wheel and his eyes off the road attempting to refasten the curtain and before this was accomplished the car would be breaking into the turns in skiddish fashion. I don't recall the time that I felt any hotter and more nervous and I was thankful that I had taken the inside seat with my fingers on the door latch for the full fourteen miles over the hump. If it were not for the alert passengers who grabbed the wheel on several occasions we certainly would have been dashed to pieces.

After crossing the summit the sun came out and roads were not so wet on the seven and a half miles down grade and, lucky for us passengers, too, for my! how he beat it down grade into Lonesome Valley, where the stage from other direction is met and drivers exchange cars. Our first driver was so far ahead of schedule that our second driver had to loaf for thirty miles across the flat road of Lonesome Valley to get back on schedule.

I have always felt that the above was either a put-up job on the part of my friend, the dealer, to give me a thrill or a drunken driver. In any event, the next time I go to Jerome it will be over the roundabout route by rail. However, you can see the danger of taking your eyes off the road. The average man would stop his car under the above conditions because his own hide is in danger, but you have no doubt have noticed many car owners doing the same thing on city streets, subjecting pedestrians and other users of the highway to danger.

The point I wish to bring out in the foregoing is that you cannot drive safely under the many varied storm conditions encountered during the winter weather unless you are comfortable in driving position and you can see clearly in all directions ahead and behind and to right and left. Further, it is equally important that your brakes be in good condition and your engine and clutch functioning proper to make safe driving possible at all times. These and other important safety items will be covered in order next.

Last week, "Conveniences Necessary to Safe Driving."

Motor Trucks Aid Railways in Short Haul

What railroads are learning about the economy of using motor trucks to supplant their cumbersome and expensive equipment on short-haul runs is graphically illustrated by a story of the Lehigh Valley Railroad in New York, told last week to G. O. Fries, manager of the Pacific Coast sales and service branch of the Gotfredson Truck Corporation.

A freight run between Ithaca and Geneva, N. Y., hauling less than carload lots most of the time was not paying. The Lehigh people made a contract with the operator of a truck and trailer and thus saved $3900 per month or 50 per cent of their former operating expense.

They report that the truck is operated on a schedule, movements being controlled by a dispatcher. The contract price of $36 a day for the motor truck insures against loss and damage. Since the service was begun in October there has been less damage to shipments than formerly, when small consignments were knocked about by the frequent stopping of freight cars.

"There is no better motor truck unit available for adaptation to railroad needs than the Gotfredson, in its various models," said Fries. "Built inherently sturdy, with the seven-speed transmission to furnish extra leverage to move the heaviest of loads, and the worm-drive brake to supplement rear-wheel assembly, the Gotfredson can be operated more economically and over longer periods with least wear and tear."

WESTERN AUTO CUTS HUGE PIE

Workers Rejoice as Bonus is Passed Out

More Than $80,000 Given Firm's Employees

Christmas has come and gone but it just started for the employees of the Western Auto Supply Company, who this week received a bonus in the form of common stock. Each employee who had been in the service of the company for a calendar year ending January 1 received this bonus, which amounted to one-twelfth of his annual earnings.

The company advocates the theory that the interests of employee and employer are mutual and that in order to expect the proper co-operation from its employees, the concern must have the interest of the employee at heart. For this reason the company finds it profitable not only to pay its coworkers salaries as high, or higher, than the average wage, but also to give bonuses in stock.

This annual distribution has been in effect at the Western Auto Supply Company for the past few years. The total amount this year distributed amounted to over $80,000.

Since the inception of the company, the officials have encouraged employees to become stockholders, until today a goodly portion of the outstanding stock is in the hands of those actively employed by the company and who are responsible for the rapid growth it has enjoyed.

The company urges the employees to keep the stock and the dividends from year to year and to accumulate a worthwhile interest in the business. The Western Auto Supply officials and employees call themselves the "Western Auto Family." The spirit of friendliness and good fellowship can be seen throughout the organization and this factor is largely responsible for the conscientious work among all its employees in putting forth every possible effort toward the rapid advancement of the business.

LICENSE PLAN AIDS OWNERS

Owners of Dodge Brothers motor cars and Graham Brothers trucks can pass the long lines of 1925 license seekers with a grin, according to an announcement just made by Fred S. Albertson, head of the Albertson Motor Company, Dodge Brothers and Graham Brothers dealers for Los Angeles and vicinity.

Beginning Monday, the 19th inst., 1925 automobile licenses will be procured for owners who apply at the license department of the big Sixteenth and Figueroa street establishment, it was stated.

Changes in the rules of the Division of Motor Vehicles make it necessary that owners wishing to avail themselves of this service bring with them in addition to the regular white registration certificate, the pink certificate of legal ownership, together with the regular license fee. Commercial car and truck owners should bring with them, in addition to the regular license fee, the same weight fee that was paid last year. Only one trip need be made to the license department, as the new plates will be mailed to owners from the Division of Motor Vehicles at Sacramento.

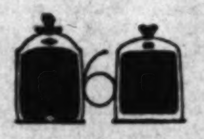
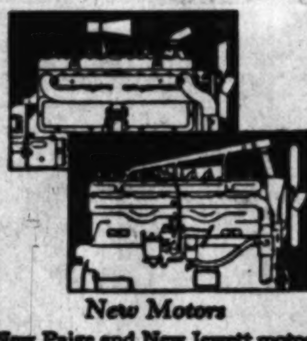
Why NEW PAIGE and NEW JEWETT

Have New Smoothness—New Ability—
New Comfort—New Silence—New Dependability



There are reasons for these new qualities in the New Paige and New Jewett. And there are reasons why these new qualities are permanent. Certain brand-new features have been added. Certain old features—proved satisfactory in our years of use—have been retained, with improvements where possible for even finer service. We did not sacrifice proved goodness to cry "new." It is the combination of these features, new and old, that makes a new engineering achievement possible—Permanent Perfected Performance. Besides this we have created twelve new beautiful bodies with new grace of line and finish and equipment.

Paige and Jewett prices have not been increased as they might justly be to cover these improvements. Judged by comparable cars—the New Paige and New Jewett are actually underpriced $150 to $200.



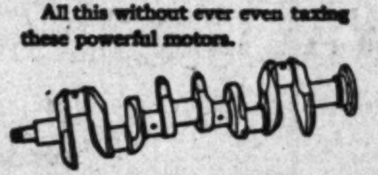
New Motors

New Paige and New Jewett motors are sixes—perfected in smoothness and simplicity. More cylinders would just add complicating parts.

New ability is produced by piston displacement adequate for the weight of the cars. They are not skimpy-sized motors that must run at wearing speed to get enough power. And so they last more miles, years.

And they give a delightful performance, a sure ability that cannot be produced by other engineering means. A range of ability unmatched for hill-climbing, quick getaway, hard pulling in high gear at slow speeds.

All this without ever even taxing these powerful motors.



New Balanced Crankshafts

Balanced crankshafts give new smoothness to Paige and Jewett. Vibration cannot be detected—regardless of speed.

Silken smoothness at 2 miles an hour or top speed.

Silent Chain Drive

Paige and Jewett motors are built with silent chain drive for pump and timing shafts. Chains wear, stretch after a while. So we provide an automatic take-up sprocket that keeps a constant tension on the chain, completely offsetting the effects of wear (stretch), preventing back-lash and retaining timing accuracy. Silence is permanent.

This chain drive was successfully used for two years in Paige. Now, refined, it is in the New Jewett.

Clutch that Smoothes Gear-Shifting

The saw-blade steel clutch, used in Paige and Jewett, engages so gently that even a novice will rarely jerk or stall the car. Never a "miss" or gear-clash. The reason is a driven member so light that it stops spinning almost instantly when you throw out the clutch. It quickly adjusts itself to speed changes. With this clutch and the perfected transmission in the New Paige and New Jewett, you can shift quietly and easily from high to second at 30 miles an hour. Millions of miles' fine service for Paige-Jewett owners prove this feature "right."

All-Steel Universal Joints

Paige and Jewett universals are all-steel. Lubrication, good for 15,000 miles, is sealed in. Wear—back-lash—is postponed indefinitely. A hundred thousand Paige-Jewett owners know the advantages of these universals. Owners of New Paiges and New Jewetts are learning them

New Spring Design

To get the fullest comfort from balloon tires, our engineers completely redesigned spring suspension. Paige's rear springs are more than 5 feet long—Jewett's practically half the length of its wheelbase! This length of springs, with newly designed suspension, balloon tires, and weight of cars, give unsurpassed riding comfort in the New Paige and New Jewett.

Ball-Bearing Steering Spindle

Paige and Jewett have been noted for their remarkably easy steering—finger-touch control, thanks to ball-bearing steering spindles. With the advent of balloon tires—Paige-Jewett engineers insisted on completely redesigning steering to offset the increased road friction of balloon tires. So in the New Paige and New Jewett, ball-bearing special-geared steering gives [illegible] guidance and lets you have the benefit of balloon tires without the [illegible] hard steering.

Extra Strong Frames

The frames of the New Paige [illegible] New Jewett are unusually strong—with four heavy cross-members and special bracing for diagonal [illegible] They are built to handle the [illegible] ample power without strain and to stand up under the grueling punishment of bad roads. They are heavy—for pounds of steel mean pounds of strength, life. These are typical of construction throughout [illegible] the New Paige and New Jewett.

Two Cars—One Quality

If you wish these new qualities in a moderate-sized car—then buy the New Jewett. If your desire runs to a big car with all the added advantages of larger size—then the New Paige suits your needs. But both are alike in this—Permanent Perfected Performance.

HERE'S REAL HISTORY OF HOW GASOLINE BUG BIT OIL KING

The first automobile ever owned by John D. Rockefeller was a Peerless for which he paid $5000 twenty years ago.

A recent issue of the Cleveland News, a copy of which has just been received by Stanley W. Smith, president of the Southern California Peerless distribution, brought this fact to light in a daily feature column, under the head of "Those Were the Days," in which are published excerpts from the news of twenty years ago, taken from the columns of the Cleveland Leader.

"John D. Rockefeller, who was spending the summer at his Forest Hill home in East Cleveland," says the excerpt, "bought his first automobile on August 4, 1904, twenty years ago. He paid $5000 in cash for it after the salesman had demonstrated that it would really run. The car was a Peerless and was painted green. Rockefeller took a lesson in driving, although a chauffeur always handled the machine."

A copy of a first-page article in the Cleveland Leader, telling of the "oil king's" purchase of the Peerless car on August 4, 1904, was inclosed with the copy of the News just received by Mr. Smith. It follows:

"John D. Rockefeller has taken an interest in the automobile game.

"He purchased one of the finest autos ever built in Cleveland, yesterday afternoon, and intends to operate it himself after he learns the tricks of the 'choofer.'

NOTICED 'EM THEN

"For several days residents in the vicinity of Forest Hill, the multi-millionaire's summer home, in East Cleveland, have noticed automobiles being driven in and out of the grounds.

"As the 'puff wagons' whizzed into the winding drive, leading to the Rockefeller residence, the neighbors wondered how they obtained such easy access. It is easily explained, now, for the watchman at the gate had been informed that some of the Cleveland manufacturers would send samples of their machines to Rockefeller's home for inspection.

"A handsome, new twenty-four-horsepower Peerless machine, painted a dark green, caught the oil magnate's fancy when the city salesman drove it up to the residence yesterday afternoon. Mr. Rockefeller took a ride in it around the drives on his own grounds and over the golf links.

ON DOTTED LINE

"'It is almost like Gov. Herrick's machine,' said the city salesman. The oil magnate suggested certain changes, that there be silver trimmings here and there on the machine, and the salesman promised to make them.

"'What will it cost' asked Mr. Rockefeller.

"'Five thousand dollars,' was the reply.

"Mr. Rockefeller went to his study. He reappeared in a few minutes, and the automobile salesman rode away with the money."

'Coaled' Facts Given in Fuel Dissertation

"A bucket of soot for Milady's boudoir," said Tinkering Jimmie as he picked up a photo of one of Henry Ford's giant coal barges.

"Just what do you mean by that" queried Harold L. Arnold, Lincoln dealer.

"Coal is only a form of soot, and is one of the most important items in the construction of a Lincoln, while a Lincoln sedan is as finely finished as any 'lady's private sitting room.'

A few facts on the subject revealed that Tinkering Jimmie was right. Coal is so important an item of manufacture that if a strike or other causes should delay delivery to the steel plants, the entire assembly line would have to shut down. This was brought to the attention of Ford, who immediately ordered the purchase of coal lands.

The B. T. and I. Railroad was found to reach within 150 miles of a tract of land rich in the finest coal, covering 86,000 acres. The coal was purchased, and then negotiations completed for acquisition of the railroad. The additional 150 miles of track are being built to the mines.

This gives the Ford Motor Company and its Lincoln division a supply of coal sufficient to last fifty years, together with their own transportation system direct to the plants.

PELTON POINTS OUT CLOSED IMPROVEMENT

COMPETITION CREDITED AS CAUSE OF INCREASED REFINEMENTS

"Competition has stimulated the will to find a way to build automobiles better and for less money. And, to my mind, this driving will has contributed more to the problem's solution than all else."

So asserted George S. Pelton, president of the Pelton Motor Company, Marmon distributors.

Continuing, Pelton declared:

"Ordinarily, when an automobile manufacturer announces that he has been able to effect a saving in the production of his car, he at least reflects a notion that he has to justify what he has accomplished by attributing it to such things as decreased cost of materials, increased production, adjustment of labor conditions, and a dozen and one other things which may or may not exist.

"Marmon recently announced that it could now offer three full-fledged, luxurious closed cars with four doors at practically the price of an open car. These machines, like all Marmons, are mounted on the 136-inch wheelbase and powered by the well-known Marmon six-cylinder engine."

Comparison Further Shows
HUDSON
World's Greatest Buy
Everyone Says It—Sales Prove It

Being the world's largest builders of six-cylinder closed cars permits Hudson to give values beyond all comparison.

Economies in manufacture and the experience gained in three years' concentration on closed cars have resulted in the best cars and the lowest prices of our history.

Despite the fact that Hudson has alone offered closed car comforts at open car price, its real appeal has been the brilliant character of its performance.

With the Famous Super-Six

Hudson has the famous Super-Six chassis. Its motor solved the problem of smooth performance. It increased motor and car life to the extent that thousands of cars have service records exceeding a hundred thousand miles. The Super-Six was created by Hudson, is patented and belongs exclusively to Hudson.

Note the prices at which Hudson closed cars are sold. Think of their values in good looks, in the way they retain their attractions and the little attention and cost required to keep them in first-class appearance and condition.

They have reduced closed car costs for thousands. They afford advantages to be found only in costlier cars, and yet their cost is but little more than cars whose sole appeal is price.

Hudson is the "World's Best Buy". Comparison shows that. Sales prove it.

WILLS' IMPORTANCE IN INDUSTRY TOLD

Of the manufacturers of cars whose names are closely coupled with some of the more important contributions to the industry, few occupy a place of higher importance than does C. Harold Wills, active head of the Wills Sainte Claire factory at Marysville, Mich., according to C. Rosenberg, sales manager of the Western Motors Company here, State-wide distributors for the Wills.

"When the automobile industry was in its infancy Wills became identified with Henry Ford, ultimately having charge of all Ford production. During the latter period he conceived the idea of straight-line production and introduced those methods into the Ford plant with the result that economies in time of labor were effected which were absolutely unheard of in the building of motor cars," Rosenberg said.

"Later other manufacturers began to recognize the efficiency of this method and today practically all large producers of motor cars have adopted the plan. However, Wills has not confined his contributions to the automobile industry. Besides being a skilled engineer and one of the outstanding production geniuses in American industry he is world-famed as a metallurgist."

The coast of Annam on the China Sea is one of the stormiest in the world.

CLOSED OBJECTIONS SAID THING OF PAST

Only a few years ago the closed type of automobile was considered a luxury. It cost from a third to a half as much again as the open car, and most motorists avoided purchasing cars of the type because of real or fancied difficulties in driving and a greatly increased cost of upkeep.

"Today the closed car is fast displacing the open for all types of travel," says D. W. Ferguson, manager of the passenger-car department of the Reo Motor Car Company of California, Inc.

"Fancied interference of vision by the old type of windshield construction on a closed car has been entirely done away with. The position of the steering column and steering wheel has been changed to one that permits of great comfort on the part of the driver, and window lifts have been provided that make the changing of an inclosed into a solidly built, attractive-looking open car, a matter of only a few moments."

BOGUS STORM TESTS WIPERS

And the Poor Automobiles Thought it Real

Cadillac Factory Testers Are Rainmakers

Hatfield Stunt Proof of Extreme Care

Though it did not appear in the weather records, a six-weeks' rain storm occurred recently at Detroit. As a matter of fact it was a strictly private rain storm which the experimental department of the Cadillac Motor Car Company promoted in the course of one of their exhaustive tests.

Several different makes of automatic windshield wipers were rigged on a pane of glass and set in operation while a fine spray of water was turned against the glass. The windshield wipers had to operate continuously without trouble for six weeks under these conditions before their design was approved for use on Cadillac cars.

"Each year the Cadillac factory grows still more strict in its requirements for materials that enter into the make-up of Cadillac cars," says J. E. Clark, sales manager for Don Lee.

"Forgings were formerly made, for example, according to a certain formula. If the right metal was used and it was heat treated correctly, it was accepted and put into production. Today, further precautions are considered necessary. The forgings are put into a pickling bath of acid solution which cleans and etches the surface so that it shows up defects and even reveals the way the metal flowed when it was forged. Even the slightest surface flaw shown by this examination is sufficient to condemn the material.

"The builders of the Cadillac car feel a personal responsibility for the dependability of their product. 'A hidden defect might at some time cost a human life and it might be the life of my son or my daughter,' was a recent remark of H. H. Rice, president of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, to a convention of Cadillac distributors in discussing the company's policy of adhering to its rigid standards of testing."

MOTORISTS CHECK UP BAY WORK

Pierce Party Finds Big Dredging Activity on at Harbor

All records for dredging activity in the Long Beach Harbor area were shattered during the month of December, according to report from harbor engineers. The city is spending $5,000,000 to deepen the inner harbor to forty-two feet.

Engineers estimate that close to 700,000 cubic yards of sand and silt were removed at an approximate cost of $84,000.

Interested in this waterfront development, A. C. Lusby, general manager of W. E. Bush, Inc., Southern California Pierce-Arrow distributors sent one of the new "series eighty" sedans down to check over the territory involved.

At present six huge dredges are working at various places in the channels and turning a huge amount of maritime commerce in the near future.

During November with only four dredges at work on the various projects about 540,000 cubic yards of dirt and sand were moved at a cost of about $69,000.

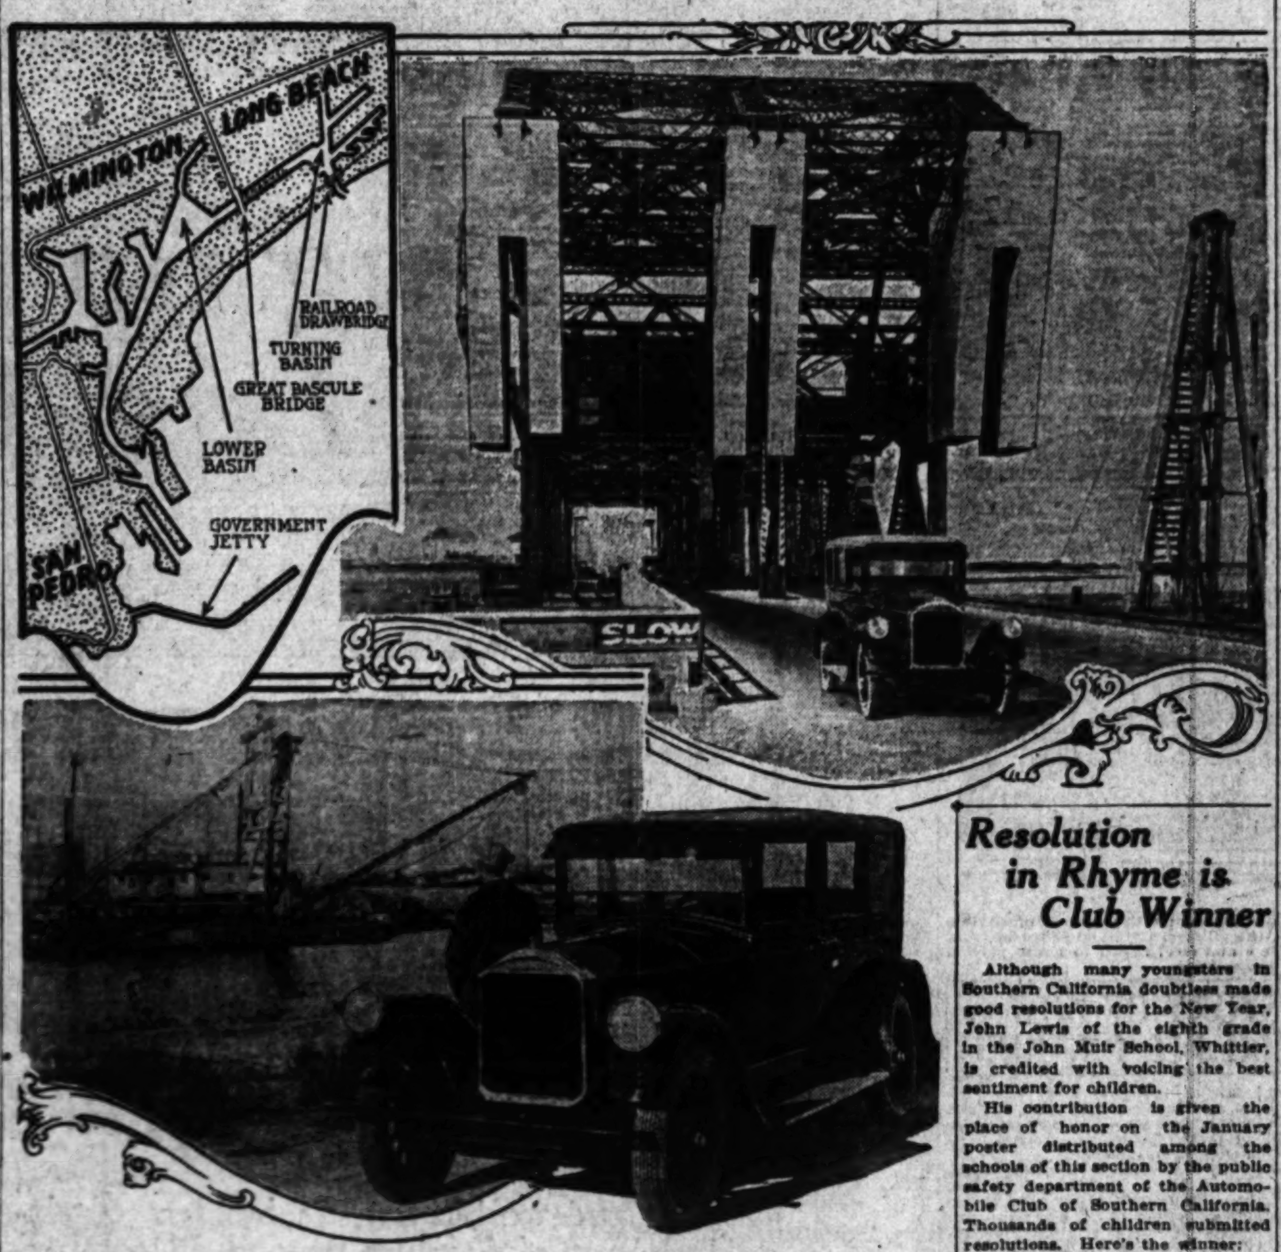
The most extensive of these projects is the dredging of the upper turning basin where a big electric turbine dredge is being operated by the United Dredging Company. Another dredge is working in the connecting channel between Wilmington and the Long Beach basin, having been moved into this position from San Pedro several weeks ago.

This dredge is working just west of the huge Bascule bridge. When the Pierce-Arrow party was down there, the car had just been driven across this bridge when a huge sand barge pushed by a puffing tug was sighted headed up the channel. The machinery of the huge bridge was put in motion and it lifted just in time for the photographer to get a fine shot.

SHELL OIL LAUNCHES NEW SERVICE STATION

On Saturday, the 10th inst., the Shell Company of California opened another service station at the corner of Wilshire Boulevard and Harvard Boulevard. The station and grounds were handsomely decorated for the occasion which, with elaborate lighting arrangements, presented a striking display. A reception was held, and all Shell patrons were presented with souvenirs.

Aye! Aye! Long Beach Harbors Much Nautical Interest



It took a Pierce-Arrow last week, accompanied by a keen-lensed photographer, to find some of the high spots of interest along the Long Beach teeming harbor-side. Herewith are shown one of the huge dredges by which the shipping-filled channels are kept deep, and a nose-on view of the great bascule bridge that opens to great ships or closes to accommodate land traffic.

Resolution in Rhyme is Club Winner

Although many youngsters in Southern California doubtless made good resolutions for the New Year, John Lewis of the eighth grade in the John Muir School, Whittier, is credited with voicing the best sentiment for children.

His contribution is given the place of honor on the January poster distributed among the schools of this section by the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California. Thousands of children submitted resolutions. Here's the winner:

"It is resolved hereby,
That both you and I
Will keep the safety rule,
At home and at school."

AUTO OWNERSHIP MOU

Nation Finishes 1924 With 17,700,17 [illegible]
California Retains Second-Pl [illegible]

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Motor-vehicle [illegible] States for the year 1924, not including the final [illegible] when they were comparatively negligible, reached [illegible] gregate of 17,700,179, a gain of 16.28 per cent over [illegible] 653 recorded in 1923.

This total, compiled by Motor from official figures obtained from every State, means that there is one passenger car or truck for every 6.42 persons, basing the calculation on an estimated present population of 114,000,000.

The number of passenger cars increased from 13,455,073 at the end of 1923 to 15,520,663, a gain of 2,065,590, or 15.35 per cent.

The number of commercial vehicles increased from 1,767,585 at the end of 1923 to 2,179,516, a gain of 23.3 per cent.

The amount of money invested in these vehicles is conservatively estimated at $10,620,107,400.

With a total production for the year of about 3,580,000, of which about 300,000 were exported, it would appear that something like 800,000 of the cars and trucks made were used to replace vehicles which were scrapped.

CALIFORNIA SECOND

New York still leads in registrations with 1,412,050 of which 1,136,300 are passenger cars, but California is a close second with 1,321,480 and is less than 10,000 behind on passenger cars with 1,126,956. Ohio with 1,237,000, Pennsylvania with 1,231,893, and Illinois with 1,128,000 are the only other States in the 1,000,000 class.

The second five in order are: Michigan, 877,453; Texas, 833,074; Massachusetts, 672,315; Indiana, 649,797; Iowa, 614,500. Other States in the 500,000 class are: Missouri, 545,000; Wisconsin, 526,400; Minnesota, 503,115, and New Jersey, 499,000.

When it comes to percentage of gains the South steps to the front, showing the results of two prosperous years. The leader is Florida with a percentage increase of 34.9, jumping from 160,000 to 215,872, but Georgia is right on its heels with a gain of 34.5 per cent, rising from 173,794 to 233,818. New Mexico is third with 32.2. Louisiana with 29.4 and Mississippi with 29.3 are virtually tied for fourth place.

Other States which gained 20 per cent or more, in alphabetical order, were: Albama, 24.8; Arkansas, 25.3; California, 21.9; Michigan, 20.0; New Hampshire, 20.9; North Carolina, 21.6; South Carolina, 27.6, and Utah, 20.0. Connecticut gained 19.9.

NEVER BEFORE SUCH AN EIGHT AT SUCH A PRICE

The new Hupmobile Eight at last strikes that fine balance between price and efficiency toward which the motor car industry has been working for 20 years.

If your experience has included eight-cylinder cars—and if you have thought you already know the very finest in motoring—drive the Hupmobile Eight.

You will find that in many respects the Hupmobile Eight far outdistances anything hitherto accomplished in eight-cylinder engineering in America.

It has beauty of design, finish and equipment not excelled within $1,000 of its price; and its own price is less than that of many sixes.

It produces more power per cubic inch of piston displacement than anything which has preceded it.

Its performance is so smooth and symmetrical that there is not even a murmur of "roughness" anywhere in the engine's entire power and speed range.

More than any other fine car, it combines compactness for handling and parking with roominess for riding comfort

It has a finer and better balanced combination of speed, lugging power and rapid acceleration than the eight type has ever before presented.

It records an average gasoline economy heretofore unequalled among eights—both in continuous high-speed operation and at a steady 20-mile-an-hour pace.

In unison with speeds far beyond your requirements, pick-up that almost takes your breath away, and the certainty of four-wheel hydraulic brake control, it offers unprecedented eight-cylinder gasoline economy, surpassing beauty of design, and all the old-time Hupmobile reliability.

We are ready to demonstrate the Hupmobile Eight against all eights and all superior sixes, and put it to any tests you desire. Come in or phone now.

Los Angeles Now City of Iron, Steel

The iron and steel industry in Los Angeles is taking rapid strides forward. As late as ten years ago there were many who declared Los Angeles to be a city of plaster and adobe, but since that time so many construction activities requiring iron and steel have culminated that the city is recognized as one of the largest consumers in the country.

In connection with the industry, transportation is an important factor. For delivery purposes the motor truck is proving the solution. Were it not for this type of vehicle contracts could not be completed in the time allotted. By use of the truck and frequently trailers steel plants claim they can make deliveries to suburban points in less time than is required to make available other means.

Recently A. M. Castle & Co. of Chicago, one of the best-known and largest steel operators in the country, took over the plant of Little & Robertson in this city in a merger calling for an initial expenditure of $500,000.

Almost immediately following the transfer of the property A. M. Shaw, plant superintendent, and W. P. Heiney, purchasing agent, decided upon the extension of their transportation facilities, and purchased a three-and-one-half-ton Mack truck for their service. The Mack is being used for general delivery purposes, and has been equipped with a body especially designed to carry steel of various lengths.

KRAUSE AND ROULTE BOAST RECORD TIRE

Recently C. Fred Thompson of the C. Fred Thompson Tire Company, McClaren tire distributors here, visited Krause & Roulte, McClaren representatives in San Diego. While in their office a discussion took place about which was the greatest McClaren tire mileage record.

Thompson told of four McClaren Autocrat cord tires on a Dodge that had gone 68,218 miles and several that went well over the 60,000-mile mark on stage work. Both Krause and Roulte smiled and agreed they were pretty large. However, they did not enthuse sufficiently to satisfy Thompson. Whereupon he went on a long discussion that no tire ever made such a record as was established by the McClaren Autocrat cord tires used on that Dodge.

After Thompson had finished they put in their bombshell. Only the day before a policeman had come to them with four McClaren Autocrat cord tires that had never been off his Ford in three and a half years and during that period had rolled up a grand total of 73,000 miles.

LUBRICATION PRAISED

"The high-pressure oil system as used on all Nash cars has been developed farther than is customary," asserted John J. Troy, president of the Troy Motor Sales Company, Nash distributors in Southern California. "The number of manufacturers who completely lubricate the valve mechanism by force feed are few, while it is unusual to extend this lubrication system to the camshaft bearings."

Backing up the Product in Los Angeles

An important announcement to the people of Los Angeles by the Durant Motor Company of California.

* * *

Los Angeles, growing by leaps and bounds, the greatest automobile center in America, with thousands of Star and Durant cars, makes imperative a more personal contact between factory and Star and Durant owners.

It is, therefore, our pleasure to announce the opening of two Model Factory Branches in the heart of Los Angeles, at Washington and Figueroa Streets and Hollywood Blvd. at El Centro Street.

We are interested in every Star and Durant car that leaves our factory. We want it to deliver the maximum of motor comfort and economy, and our service departments are open to all Star and Durant owners. We want you to feel that at all times you are welcome, no matter where or from whom you purchased your car.

SATURATION IS DECLARED A REALITY

Oldsmobile Banqueters Fail to Mince Matters as to Business

The much-mooted and hooted saturation point has been reached in the automobile industry, which business today faces the keenest competition in its more than a quarter of a century history, according to the views expressed by authorities at the annual dinner of eastern Oldsmobile dealers held in the Hotel Commodore, New York City, during the week of the annual New York Automobile Show.

The speakers, while stating facts as they saw them, also were highly optimistic, declaring that the next two years promised excellent business opportunities for the winners in the commercial battle. The views were that the replacements and normal new business would require a production at least as large as that of 1924. The reaching of the so-called saturation point was explained as being the end of the abnormal demand of the past decade.

A. B. C. Hardy, president of Olds Motor Works, Lansing, Mich., quoted figures which showed what competition had done in the past two or three years.

In 1922, he said, there were about ninety exhibitors at the national automobile shows, while this year there were only about fifty.

This indicated that in three years the number of companies had been reduced by almost one-half. He predicted that still more automobile manufacturers would be dropping out of the race before the close of 1925.

"Figures for 1924," said Mr. Hardy, "show that seventeen companies manufactured and sold 96 per cent of all cars merchandised in this country, leaving but four cars in every 100 to be divided among the other thirty odd makers. It is likely that in 1925 these seventeen leading companies will do their utmost to sell 98 per cent of the total number of cars sold."

C. F. Kettering, president of the General Motors Research Corporation, flatly stated that the saturation point had been reached and that this fact might as well be faced.

BEACH DEALERS HERE

Harlan High and Norman Able, Reo representatives at San Pedro and Long Beach, respectively, visited the local Reo branch last week to arrange for the delivery of passenger cars and speed wagons to customers in their cities.

Dealer Back From Gotham Tells of Show

"Inclosed cars, particularly the two-door type, which permits quantity production with low cost, furnished the real high light of the New York show this year. Four-wheel brakes and balloon tires are so generally accepted as a feature of modern design that they attracted no particular attention, which is the best sort of evidence that they are here to stay. Improvement in closed-car design and lowered costs of closed cars were the two big achievements of the industry for 1925 as revealed at the Silver Jubilee."

This was the declaration here yesterday of Robert S. Breyer, vice-president of the Troy Motor Sales Company, who returned Friday from an eastern trip. Breyer brought back news of the annual meeting of the Nash board of directors, held on the eighth inst.

"The financial statement of Nash revealed that the company's cash resources have risen to almost $28,000,000," continued Breyer. "For the last quarter of their fiscal year Nash showed the largest sales of any period in their history. Profit per car was less, but the added sales volume made it the most profitable period in Nash history. The day following the report, Nash stock rose to 212 on the New York Stock Exchange, which is really an amazing figure when it is considered that on August 1 the stock was quoted at 98."

SHE TAKES THE CAKE

The Chrysler birthday cake, with its single candle was awarded to Mrs. E. H. Ryan of Los Angeles following the celebration in honor of the Chrysler's first anniversary recently at the show rooms of the Greer-Robbins Company. The cake, it is stated, was twenty-four inches in diameter and approximately six inches deep.

MOTORISTS ADVISED REGARDING NEW DRIVE

Motorists taking the Mulholland Drive trip are advised to enter the drive by way of Laurel Canyon and leave by way of Calabasas, or to enter by way of Calabasas and then leave by way of Laurel Canyon.

By using the canyon road it is pointed out by the Automobile Club of Southern California it will be possible to avoid the heaviest traffic.

AUTO TRADE FIGHTS FEE

Associations Sending an Envoy to Capital

Jim Granger Made Manager of Southland Body

Riverside Dealer Elected General President

James E. Granger of Los Angeles leaves for Sacramento on the 19th inst.

The departure of Granger for the State capital will mark the opening gun on the part of the automobile trade interests of Southern California in their war against proposed legislation considered in this section as inimical to the interests of motorists, it was stated here yesterday.

Granger, who is secretary of the Los Angeles Automobile Trade Association, yesterday was named manager for the Southern California Automotive Dealers' Association, that organization at its annual meeting also deciding on joining the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and the Automobile Club of Southern California in a war against certain threatening anti-autoist bills.

Strong opposition to any increase in the gasoline tax.

Simplification of automobile license registration.

These two items are the main things Granger, as official envoy for the automobile and trade dealers of Los Angeles, Pasadena, Pomona, Santa Ana, Long Beach and other cities of the trade association league, will strive for, he declared yesterday.

J. Harold Wilson of Riverside was elected president of the Southern California Automotive Dealers' Association for 1925 at the election held here last week.

Other officers are: L. B. MacDonald, Pomona, and David McLaren, Pasadena, vice-presidents; Jack West of Los Angeles, treasurer.

Motor Bus Wheels of Aluminum

Motor bus wheels made of aluminum alloy are being tested by an English omnibus company. Although but half the weight of standard steel wheels, the results have been satisfactory. Tests are being conducted over twenty routes and a number of the wheels have been running 30,000 miles. Besides a large reduction in unsprung weight and a lessening of road destruction, the aluminum wheels have a high scrap value, about two-thirds of the original casting value.

Neff and Booth Can't Get Warm in Chill East

Even the warm reception which the new Paige and Jewett models received at the New York show failed to make up for the chilly weather which accompanied the big annual motor event in the opinion of Arthur V. Neff, assistant general manager, and E. E. Booth, wholesale salesmanager of the Paige company of Southern California.

A short visit at the show sufficed for both the local motor men, who returned last week from a three-weeks' eastern visit.

Following their New York visit, Neff went to his former home at Rural Retreat, Va., and Booth to Wheeling, W. Va., where they found climate considerably more to suit their Southern California tastes. On their return trip they met in Chattanooga, and returned to Los Angeles by way of New Orleans.

No fewer than 292,941 games of lawn tennis were played in the London parks during 1923, as against 229,792 in 1922.

ELEMENTS BATTLED ON TRIP

Angelenos Buck Mud, Snow and Ice on Trip Here from Atlantic City

Completing a round trip to Atlantic City that started from Los Angeles a year ago, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Abrams, 4152 Normal street, this city, recently returned after a battle with the elements along the National Old Trails route that ran the gamut of mud and ice through Kansas, Colorado and Arizona and snow in other States.

The Abrams party took fourteen days to make the return trip, the mud, ice and snow and torrential rains requiring slow navigating in some places. When the Abramses went East a year ago they took the southern route by way of San Antonio, Tex., and New Orleans.

The car driven by the Abramses was a Buick sport roadster 23-54 and was purchased a year ago in Los Angeles just before their start East. It was the first car through Flagstaff after the recent snow there, the Abrams reported to the Howard Automobile Company officials, many other parties being afraid to risk going through.

Through Mexico the Abrams party found very good gravel roads, but in Colorado the snow was extremely treacherous and the going was slow.

Their car behaved like a champion, the Abramses reported no oil being added to the machine except when it was changed regularly every 1000 miles. In one place they pulled a seven-passenger car heavily loaded for a distance of fifty miles over very bad roads.

SCHOOL FERRIED 7 MILES

Taking a schoolhouse off dry land, floating it through canal locks, and towing it seven miles across Puget Sound to a new location on an island, was the unusual feat accomplished recently by a firm of contractors in Seattle, Wash., says Popular Science Monthly for February. The schoolhouse originally was situated on the shores of Lake Washington, adjoining Seattle. With powerful winches and screwjacks operated simultaneously, the building was raised off the ground and skidded on rollers onto a large barge. Two tugs then towed the school through Lake Washington Canal to Puget Sound. The school arrived undamaged.

RAINY-DAY GUTTERS ON SEDAN ROOF

Drains and Other New Wrinkles Make "Hupp" Waterproof

Only a few years ago the closed car was an oddity on the boulevards, but close students of the automotive industry predict it will not be so far off until the open model is just as rare. Production schedules of the factories, it was pointed out, find the percentage of closed models far in excess of the touring car and roadster types.

Since the introduction here of the new Hupmobile eight officials of the Greer-Robbins Company point to the popularity of the coupe and five-passenger sedan and the reception it has received from Southern California motorists.

"The sedan with its finely proportioned lines, roomy interior, rich upholstery, Duco finish and easy riding qualities has met with the approval of the motoring public here," explained an executive of the State-wide Hupmobile distributing concern. "Everyone who inspects the car is very enthusiastic about it, while the number of orders we have taken is really unusual.

"Like all Hupmobile bodies great care has been taken in making this model the best possible. The body hardware on the sedan is done in satin nickel finish which never wears shiny and consists of revolving window lifters for all door and side rear windows, as well as door latches, locks, pulltos and so forth. Window lifters are of the gear type, always noiseless.

"The side windows, in accordance with latest practice, are smaller in size, with an extra large back window for clear rear vision. The one-piece windshield is absolutely water tight while there are two drains on the windshield ledge as well as drains on the ventilator and rain gutters on the roof—all making the car more weatherproof. The door latch on the left front door alongside the driver has been placed lower so he can rest his arm comfortably on the molding, which is made extra wide for that purpose. All door and window molding are of genuine walnut."

Chrysler Says Auto Business Will be 'Saner'

"The year 1925 will be a good year for the automotive industry, it will not be a boom year, but it will be a year of sane and sound prosperity."

This is the opinion of Walter P. Chrysler, president and chairman of the board of directors of the Maxwell and Chrysler Motor Corporations, two companies which have enjoyed a conspicuous success during 1924, as expressed in a letter to officials of the Greer-Robbins Company, Chrysler distributors in Southern California.

"At the close of 1924 the industry found itself in excellent physical shape," continued Chrysler. "Retail sales and wholesale deliveries compared well during the year. Dealers were not required to take more cars than they could sell. Inventories at factories and stocks in hands of dealers were both small. All in all, physically, the industry at the close of the year found itself in excellent condition.

"This year should be a good one, too. Factories have learned that overproduction is unwise and that any policy which requires dealers to take more cars than they can sell is unsound. Factories are co-operating more and more with dealers in finding the most effective means of selling cars. This closer relationship between factory and dealer is making for happier dealers, while the industry as a whole profits as a result."

Diploma Bill Indorsed by School Head

J. A. Rosenkranz, president of the National Automotive and Electrical School, upon being interviewed regarding Senator Lewis's bill, now pending before the State Legislature, which, if passed, will require diplomas of merit from all entrusted with the responsibility of repairing automobiles, says:

"I heartily indorse this measure proposed by Senator Lewis. It is logical and a forward step to remedy a very serious condition now existing in the automotive industry.

"Automobile owners must be protected. Of what avail is it to invest as much as $4000 or $5000 for an automobile when it is placed in the hands of a mechanic whose qualifications have not been proved, and thus jeopardize an expensive and complicated mechanism?

"We should exercise the same care and consideration with the automobile mechanic we permit to work on our cars that we do in selecting the manufacturers whose car we purchase.

"Senator Lewis has my unqualified support, and I am sure he has the support of all car owners, as well as responsible garage owners and repairmen in the State."

"DON'T BREATHE GAS, STEP ON IT!" ADVICE

"Quit breathing so much of it, and step on it more."

This is the latest advice on "gas" broadcast by Don P. Smith, Inc., Southern California distributors of Moon motor cars.

"One of the best things that could have happened to Southern California folk and especially those interested in automobiles is the propaganda being spread throughout the land about gas, the Moon men say.

"The unfortunate fatalities caused by people cooping themselves up in air-tight rooms to suffocate over gas heaters has started a new movement toward letting the outdoors in and getting out in the fresh air to be safe.

"Doctors will admit that more people have been killed by being shut up than ever died of exposure."

Speaking of "Castles in Spain"

Pictured before one of the towered Spanish castle type homes of the exclusive Los Angeles residential sections, here's a "dream of a sedan"—the new Hupmobile eight displayed by Greer-Robbins.

YOU CAN'T BEAT IT OR EQUAL IT FOR STAMINA

Chrysler's 1000 Miles in 786 Minutes Proves Much More Than Consistent Speed

WHEN the Chrysler Six—stock except for special 3.75 to 1 gear ratio, covered 1000 miles in 786 minutes, 6 1-5 seconds, elapsed time on the Culver City speedway, Jan. 5th, it established once again its incontestable right to first place for sustained speed.

But it did infinitely more than that.

It demonstrated for the second time in most spectacular fashion that for stamina, for strength, for dogged endurance, for dependability, it can't be beat, and it can't be equalled.

The January 5th performance beats the Chrysler's previous Fresno record for an absolutely stock car with standard gear ratio, by which it won the Los Angeles Times trophy by 3 hours and 41 minutes. It beats the fastest time ever made at Culver City by cars with similar 3.75 to 1 gear ratios, by 1 hour, 2 minutes, 25 3-5 seconds.

It means that the Chrysler Six covered 1000 miles at an average speed of 76.32 miles an hour.

This, in pure terms of speed, is of course an amazing record.

But once more we repeat: the true significance of this dramatic exhibition to the average motorist is not merely 76 miles an hour.

It is in the fact that the Chrysler Six had the endurance to maintain this heart-breaking speed for 1000 miles without a single stop for mechanical adjustment, tire changes, or even to add water.

In these facts lie the buyer's infallible guide.

Louise Glaum's Heart Won by Snappy 'Coop'

"A compact, comfortable car, well proportioned, and with plenty of snap, is, in my opinion, ideal for driving about Los Angeles and Southern California," declared Louise Glaum, motion-picture star, the other day.

Miss Glaum a short while afterward had a ride in the new Maxwell club coupe, furnished by the Union Motors, Inc., and immediately became enthusiastic about this model, on account of its appearance, roominess and pep.

The silver-screen celebrity has always owned cars in a much higher-priced class, but she asserts that she got just as much pleasure motoring in the Maxwell as in the larger machines.

"The appearance of the club coupe," she continued, "gives it enough of the European touch to make it attractive, while its roomy interior is surprising. Three persons can ride in it with comfort. Its leather upholstery is another feature much in its favor. In fact, this generally is only found in machines of a much higher-price class, if the experience I have had with motor cars is right."

Since they placed the new club coupe on display at their showrooms, Tenth and Flower streets, officials of the Union Motors, Inc., Southern California Maxwell distributors, declare it has attracted much attention. As a matter of fact, they say it is one of the most popular models on the floor.

AUTOMATIC MIXTURE

"A feature of the carburetor in the new Hupmobile eight is an economizer which permits operation on a lean mixture at average speed, but which shifts automatically to the necessary richer setting when full power is desired," explained an official of the Greer-Robbins Company, Hupmobile distributors in California.

J. MACFARLANE.

a—Dear Mr. Editor: Your valuable and interesting Dis. Column to hand Christmas Day. Really I had decided to give the game the "go bye" on this particular occasion, but d—— it! your game No. 1697, issue of Oct. 26, 1924, "caught hold." I brought out my Single Corner M. S. of a few (?) variations to see if I could find anything to answer Brother A. McHardy's query. Please permit me to state practically the whole play given in game No. 1697 is by John Drummond. There may be some short endings involved by Spayth, W. R. Patterson and J. P. Reed. I submit p.p. as above to try to prove that 7-10 is not a losing move.

b—Does this not correct 3-7, game No. 1697, Var. 1, at seventh move?

The following information on highways was issued by the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California under date of the 14th inst. Motorists wishing any further data may obtain it by communicating directly with the club.

BEAUMONT, BANNING, PALM SPRINGS

From Los Angeles east to Beaumont there is a choice of two paved roads, either the Foothill Boulevard by way of San Bernardino, or the Valley Boulevard by way of Pomona, Ontario, Colton and Redlands. The final stretch of six miles of unpaved road between the Riverside-San Bernardino county line and Beaumont is now being paved and as a result the road is closed. Motorists going by way of Redlands will therefore be required to use the San Timoteo Canyon Road from Redlands to Beaumont. Another route is provided in using the Valley Boulevard from Pomona and Ontario by way of Riverside, Moreno and San Gorgonio Grade. Beyond Beaumont paved highway is continuous to Banning and from there to Indio and along the west side of the Salton Sea to within a short distance of Westmoreland. The road from the main highway to Palm Springs is mostly oil macadam and is in fair condition.

TO BAKERSFIELD

Between Los Angeles and Bakersfield there are several routes which can be used. The most direct is that by way of Saugus and the Ridge, although motorists can make the trip by way of Mint Canyon, Palmdale, Lancaster and Mojave, thence west across the Tehachapis. On the Ridge Route pavement is continuous the entire distance and on the other route is continuous to Mojave, with excellent graveled road over Tehachapi Pass to within a short distance of Bakersfield, then paved to that point. A very scenic drive, and one which can be comfortably made in a day, is that from Los Angeles to Saugus, then through Mint Canyon to either Palmdale or Lancaster, continuing west over good desert road through the Antelope Valley by way of Del Sur, Fairmont and Neenach to Crane Lake, returning to Los Angeles via the Ridge Route.

TO SANTA BARBARA

All three routes, the Ventura State Highway, Santa Susana Pass and Saugus, Fillmore, Santa Paula are open and offer continuous pavement. Conditions north from Ventura along the ocean front to Santa Barbara can be considered excellent, with the exception of where construction work is under way on the causeway a short distance out of Ventura.

LOS ANGELES-SAN DIEGO

Motorists contemplating the journey south to San Diego will find a choice of two roads, one via the coast by way of San Juan Capistrano, Oceanside, Del Mar and La Jolla; the other inland via Riverside, Elsinore, Fallbrook and Escondido. The coast road offers continuous pavement, although there is a small amount of construction work under way a short distance north of Oceanside. On the inland route pavement will be found continuous by way of Pomona, Riverside and Perris to Elsinore, with the exception of a small amount of dirt road at Perris and a short section east of Elsinore. An optional route is available by way of Pomona, Corona and Temescal Canyon, this offering pavement with the exception of approximately three miles and a detour of about two miles around construction work. Due to construction work in Santa Ana Canyon that route is closed. Beyond Elsinore continuous pavement will be found to San Diego, with the exception of two and a half miles of good dirt road at Bonsall.

SAN BERNARDINO MOUNTAINS

Snow conditions still exist in the Big Bear Lake district. While the Mill Creek and Deep Creek roads are not open, it is possible to reach the lake via the desert route. This route offers continuous pavement by way of San Bernardino and Cajon Pass to Victorville with an excellent type of improved desert road to the foot of Cushenbury Grade. The road from this point over both Cushenbury and Johnson grades to Baldwin Lake and to Big Bear will be found in fair condition, although skid chains will be necessary. There is plenty of snow throughout Big Bear Valley and the lake is entirely frozen over. Both roads to Arrowhead Lake, Waterman Canyon and Cajon Pass-Hesperia are open and passable with the aid of skid chains. There is still sufficient snow in the vicinity of the lake that winter sports can be enjoyed.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

By James W. Marsh.

Question: I am driving an Oakland, model 34-D, which has a peculiar rattle under the floor boards when I am driving at from eight to fifteen miles an hour. I have had the clutch and speed-change gears overhauled and a new universal joint put in forward. The rattle was not so pronounced for a time, but is now as bad as ever. What do you think of the Sherwin-Williams products for repainting?

J. J. D., Hollywood.

Answer: I am satisfied that the rattle is somewhere at the rear end; the sound is carried forward by the propeller shaft. The products of the paint company mentioned are good and if properly selected and applied will give excellent results.

Q.: Why does my Franklin, 10-C, use excessive oil? It has been driven less than 9000 miles. At 6500 miles, I had new rings put in. Compression is poor. It runs and pulls well, but starts hard and kills easily. The engine runs excessively hot; can the hood be warped? Is it possible that poorly fitted rings can account for the trouble?

E. W., Palm Springs.

A.: This appears to me to be a case of warped or distorted cylinders. Have the cylinders carefully calipered with micrometer calipers. If the distortion amounts to .050 of an inch or more it will pay to have them reground and fitted with an entirely new set of pistons and rings. A cylinder is better than new after regrinding, as it is then properly aged and seasoned, and will retain its shape.

Q.: Can you tell me what to do with the generator on my model R Hupmobile? It will not charge unless I sand the commutator nearly every time I drive it. I have had it overhauled by experts three or four times, but so far without results. The brushes and springs are in good order.

X. Z. Y., Central Bldg.

A.: This appears to be either one of two things, high micas between the commutator bars or a "phantom ground" in the armature. Maybe both conditions are present. If the micas are high the commutator should be undercut. Any good auto electrician can do the undercutting for you. A phantom ground is very difficult to locate because the ordinary growler will not indicate it, the apparatus used for this purpose is specially designed and depends upon slight variations in readings with a milliammeter. There also may be field coil trouble. Any of the large auto electric service stations can permanently repair your generator.

Q.: I have just purchased a new Chevrolet sedan and wish to have you tell me how to break it in, as I gather from your writings that it is very important that a car should be properly handled during this critical time. Shall I mix cylinder oil with the gasoline during this period?

F. E. H., Whittier.

A.: The future value of a new car depends upon how it is broken in. Do not drive faster than twenty miles an hour for the first 1000 or 1200 miles. Do not drive long distances without stopping to let the engine heat equalize and relieve the strains. Keep the water at moderate temperature, even if you have to draw some out of the radiator and refill. Use plenty of oil and change often, say at the end of 400 or 500 miles. The oil and gasoline you are using are perfectly satisfactory. I do not approve of using cylinder oil in the gasoline. If not used to excess a little castor oil in the gasoline is excellent, insuring lubrication of the upper parts of the cylinders and top rings. An excess will cause troublesome carbon deposits. Castor oil has no affinity for gasoline and does not either change the gasoline nor break down in it. Mineral cylinder oil both breaks down in gasoline and deteriorates the gasoline. The cylinders of a Chevrolet are not ground and it takes a little longer to run them in than in some other cars, but when properly broken in they are very superior.

Q.: I am using a Hudson '24 and at the end of 8500 miles I had the valves ground and the crankcase cleaned. It contained a gummy accumulation, which the garage man told me was from the oil. I am now using another oil. Is it correct this time?

C. M., Fillmore.

A.: I am sorry to say it, but I believe the original oil was at fault as I have found the same condition existing in more than one car that has come under my attention, when using the same oil. The oil you are now using is good and if you drain frequently while the engine is warm and running, will soon clean the entire oiling system from the gummy accumulation. It will not be necessary to have the car taken down for cleaning. Do not use any kerosene or flushing oil.

Q.: I am having lubrication trouble with my Willys-Knight. At first it used too much oil, then I had special oil rings put in and now it doesn't change the level at all. I am using heavy oil and put a pint into 5 gallons of gasoline. This runs my oil consumption higher than it was originally, about ninety miles to the quart.

S. W. W., Hermosa Beach.

A.: I do not approve of the method of feeding oil in with gasoline. I believe you are using oil that is too thick. Try extra medium instead of heavy and I believe you will not only get better lubrication, but considerably better gasoline mileage than at present. If you feel that you must have a little upper lubrication try four ounces of castor oil, drug-store variety, to ten gallons of gasoline, while experimenting with the lighter oil.

Q.: I am rebuilding my Nash 1920, and would like to put a supercharger on it. What do you suggest?

J. G. B., Hollywood.

A.: I would suggest that you do not put a supercharger on the Nash you are rebuilding because it would be worse than useless. Superchargers have been under automotive engineers' tests for years and so far are not worth the power it takes to operate them on the automobile. An automobile runs practically all of the time far below its actual power. Any machine has a reserve of power sufficient for its needs and many are badly overpowered. In the air and for racing machines, where the maximum power of the engine is delivered through long periods of time, they have proven useful, but not in the automobile. The less money an owner spends on an obsolete car the richer he is in time and money. Any ordinary machine six years old has passed the age when it is judicious to spend money upon it.

ROESCH SOJOURNING IN WINDY CHICAGO

"The second national automobile show of the year opens here Saturday, and I believe it, like the New York exposition, will prove one of the greatest automotive events in the history of the industry."

This was a part of a letter received here from C. A. Roesch, president of the Alemite Lubricator Company of California, State-wide distributors, now in Chicago, by John Garver of the distributing concern.

Mr. Roesch has been at the factory since the middle of last week and states that the Bassick-Alemite Company is now operating under a production schedule which a year or so ago would have been considered impossible. He has held several conferences with Bassick-Alemite executives and asserts that he is in a position now to secure larger allotments than ever before.

James W. Hawk Named Officer for Overland

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—James W. Hawk has been appointed vice-president of the Willys-Overland Pacific Company, huge distributing concern handling Overland and Willys-Knight motor cars in the western territory. News of the appointment came officially today from the offices of Ernest J. Culver, president of the western Willys-Overland factory unit.

J. W. Hawk.

Hawk, who is well known throughout the country, and in automotive merchandising circles internationally, recently left the post of general sales manager of the Durant Motor Company of California, another big western distributing factory unit.

His headquarters will be made in San Francisco, in the local offices of the company, and he will have an active hand in the big dealer territory sales, acting, temporarily at least, as manager of the San Francisco branch as well.

The present connection with Willys-Overland is not a new berth to Hawk, as he was zone sales-manager for the company in 1916 on the Pacific Coast. Shortly afterward, however, he joined the Durant organization, then the General Motors Corporation. In 1918 he was sent to Fort Worth, Tex., as manager of the Chevrolet plant there, remaining until the present Durant organization was formed. Like so many other General Motors executives, he went with Durant into the new venture, and was manager of the Lansing (Mich.) Durant plant, going from there to New York City as assistant general sales manager of the company, from which position he was brought to California.

SAFETY BULLETIN OF CLUB POINTS MORAL

Celebrating the signing of the Declaration of Independence has cost more lives than were lost in fighting the Revolutionary War, according to the safety bulletin for Southern California schools published by the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Although Fourth of July celebrations are becoming less and less disastrous to life and limb, it is pointed out that there are other hazards that must be watched, such as the ever-increasing number of automobiles. Consistent vigilance and thought are urged as the best safety precautions.

RICKENBACKER RUMOR NAILED BY NEW SIX

Rumors to the effect that Rickenbacker intended to abandon the Six and concentrate on the "Vertical-8" alone are set at rest most decidedly by the advent of an improved and more powerful six-cylinder motor.

"As a matter of fact," says B. F. Everitt, president and general manager of the company, "the six always has been and will in my opinion continue to be our standby with production three to one of the eight, which latter model will necessarily be, in price, within the reach of a more limited class of buyers."

H. L. ARNOLD EXPANDS

Harold L. Arnold, newly appointed Lincoln dealer for Los Angeles, is already expanding in his new field. Announcement was made Monday of the addition of Pasadena to his sales territory. A beautiful new salesroom was immediately leased and a service department equipped for all classes of Lincoln work, opened its doors for business.

Resort Notes

On the Rim o' the World

Winter excursions to the Rim of the World section, including Lake Arrowhead and Big Bear Lake regions, are proving popular this season, according to reservations being made in The Times' bureaus of information, and at the Peck Judah Travel Bureau, "Snowball Excursions" headquarters.

Ice each night, and snow varying in depths from two to six inches are providing winter sports for many who are journeying to the Rim of the World section. Skiing and tobogganing are also included in the sports to be enjoyed.

In the Rim of the World Section, just back of San Bernardino, is Pinecrest Mountain Resort, and at Lake Arrowhead are the Raven Inn, and Camp Fleming, while at Big Bear Lake, back of Redlands, there are Stillwell's Camp, Pine Court, Mountainaire Camp, Knight's Camp, Lowe's Camp, Crandall's Camp, Stratton's Camp, Carter's Camp, Fawnskin, Blue Bird Lodge, Indian Lodge, Moon Camp, Golden Horseshoe Camp, Rempley's Camp, Andrew's Camp and the Big Bear Tavern.

In Mill Creek Canyon, also just back of Redlands is Forest Home, an all-the-year resort, while in Potato Canyon in the mountains, back of the same town is Oak Glen Lodge, kept open throughout the year.

Camp Baldy near Upland, Glenn Ranch near Etiwanda, Mt. Wilson Hotel and cottages, Mt. Lowe and Opid's Camp, near Pasadena, are popular winter resorts where snow sports may be enjoyed, during a good part of the winter season.

Refitting Beach Hotel

With the idea of making the hostelry a second to none in the Southland in conveniences for guests, R. H. Henderson, the new proprietor of the Ocean View Hotel, Ross avenue and Ocean Front, Ocean Park, is remodeling and rehabilitating the entire building. The new owner, who is a wealthy oil operator from Texas, is sparing no expense to make the hotel one of the most attractive on the beach.

From basement to roof the building has been refurnished and decorated in keeping with Mr. Henderson's ideas of giving every room the maximum in cheery surroundings. The hostelry is unique in that each room is an outside one with a marine view. The new owner is planning a number of improvements in the assembly rooms of the Ocean View so that his patrons may enjoy several unusual advantages when entertaining their guests.

Not overlooking the finer points in making his hotel a distinctive institution, Mr. Henderson is planning a marine grill for the basement and is incorporating special facilities for bathers. The patrons are assured the utmost in courtesy by his selection of Frank Langan, formerly of the Sheldon Hotel, in El Paso, the St. Mark's Hotel, in Venice, and of the Hayward Hotel in Los Angeles, to be managing-director of the Ocean View.

Resort Owners Meet

The next monthly meeting of the Sierra Madre Mountain Resort Owners' Association will be held February 4, in Switzer-Land Resort, in the Upper Arroyo Seco, as reported by L. B. Austin, proprietor of that resort.

The last meeting of that association was held at Wildwood Lodge, Big Tujunga Canyon. An invitation to attend that meeting has been extended to Mr. G. H. Cecil, the new Angelus Forest Supervisor.

Also the monthly meeting of the Switzer-Land Club, a hikers' organization occurred in Switzer-Land Resort last evening.

That particular meeting was devoted to discussing plans for the building of their permanent clubhouse to be constructed at Switzer-Land Resort. Charley Gerry of Pasadena is the president of the club.

Last Sunday the speaker at the services held in the Switzer-Land Rock Chapel was Rev. L. A. Pier of the educational department of the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. Each Sunday religious services are held there.

Glorious Week-Ends

A mixed party of about fifty members of the Sierra Hiking Club of Southern California recently spent a glorious week-end at Lake Arrowhead. The leader, Miss Dora Robins, declares it to have been one of the most enjoyable and successful outings of the club and plans are being made for further visits. It was past Saturday midnight when the last of the party reluctantly left the toboggan slide and skating rink, where they had spent the whole evening under a full moon assisted by myriads of colored lights for illumination. The following morning was occupied by motor launch trips around the lake, exhilarating hikes among the big pines and a continuance of snow sports.

A series of week-end mountain trips has been arranged for the winter by Wesley A. Wheeler of the Motor Transit Company. A transfer is made at San Bernardino to comfortably heated de luxe type stage coaches for the mountain roads. The excursion for the first week-end in February will take in the National Orange Show at San Bernardino on the way to Lake Arrowhead.

Quiet Hospitality

The Van Nuys Hotel, at Fourth and Main streets, is one of the old established hotels of Los Angeles and is noted for its quiet hospitality and genuine quality of service. During the rapid growth of the city there have been many changes in the hotel's management until about five years ago when Ross N. Boggs, a successful hotel man from St. Paul, took it over and revived all of the old traditions of hospitality and service.

The world-famous Van Nuys Cafe is conducted in connection with that hotel.

H. H. Haskins, formerly with several of the larger hotels in Los Angeles and also formerly connected with the University and Jonathan clubs here, has recently been appointed assistant manager of the Van Nuys.

Mr. Haskins's hotel experience dates back for a number of years, including at one time the ownership of a Northern California hostelry.

He will be assisted by Harry T. Muir, newly appointed room clerk. Mr. Muir also has had considerable Los Angeles hotel experience.

Capacity Increased

The recent addition of fifteen rooms with baths, and of a new kitchen and equipment to the Windermere Hotel, conducted on the American plan, in Santa Monica is announced by H. J. Borde, proprietor of that hotel.

This will bring the capacity of the Windermere to approximately 125 persons.

Guests of the hotel are accorded the privileges of the golf course of the Brentwood Country Club.

Hon. E. J. Davis, a Canadian tanner, and family of Newark, Ont., are expected at the hotel next week for a stay of several months.

Fishing for mackerel on the pier in Santa Monica is a popular pastime for sojourners in that city. Mrs. P. Honduis of Estes Park, Colo., recently landed a wonderful catch of that fish in a short period.

Three Mails a Week

The villagers of Lake Arrowhead and the proprietors of Camp Fleming and the Raven Inn in that region are overjoyed at the results of their efforts led by Postmaster A. E. M. Parsons to secure a third mail day per week in place of only two for the winter season. An order has just been received from the Postmaster-General in Washington to increase the service, so that in addition to Tuesday and Saturday the mail will be delivered and collected each Thursday until April 30th when the summer service is daily.

This extra service is considered necessary by the Washington authorities on account of the greatly increased population around Lake Arrowhead.

Big Bear

As soon as weather permits construction will be started on twenty new housekeeping cabins at Stillwell's Camp, Big Bear Lake. These cabins when completed, will give that resort sixty cabins to care of its ever-increasing patronage.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. Stillwell, the proprietors of the Big Bear Lake Camp bearing their name, are assisted in its management by their son, Mr. Charles Stillwell.

Good Place for Stop

Travel to El Centro, in the Imperial Valley has materially increased since the holidays, according to John Brunner, proprietor of the Oregon Hotel in that city.

Mr. Brunner has equipped his hotel to comfortably care for guests, and offers excellent accommodations. A cafe is maintained in connection. Golf, tennis and sight-seeing trips to Mexico are enjoyed by his patrons.

Open for Business

Harry H. Erikson, proprietor of Idle Hour Camp in Eaton's Canyon, back of Pasadena, telephoned in last week that his camp is open to housekeepers and boarders on week-ends throughout the winter season, and at all times during the summer season.

Camp Idle Hour is one of the popular near-by camps.

ELEVEN PIONEERS OF AUTO HONORED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—"Signs are certainly for better business in this industry and other industries," said Dwight W. Morrow of J. P. Morgan & Co., addressing an audience of 1050 at the silver anniversary dinner of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce at the Hotel Commodore.

Particular tribute was paid to the pioneers in the industry by decorating eleven representative men from a list compiled by the Smithsonian Institution, of those who were among the first in the development of the automobile.

Those decorated were: Edgar L. Apperson, John S. Clarke, Charles E. Duryea, H. H. Franklin, Elwood Haynes, Charles B. King, John D. Maxwell, R. E. Olds, A. L. Riker, Rollin H. White and Alexander Winton.

More than a Metal Sign

The Pan American Petroleum Company's Four Leafed Clover sign has a deeper meaning.

It stands for, first of all, a gasoline that never varies from the first drop in the tank 'til the last, that is 100% efficient and always pure.

It also marks the locations of many progressive independent service station operators who believe that by furnishing their customers with the best gas they can buy, regardless of price, they will build up a list of satisfied customers.

If all of these bulbs were used in head lamps they would equip a row of cars 500 miles long (allowing 14 feet to the car) or 190,000 cars.

This tremendous sale of bulbs is another indication thousands of motorists turn to their nearest Western Auto Supply Company store for the smaller as well as the larger things.

The EMPEROR'S SNUFFBOX

By J. J. LOWMAN

ON THE wall were a number of rare old prints picked up in my travels. Hanging from the molding was a six-foot-by-three steel engraving of the Emperor Napoleon. This engraving is a facsimile of the one now hanging in the Stadtische Museum at Leipsic. It is a rare and valuable contribution and I prize it most highly.

Napoleon! The very name to me was a magnet from which there was no escape. I literally worshipped this Corsican; from his days at Brienne to the last impressive rites at the Invalides.

My books around me, my pipe newly filled and the big chime clock proclaiming the hour, I was indeed content. Thus but a few evenings past and I was comfortably ensconced on my divan, pillowed luxuriously among the cushions.

From this indolent ease I was aroused by the furious barking of my two French bulldogs. Surely, some unusual happening to arouse on the part of the dogs such a demonstration!

On my graveled driveway there was a crunching of wheels and the thunderous rumbling of a carriage such as I had never heard before. The steady trot and the clamping of the bit of possibly four or five high spirited horses, the alighting of passengers from a travel strained cariole, the click of heel and spur on the cement leading to the house.

Just a second of bewilderment and wonderment, then a most authoritive tattoo on the old Dutch door with the old Dutch knocker.

Hastening, I threw open the door, and there on my threshold was a group of five men. Three were in uniform and the uniform was that of the Old Guard. Why, I do not know, but I instinctively saluted.

THE foremost one of the group I instantly recognized as Constant, valet de chambre to His Majesty the Emperor Napoleon. He was faultlessly groomed and in each hand carried packages. Without the slightest hesitancy he made for my guest chambers.

One other in civilian attire carried a large portfolio which he placed on my living-room table. A man of scholarly mien, I knew him at once to be De Meneval, secretary for years to Napoleon.

The three in uniform were without question Duroc, Desaix and the Marshal Suchet.

Grouping around the fireplace, for the California night was full of chill, the little group warmed their hands. A quick, nervous tread on the front porch (I would have known it among a million though I had never heard it before,) the quick attendance upon the door by Duroc, the stiffening of all present, the voice of De Meneval—

"Gentlemen, the Emperor!"

The long familiar gray coat, knee-length boots, the little cockade hat of many campaigns, the tight-fitting waistcoat and his hands clasped behind him.

"Sire!" I managed to articulate.

Turning to his gentlemen-in-waiting, he dismissed them with a smile and a nod of his head. I was alone with the man of Marengo, of Wagram, of Austerlitz and St. Helena.

"But—Sire—you in the United States? I thought—"

WITH an impatient gesture he interrupted me. From a waistcoat pocket came the never-to-be-forgotten snuffbox. Slowly between thumb and forefinger the Emperor took a pinch of snuff.

"Ah, you of the United States!" he exclaimed. "Who should know your country better than I? Her needs, her political intrigues? Have I not visited your manufacturers, inspected your dockyards, reviewed your troops and addressed your sailors? Oh, the present conditions of your great country! Have I not watched for more than 100 years? Do I not know your system of temporizing which leaves men in uncertainty? Who better than I should know the United States? Your country at the present time is in a constant state of turmoil and naturally your government is weak. There can be no free state where its laws are not supreme. You have no law, you as a people respect no law. You have no complete citizens for you do not share in the judicial and executive part of your government."

"But, Sire, the remedy?"

"The remedy, my friend, is men and a MAN: a two-fisted man, a flesh-and-blood man, a man of brains and executive ability. It is an iron hand at this hour that is needed, no vacillating, weak, indeterminate man in a crisis such as this. You need men of the Roosevelt and Dawes type."

Impatiently did the Emperor snap the lid of his snuffbox back and forth.

"The revolutionary movement now in the United States is so strong that it presents a real danger of the overthrow of the government unless immediate action is taken. Many of the strikes that occur in your country are a part of the revolutionary movement. It is an effort to force and establish Communism. The time has come for the United States government to take action and to take vigorous action. If your government continues in an indifferent attitude toward this serpent there is real danger that it will fall and you will have a repetition of that which brought misery to so many other countries of the world."

"DEPORT all undesirable aliens, crush disloyal and un-American organizations—drastic measures possibly, but the sure and only remedy. Then, and not until then, will peace and quiet, order and law be restored. It will be a big man that does this, but mark my prediction, you here in the United States have such a man in the Dawes type and he will accomplish all this.

"Constant!"

At once was the valet de chambre in His Majesty's presence.

"Constant, you will call the gentlemen of my suite."

From the various rooms of my home entered the gentlemen composing the Emperor's retinue.

Approaching me and placing both hands on my shoulder the Emperor kissed my cheek. Constant flung open the door, the Emperor Napoleon and his suite were gone. The chime clock proclaimed the quarter-hour and again was I alone.

Approaching the dying embers of the fire a sparkling ray caught my eye and there on the mantel piece was the snuffbox of the Emperor.

Oratio Obliqua

One of the most unpleasant duties in royal courts of the middle ages—and later—was the breaking of bad news to the sovereign, not only unpleasant, in fact, but actually dangerous. Monarchs had not then arrived at the state of enlightenment which they are alleged to have reached nowadays. They really believed themselves to be as described in their titles—God-Appointed, Ever-Victorious, and so on. And, often being in point of character either unmitigated physical brutes or feeble-minded results of inbreeding, they experienced the reactions of ill-bred children when their vanities or their purses were touched. On receipt of bad news, they felt like smashing something, and the most obvious something was the messenger. To dash out the kneeling man's brains with a mace or slash his head off with a sword was a most convenient and logical method of revenging one's royal self on the nasty old world.

The fear of death is the real mother of invention. The courtiers' messages are sometimes masterpieces of hinting.

Witness the method of informing a French king that his supposedly invincible navy had been vanquished by the English under most humiliating circumstances.

The court jester took a cup of wine and asked the king to drink to the confusion of the cowardly English.

"Cowardly?" asked the king.

"Yes," said the jester. "They have so proved themselves in a sea battle. For when your brave Normans jumped out of their ships into the sea, the English dared not follow them."—[F. R. Buckley in Adventure Magazine.

The Lovable Face of a Child

(This poem is dedicated to the dream of the past, the joy of the present, and the hope of the future, our beloved friends—the children.)

Are children less fair than the roses
That bloom in the garden in spring—
Their voices less sweet than the song-birds
That gladden the woods while they sing—
And who ever painted a picture
Of song-bird or rosebud so mild,
To vie in its wonderful beauty
With the lovable face of a child?

Oh, memory! How sweet are the visions
We dream in the morning of youth,
When lilies awake to the sunshine,
And whisper of joy, love and truth.
And God, ever patient and loving,
Sends pleasure and beauty combined—
A soul and an infinite story
In the innocent face of a child!

POVERTY DE LUXE -:- By Margaret Culkin Banning

She'd done that to him. He looked like a man anticipating a blow, as indeed he was.

"How about calling on your brother Gilbert—and Belle?" Jean asked at dinner.

"They don't interest you particularly, Jean."

"I'd like to, tonight, really."

The Gilbert Millses lived in a little house with a rubber plant in the hall which had come from Belle's mother, and the living-room was filled with upholstered red-painted wicker. Belle Mills, looking pretty in a gray silk dress which she declared she had bought for "nothing" at the after-Christmas sales, welcomed them gayly. Belle and Jean exchanged ideas, across their gulf of different ways of living.

"Everything's horribly expensive, isn't it?" asked Jean.

"Ghastly: but we did manage to have a surplus last month. That's how I got the dress."

"Fancy having a surplus!" sighed Jean.

She did not look at her husband. She looked at Gilbert, and thought that he didn't look as tired as Sheldon, in spite of living in a rubbishy little house and having no servant. She supposed that Sheldon envied his brother—possibly envied him his pleasant wife with her capable hands and magic budget.

Jean could almost feel her husband making comparisons, always to her disadvantage. However, she had let herself in for it. When they left, Sheldon and his wife walked to the corner for their bus in silence.

"Tired, Jean?"

"Oh, no. I enjoyed it. Nice, isn't it?"

"What?"

"Their house."

"Oh, it's livable," answered Sheldon, "but I couldn't stand it myself. Could you?"

"Couldn't stand what?"

"You've educated me to somewhat different things. Belle hasn't your way of making things beautiful, Jean."

"They save money," said Jean.

"Um—so they do. But that isn't every thing."

"They live honestly—as you were saying you wanted to."

"I do want to live honestly, but you can't do it by copying people."

"I put our house on the market today," Jean remarked.

Sheldon jumped. "You did what!"

"Put the house on the market. We can get $25,000, Mr. Gibbs says."

"Jean," said her husband sharply, "you'll do no such thing. That was your father's gift."

"The more I've thought of that lately," said his wife, "the madder I've been. Let's sell the house and show father what can be done in your business with $20,000. We can live somewhere—not just as Gilbert and Belle do unless you want to—"

"Why, you silly girl!" said Sheldon. "All evening, I've been glad that I didn't live that way. I've been thinking how beautifully you taught me to live. I don't want to sell the house. It's the only home we've had. I'd almost sooner go away and leave you and Betty in it—unless I can swing it. I could under certain conditions. I've figured that if I could buy into Parke-Austin, I could handle everything within a year. I know exactly what's wrong with that firm. I really know a lot about wholesale groceries. You see—"

Jean realized that he was talking just as he used to talk before they were married.

"It's possible to make an awfully good thing of it, I'm sure. I was almost tempted today to try to raise the money, but—"

"But what?"

"Why, Jean, for a little while, until I got the firm going, it would mean worse scraping than we have been up against yet. You'd hate it—saving everywhere, for I'd have to keep my credit good. It's bad enough as it is."

"It's not bad at all," Jean contradicted him flatly. "We're quite comfortable. I suppose I could cut a lot of things out. I really could do better. But why not sell the house?"

"No—it seems like letting you pawn your wedding-ring. I've got to do it on my own, or it doesn't amount to anything. But I almost think, Jean, I could make Alton see what a reasonable proposition it would be. His bank has money loaned to Parke-Austin, as it is. Do you suppose you could stand a year or so of real economy—almost poverty? Because if I did try, I couldn't—"

He didn't go on, but Jean knew what he meant. He meant that he couldn't come home to a cross wife every night. It occurred to her that he was giving her a chance to be a regular wife like Belle, with her share of the burdens.

"Go ahead, Sheldon," she answered, with all the intensity gone from her voice. "Let's do it your way and watch me help."

He saw Fred Austin in the morning.

"Well—$10,000 cash and the balance over a period of three years," Austin said at last.

Henry Alton, his banker, greeted him affably, but not too affably, as one who suspects that he may be called upon to cash in on pleasantness.

"Well, young man—"

Sheldon told him. He found that, having broken into speech, words came easily. He was backed also by the knowledge, verified by Austin, that the bank was involved in Parke-Austin affairs and unwilling to see it ride to a fall. He found himself adroit, canny.

"And so I can get in—and make the business pay—if I can get $10,000 cash."

"Sounds reasonable. I'd like to see that business in young hands—competent hands. What security would we have? The business interest as it stands wouldn't be good enough, of course. What else?"

"I haven't anything else."

"I see. Mr. Tillinghast go on your note?"

Sheldon shook his head. "I prefer not to ask him, Mr. Alton."

"Why not?"

"I can't be carried by my wife's father. I don't like the idea."

Alton whistled softly.

"Just so. Well, there's your house, but of course real-estate is poor security for us."

"I can't offer the house as security. It's my wife's."

"That must be a big expense."

"It is. But I've no car—we are going to cut expenses to the bone while I'm getting this business running."

"But we can't lend you money without security."

"I feel it is security to get a man in there who knows the business. You know what that firm is earning—you know what it should earn. It's a wonder it hasn't been bought up before. Some bank is going to see it before I'm through, Mr. Alton."

Alton looked him over. There was the look of the young fellow which he liked; moreover, he couldn't have any other bank in on the management of Parke-Austin. Mills was right. Good story on Tillinghast! Well—

"It will come up at the directors' meeting this afternoon."

"I see," said Sheldon.

The banker put his hand on the young man's shoulder.

"Informally I think I can promise you that it will be all right. You needn't go farther."

On the surface car that night the girls looked at Sheldon. He looked so handsome, so successful, so romantic. But they brought out their vanity-cases and powdered their noses uselessly, for he looked at none of them. His eyes and his mind were fixed on something apparently outside the dark windowpanes. The car went past the lighted windows of the City and Country Club, and a little smile curved Sheldon's lips. Some day he'd go in there again when he could pay for his own membership. And he'd take Jean there for dinner.

UNCLE SAM, MOVIE MAGNATE, THRILLS MILLIONS EVERY DAY WITH FREE MOVING PICTURES

VIRGINIA LEE put her head contentedly against Bob West's shoulder. It had been such a wonderful day—riding with Bob over Colorado's highlands—resting at the mountain top—and finally listening to his proposal and promising to become his bride. Ah—what a happy ending for a United States government movie!

Thus writes Gene Thomas from Washington to the New York World.

Yes, your Uncle Sam is making motion pictures. He hires charming actresses and daring actors, uses America's most beautiful spots as scenery and produces pictures at the rate of one every other week.

One government movie, "Out of the Shadows," has been shown in every county in the United States. Another, "Behind the Breakfast Plate," has been shown all over the world to a combined audience estimated at more than 250,000,000 persons. The films range in length from one-reel "fillers" to seven-reel features, one of the latest released being the Interior Department's seven-reel "thriller," "The World's Struggle for Oil."

Six of the eFderal executive departments are producing moving pictures, these being the Treasury, War, Navy, Interior, Agriculture and Labor departments. Of these the Department of Agriculture is leading in film making, having a specially designated "Office of Moving Pictures" and a studio headed by Fred W. Perkins.

A leading lady with government movies is Miss Margaret Gorman of Washington, who won first prize at the first national beauty contest held in Atlantic City three years ago. Lieut. Lowell Smith, commander of the 'round-the-world flyers, is a male star in Uncle Sam's cinema firmament.

Lieut. Smith appears in "Red Enemy" as leader of an airplane squadron which looks out for forest fires in the West. He discovers a fire, sees a camping party trapped in the burning area and guides fire-fighting rangers to the spot just in time to cheat the flames of human prey.

Each Has Message

"SIR LOIN OF T-BONE RANCH" puts across the message of better beef production in a romantic way. Rancher Bob West, eager to marry Virginia Lee, but faced with the problem of making T-Bone Ranch pay, feeds his cattle grain instead of grass before marketing them and thus obtains top prices. He then excels in cowboy sports at a western rodeo and finally lassoes Virginia, heart and all.

"Clean Herds—and Hearts" is a four-reeler that encourages tuberculosis eradication in a dramatic story of mother love and politics. The Mayor, seeking re-election, is persuaded by his daughter to extend mortgages he holds on neighboring farms to enable the farmers to replace their herds with accredited tuberculosis-free animals, and the election is won.

"Garden Gold" is the cinema story of John Jasper's change from a confirmed golfer to an enthusiastic gardener. Community gardens, he finds, benefit pocketbook and health more than do community golf courses. "She's Wild" is a thrilling picture of broncho-busting, roping, cattle-tying and Indian dancing.

"The Charge of the Tick Brigade" is an animated cartoon in which cattle are attacked by ticks with resulting mortality, and Mrs. Tick, in an illustrated lecture, thanks cattle owners for not dipping cattle. In "Anne's Egret" Anne shows her new hat to her husband, who notices that it has an egret—the nuptial plume of the egret—and tells how egrets almost have been exterminated by plume hunters. Anne decides she will not wear the plume.

Every section, from the skyline of New York to the orange groves of California, has been used as a setting for government movies. Cowboy sports and ranch scenes in "Sir Loin of T-Bone Ranch" were filmed in Colorado. The escape of egrets from plume hunters, shown in "Anne's Egret," was photographed in a cypress swamp in Arkansas. John Jasper's farewell to golf, in "Garden Gold," was "shot" on the Potomac Park golf course, Washington.

Scenes in "Behind the Breakfast Plate," the story of bacon's progress from corn-belt pastures to European breakfast plates, were enacted on Midwest farms in the Chicago meat-packing houses and on New York's export wharves.

Beautiful scenic pictures have been made in the national forests. "Up to Hyalite," for example, shows the trip made by a party of tenderfeet in Middle Creek Canon of Gallatin National Forest, Montana.

"Cloud-Bursting" portrays the adventures of an automobile touring party in the White Mountain National Forest, New Hampshire.

As soon as the location for a picture is determined the government movie director selects his cast from the school, church or semiprofessional thespians of that locality.

Use Local Talent

"WE USE local talent," Director Perkins said, "because it is competent, saves the expense of transporting casts from coast to coast. We pay those who are [illegible] the manager to permit it.

"For pictures taken here in the Washington studio, government workers sometimes are placed before the camera. In 'Anne's Egret' the part of Anne is taken by Miss Lucille White, one of my own office staff, and the role of her husband is filled by W. A. Jump, private secretary to the Secretary of Agriculture.

"Animals we use often. Bees, grasshoppers, live stock and horses perform in our pictures. In fact, we have the rare distinction of having produced a film in which rats appear. This is done in 'The Modern Pied Piper.'"

After scenes are photographed the films are rushed to the motion-picture office and studio in Washington. This building, just completed last year, contains every modern device for motion-picture making—speed cameras for microscopic work, rapid-developer tanks and motor-driven drying drums.

"We can photograph a scene here in the morning and show it on the screen that same day," Director Perkins said. "Our rapid-developing equipment was used by commercial news-reel men during the World's Series baseball games played in Washington, President Harding's funeral and other public occasions."

The total sum which Congress appropriates to support Department of Agriculture motion-picture work is $52,000 a year, or less than a penny for each United States citizen.

SPEARING LEOPARDS

considerable shock to the mahout (elephant driver.)

We had tracked this leopard into a very narrow little ravine and he had taken refuge in some very thick thorn bushes at the end of the ravine, where it narrowed into a point with steep banks about ten feet high. It was impossible to see him and throwing stones merely made him growl and move about. I went on my elephant to the top of the bank, loaded my twelve-bore gun with a shot cartridge in the right barrel and a ball cartridge in the left and fired the shot cartridge down into the bushes.

Some of the shots evidently reached the leopard, who charged without hesitation. In a moment he was not only on top of the bank, but on top of the elephant's head with his head almost in the mahout's face, but he had not time to do any damage, as the bullet from the left barrel knocked him off as he landed, much to the relief of the mahout.

Meeting a Dreamer in The Roaring Town

THERE a while back—it was a couple of weeks ago, or maybe three—when we had been dragged down to the roaring town against our will, and while we were sitting in the lobby of a hotel waiting for a man who had promised to meet us there, who should come and sit down beside us but a prospector.

Well, sir, you can never imagine how glad we were to meet him. He was a man we did not know and had never seen before, but the moment we set eyes upon him we knew who he was and what he was.

Now, one of the happy and fortunate things that has come to us in life is that we have met with prospectors and have learned to know them well. We have met them in the great silent hills where they followed the rainbows of their dreams. We have spent nights with them around their little camp fires.

This particular prospector who came to sit beside us in the lobby of the hotel in the roaring town was a true type of his tribe. And we knew the story that he would tell us before the first word of it was uttered. He had, at last, discovered the great mine that he had been looking for all his life. He had known a great many wonderful prospects in his time, but nothing, of course, that could be compared to this. All that it needed was some capital to develop it. Whoever would put the money in with which to sink a shaft or drive a tunnel would receive undreamed-of returns on his investment. And, he asked, did we happen to know of anybody with money to whom this most wonderful opportunity could be safely offered? It was the old story that we had heard so many times before—an old story ever new that never loses its fascination for us.

Now, you might think that we felt sorry for the old prospector from the hills. We knew as well as we could know anything that he would meet with nothing but disappointment in his dream of securing capital in the roaring town with which to develop his wonderful prospect. We knew that, to begin with, the prospector was merely deluding himself—that he really didn't have a great mine at all. And we also knew that even if he did have a great mine and could secure capital to develop it that the capital he secured would gobble the whole thing up and leave him out in the cold. We knew that all this was waiting for him around the corner and that he would have to go back to the hills again with only his dream to keep him company.

And yet we did not feel sorry for him.

And the reason we did not feel sorry for him was that we knew he would be happier with his dream than he would be without it. If he were to succeed in selling his prospect for a vast sum of money he would merely have succeeded in selling his dream. In other words he would have money but not the dream. And dreams are worth so much more than money that we always feel sorry for a man who loses the one to gain the other.

We did not tell the old prospector this, because, what good would it do? Anyway, we knew him and his kind too well to tell him anything that would disappoint him. So we just listened to him, all aglow with the wonder of his dream, and we wished him good luck when we bade him good-by.

And he never knew the kind of good-luck that we wished him.

Remembering a Music-Maker Now With God

THE evening that we want to tell you about was an evening that was all our own. We could do with it as we pleased—go to a dance, stay at home, go to bed with the chickens, sit up at the cross of San Ysidro studying the stars, or do any other old danged thing that we might care to do.

At the same time we had two invitations on our hands. One was to go down to the roaring town to attend a meeting called for the purpose of settling the Czecho-Slovakian question and to decide whether or not to permit the League of Nations to continue or disband. And the other invitation was to gather with the neighbors in the green Verdugo Hills to hear a newly purchased tune in the house of the man who has the phonograph.

The question was, which way to decide. Which of these meetings is of the most importance? we asked ourselves.

Well, sir, we were in swithers over it, as the saying is, not knowing just exactly which way to turn, when, by gollies, who should step into the room of our little high house where we were sitting but our Yellow Cat. And so, we left the decision to him as we always do when we are in swithers over anything.

It is in a swither we are, Oh, Wisdom of Egypt, we said to our Yellow Cat. Put on your thinking cap, we said to him. Think back to starry nights of the Nile and your ancestors embalmed in the sacred tombs, and tell us what to do.

It was easy for him, of course. It took him only a couple of rubs of his whiskers to tell us the answer.

And, so, in next to no time, we were on our way down the starry trails of the hills to the house of the man who has the phonograph where the neighbors were gathered to hear the new tune that the man who has the phonograph had brought up from the roaring town a couple of days before, or maybe three.

Well, sir, as it turned out, it wasn't a new tune at all, but an old, old one. "Silver Threads Among the Gold," is the name of it. And there will be hardly two men or women sitting in our far-flung synagogue, all the way from Dan to Beersheba this blessed Sabbath morning who have not heard that tune more times than they can count on their fingers and their toes.

An old tune but, oh, so bonnie. A heart-breaking sweetness in it that you will hear in few other tunes that have ever been made.

But, with all that, the thing that made everything so wonderful was that the record of the phonograph was made by Maud Powell. And "Silver Threads Among the Gold" was never played on a fiddle or on anything else as she use to play it with slender fingers and magic bow on the strings of her wondrous violin.

The house of the man who has the phonograph had been noisy enough with the clatter of talk when the soul of Maud Powell swung down from the stars that night, filling the room with the haunting melody of that old, old tune that she loved to play when life was young and she swept the heart-strings of vast audiences in great halls. A noisy house enough it was, but a silence fell upon it, deep and hushed, when the melody swelled in from the stars. And the silence lasted long after the melody ceased. A spell had been cast upon the house. There were long-forgotten dreams that came to live again in the hearts of all who sat that night enthralled within the shadows of the hills.

She was playing the tune for God, said the man who has the flute, breaking the silence, at last. And I'll bet she plays it often for Him, he said—playing for God as He sits in His golden chair in the high heavens, and the earth for His footstool.

Aye, said the man who has the phonograph, God doubtless wanted Maud Powell for Himself to play upon golden fiddles for Him. He wanted her for Himself, else He would not have called her to Him from us while she was still in her glory here.

But, she played for us, as well, tonight, did she not, said the man who reads the papers.

Which was a staggering thought when you come to think of it—that while Maud Powell was playing "Silver Threads Among the Gold" for God on a golden fiddle, the neighbors in the green Verdugo Hills listened also and touched hearts again with the beloved music-maker who is now on earth no more.

Going Home

Dear Father, I am weary! Take my hand!
Tighten your fingers! Do not let me go!
Let me not stumble on the jagged stones!
Let me not fall into the gulf below!

Long did I seek You in the world of men—
Among their books, philosophies and art;
Long did I search the forests, hills and s ,—
Each day more homesick in my saddened heart.

A thousand songs I sang upon my way,
Hoping that You might hear and come to me;
I wept until my aching eyes were dry,
Then closed my eyes—and prayed your face to see!

And then into my fevered mind there came
A song You taught me when I was a child!
Faintly I sang it—for my voice was weak;
But You—You heard me singing in the wild!

And then You came! For You had looked for me
As longingly as I had looked for You;
I knew You loved the song—and now I know,
Dear Father, how You love the singer, too!

No longer through the wilds I walk alone;
No longer in the night of doubt I roam;
Weary am I, betimes—and yet I walk
With joy, for You are leading me back Home!

JAMES M. WARNACK.

We Have a Great Compliment Paid Us

A MAN who lives somewhere between Dan and Beersheba, sitting out under a far eave of the synagogue and not having the courage to come right in and become a member of the Congregation of the Faithful so that he would say his prayers every night and every morning, was boasting to us not long ago that he had reached the highest pinnacle of fame.

And when we asked him how he figured it out that he had reached the highest pinnacle of fame, he answered us and said that a certain brand of cigars had been named after him. To have a cigar named for you was in his judgment the last word in fame.

They usually name the cigars for great men and great women after they are dead, said the man in the synagogue. Vandyke, Daniel Webster, Queen Isabella and the City of Phildelphia have been honored in this way by having cigars named after them.

But, we said to the man in the synagogue, the City of Philadelphia is not dead. And the man answered us quick as a flash and replied, who said it wasn't dead?

Well, however that may be, and letting the thing go without further argument, we were able to tell the man that we had received some great honors of this nature ourself. That a peak of the green Verdugo Hills had been named for us, and a street in the ancient Mission pueblo of San Gabriel also bore our name, and that just lately a canary bird in a big hotel in Los Angeles had been named in our honor.

Yes, sir, it is a fact that lately when there was a canary bird show in a big hotel in Los Angeles attended by hundreds of wonderful people—for who is it that does not love a canary bird?—they put up a prize for the one that could sing the best. And there was a canary in the show that had been named "Conductor" in our honor, and, by gollies, when every canary bird sang his best song one against the other, danged if the little yellow fellow they called "Conductor" didn't have them all hanging over the ropes and faded to a frazzle. He won the prize hands down, as the saying is.

So, we said to this fellow in the synagogue, who was boasting because a cigar had been named for him, that most cigars now days are made out of alfalfa and old ropes, and we wouldn't feel honored a bit to have any of them named for us.

But, to have a mountain and a street in an old Mission pueblo and a champion canary bird named for us—say, that's fame!

The Beautiful Story That Never Grows Old

JUST now, while we are making preparations to begin the fourteenth annual presentation of our Mission Play at San Gabriel, we are thinking of the wonderful story that California has to tell the world. And that it is perhaps the most glamorous and most beautiful of all stories ever told.

It must be true, otherwise how can it be explained that year after year as the story is told on the stage of the old playhouse at San Gabriel that the throngs that come to hear the story increase as year follows year. And that many people come over and over again, always returning to hear the story anew.

Other lands have stories to tell. But when their stories are told people do not seem to wish repetitions of them, even though they were delighted at first. But nobody ever grows weary of the beautiful story of California.

The Conductor of this poor blundering page feels that God was very good to him when he gave him the great privilege of setting forth in pageantry and drama the forever lovely story of our peerless California.

CARE OF THE BODY

than boiled. Open husks just enough to clean out silk and any stray worms, put husks back in place and bake until husks are brown, they will bake better if some of the outer husks are cut off first.

Beets, turnips and onions are good baked, for that way none of the mineral matter is boiled away and therefore less desire for seasonings. Allow about fifteen minutes longer for baking than boiling. Remove thin outer skin if desired and serve with a little butter or oil.

Cranberry Sauce

Wash cranberries, put through the grinder with half or one-third as much peeled and cored apple, sweeten with honey and cook until well mixed with the honey. If you have never tried this you will be surprised to find you have cranberry jelly of the part you expected to be juicy.

Vegetables for the Kiddies

Handful of spinach or chard leaves, one carrot and occasionally a beet for a change. Put all through the grinder and cook until soft. Serve with a little butter.

I hope these receipes are of some help. I want to do my part toward helping your good work along. Anyone doing the hard work that you are to help us misguided humans to help ourselves and give our little ones the proper start in life deserves all the help we can give him and I am only sorry that I can help no more than this.

I am saving everything you print in the paper and am fixing them in a book so I can lend them to my friends. I haven't finished yet, but already several requests have been made for the book when it is ready to lend.

I am wishing you many years of service; we need you.

Yours for better health,
MRS. W. H. HENDERSON.

Fresh Pear Salad

Pears (one per person,) cottage cheese, nuts, honey.

Peal pears, cut in halves and scoop out core with round scoop. Cream cottage cheese through sieve, add chopped nuts and honey to taste. Cream may be added to the cheese if desired. Fill pear with cheese and place on other half of pear. Take whole cloves and put them in diagonally across cut in pear so as to hold together. Place in nest of lettuce leaves. Use peanut butter dressing or almond butter dressing over top of pear. Cross two strips of pimiento on top of dressing.

Summer Squash Salad

Four raw summer squash, celery, walnuts, one carrot, lemon, honey.

Dice squash, chop celery and nuts, shred carrot and mix with lemon and honey to taste. Serve on water cress lettuce or chicory.

Stuffed Apple

Apple, walnuts or pecans, uncooked salad dressing.

One may cut skin in design if one desires. Cut apple in half and scoop till apple is about three-eighths-inch thick. Chop part scooped and mix with nuts and dressing.

Carrots and Squash

Equal amounts of carrots and squash.

Peel or scrape carrots and dice them, dice squash. Steam till tender and mash with butter.

Care of the Baby— Mother's Illness During Nursing

WERE one to go into case histories carefully and intelligently inquire as to the causes why mothers stop nursing their babies, one would find that a leading cause is the temporary indisposition of the mother.

"I caught the flu and therefore had to wean my baby."

"I was laid up with an attack of rheumatism and of course could not go on nursing baby."

"I was in bed for a week with acute indigestion so I had to put baby on the bottle."

These and similar reasons are generally given as causes for weaning baby and placing the cow as foster mother in charge.

Most of these mothers weaned baby at the advice of their doctors. "You cannot feed a well baby sick milk," is the excuse given by the physician.

This we shall not dispute, for it is true that we cannot feed a well baby from the breasts of a sick mother. To say, however, that because a mother be temporarily indisposed is sufficient justification for permanently taking the baby from the breast, is indeed stretching the facts.

Countless babies who have gone to The Great Beyond might have survived a temporary change of diet, whereas they could not withstand a permanent change.

It is a mistake for a nursing mother to permit the breasts to go dry during a temporary indisposition, even though she be compelled to feed baby artificially for the time being.

In most cases it is not the illnes which coagulates the gland. It is the failure to empty the breasts and the consequent drying-up of the secretion. In the ordinary type of temporary indisposition, a mother who considers it her sacred obligation to nurse her baby should keep her breasts pumped dry periodically as if the baby were nursing. A breast pump can be procured from any drug store.

Every four hour all the milk that can be pumped out should be discharged and the gland emptied as completely as possible. Occasional warm applications and very gentle massage would be of considerable assistance.

Among the European peasantry, should a mother's milk become temporarily unfit because of illness, it is the custom to have a young puppy drain the breasts periodically. This is not necessary in the American home. The breast pump will serve adequately.

But to say that merely because a temporary ailment afflicts mother there is sufficient justification for weaning baby, irrespective of his age, is indeed a grievous mistake.

Mothers should try, by every conceivable resource, to keep the precious milk supply intact. They should think, not twice, but manyfold before weaning baby.

END STOMACH TROUBLE NOW

Quick Relief or No Pay
Remarkable Treatment Rebuilds Stomach Nerves, Stops Gas, Belching, Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Sour Stomach

In June, 1898, an aged doctor—a noted stomach specialist—gave me his favorite prescription for stomach trouble. As a long established druggist, I had filled many stomach prescriptions, but none like this. It gave such quick relief in the most distressing cases—it soon built up weak, shattered irritated stomach nerves—restored their normal strength and activity. I started dispensing this treatment at my 12 stores here in Springfield, and soon I was getting orders from all over the United States. I was amazed to discover that

95 Out of 100 Get Immediate Relief

With such outstanding results I decided to advertise this treatment nationally, for even with 12 drug stores in Springfield, comparatively few stomach sufferers could be benefitted.

Weak, abused stomach nerves must be repaired and put in a healthy condition. Then gas pains around the heart, palpitation, smothering spells, rumbling noises, bloating, burning sour taste or drowsiness after eating, all disappear. No matter how long you've suffered or how many remedies you've taken, give my treatment a trial. You take no risk.

It's sent on approval—costs only $1.00 if it makes good my claims—nothing if it fails. Contains no harmful drugs. Write me today—a postal will do. Full treatment comes by return post.

Rupture Kills
8,000 Annually

Eight thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and all truss sufferers in the land are invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own homes. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD when adhering closely to the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—comparatively inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO CO., 298 Stuart Bldg., St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and instructive information.—(c) P.L.

CAPT. JETHRO'S LUCK

By Capt. Dingle

A Tale of Northern Seas and Hardy Men

A HUNCH may lead a man where no punch could ever drive him. Cap'n Jethro Scraggs had followed a hunch. He still followed it, after ten months of failure in the face of growing opposition from his graybeard crew. Even old Eph Brower, his staunch and loyal chief mate, no longer made pretense of sugaring the pills of his biting sarcasm when discussing it.

"Yew made a couple o' crackin' good v'yages and yewr fat head all swelled up!" said Eph. He puffed fiercely at a spitting, reeking short clay pipe that knew no friends and but one master. Eph cared nothing at all for the bulging eyed glare on his skipper's red face.

"Here we be," Eph proceeded, "ten months out, an' the bottom tier o' casks jest bare full. 'Tarnal Fire! Why yew wanted tew come gallivantin' up into Greenland seas arter fish es yew don't know nawthin' about is a hull lot deeper 'n I kin fadom."

Jed Roach, second mate, listened with ears that resembled stu'ns'ls. He had made one record trip with the ancient spouter, the first one after her rejuvenescence. Then, bewildered by his big share, he deserted the whaler and bought a share in a steamboat, commanding her coastwise trading. When the old Gayhead rolled home on her second voyage, not only full to the beams but towing behind her a juicy piece of salvage of a disabled tug, Jed had learned his lesson about steamboating. He was glad to ship in the old spouter again as second mate. He had been first mate on that first amazingly successful co-operative voyage, when all hands, recruited from Snug Harbors, Sailors' Retreats, and small cottages, had each put up $300 toward fitting Jethro Scraggs's ancient whaler out, and had shared equally in the quickest trip on record. Jed had played Jethro's luck. Now it seemed as if three times running was more than could be expected of any lucky number. This trip into the Arctic surely promised failure, stark and cold.

"Eph," said Cap'n Jethro slowly, swallowing hard on the anger that was rising in him, "Eph, yew an' all hands voted last v'yage against my jedgement an' made me take thet thar tug. 'T wuz nawthin' but a blessed accident es tarned thet trip back tew our profit. Ef thet tug's wheel hedn't drapped off arter she'd give us her line last trip 'd ha' been purty poor, Eph, purty poor."

"'Tarnal Fire! Don't I know it?" retorted Eph. He stumped to the rail, knocked out his pipe, and rubbed up some coarse nubbles of black plug tobacco to refill it. "Ain't we all give yew credit? But, hell's bells, Jethro, is thet any reason why we should keep cruisin' around 'n these dum cold seas when all hands kin see ez every 'tarnal whale is gone south fer th' winter?"

"I ain't so sure," persisted Jethro. "I know our two good trips sent a dozen old spouters a-fishin' again, and the price of sparm ile ain't goin' tew go up none. I happen tew know es thar's a fat market fer whalebone, though, an' we kin git that better up here 'n anywhere else."

"Ain't got much yit, Jethro," put in Jed Roach. The man at the wheel, leaning forward to hear, added his little note:

"S'posin' we gits froze in, what then? A hull winter lost, Jethro; and they dew say es nights be six months long thar. Why, we'd burn up all the ile we got f'r light!"

"Seth Noakes! Ef yew stick yewr beak in whar 't asked fer, be dummed ef I don't hit it sech a poke es 'll make yew swaller yer handkerchief tew wipe yewr nose wi!" roared Jethro. He shook his fist in the faces of his mates and blared in finality.

"Ef yew all votes agin me, I got tew do es yew say. Ontil then I'll foller my own nose, Hob's Boots! 'T is the last v'yage I'll make all free an' ekal wi' sech a sojer's watch of Salt Lake whalers!"

There was a distinct ice blink to windward. A keen November air tingled the skin and made breath visible. Tiny white tips curled over the pale green seas, and under all ran a deeper swell which rolled the old whaling barque dizzily, light as she was, until every ancient knee and timber, beam and stanchion in her flavorsome old fabric squealed and groaned again. In small knots about her littered decks her hoary headed old crew carried on jobs like sailormen, criticising Cap'n Jethro meanwhile like green hands. Noel Pease, bo'sun again after one voyage as second mate, held forth like the greenest greenhorn making up for his lost dignity by an assumed bravado that was never carried up to Cap'n Jethro's bodily presence. He stood with his back to the pink panels of the fore side of the galley, carefully scrutinizing every foot of a stack of long ash oars for flaws. The high bulwarks were pink, too; but the dainty paint was smeared and smudged with smoke from the ugly brick tryworks, set in an iron pan amidships. Incongruous, that pink paint seemed, maybe, but there had been excellent reason for it at first; lacking paint for the fitting out, and with no cash left to spare for fripperies, old Eph Brower had picked up a drum of paint alongshore, which had turned out to be pink. It was used, gratefully, and so amazing had been their luck on that memorable voyage that when Eph asked about paint for the next trip Cap'n Jethro had replied emphatically, "Pink, Eph, paint her pink!"

"'Tis like everythin' else," grumbled Noel, stealing a glance aft before raising his voice. "Men be like ships; they be built tew stand just so much an no more. Clap a skys'l on-tew th' old Gayhead, an' likely she'd bust wide open wi' stinkin' pride an' drowned all hands. Ol' Jethro's rigged a skys'l, in a manner o' speakin', an'—"

"Yew won't never drownd, yew won't," grinned Slippy, drawing his door to, practicing safety first. "They hangs men as talks like yew're talkin', Noel. Leastways, they do fer mutiny, an' mutiny grows out o'—"

"Why, yew greasy ol' swab, I'll poke yewr tripes out!" swore Noel, thudding angrily with the loom of an oar at the spot where Slippy's waistline should have been. The stout ash only banged on a stouter oak door, and ribald merriment floated through the square window from inside.

"I'll fix yew, anyways!" growled Noel, and went surlily to work again, his audience sniggering too openly for him to carry on with his argument.

Every few minutes a flurry of big snowflakes came along on the breeze. Over the dark green of the windward horizon, where dull gray clouds hung low and heavy with snow, there was a glint of waning light on distant ice. The air grew colder, and at times the old whaler slid through, drifting thin ice with a hiss that was far more pleasing to hear than to ponder upon. And the lookout in the crow's nest high up on the foretopgallantmast came down without waiting for his relief and marched aft to the poop.

"'Tarnal fire!" roared old Eph. "Who told yew yew might come a-visitin'? Yew quit lookin' out then?"

"Yew shet up, Eph," retorted the old whaleman independently. He entered the cabin and walked into Cap'n Jethro's stateroom without knocking.

"Jethro, yew'll hev tew break out thet spare slop chest," he said. Jethro stared at him ferociously. The old fellow looked around the cabin, anywhere except at Jethro, until he found what he sought. Then he coolly took down a fat black bottle, poured a lot of rum into the skipper's tumbler, and drank it off with a nod at his almost choking host.

"Didn't yewrrum ration git for'ard today, Amos?" Cap'n Jethro inquired with cold politeness.

"What thar wuz of it," returned Amos with a shrug. "Yew don't finger a chap's rum ration's goin' tew feed an' clothe him tew, do yew? Ef yew be goin' tew mooch around these dum blasted frozen seas, Jethro, thar's more'n me es 'll need clo'es. I be dummed ef I'll freeze up thar in that bar'l another minit enless I hev storm undergear tew bend."

"Git yewr slops at eight bells!" Jethro retorted. "'Tis no time tew issue slops now. Why, yew or'nary old barnacle, th' hull ocean might be full o' right whales an' nobody tew see 'em while yew're—"

"Thar ain't no whales tew see, thet's my notion," stated Amos indifferently. Cap'n Jethro glared at him, then dragged a dog eared book from his meager shelf of navigation works.

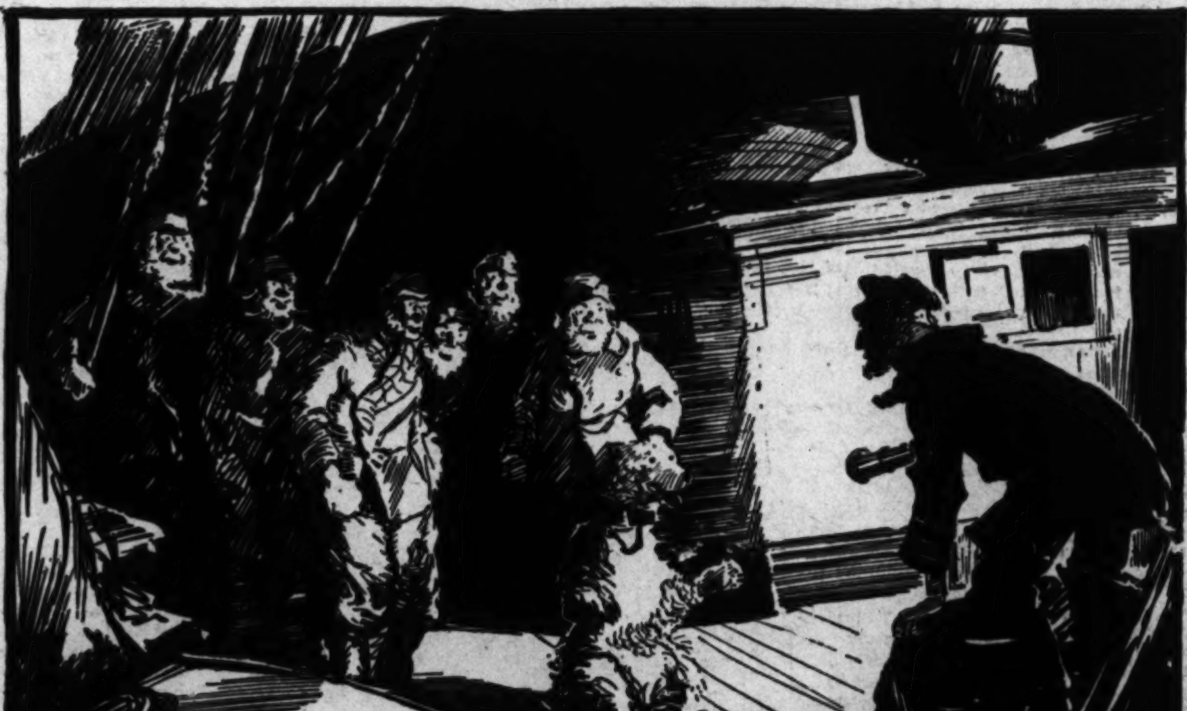
"Hob's Boots—" he roared, slapping the book down and groping for a well soiled page. "Here, yew sojer! Read that! 'Course yew can't read. Ef yew could, yew'd be somethin' besides a barnacled old swab wi'out no sense. I'll tell yew what it says. Loot'nant Maury o' th' Navy he claims es right up thar inside the ice pack all th' right whales is born an' bred. Don't he know? Why, yew or'nary old—"

"I be a barnacled swab. I knows it. Yew jest told me so," Amos cut in. He helped himself again from the skipper's bottle. "Yew never stays long enough in one place tew git barnacled. Yew 'minds me o' one of them thar Potigeese Man-o'-Wars, es jes' drif's, and drif's, an' drif's, 'stid o' holdin' on tew whar their grub es proved tew be good. All them things gits outa life is a mean disposition, es—"

"Amos!" yelled Cap'n Jethro leaping to his rheumatic feet and swiftly rueing it. "Ef yew ses another dum blasted word I'll hit yew a doughboy over th' callybash es'll larn ye as I ain't got a mean disposition. Hob's Boots! Git for'ard an' hev a meetin.' Vote me a idjit, an hum we goes. 'Till then I carries on. Here—" Jethro's tone lost its sting. He unhooked a suit of heavy underwear from the head of his bunk and handed them to Amos. "Here, Amos, yew ain't so young as yew wuz. I'll git some noo gear unstowed afore eight bells. Yew git back on lookout 'till yewr watch is up. Thar's whale, Amos, an' I kin smell it."

"Huh! I ain't sayin' es yewr smeller ain't good," muttered Amos, accepting the undergarments rather humbly. "But we be all free an' ekal, an' yew ain't froze none es I kin see up thar in th' crow's nest. Ef we hed cut in whale a-plenty it'd be diffrunt."

Jethro favored the seaman with one brief



"Nole!" yelled Amos, "get this yer dumblasted critter away from me afore I hit it a poke!"

YOUR PILES STOP

When Treated from the Inside

Have Ointments, Salves, Dilators or Other Local Makeshifts Cured Your Piles So They Won't Come Back?

Such Treatments Never Heal Where They Can Not Reach

Reaching the REAL Trouble from the INSIDE is the Common Sense Way—the Surest Method. That is the Page System of Treatment.

As a Last Resort After Trying Every Conceivable Treatment for the Cure of Piles, Thousands Have Been Healed by the Page Internal Treatment.

A Trial Treatment Sent FREE If You Mail Coupon.

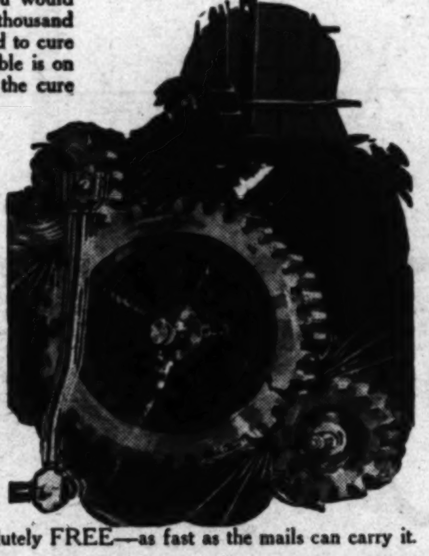
Why suffer any longer? Get rid of the irritation—the agony—nights without sleep—days when the least effort of working grinds on you like a wornout cog.

And Piles are to the body just as a broken, wornout cog is to a machine. There is the grind and irritation. You feel as though every muscle, every fiber, every nerve were tied in a knot—tense and strained. Before others you are embarrassed and bothered by the itching irritation when it is most important to appear calm. You feel grouchy. It is hard to smile and be yourself.

If your watch, your automobile, or any other piece of mechanism had a broken cog you would have it fixed. It is just as easy and a thousand times more important to make up your mind to cure your Piles. Since you know the real trouble is on the inside and that the Page System for the cure of Piles starts from the inside instead of the outside—sign and mail the coupon for the FREE Trial Package Now.

No matter how severe your case may be. Even though in desperation you are thinking of an operation. No matter how many years you have suffered, be it five, ten, or thirty-five years—no matter what your age, be it ten or nine times ten, the Page Method will bring quick relief. You will be just as thankful as thousands who write that they feel themselves to be permanently cured.

The Page Method is different. It starts from the inside and heals. It is the one most reliable, surest, dependable remedy for the treatment of piles. Send the coupon now. It will cost not a single penny until you are convinced of the results. On receipt of your name and address a trial package will be sent you absolutely FREE—as fast as the mails can carry it.



Worth a Million to Him

E. R. Page Co., Marshall, Mich.

Gentlemen: It gives me great pleasure to inform you that I have used your Pile treatment as per directions and can state that it has positively cured me. I was bothered with bleeding Piles for 20 years and was operated on once for them. I want to say that E. R. Page's Pile Treatment was worth a million to me. If the use of this letter will prove of benefit to others who may be suffering from Piles, you have my permission to use it as you see fit.

Respectfully yours,

Ottumwa, Ia. JAMES MARSH.

Had Both Protruding and Bleeding Piles

E. R. Page, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir: Your month's treatment for Piles received. Used according to directions and am very glad to write you and let you know results. I was in very bad shape with protruding and bleeding Piles for ten or twelve years. Have used one month's treatment and Piles apparently all gone. If you care to use this testimonial you are welcome to do so. Respectfully yours,

S. P. REXFORD.

206 Glasby St., Saginaw, Mich.

Doctors Recommended Operation

E. R. Page, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir: As your remedy has cured me after 15 years' suffering, as I tried all the doctors around here and all they wanted was to operate on me and I thought I would try your remedy and it proved all right. I am well now. You can use my name if that will be any good to you. I am very thankful for your remedy and I hope all Pile sufferers will try them, for it is a blessing.

Yours truly,

MRS. MARTIN NASH.

Holidaysburg, Pa., Route No. 2.

Praise From a Minister

E. R. Page, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir: Just a few lines to you in regard to your treatment for Piles. I have taken medicine as you directed. I was, when the medicine came, flat on my back for three weeks, when taking it as you directed brought relief to me such as I have not realized in 20 years. Any time you can use my testimonial I will be delighted to speak for it with the highest of praise. I feel there cannot be too much said in regard to this wonderful treatment. Your brother,

REV. C. S. DRISKELL.

Houghton, S. D.

Just Chew a Pleasant Tablet. Your Piles Go and Do Not Come Back.

A Broken Cog Will Wreck a Whole Machine.

One Little Touch of Piles Will Wreck the Human Machine, Spoil Your Disposition, Unfit You for Work and Eventually Ruin Your General Health.

Mend That Cog; Heal Those Piles.

The best thing that you can do today or that you have done in many days will be the mailing of the coupon for the trial treatment. All we want you to do is to try this treatment according to directions—easy to follow. Prove it to yourself. You run no risk. The good is worth the effort. No matter how many years you have been annoyed and irritated by piles in any form, whether you are bothered constantly or just once in a while, don't let anything stop you from trying this treatment. Send your name and address now.

FREE TEST

Convince yourself of the healing qualities of the Page Method for the Internal Treatment of Piles by sending for the FREE TEST. You will feel like a new person—enjoy sleep, be calm and energetic in your work, and relaxed for an evening's pleasure. Your mind and body can be depended upon to give quick and sure response to the duties and demands of daily life. Once gone—the right way, piles will not come back every few weeks.

The most important part of the Page System for the cure of piles is the little Page Pile Tablet and you will enjoy chewing one or two after meals. This reaches the inside, where the real trouble is. The Treatment also includes a wonderful ointment for temporary use while the tablets are taking effect, and a bowel regulator.

This System for the Cure of Piles is the result of twenty-five years' experience with every form of piles, carrying the endorsement of thousands who tell the cure of pile cases. It goes further than a treatment prepared to give relief for the moment. Its purpose is to cure piles permanently by treating them from the inside instead of the outside.

Take the time now, forget all that you have tried or thought of trying—sign the coupon and prove the truth of these statements to yourself. Remember the treating of piles from the inside instead of the outside has been thoroughly proven. It heals. Read the letters on this page. Note the years that others have suffered and then found health and happiness. Many who followed this treatment twenty years ago still report not the slightest trace of returning piles. Many who have taken just the trial package have been healed. Note that a patient with a case of bleeding piles for ten or twelve years is reported on this page as completely healed after taking the Page Internal Treatment.

Letters come to us daily like these you read on this page. We have enough of them in our offices to keep you reading for many days. Yet the proof is what the Page Internal Treatment can do for you.

POVERTY DE LUXE

By Margaret Culkin Banning

Illustrated
by Howard Butler

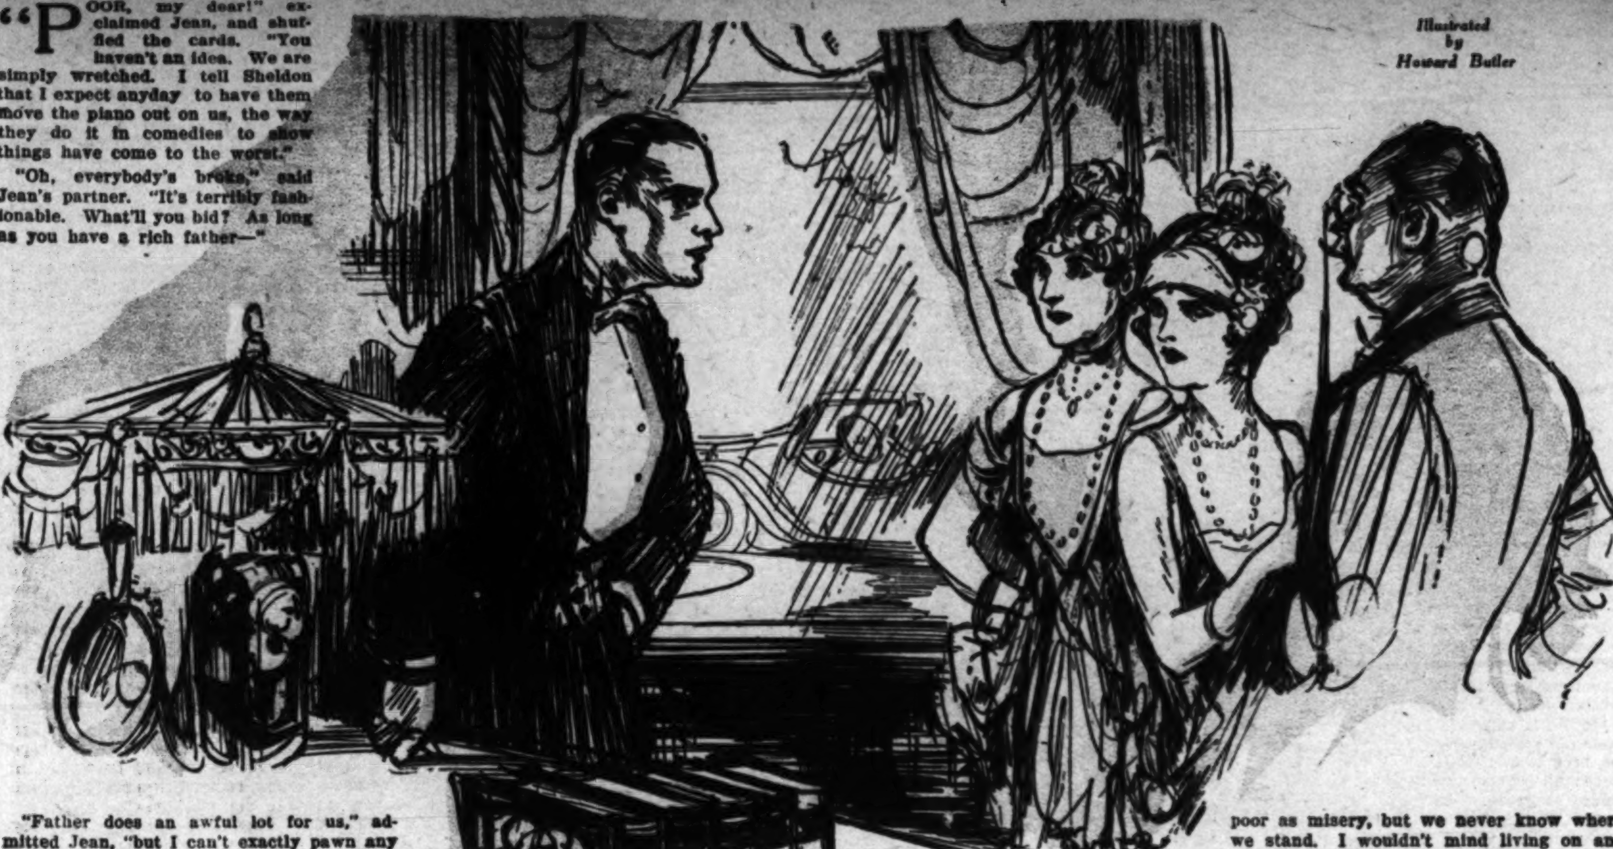
"POOR, my dear!" exclaimed Jean, and shuffled the cards. "You haven't an idea. We are simply wretched. I tell Sheldon that I expect anyday to have them move the piano out on us, the way they do it in comedies to show things have come to the worst."

"Oh, everybody's broke," said Jean's partner. "It's terribly fashionable. What'll you bid? As long as you have a rich father—"



They all looked at him, Jean with anger, and old D. H. T. stood there wearing his poker expression.

"Father does an awful lot for us," admitted Jean, "but I can't exactly pawn any of his automobiles for cash money. I bid a heart."

"I've already said no-trump—do pay attention to the game," begged Gladys Decour. "I'm losing half of this. Nobody's lying awake nights worrying about you and Sheldon going to the poorhouse."

Jean went back to her wail.

"If everyone didn't assume that I had a lot of money! No one will show me a fur coat under $600, and Sheldon and I have to live on what he earns!"

Jean's face grew intense. Jean often grew intense like that. She had been so when she told her father that she meant to marry Sheldon Mills.

That same intensity was the reason why it was so much easier to fall in with Jean's plans than to make any of your own, as her father and her husband had discovered. When she had ideas, she was used to seeing them carried out—like marrying Sheldon and living on what he earned.

"Sheldon hasn't anything at all," she was wont in those days to tell people, "but I don't care a bit. He's got drive and personality, and he's the most wonderful lover in the world, and that's all I want. We'll have to live on what he earns—absolutely. Father said so, and I said that Sheldon wouldn't hear of any other way of living. He's so terribly independent."

And so the theory had been established. Like many theories, it had been subjected to slight alterations. Mr. Tillinghast had given them their house—of course, said Jean. "I don't want pearls; we aren't taking a wedding trip to speak of, because hotels are so expensive; and they have to give us a present; and so there's no earthly reason why father shouldn't give us the house."

There was the house, and of course, with father's house only a block away, slight gaps which wedding-presents didn't take care of could be filled in with perfectly justifiable borrowings. It didn't interfere with your independence.

On the evening when Jean had so vehemently declared her poverty to the bridge-party at the City and Country Club, her husband was coming home on the surface car. After seven years of marriage, he still had the incurably romantic look which Jean had recognized and advertised so widely. Several girls watching him had recourse first to vanity cases and then to obvious stirrings calculated to attract his attention as he clung to his strap and gazed out through the darkening glass of the street-car windows. Sheldon was stalwart and he had the look of seriousness that is semi-sadness and so alluring. The sadness tonight was more than semi.

It had been one thing after another all day. He had been approached by a committee soliciting for local charities, and the interview had been embarrassing. Every fellow with whom he played golf or bridge was down for a couple of hundred dollars at least, and in these charitable campaigns you had to live up to what they expected of you. It wasn't, he reflected, that he wouldn't be glad to give what he could. But there'd be a lot more fun in giving $10 that he could afford, and enjoying the sense of doing his part, than to sign up for $150 and be annoyed every time an installment fell due.

Sheldon's thoughts rambled loosely, each of them irritating another: Jean eternally talking about new clothes. And that automobile salesman—after he'd told him definitely that he didn't want a car, couldn't afford to buy a car, the salesman had the nerve to hint that he might suggest to Mr. Tillinghast to give it for a present to Jean. The worst of it was that every time he tried to get ahead by himself, he came up against the assumption in people's minds that old Tillinghast was carrying him.

Jean was quite sincere when she informed her friends that her prospective husband "hadn't anything"—honest at least in her judgment, and backed by her standard. He had been a fine-looking young man who had one of the best rooms at the Y. M. C. A., and he was one of the buyers in a wholesale grocery house. One of the vice-president's daughters, scouting around for extra young men for a dance, had discovered him and sent him an invitation. Jean Tillinghast had met him, and the rest had been pleasantly natural.

Sheldon had been married seven years and he still was coffee-buyer for Holden and Dunning. He was also old Tillinghast's son-in-law, member of a couple of clubs, driver of his father-in-law's cars (when Jean borrowed them or the chauffeur was on a vacation,) father of a most beautiful and beloved daughter, good golfer, good bridge-player and Jean's husband. Sheldon's only brother, Gilbert, had come to have a shade of reserve in his manner toward him. Gilbert had married shortly before Sheldon, and time was when Sheldon used to be a great frequenter of the tiny apartment in which Gilbert at first housed his bride. But Belle had no money of her own and no social position; and somehow or other, though Jean was always charming to her sister-in-law, the paths of the two brothers did not cross very often.

More domestic dramas come to a head over a breakfast or dinner table than in any other place. It takes a quite violent shrew or domestic bully so seek his or her partner out for the purpose of starting discord. But when the table lies spread between a man and a woman, the scene is set and the curtain rises.

"I wish," said Jean plaintively, "that everyone wouldn't assume that father gives me an allowance."

"Why should they?"

"Oh, they do. Of course he does do ever so much for us."

"I don't know about that," said Sheldon a little grimly.

"Why, Sheldon, that isn't very gracious, to say the least. Why, you know how much they've done. Just the house alone—"

"Yes, and I have to keep it up!"

"And the use of the automobiles and the club memberships, and then our trip to Florida last winter didn't cost us a thing. You know father took care of all those things. Most young people—"

"Most young people aren't put in a false position. You think I want your father's tips? That's what they are— tips. If he's feeling good, he offers us a trip to Florida or buys you a coat or Betty a bracelet. Or he gives us a membership in a club that means that we have to run with a lot of people we can't afford to run with."

"My friends, you mean?" Jean reminded him.

"Not mine, anyway—not the sort of friends that a buyer in Holden and Dunning ought to have: friends that keep us bluffing all the time, and trading on the fact that your father's a rich man and that some day you may be a rich woman.

"The tradespeople are easy with us because your father's rich—they nag and nag, but they don't go too far. And we bluff along. We know we're poor as misery, but we never know where we stand. I wouldn't mind living on any kind of an income if I could just feel for once I had my bills all paid for the month. Why—for seven years we've been living on an income about half big enough to support us as we're living—on that and your father's tips. He likes to keep me eating out of his hand—' '

The fat was in the fire. Even if he had wanted to forget the subject, Sheldon could not now, with Jean's head so stiffly in the air. They went into their delightful living-room furnished with Tillinghast donations or wedding presents sprung from Jean's connections. Ordinarily Sheldon loved his home. Tonight he felt sternly that it sapped his manhood.

It was Betty who really hurt him. She lay in her ivory white bed, a gift from her grandmother.

"I want," said Betty, "a pony I can ride on. Dorothy has one. She let me ride, too, with Ellen holding me. Will you get me one, Daddy?"

Even at six Betty could be pleading.

"It costs too much, dear. When you get a little older."

Betty remained blithe. "All right," she said. "I'll ask grandfather."

Her father stared blackly down at her and then left the room. It was Jean who got the brunt of his anger.

"I may take tips," he stormed, "but I will not have my child trained to be a beggar. She is to get along on what I give her. She's to understand it."

Jean did not cry until Sheldon went out, shutting the door with an insulting forcibleness that resembled a slam. Then she indulged herself.

He drifted to the club for some cigarettes, and Will Brewer hailed him to make a fourth at bridge.

When he got home, he found Jean sitting up for him and still looking intense.

"Perhaps," Jean said darkly, "there's something behind all this sudden discontent. Perhaps you've met some one—some woman?"

"Oh, Jean, you know I adore you—"

He knew the remedy for that kind of talk from years of experience, and tried to caress her. But she remained intense.

In the morning they both felt under a slight strain which was not made the less difficult because it was Jean's birthday. On birthdays they always went to the Tillinghast house. The celebration was doubtless already under way. It was almost impossible to refuse. Still, when Jean, after being sweet with deliberation all through breakfast, asked, "Will it be too unpleasant for you to dine at father's tonight?" Sheldon wished that it wasn't Jean's birthday and therefore a day hallowed to her wishes. As it was, he merely smiled and assured his prompt answer will be appreciated for the reason your advice will either tend to prevent my going to Mayo Brothers or following some other course.

CARE OF THE BODY

For over two years I have been bothered with a continual roaring sound in my right ear and all of the specialists I have con[illegible] have been [illegible] and now my other ear is going bad.

My tonsils bothered me some about two years ago and they were removed, but ever since then I have had two distinct sounds coming out of my right ear and at times I think I am going to lose my mind it is so maddening. I have spent my savings with fully a half a dozen "Ear Specialists" and they have tried serum, electrical, and various other treatments but I am in worse shape than I have ever been.

My blood, spinal fluid, teeth and urine have all been thoroughly examined and have been found all right or at least that has been the report made to me. At a last resort I went to our family physician and he advised me to go to Mayo Brothers and have them examine me and find a cause for this ailment. Will you be so kind as to tell me whether or not you advise me to give up my position and go to Mayo Brothers for this treatment, or do you think I can find relief here with local doctors.

It seems to me that I should be able to find some doctor here in Kansas City that could benefit my hearing but so far I have found them all alike and nothing has been done that has benefited me.

Your advice will be appreciated.

Most sincerely,

This letter presents some very interesting facts commonly encountered.

You will note that the writer complains of a roaring sound in his right ear, and then recites the experiences undergone by him in his effort to secure relief.

At about the same time as the commencement of his trouble, he had his tonsils removed.

Very few people know that the nerve connections to the tonsils are similar to the nerve connections to the ears. It is not an infrequent occurrence to find deafness resulting from the removal of the tonsils, especially where poor surgery has been done.

Thousands of people are suffering from this same ailment, and I want to sound this warning, that the remedy does not lie in the surgical removal of the tonsils.

The experience of this writer is interesting from other standpoints. Note what he says concerning the ear specialists and their various methods of treatment. Note the different kinds of expensive examinations that he submitted to, nowhere looking for the cause, everywhere seeking for palliative or other measures of incidental relief.

Suppose something had been found wrong with the blood, or spinal fluid, or teeth, then what?

Marvelous indeed is the routine of medical examination, but oh, how hopelessly inadequate is their method of treatment. To use the words of a famous cartoonist, "Now that you have it, what are you going to do with it?"

By every devious device of examination and painful inspection, a diagnosis of one kind or another is arrived at. But after the diagnosis, then what?

What can they do with it? What do you believe the famous Mayo Brothers will do? Without doubt, more serum, more dope, and more hospitalization.

The remedy lies in none of these.

Everywhere but for causes do they seek. Do they inquire into the habits of life? What is the diet? What is the sex life? What is the history with relation to accidents or falls? What has been the past treatment, whether vicious or good? What is the nervous life? Not at all, in most cases.

In the case of head noises, the chances are nine out of ten that the cause is to be found in a toxemia of the blood stream, which in turn arises from adherence to the typical American dietary.

I have seen case after case of these same roaring head noises and ear noises respond magnificently, after all other methods had failed, to an eight or ten day absolute fast, merely giving the bloodstream an opportunity to discharge its fetid wastes.

When sufferers from this trouble as well as others, awaken to the realization that in their faulty methods of living can be found the remedy for their ailments, then and only then will they cease to be victims of extortion involved in the procedure complained of by this correspondent.

Avoid Gas After Eating

Bloating and distention of the abdomen, drowsiness after eating, pressure and pain around the heart, hands and feet cold and numb, nervousness, are the more common symptoms of this torment—gas.

All is due to the fermenting of food in the stomach.

Physicians state that the best absorbent they have found for this foul gas is Hylands No. 10 Gastritis. These little tablets also quickly relieve the pain and distress that come after eating.

[illegible] at the Tillinghast's would [illegible]. But he felt that she had the better of him, and when she added that she hoped it wouldn't be inconvenient for him to come out on the surface car because she hated to borrow father's cars so often, he realized that she had planned these statements last night, and his own hostility began to rise. Several times that day his colleagues noted a grim dignity on his face, and once or twice his lips moved as if in declamation.

"What's eating you, Shell?" one of them asked. "Going to make a speech?"

"You bet I am, one of these days," answered Sheldon.

Opportunity was nearer than Sheldon knew. David Harrison Tillinghast was in the library when he arrived that evening—old D. H. T., as he was known in financial circles. He welcomed his son-in-law heartily. He was fond of Sheldon.

"That young Fielding Davis is a smart young man. Know him?"

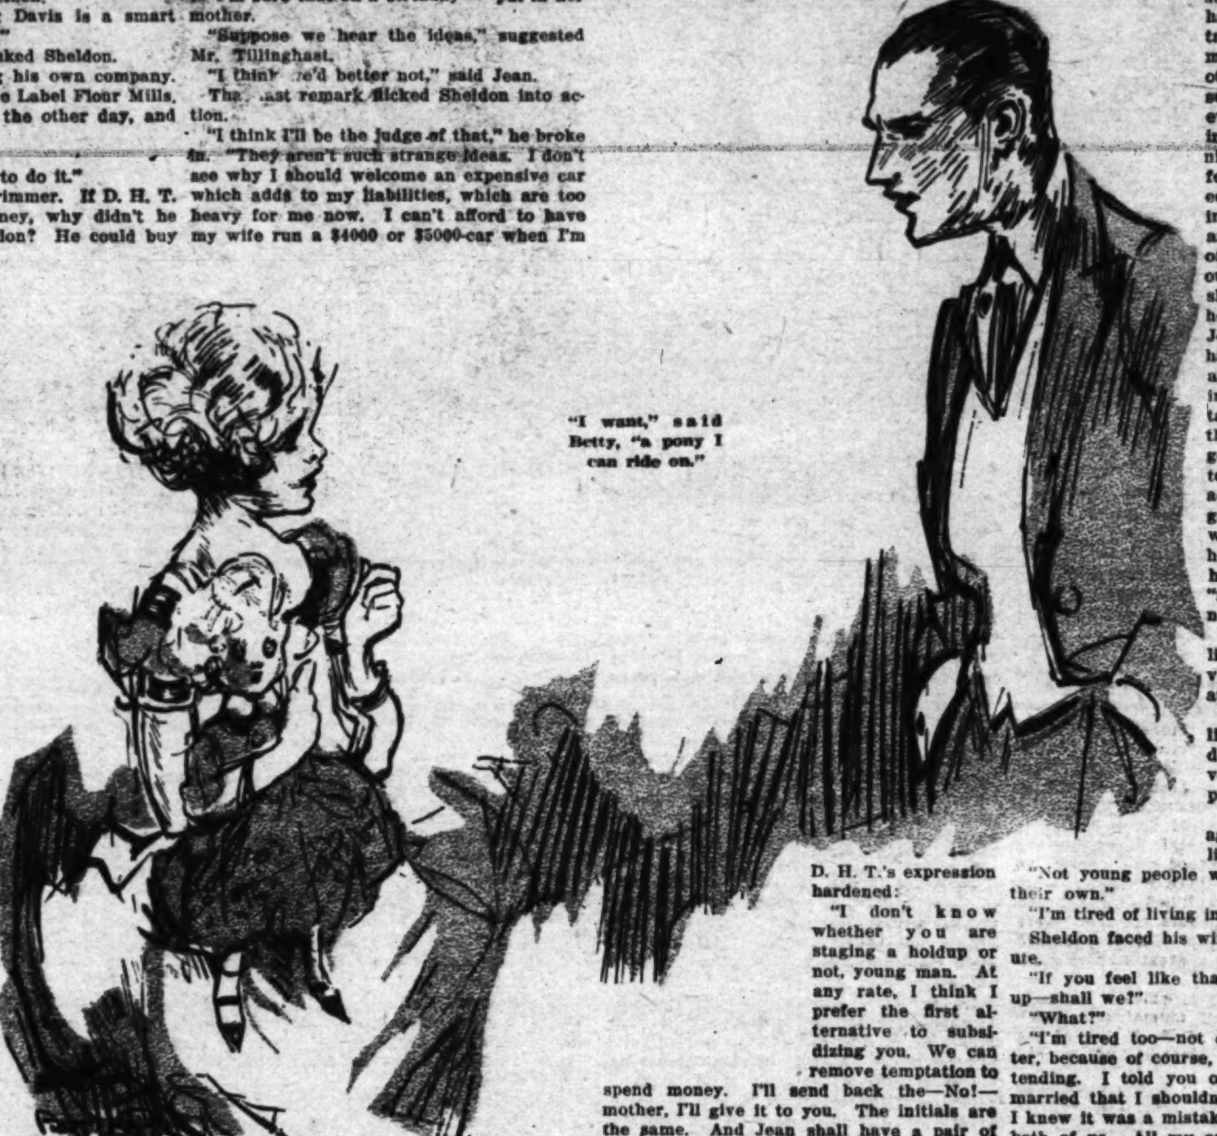
"What's he doing?" asked Sheldon.

"He's been organizing his own company. Bought out the old White Label Flour Mills. Came to us for money the other day, and got it."

"Who backed him?"

"Several of us. Glad to do it."

Sheldon's lips grew grimmer. If D. H. T. wanted to advance money, why didn't he give it to himself, Sheldon? He could buy into the Parke-Austin Wholesale Grocery Company at this minute, if he had the money. Austin's sons wanted to sell. And what he couldn't do with that defunct company!



"I want," said Betty, "a pony I can ride on."

The presents were put at Jean's place for dessert. That was the custom. There was silk lingerie from her mother—not too unexpected, as Jean had been careful to admire just what she needed last time she had shopped with her mother—a dozen embroidered napkins from Aunt Delia, a purse from Sheldon, which Jean was charming about:

"I love it, Sheldon."

"It isn't much," he said, heartened by her thanks.

"Quite enough—quite enough," said old D. H. T.

Then they waited for Jean's father to reveal his present. A stealthy feeling in Sheldon which he resented, hoped that it might be a check. A thousand dollars would go so far in clearing up the old bills, but of course that was too much to hope for. Well, $500 would be plenty, even $200. It must be a check, because there was no sign of a wrapped package anywhere.

Mr. Tillinghast finished his coffee, and they left the table. In the library, which fronted the street, he made his way to the window.

"Good-looking car in front. Wonder who's got the nerve to park out there."

Jean followed him to the window.

"Funny," she agreed; "right before the steps, isn't it?"

The electric lights at the gates shone full on the car.

"Now, who do you suppose it belongs to?" speculated old D. H. T. "Looks like a good car for young people, doesn't it?"

Jean turned to look at him, and his smile verified her suspicions.

"You darling!" she cried, and flung her arms about her father's neck. The front door flew open, and Jean dashed down to the curb with others in smiling pursuit. Sure enough, on a little silver plate on the door gleamed Jean's initials.

Sheldon looked at the initials a little strangely, then at Jean's happy face. Jean turned to him triumphantly.

"Isn't it wonderful to have a father who does things like this for you! It's such a good car! It's a beauty!"

Sheldon did not answer. He was thinking of young Davis, buying his own company, and of himself doomed for life to ride in his wife's car and eat her family's dinners. And unwisely Jean pressed him.

"You don't seem very enthusiastic, Sheldon."

"I'm afraid not, Jean," said her husband. He had hardly reached the hall when Jean, very white-faced, confronted him.

"What do you mean by that?" she demanded.

"My lack of enthusiasm? I think you know."

"What's the trouble, Sheldon? Not your favorite make? It isn't final you know," said old D. H. T. kindly.

"I'm afraid that I hardly approve of my wife's having an expensive car," said Sheldon quietly.

"Sheldon's picked up a lot of silly ideas somewhere," his wife remarked cuttingly, "and they haven't improved his manners."

"I'm sure that on a birthday—" put in her mother.

"Suppose we hear the ideas," suggested Mr. Tillinghast.

"I think we'd better not," said Jean.

This last remark flicked Sheldon into action.

"I think I'll be the judge of that," he broke in. "They aren't such strange ideas. I don't see why I should welcome an expensive car which adds to my liabilities, which are too heavy for me now. I can't afford to have my wife run a $4000 or $5000-car when I'm only making $6000 a year. It's not right. It shows the world that I'm not supporting her. It adds to our expenses. It means upkeep, gasoline, motor-parties—a lot of other things we can't afford."

"Oh, well, Sheldon, if that's all that's on your mind, I'll endow that little car," offered his father-in-law.

"I'm sorry, but that doesn't fit the case. It's not endowment I want—"

"Not tips!" said Jean sarcastically.

"No—not tips. Not, as I said to my wife last night, Mr. Tillinghast, tips—club memberships, trips, new furs, car. I want a chance to live as we ought to live—not to be pulled into spending more a year, but less."

"You want me to live in a flat like the wife of a clerk?" said Jean.

"Well, you are the wife of a coffee-buyer, aren't you?" And then to Mr. Tillinghast: "And she'll always be the wife of a buyer as long as I'm put in the position where I have to be poor and live rich—poverty de luxe: I supply the poverty, you the de luxe. You talk to me about Fielding Davis. I could get somewhere myself if I don't have to stagger along under a lot of bills and a lot of social ambitions. You indorse Davis's notes, and you give my wife a car to increase my expense. Why didn't you consult me and ask whether I wanted my wife to have a car? Why don't you assume that I have a right to determine my own scale of living?"

They all looked at him, Jean with anger but a certain dawning respect, her mother angrily; and old D. H. T. stood there wearing his poker expression.

"When I married Jean, the understanding was that we were to live on what I could earn. We can't live, the way we've been expected to live, on that. People assume that she gets an allowance."

"You mean you want me to give Jean an allowance?"

"I don't mean any such thing. I mean that you ought to leave us alone and not bother us with temptations to spend money, or else give us enough to do the thing right."

He hadn't meant to say that last. It put the wrong construction on everything. Old D. H. T.'s expression hardened:

"I don't know whether you are staging a holdup or not, young man. At any rate, I think I prefer the first alternative to subsidizing you. We can remove temptation to spend money. I'll send back the—No!—mother, I'll give it to you. The initials are the same. And Jean shall have a pair of gloves for her birthday present."

"Not my car!" cried Jean.

"Your husband is right. If he can't afford to let you have a car, you shouldn't have a car," said D. H. T., and looked coldly at his son-in-law. "I understand you correctly?"

"Absolutely," said Sheldon, and squared up to the situation. "That's fine."

He rather expected Jean to [illegible] him on the spot and was [illegible] sure that she would go home with him. But she did, although after her tears had been suppressed, there was a still quiet about her that he dreaded. She was tense, and she obviously intended to bring him to time.

Meanwhile old D. H. Tillinghast sat on his own bed and chuckled.

"That young fellow certainly treated us to fireworks—"

"And on Jean's birthday. I [illegible] if he's good to her. You must have [illegible] run her car over in the morning, [illegible]."

"What car?"

"Why, the new one."

"Not much," said D. H. T. "She [illegible] her gloves tomorrow. I send no cars to that house."

"But, Dave, you don't intend to make Jean suffer—"

"In a measure, that's out of our hands. The young man's thesis is sound enough. Of course in theory he's quite right. Still, if I'd have given Jean a check, he might have felt differently. But he'll have the chance to work this out."

"How?"

"As I remember, we're going to California next Sunday for five months, aren't we? This house is to be closed, and the cars put in storage. Not a battery left in one of them except the one we take along. Let Sheldon have a taste of independence."

"But how about Jean? She's coming out to us next month with Betty."

"I guess we'll tell Jean to stay with her husband this winter," said D. H. T.

In January there were taxes. Mr. Tillinghast had paid the taxes on the expensive house and lot he had given his daughter. This year he omitted it. Poverty de luxe grew more difficult. On Christmas the Tillinghasts sent Jean a phonograph and Sheldon a set of books.

One night the Millses had to go home in a public bus from a dance. Sheldon did not have the cash for a taxi. Jean and he sat miserably beside each other on the straw seat, she in her lovely evening wrap and he in his expensive evening clothes. Sheldon felt that his wife hated him. She refused invitations after that, and indeed she was often too tired to go out in the evening, for she had incompetent help in the house. Jenny her old cook, had cost $70 a month; and though Mrs. Tillinghast had always taken care of that, this year she had forgotten. So Jenny had to go, and Jean felt adrift. She wept a good deal, alternating weeping with fits of hostility. But for once her intenseness, her "nervousness," did not work.

"Why must we live like pigs?" she said viciously one morning at breakfast.

"Because we arn't living honestly." Sheldon tried to keep his voice impersonal and persuasive.

"Other people manage to have cars and a little fun."

"Not young people without an income of their own."

"I'm tired of living in the gutter."

Sheldon faced his wife silently for a minute.

"If you feel like that, dear, let's give it up—shall we?"

"What?"

"I'm tired too—not of living in the gutter, because of course, we don't, but of pretending. I told you once before we were married that I shouldn't marry a rich girl. I knew it was a mistake. Now, it's bad for both of us. All my ambition is going, because I know I can't meet the burden. Maybe I'm not of much account. Anything you do is all right with me."

"You mean divorce? But I don't want a divorce."

"We can't go on like this, can we? I hurt you—I seem mean to you— I've killed every bit of love you had for me, and I've hurt myself too. I can't seem to go on. I dreamed of getting an interest in a wholesale house of my own. I wanted to make money for you."

She did not answer, and he left her.

That afternoon she went downtown and called on Mr. Gibbs, who was an old friend of hers and had a real estate business. They came to an understanding after much talk on her part.

There was roast lamb for dinner. Sheldon liked roast lamb. Until he came within the savory smell of it that night, he did not know how hungry and tired he was. All day he had been trying to think of somewhere he could turn to raise money enough to buy out the Austin interest. There was nowhere, no one, except his father-in-law. If he tried to go elsewhere, the first question would be why he did not go to Tillinghast. He came home reluctantly, and as he turned in at the gate, Jean saw him from the dining-room window and noted the slowness of his approach. He didn't want to come home.

CARE OF THE BODY

tions of a harvest from the seed which has been sown. As I travel through different parts of the country, I now see frequently more wholesome bread. The Bakers' Association of the United States has taken up this problem with vigor. They realize that the systems of milling and baking now in force devitalize all the cereals which are subjected to their action. The very life of the grains—that is, the vitamins, minerals and oils—is carefully extracted. In order to make a whiter flour the residuum is bleached with injurious substances. The result is that the cereal foods, including breads, have lost most of their vitality. The Bakers' Association is endeavoring to put back some of these extracted vital elements. To this end, it is advising the use of milk. Even the addition of skimmed milk to a loaf of this kind is an immense increase in wholesomeness, and the use of whole milk is, of course, a still greater step forward.

Just recently the authorities of the French Republic decreed that in milling wheat for French consumption, 78 per cent of the grain must be retained in the flour. That is about 6 per cent more than is common in this country. I see here a well-marked indication of progress.

My prophecy is that before the end of the next fifty years, cereal grains used for human food will be required to contain practically all of the vital elements in the flour. I see also an increased use of vegetables and fruits. There is a pecuniary difficulty here to overcome. A unit of nourishment in fruits and vegetables costs a good deal more than a unit of nourishment in cereals. Therefore, cereals for economic reasons will continue to be the necessary dominant factor in our dietary in the future. For this reason, the conservation of all the vitality in the cereal grain is of immense pecuniary as well as sanitary value. This fact is often overlooked.

Those who would excuse the production of white flour because of its popularity say that the elements which are missing can be supplied in fruits and vegetables, especially the leaf vegetables. This may be well for the well-to-do, but 90 per cent of our people in the future, as at present, may not be well-to-do, and it is this 90 per cent which will be immensely benefited by the further adoption of the propaganda for reform in the milling and baking industry.

What of Future?

Turning now to the other factors which shorten our lives, what does the future offer? Here, I think, is a much brighter light and a much better way. I believe within the next fifty years we will do almost as much for the adult life as we have for the infant and child life in the past fifty years. Infant mortality has been reduced fully one-third in this country in the last fifty years. The deaths from tuberculosis have been decreased to even a greater extent. Smallpox and typhoid fever have ceased to be threats against the lives of our people. The conservation of child life has increased the percentage of people who live to middle age. As we have not yet conquered middle and old age diseases the mortality from this [illegible] has been greatly increased in the last fifty years. Heart trouble has superseded tuberculosis as the dominant factor in death. There has been a tremendous increase in cancer, also in diabetes and Bright's disease. The toll from these sources is now appalling. We have firm ground for the belief that the diseases of middle life and old age will lose much of their terror in the advance of future sanitary science.

If cancer of the lips, tongue and throat is produced by irritation, then it is fair to believe that many other kinds, if not all kinds, of cancer may be due to the same source. We can then learn to protect our stomachs from the irritation of extremely hot or extremely cold foods, and diminish the cancer of this organ, which is the organ most commonly attacked in both men and women.

The case of diabetes is much like that of carcinoma of the mouth. Statistics show the increase in this disease has been measured most accurately by the increase in the consumption of sugar. We have placed on the pancreas a burden which has broken it down. The pancreas secretion which enables the tissues to burn the blood sugar is no longer furnished. The brilliant discovery that the pancreases of slaughtered swine will provide the lacking kindling enables the skillful physician to stay the disease and snatch the hapless victim from the yawning grave. These three foes—tuberculosis, cancer, and diabetes—will be less threatening, if I read the future aright.

At this season, when everybody wants to be happy, there is some comfort to feel that our children and theirs may look forward to a happier, more useful and longer life than we have enjoyed. They may confidently await the arrival of as many wonderful and useful inventions as we have seen. The greatest blessing they will have will be protection against disease and the prolongation of life. The cost of food will be greater, if agriculture is to live. Middle and old age will share in the blessings that infants and children have already acquired; there will be less smoking and far fewer cigarettes; more brotherly love and less bickering; far better nutrition and less consumption of food per person; more religion and less theology; more statesmen and fewer politicians, more homes and fewer divorces; more well-to-do people and fewer millionaires; fewer doctors and more sanitarians; more performance and less promise; more knowledge and fewer poor teachers; less selfishness and decidedly more altruism; more love of God and less fear of the devil; and, best of all, more wise giving and less gorging at Christmas.

Communications

DEAR SIR:
I am glad that The Times has decided to have you lecture over the radio, as I believe many people will listen that do not read "The Care of the Body."

It is eight years since I first saw an article in a section of The Times on tonsilitis. On one side was an article on California, that was sent to me in Colorado, on the other the first page of Care of the Body, by Dr. Brook. Since then I have read most of that section and passed it on to others.

Your subject on tonsilitis needs to be repeated once in a while for new ones listen in and there is surely a need of people learning what causes throat trouble.

I am a victim of the doctors, I have had my "throat cut," with a promise of never having tonsilitis again. Maybe it wasn't tonsilitis but I have discovered no difference between what I had before they were removed, and afterward.

No use to take your time explaining, except that I had a throat specialist, and two other doctors, and I nearly bled to death, and "A fool and his money are soon parted" applies to people with throat trouble.

After I learned to eat different I got over the throat trouble, and before I weighed 100 pounds. Now I weigh about 140. Once I weighed 160, but decided that was too much, so ate according.

I am inclosing a few recipes, if they are worth printing, all right; if not put them in the fire.

I know you have many letters to answer so will not be offended if you do not reply.

Wishing you future success I am,

Yours truly,

This letter is but one of many I am receiving on this subject.

It is self-explanatory and helps to enlighten the public as to the fact that the cause for enlarged tonsils does not lie in bacterial infection but in diet.

Faulty diet causes enlarged tonsils. Correction of the cause removes the diseased condition.

SPEARING LEOPARDS FROM HORSEBACK

By LIEUT.-COL. J. C. FAUNTHORPE, C.B.E., A.D.C.

(Illustrated by L. F. WILFORD)

Lieut.-Col. J. C. Faunthorpe.

[NOTE: "The most dangerous sport in the world" is what Englishmen in India consider the spearing of leopards from horseback. In this sport, the one white man who is distinguished above all others is Lieut.-Col. J. C. Faunthorpe, late commissioner of Lucknow, known to sportsmen on both sides of the Atlantic as a famous shot and daring hunter. Col. Faunthorpe was captain of the British rifle team for moving targets in the 1924 Olympic games at Paris.

Born in England, Col. Faunthorpe was educated at Rossall School and at Balliol College, Oxford. He is descended from a family distinguished in civil and military life; his mother's brother was R. D. Blackmore, famous as the author of "Lorna Doone."

Col. Faunthorpe entered the Indian Civil Service in 1892, became a District Officer six years later, and eventually Commissioner of Lucknow Division. With his entry into the civil service, he joined the Light Horse (Volunteer Cavalry) as a trooper and rose to the rank of lieutenant-colonel, commanding the First United Provinces Light Horse in 1912.

On leave when the World War broke out, he joined the Reserve Cavalry, and later was transferred to the Intelligence, subsequently being in charge of all war correspondents in France. Then followed his visit to the United States, where he remained for two years. For his services in France he was awarded the Military Cross, and later was made a Commander of the British Empire and Aide-de-Camp to King George.

In 1920 Col. Faunthorpe returned to duty in India. His service there was interrupted by the expedition with A. S. Vernay for the American Museum of Natural History. His series of four articles, of which this is the first, includes some of his experiences with that expedition.—Editor.]

"The Most Dangerous Sport in the World"—Also Meeting Them With the Bullet

MANY wild-animal hunters and collectors have a thorough dislike of leopards. I share that feeling, which with me is based upon repeated encounters with these spotted beasts over a period of many years.

Up to the beginning of the World War I had killed more than eighty leopards and I have disposed of a good many since the war ended. Most of these were shot from elephants, others were killed as I went on foot into their native haunts, and a few were ridden down and speared. This last method is highly exciting, with great risk to rider and horse.

Of the African leopard, which is virtually the same as the Indian animal with which I am familiar, Mr. Carl E. Akeley of the American Museum of Natural History, has written:

"A leopard is a cat and has all the qualities that gave rise to the 'nine lives' legend. To kill him you have got to kill him clear to the tip of his tail. Added to that, a leopard, unlike a lion, is vindictive. A wounded leopard will fight to a finish practically every time, no matter how many chances it has to escape. Once aroused, its determination is fixed on fight, and if a leopard ever gets hold, it claws and bites until its victim is in shreds.

"A Sneaking Kind of Animal"

"IN SPITE of their fighting qualities, I have never got to like or respect leopards very much. I think it is because the leopard has always seemed to me a sneaking kind of animal, and also perhaps because he will eat carrion."

This last characteristic makes the spotted animal especially dangerous. Wounds inflicted by a leopard's teeth and claws are extremely poisonous, and unless treated with strong disinfectants nearly always result in blood-poisoning. The claws have grooves that retain the flesh in a more or less decomposed condition, upon which the animal feeds largely.

A big leopard will kill a deer, cow, or pony, two or three times his own size, and will continue to eat it for days. In a hot climate this flesh soon becomes tainted.

Another characteristic of the leopard is his ability to render himself invisible in any form of cover. I have frequently been within fifty yards of a leopard and known where he was, and yet have been unable to see him until some slight movement generally the twitching end of his tail gave him away. It is this quality of invisibility which makes it so dangerous to follow up a wounded leopard on foot.

A Near Disaster

IN RIDING down and spearing leopards, the process is very much like riding down a pig, with the exception that a leopard, when he finds himself overtaken, does not as a rule at once charge the horse, as a pig does, but turns or "jinks" sharply aside and squats on the ground in any grass or bush which may be available. This is the rule, but there are exceptions.

I was riding after one in light tamarisk jungle one day and just when I was going to spear her (it was a leopardess) she turned so close under my horse's head that the horse actually jumped over her. It was fortunate that I had not speared her at that moment, because the spear in the leopard probably would have brought the horse down.

One of the finest leopards I ever got was when three or four of us were going from one pig-sticking beat to another on the Sarda River. We were riding across some undulating sandy ground, on which were numerous clumps of tall "sarpat" grass.

On the chance of turning out a pig, the hunters rode their horses into these clumps or stirred them up with their spears. Capt. Sandbach of the Royal Dragoons (later killed in the war) was doing this when a large leopard jumped up under his horse's head, snarled at him and galloped away.

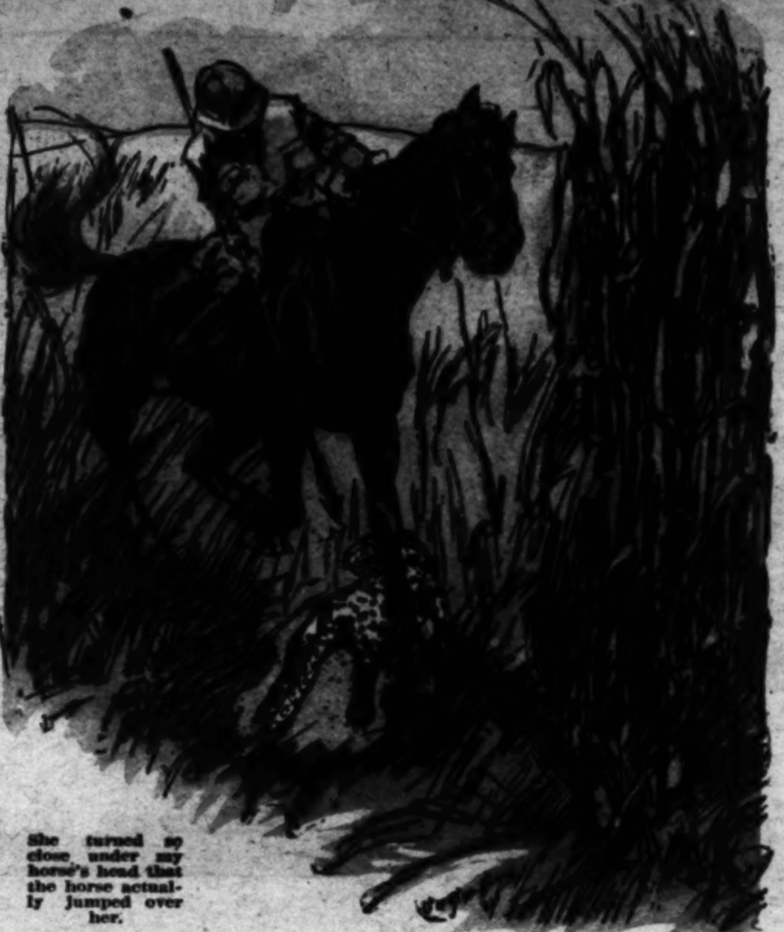
Preparing to Spring

I WAS on a thoroughbred Australian horse, called Marquis, an ex-race horse, and well-known in the show ring, and got a good start only about eighty yards behind the leopard. The light sandy soil was excellent going for a horse but in spite of this I did not overhaul the leopard until after going some 400 yards at full speed.

Just when I was going to spear him he "jinked" sharply to the right and squatted in a little bit of thin grass where he was partly visible. Pulling round my horse I rode at him. As I was spearing he appeared to shift his position, probably preparing to spring, and the spear passed over his back. He then galloped off, but this time was more quickly overhauled. The spear broke his spine just behind the shoulder, killing him instantly.

Another time, near this same place, we were pig sticking. We had two or three elephants in the line and Col. (now Gen.) De Lisle of the Royal Dragoons was sitting on an elephant with a rifle, on the chance of a leopard turning up, as he wanted to shoot one. Three of us had gone off and killed a boar and I was cantering back to the line to change my horse, when two shots were fired and I saw a leopard on ahead, crossing a sandy nullah, or ravine, and going lame on a hind leg.

I galloped after him to mark him down. He went into a patch of fairly heavy grass, about 100 yards square. I galloped around this and pulled up in the open, in case he broke out of the grass. A wounded leopard in grass in which he is invisible was not an animal with which I was inclined to take any chances. We only had to wait for the elephants to come up.

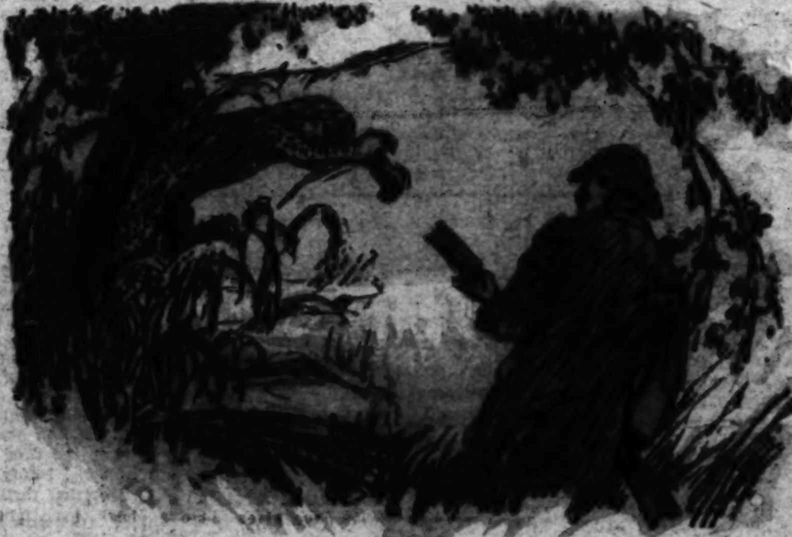


She turned so close under my horse's head that the horse actually jumped over her.

Lionel Hearsey, a subaltern in the Light Horse (Volunteer Cavalry) Regiment which I commanded, saw me galloping, but did not see the leopard and came up to join me. He galloped through the grass where the leopard was and the next thing I saw was the leopard sprawling across Hearsey's horse behind the saddle. But he only hung on for a couple of strides and then fell off into the grass and was shot from an elephant by the man who had originally wounded him. The horse was not badly hurt.

Wardrop of the Horse Artillery (author of that excellent book, "Modern Pig Sticking") had a more unpleasant experience. Pig sticking one day, a leopard was seen and pursued. Wardrop, a very fine horseman and well mounted, speared him and was trying to hold him down with the spear until somebody else could come up and finish him. A leopard is rather like an animated piece of India rubber, full of steel springs.

The animal wriggled off the spear and, springing at Wardrop, sunk his teeth in his thigh, pulled him off his horse and started to finish him on the ground. Talbot of the Seventeenth Lancers, quite a novice at the game, very gallantly rode up and distracted the attention of the leopard from Wardrop, but the leopard then sprang at Talbot, bit him severely in the wrist, pulled him off his horse, and disappeared in some heavy cover close by.



In spite of having his wounds disinfected immediately, Wardrop was laid up in the hospital for several months with blood-poisoning and nearly died. His thigh swelled up to about three times its normal size, and had to be gashed open in nine places to let out the poison.

It may be said, therefore, that spearing leopards off a horse is an exciting amusement, but involves considerable risk to horse and rider, and is not recommended as a hobby to married men with large families dependent on them. If you can kill or cripple the leopard with the first spear, you are lucky. To look for a slightly wounded one in the grass or other cover, in which you cannot see him at a distance, is simply asking for trouble. In such a case, anyway, don't ride your best horse if you can help it.

The Protective Black Powder

I ONCE had a very narrow escape from a wounded leopard. Some villagers came to my camp from about eight miles away and reported that a leopard, which had been killing some of their goats and calves, was in a nullah near the village. I got a pony and rode out, taking along with me a twelve-bore gun, with some ball cartridges loaded with black powder.

A twelve-bore gun, with a big charge of black powder and a spherical bullet, is a very effective weapon at short range, as one can shoot with it more quickly than with a rifle. I have an idea that black powder shoots balls out of a gun better than smokeless powder does. And the heavy smoke is undoubtedly a protection if you are charged by a wounded animal. I have another theory, supported by a few instances, that a tiger or leopard will not charge home if he gets two barrels of black powder in his face at very close range.

I found that the nullah was about 300 yards long and of the shape of an elongated hour-glass. The villagers turned out and beat one end of the nullah down to the narrow neck, near the middle, where I took up my position behind a tree. The beat began and after a time something made me look over my shoulder, and I saw the leopard, a [illegible] of research and patient investigation and for those who are interested in the food question from the technical standpoint, his books are especially recommendable.

They are procurable at the public libraries or any book store.

The following is written by Dr. Wiley:

Naturally, I am looking forward to the future of the work in which I have been so [illegible] the future than it has been in the past. First of all, what is to be the future of the proper nutrition of man? I believe that everyone will agree that proper nutrition is one of the most important factors in human welfare. If mankind is to be happy, mankind must be healthy. If life is to be enjoyed, it should be continued to a greater term than it has been in the past. If the human mechanism is to be effective in its activities, it must be strong and it must work without friction to the greatest possible degree.

What, then, is the reasonable expectation in this matter? I often think, as I look back—and I must look back in order to have a proper look forward—over the past fifty years since I have been working for the welfare of humanity through a more wholesome and nutritious diet, whether or not any progress has been made. Sometimes I feel as if the effort had been almost useless. As I go into the dining-rooms of hotels, restaurants and dining-cars, and when I sit at the tables of our private citizens, I often feel impressed with the idea that our foods are not nearly so wholesome as they were fifty years ago.

What are the reasons of my skepticism for the future? They are patent to everyone. During the past fifty years there has been a complete revolution of our people. This is due to changing living conditions. Fifty years ago we were essentially a rural nation. A great majority of our citizens lived on farms or in small villages. Now the percentage of people living on farms or in small villages is very much less than it was then. There has been a concentration of our people in large cities, and the trouble is still going on with an accelerated velocity. The rural population is becoming smaller every year. Statistics show that with all the poor sanitary advantages of the farmer, he lives longer than the city man. If the farmer had the same protection against infectious diseases that the inhabitant of the city has, his life would be very much lengthened.

A Farmer's Life Prospect

There are two causes of this. One is that the farmer lives largely—during the day, at least—in open air. The farmer eats a food nearer to nature than the man in the city. The farmer lives under the disadvantage of lack of sanitary advice and control, and is also handicapped when he falls ill in not having the skilled medical attention that the urbanite possesses. As I look ahead, I see no deflection of the population to rural communities. On the other hand, the population will become more pronouncedly urban.

Of necessity, the food supply suffers with the increasing difficulties and expenses of its distribution. There is one fundamental fact in regard to food which should always be kept in view, namely, that the sooner after maturity the food is consumed, and the less change that is worked upon it before consumption, the more nutritious and wholesome it is. If you were to take a meal served in New York City as an extreme type of the change which the food undergoes, it would be illuminating.

In the first place, the bread and breakfast foods served have probably come from Minnesota. The butter used is produced in Wisconsin. The fluid milk which is served comes from as far away as 250 miles, or even a greater distance. Instead of fluid milk often condensed milk or milk powder is served. This comes from Central New York, Wisconsin, Illinois, or wherever a condensary or a drying apparatus for milk may be established. The coffee comes from Brazil. The citrus fruits from Florida or California. The malic fruits from Western New York, Oregon, Washington, or Missouri. The meats may come from Chicago, Kansas City or Argentina. The melons are grown in the Imperial Valley of California. There is no prospect of any alleviation of this condition. We need not do anything more than try to make the best of it. All these conditions mean preservation of the foods that are at all likely to deteriorate, and all these foods, except coffee, wheat, corn and other cereals, are likely to deteriorate. Either cold storage or dehydration must be practiced as the allowable methods of preservation, or recourse must be had to chemical preservatives, in this country now outlawed, but still permitted in England.

Better Bread is Coming

In view of the conditions which I have tried to summarize, we must expect no decrease in the cost of living; no improvement in the wholesomeness of food. On the other hand, we must look forward to a considerably increased deterioration as conditions in the future become more and more congested. The problem of nutrition in the future is, to my mind, the most important factor in human welfare. I do see, nevertheless, indica-

How Is Your Health?

A Needed Institution

Out on West Washington street, at the corner of Toberman, is the California Clinorium, devoted exclusively to the diagnosis and treatment of disease without the use of drugs or surgery.

An entire building (over 4000 sq. ft. of floor space) is exquipped with the most modern and scientific apparatus and Dr. Shingle, the managing director, has had many years of experience in the treatment of disease.

People come here to be cured from all parts of Southern California, and many who have had Physio-Therapy treatments in the large institutions in the East claim that the equipment and methods used here obtain quicker and more permanent results.

Here each individual is treated exactly as their condition requires and the treatments are varied as improvement in their condition is shown.

It is not a sanitarium, for no patients are cared for overnight, and they come for treatments by appointment. In the quiet, restful surroundings aided by skilled attention, it is no wonder that so many are quickly restored to health.

The X-Ray

In the X-Ray Laboratory many an obscure condition is carefully and accurately diagnosed. What a wonder it is to be able to see through the body and examine the various organs performing their many functions. The mystery of digestion is disclosed and many who have suffered for years from indigestion and constipation who have an X-Ray examination made and see just what is wrong with them realize that all the drugs they have taken for years would never cure their troubles.

Clinorium treatments when the exact cause of the trouble is known, combined with a careful food selection and a change in habits, gives quick relief to people who have suffered for years.

The Constructive Ray

The Actinic Ray is only one of the many kinds of treatment that are here combined for their curative effects and its direct action on the blood shows in the improvement apparent in a few treatments. When one part of the body is sick the whole body is sick and Clinorium treatments not only relieve the acute condition but build up the vitality of the entire body. People taking these treatments feel this renewed energy and vigor after a very few treatments.

If You Seek Health, Come Here

Don't hesitate to thoroughly investigate what these treatments that do so much for others can do for you. A consultation is without charge and it may be the means of adding years of health and enjoyment to your life.

New Home Treatment For Gland Trouble
Medical authorities agree that 65% of all men past middle age (many much younger) are afflicted with a disorder of the prostate gland. Aches in feet, legs and back frequent nightly risings, sciatic pains, are some of the signs—and now, a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science has written a remarkably interesting Free Book that tells of other symptoms and just what they mean. No longer should a man approaching or past the prime of life be content to regard these pains and conditions as inevitable signs of approaching age. Already more than 10,000 men have used the amazing method described in this book to restore their youthful health and vigor—and to restore the prostate gland to its proper functioning.

ARE YOU SUFFERING from painful affliction of the feet, broken down arches, callouses, bunions, etc?
Ready-made Arch Supports are an unsatisfactory makeshift because everyone's foot is different and the displaced bones, enlarged joints and deranged ligaments complicate matters still further.
We make supports from carefully prepared plaster of Paris casts and alter them to accommodate changes brought about by the wearing of the supports. In order to give relief and lasting satisfaction it is imperative that the foot be restored to as normal a shape as possible. We have an extensive experience in the correction of flatfoot, broken down arches and other deformities of the feet, and are able to promise our clients comfort and relief in every case.
It is not necessary to wear clumsy shoes with our supports; on the contrary, we often restore daintiness of appearance to feet badly deformed and unsightly.

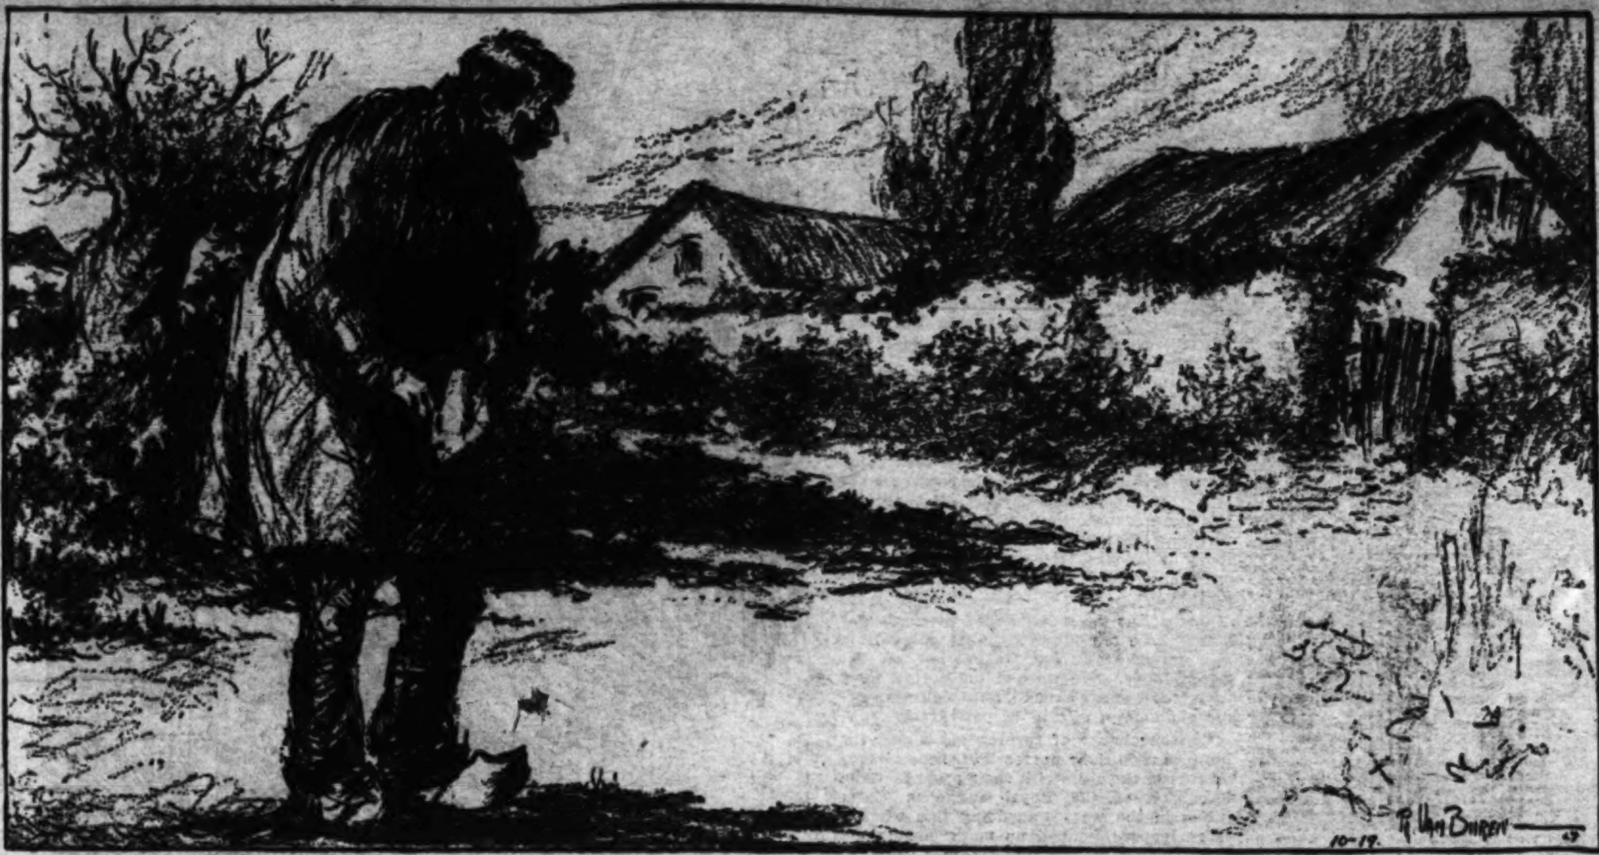
"MY COUNTRY, RIGHT OR WRONG?"

By Fannie Hurst



PATRIOTISM is a precious word. Difficult, because it is an emotional word, to subject to the cold scrutiny of analysis.

The greatest men and women of world history have been the patriots. Men and women who have fought and died because of love of country.

Men's emotions may indeed well up in admiration for these brave spirits. George Washington. Nelson. Napoleon. Julius Caesar. Garibaldi. Jean D'Arc. Florence Nightingale. Edith Cavell.

Patriotism is an emotional word to tamper with!

And yet, to a certain type of internationalist, it is a word that will bear close and inquiring scrutiny. Love of country. "My country right or wrong!"

The internationalist dreams beyond the barriers imposed on by patriotism. To him this form of love is only a halfway house to that wider world humanity of which he visions. Not "My country right or wrong." But "My universe right or wrong."

To fight and die in blood for the shortcomings of one's country is held to be an act of highest patriotism. Take the recent World War. How many thousands of Germans must have gone into that fray, fired by patriotism to fight for what they knew in their hearts to be wrong!

The internationalist dreams of the day when men will only fight for right and not for country. He dreams of the day when the barriers of nations will go down before man's wider understanding of man, and the real patriot will wrap himself in the flag of right!

The internationalist believes that, fundamentally, men are the same the world over and that barriers of country, of climate, of language, of distance, are nothing compared to the great barriers of man's intolerance of man.

Patriotism of the rah-rah-it's-a-grand-old-flag type does not necessarily further understanding. Patriotism to the beating of drums and the hysteria of bugle calls is not thoughtful and, like the war spirit itself, is apt to be hysterical.

Yet all the world loves a patriot, and rightly so. Love and loyalty and courage, even when misdirected, are the finest of human motives. According to our ethics, if, hypothetically, America were to find herself on the verge of war on an issue where she was obviously in the wrong, "My country right or wrong" would be the slogan!

Take your pacifist. He has been too recently despised for him to be open to very calm discussion, but the fact remains that your sincere pacifist transcends mere patriotism. And usually he is sincere, because it is so obviously easier to fight than to be despised. He believes in the universal brotherhood of man. He will not shoot down, or mow down, human life in the name of that particular block of real estate called his country. All men are his brothers and to raise a gun against one of them is to help keep the world in the bondage of brotherly hate.

So, says your pacifist, not "My country right or wrong." But "My universe right or wrong."

But he has never had his day. In time of war it is the patriot and not the pacifist who rules the hour. Men emote more quickly than they reason. Then, too, as we have seen, it is so much easier to fight for an emotion than to refuse to fight for a reason.

There is always that hair-line between pacifism and cowardice.

And cowardice is one of the most despicable of human traits. A despicable trait, however, that can become sublime by carrying it into danger.

After all, the real hero is the man who, with fear in his heart, rushes into the battle. The man who knows not fear, but goes in with his blood singing, is brave with the bravery of the steeplejack who is never happy unless he is snapping his fingers at life.

Love of the job.

In the great World War how many thousands of our boys, farm lads with absolutely no traditional equipment for the gory business of killing, must have marched away stricken with an inner fear and yet full of the sublime courage to carry that fear on the battlefield!

And so, anyone who can brush aside sentiment and sentimentality and tradition and habit of thought and social inheritance and a few other conditions that make me think and live in ruts; anyone who can brush all these aside long enough to calmly analyze this volatile word, patriotism, may find that there is even a more precious patriotism than the my-country-right-or-wrong brand.

My mankind right or wrong!

My brothers—all—right or wrong.

My universe, right or wrong.

Oh, it has its logic, that unemotional aspect of what is undoubtedly one of the most emotional words in the vocabulary of every language!

> LOVE of country. My country right or wrong!
> Rather, my universe right or wrong!
> Is love of that block of real estate, your country, right or wrong, the road to man's sublime and wider tolerance of man?
> Isn't there a more precious patriotism than the my-country-right-or-wrong brand?
>
> Well, maybe. But next time you hear a band playing the national anthem, see what it does to your spinal column.
> Patriotism—it can't be analyzed. It just is.

Patriotism.

Is love of that block of real estate—your country—right or wrong, the road to man's sublime and wider tolerance of man?

Well, maybe it isn't. But you stand on a street corner, you; yes, even you with the internationalists' bee in your bonnet, and hear your national anthem being brayed out by a German brass band, and see what it does, right or wrong, to your spinal column.

Maybe, in cold analysis, the grand-old-flag hysteria is not always constructive, but you stand and watch that grand-old-flag snapping from the prow of a boat that is steaming into foreign waters, and see what it does to you up around the tonsils.

This is being written in France. On the fourteenth of last July, the French Independence Day, an old man stood outside a peasant's house in a village and listened to a graphophone squeak out the "Marseillaise."

A tired old man, with knotted hands that had never known anything but hard labor, and a face gnarled as only the face of a very old French peasant can become, and a back stooped from daily toil, and clod-like wooden shoes on his rheumatic feet, and his silhouette a veritable crook.

France had not treated him as a child of fortune. There were at least seventy-five years of hard labor ground into that old man's face.

Well, outside that peasant's house he stood, listening to that graphophone play the "Marseillaise," and tears rained down his face.

Tears of ecstacy and patriotism.

Tears of the ecstasy of being part of that block of real estate known as France. His country!

Patriotism. Love of country—right or wrong!

The kind that leaps down your spine when you steam past the Statue of Liberty or hear the burst of the Stars and Stripes from the raucous throat of a full brass band.

Patriotism. It won't analyze. It is like the tide and the moon and the stars. It just is!

Go ahead and cogitate, if you will. There is much in what you say. My country right or wrong is didactic. It keeps blinkers on men's eyes. It confines the point of view to only one particular lay of the land. The lay of the land in which you happen to live.

Brotherhood of man, not his segregation, is the cry of the world . . . a cry that has echoed down through 2000 years.

How right—how indubitably right!

And yet, even you who think wisely and sanely and quietly upon the volatile subject of patriotism, I defy you, the next time you hear that German brass band, or see that American flag snapping at the prow of a boat; I defy you to keep down the goose flesh of pride or that thrill of patriotism from along your spine!

CARE OF THE BODY

most!"—then is the beauty of this phrase apparent.

Men and women are weighted with fears and cares, bowed with responsibilities, saddened with sorrows of possession, seeking, striving vainly, fighting in a vague battle of material accomplishment. Amongst the high and mighty of society, amongst the weak and lowly, we find the same restlessness which permits of no wane, no sleep, no cessation of turbulence.

On and ever onward, goaded to greater and greater attainments, dissatisfied, restless, chaotic—this is the spirit of the age. The individual lost in the mass, the mass a seething pot of maddening forces.

Possessions and more possessions, wealth and more wealth, creative accomplishments rearing high its gigantic pillars on a structure of debasement—these are some of the prices we pay for our civilization.

We seek and seek, but ever and anon the Holy Grail lies just beyond and it is not until the last day is done and we look back in retrospection and view the panorama of wasted effort, futile endeavor, and the ever seeking, grasping of material forces, that we see our mistakes.

It is then and only then we know that life has one great gift—supreme above all others, compensating for the losses, it alone capable of withstanding the vicissitudes of daily life—peace of mind.

To attain this peace of mind, this great inner spiritual force, is a far greater achievement, a much nobler goal than the accumulation of wealth, the satisfaction of desires, or the exploitation of power.

It is not until we get this peace which surpasseth understanding that we can subdue lust and intriguing desire. It is not until we get this great peace that we become immune to the harrassing influence of our make-believe lives.

[illegible] against evil, physical, mental and spiritual—greater than all else.

Education: Woman's Opportunity

"CONSIDERING the present state of society with its wars, poverty, sickness, disease and suffering, we must admit that we, man, have made a bad job of things and very naturally so because half of the world has been trying to run the entire world, leaving out the women.

"Now women have an opportunity, after they have established and gained their entire political, economical and spiritual freedom and equality, to work shoulder to shoulder with the men.

"Their greatest field is education. Education is the most vital thing in life. A child is the most lively, concrete and diverse being of creation; therefore, upon education the whole world depends, and education should include the education of the mother, the science of birth, nourishment, health, bodily training, mental development and the gradual formation of character,—because all the possibilities of man's energies, virtues, happiness in life fall under this one head; and in comparison with education nothing matters when we contemplate the coming world. If then we would erase the errors of the past and the present, the greatest of all change must be in education, and it is here that continuance of the present system and conditions is most fatal and it [illegible] should focus and concentrate their work.

"Our present teachers in and out of school have received their knowledge from the teachings of the past, which have proved so disastrous to us; and they have acquired the habit of thinking in the language of the past. It is therefore an unprecedented opportunity especially for the women, to bring a new state of consciousness into the world.

"What a privilege, what an opportunity, and what a responsibility!"—[by Richard Mayer in "Vital Facts on Right Living"

Looking Ahead

THE GRAND old pioneer, Harvey S. Wiley, who has fought the people's battles for pure food for the last forty years and who has done more than any man alive today to fight the food polluters and those who produce food for dollars instead of health, still wellds the same virile, forceful pen which made him a character so much feared by the dollar idealists who were willing to sacrifice American childhood and health on the pedestal of profits.

TABLETS

Results in 24 Hours

Stomach trouble and kidney trouble go together. A stomach disease invariably affects the kidneys. Imperfect digestion or preparation of food by the stomach causes a toxic condition that overtaxes the kidneys in their filtering process and they are weakened. The linings of the kidneys have no nerves. A kidney trouble is not noticeable. In other words, there are no symptoms to indicate kidney trouble, outside of a little backache and getting up at night until the structure of the kidneys is affected. It is then that great backache, sallowness of the skin, neuritic and rheumatic troubles and other symptoms develop. These in turn further complicate the stomach trouble. As we have cited, the two troubles invariably go together.

O-M Tablets are a two-in-one medicine. You will be able to see their good results in both stomach and kidney trouble almost from the first dose. There will be improvement in kidney and bladder action, better and easier feeling in the stomach. Your digestion will improve as the inflammation and acid condition is reduced. Getting up nights is often completely stopped with one tablet. Gastric conditions of the stomach and intestines are often helped in twenty-four hours. These are the results that you will see, and thereby know that O-M Tablets are helping you and will continue to help.

The week's trial we are sending you is sufficient to prove that they will accomplish the above results in your own case.

There is not a harmful ingredient in O-M Tablets. Every member of the family can take them. One or two tablets will be found to give almost immediate relief to either children or older people.

O-M Tablets come in two sizes, 85c and $1, at druggists and by mail. SEND THIS NOTICE WITH 10c and we will send you a good week's Trial Treatment. Many write that one package has entirely overcome their trouble.

The Maguey Plant of Mexico from which Agmel is taken.

The "School of Medicine," the leading Medical Journal of Mexico, speaking of Aguamiel (Agmel), said in an editorial in 1912: "it is the only substance known up to the present time in the whole world, having the power to radically and permanently overcome...

Bright's Disease

HERETOFORE sufferers from Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Blood Pressure and other ailments have traveled from all parts of the world to a certain district of Mexico where they could partake of the healing sap of the Maguey plant. This sap in its natural state sours in a few hours time. There was no way of preventing this without destroying its health-giving elements. After fourteen years of experimentation a method of evaporation has been discovered by which this sap can be concentrated and kept sweet indefinitely without lessening in any degree its healing effect. So "Agmel" can now go out into the world and perform the healing it has done at home.

High Blood Pressure, Chronic Indigestion, Diabetes, Run Down Condition

"Agmel has done wonders for me" (in treatment of Bright's Disease) writes a Toronto man. "We have had ten days' test of Agmel on our ten-year old boy, with most remarkable results" (kidney trouble) writes another. A man with high blood pressure writes "Reduced my blood pressure from 179 to 145 in one week." A physician writes, regarding his patient "Before he began taking Agmel the amount of sugar in his urine was 0.05% to 3.5%. Since the first week of Agmel treatment I have failed to find any sugar present." Another physician, answering the question of his patient, writes "My experience with Agmel covers only two cases. One a case of diabetes—this case is an apparent cure in thirty days. The other, a case of a man of affairs who was nervous, had gastric trouble, constipation, etc. His wife was in about the same condition. They are like a pair of kids now."

What Agmel has done for others it can do for you. It is a corrective food-tonic—not a drug.

BABBITTING on the HIGH SEAS

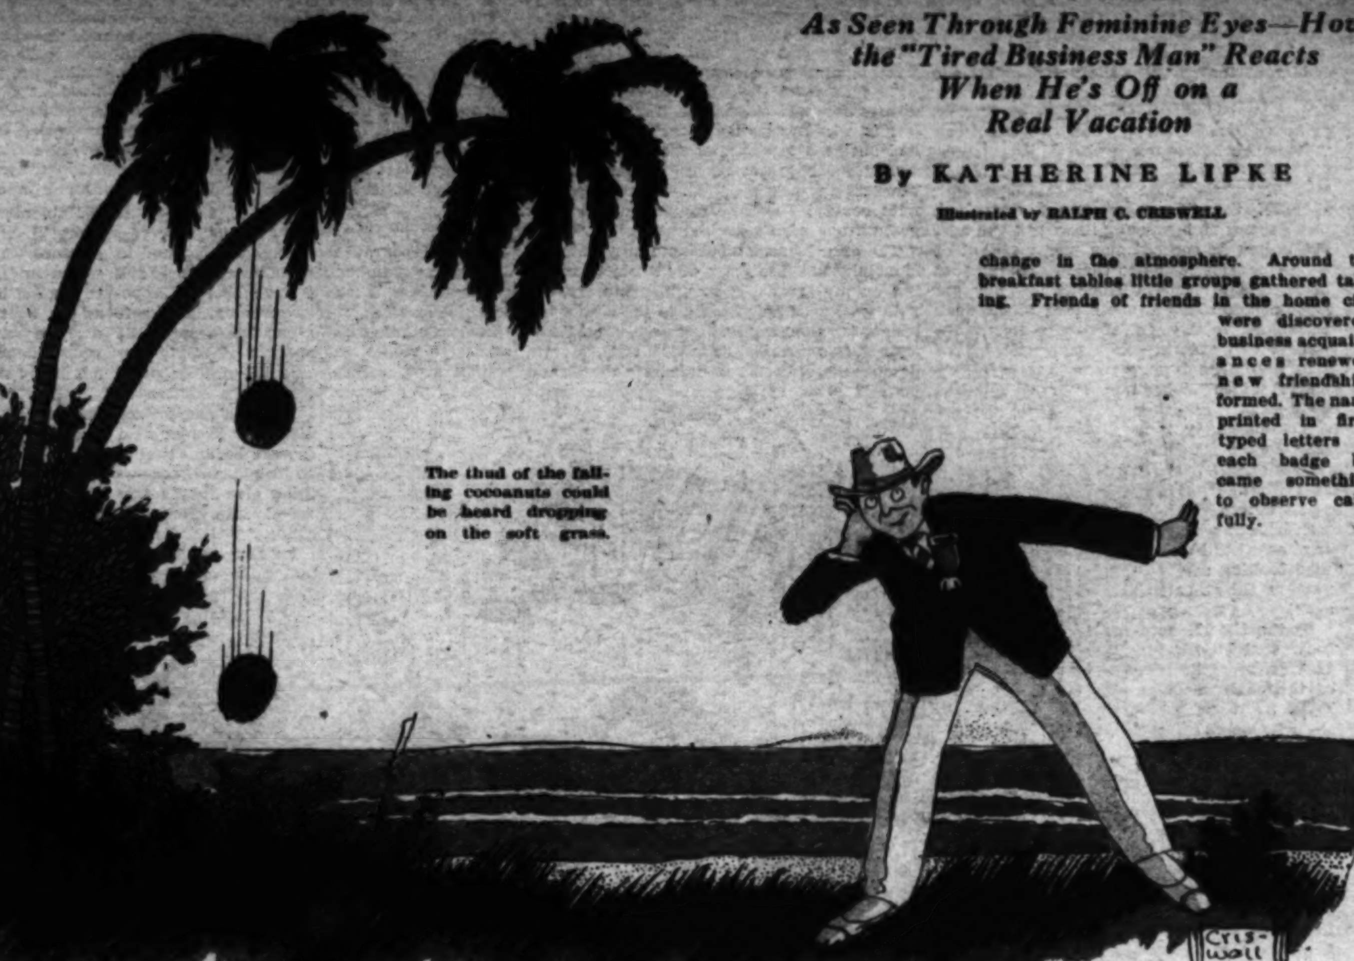
As Seen Through Feminine Eyes—How the "Tired Business Man" Reacts When He's Off on a Real Vacation

By KATHERINE LIPKE

Illustrated by RALPH C. CRISWELL



The thud of the falling cocoanuts could be heard dropping on the soft grass.

HUNTING scenery in the herd is a rather difficult undertaking usually. There is something about roving bands of business men bound together by a system of badges, all in search of scenery and rest, but all acutely conscious of an office at home with work waiting, which makes the rest become restlessness and the scenery give them indigestion.

Now Mrs. Scenery Hunter, being a woman, can excitedly rave hither and yon—mostly yon—thereby getting her emotion out of her system before it ferments. Suppression is decidedly not a feminine attribute. But your business man will stand silently before a superb waterfall and mutter, "Gosh, what a waste of power!" After which he looks around miserably, knowing somehow that he has failed to come up to the standard of enthusiasm set for such occasions.

Down underneath his highly-colored badge he is absorbing all the beauty before him, but it is hard for him adequately to express himself. He has lived in a world where everything is figured on a working schedule and so, automatically, a waterfall suggests power—factories—industry. Beauty without utility is beyond his ken.

Where a woman can take scenery easily in moderate doses, her spouse is absolutely lost. Scenery is the one thing which the American business man cannot successfully ignore. It creeps up on him, towers over him and clamors for entrance inside. And so he is apt to stiffen himself, in a futile effort to keep his hard, crusty exterior intact.

If the men were as relentless as they would like to have the world believe, they could have had Sinclair Lewis banished from the country. In his book "Babbitt" he has shattered forever all illusions regarding the average business man with his sacred orders—and disorders—his Chamber of Commerce instincts and his bountiful boosting. Lewis made a caricature of the successful business man and now we are continually getting this picture confused with the real thing.

Boatload of Babbitts?

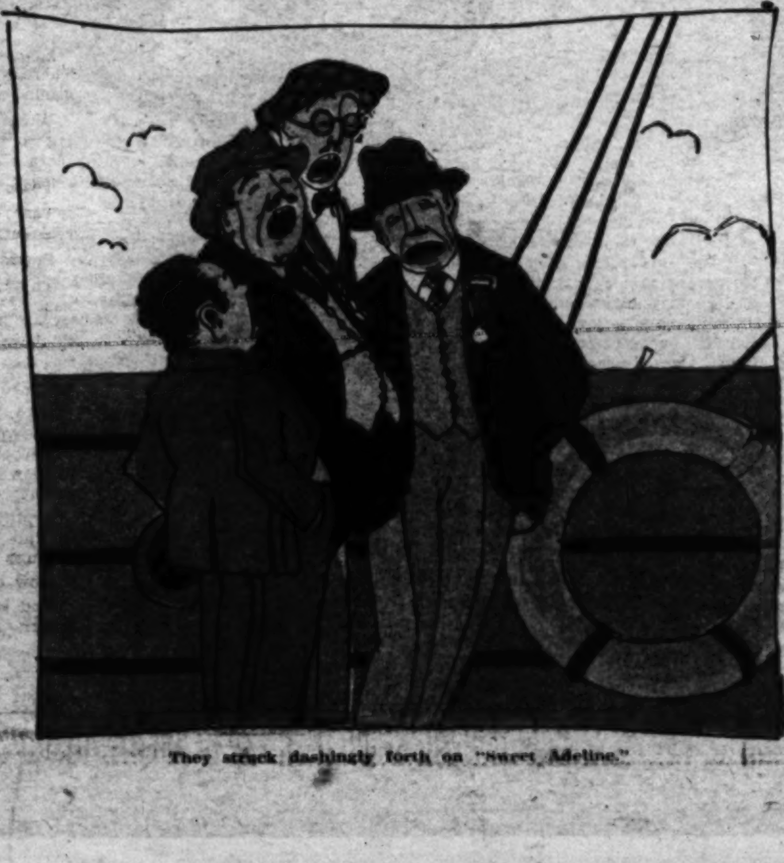
FILLED with Babbitt ideas, I started unenthusiastically on a trip to the Hawaiian Islands with 165 members of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce party on board the steamer City of Los Angeles. The thought of sharing the boat, the ocean and the deck with Babbitts traveling en famille, and being expected to fraternize genially with them, left me decidedly cold. The magnificent lines of the steamer suddenly seemed small and cramped at the thought of the 165—with no place to run but my stateroom and the bountiful ocean. Alas! I apparently did not possess that delightful herd instinct!

One sight of the sensational blue and gold badge I wore, with its yellow poppy flapping praise of Los Angeles with every gust of breeze, made me slightly ill. After years of impatient superiority watching droves of convention delegates herd in and out of Los Angeles hotels asking questions and gulping scenery, I was to be one of them. The beauties of the Honolulu moonlight still six days away paled to a scene of dim and doubtful joy and something strangely akin to seasickness swept over me. Furthermore, some sardonic friend had given me "Babbitt" to read on the trip.

It wasn't the most auspicious beginning in the world, and so before we left the breakwater I found my deck chair and curled in it, gazing far out over the ocean as a sea of badges seethed about me. Lonely business men, uprooted from the old environment and friends and not yet acquainted with the new, were frantically pacing the deck doing their rounds in a fast and furious manner that told of great mental strain.

While their wives were unpacking trunks and bags below in the spacious staterooms, the men were painstakingly trying to "put in time." As yet, badge did not call to badge. No neighborly sensations lurked within each manly breast. Mentally they were remembering the many things neglected at the last minute at the office, and physically they were becoming acutely aware of a large and bounding ocean which might become extremely rough.

But when the morning rose, calm and sunlit and beautiful, there was a perceptible change in the atmosphere. Around the breakfast tables little groups gathered talking. Friends of friends in the home city were discovered, business acquaintances renewed, new friendships formed. The name printed in firm-typed letters on each badge became something to observe carefully.



They struck dashingly forth on "Sweet Adeline."

The land, now far out of sight, was no longer a haunting, taunting finger of things undone, and began to recede pleasantly into the background. The softly rolling ocean was far too quiet to disturb even those intent on becoming ill. Nature was getting in her first deadly work.

By the third day out I felt a great change. The members of the party whom I had watched with limp and languid sensations now began to develop definite personalities under their multi-colored badges. The jolly, little plump white-haired man with a gift for rapid-fire conversation was someone at whom to smile joyously instead of someone to ignore.

The chattering, restless throngs making the rounds of the deck no longer inspired cold dislike within me. I wished that they would see me alone in my deck chair and ask me to join them. I blithely hailed total strangers and challenged them to a game of shuffleboard, while other strangers looked on, shouting cheerfully at our mistakes and our good plays. Strangers? But were they? There seemed something entirely too warming about their happy friendliness to call them strangers. And then I remembered that we were bound together by our badges. And, for the first time, I looked down at mine with something approximating a loving glance.

The evening was no longer the sad and silent conclusion of a long day to those on board, but became filled with varied interest. A large and golden moon presented itself for inspection out on deck, while inside the party was warming itself up to a thoroughly jolly entertainment. Already equipped with six remarkably pretty girls who dispensed soft liquid music under the interesting title of Sorority Six Orchestra, the music room became the center of attraction. Interspersed between bits of orchestra music, talented badge owners were discovered. While we of the lazy languor had slept in our deck chairs, enterprising business organizers were busy searching for stray geniuses in the 165.

One man whose physique might have given him the Babbitt qualification and who appeared to be all for business, whether on the high seas or off, came forward one evening and with a dreamy countenance, sang an old melody with a rich and dreamy voice, which brought applause from some and tears from others. As I chased a tear from its hiding place in my eye I mentally scraped off the Babbitt veneer with which I had covered him along with the other men

By PHILIP M. LOVELL, N.D.

Food and Teeth

WHEN dentists tell us that 90 per cent of our children have defective teeth by the time they arrive at the age of 13, really before life has truly commenced, we are indeed facing a great climax of national nutrition.

It is recognized now, more than ever before, that the quality and formation of the teeth are directly dependent upon the type and kind of food which goes into the body.

Teeth are formed in the early embryonic period, long before birth. From the mother's blood stream are taken the all-precious salts which go to build the nucleus of baby's teeth. It is for this reason that so many mothers are compelled to undergo dental care immediately following the birth of their children. Their blood has been devitalized because they did not consume the calcium salts contained in food as fast as the developing child took it to build teeth for himself.

Even though a child is born without teeth, nevertheless, the calcium-formed roots are there, underneath the gums, before birth.

It takes salts to build body structures made of salts, and since in the final analysis, tissue are made of food, food must contain all the elements for building these body tissues. Biologically reasoned, if food equals the body, then if there be a deficiency in the body, there has been a deficiency in the food.

Modern hygienists are commencing to realize that the problem of teeth decay is more a matter of nutrition than of external cleanliness. Of course we advocate the use of toothbrush and water to keep the external surfaces as clean as possible, but the unalterable fact remains that teeth decay does not commence from the outside. You can keep the external surface of the teeth in almost any shape, yet decay will not take place until we have the susceptible condition of the blood, namely, mineral starvation.

That this mineral starvation is true, any dental hygienist will attest. Notwithstanding that we are the best fed nation on the face of the earth, yet truly we are starving in the midst of plenty. Practically every case of teeth decay is due more to mineral starvation because of insufficient consumption of fruits, vegetables, whole grains, milk and nuts, than to external lack of cleanliness.

When America wakes up and learns how to feed its children with the unadulterated fruits, vegetables and the whole grains rather than with the refined sweets, white flour extractives, pastries, cakes, soft drinks, mushes—then, and not until then, will the teeth of our children be adequate to perform their normal function.

Golf

THE game of golf has long been regarded as a sport for those endowed with a plentiful supply of worldly goods.

With the gradual increase of the number of public links, in addition to the decrease in cost of necessary implements, many thousands have taken up this game in recent years.

Golf has many fine characteristics to recommend its adoption.

The open air, the walking over grassy embankments, the muscular effort in driving the ball, the joy of a well executed shot, all serve to divert the mind from the trials and tribulations of a work-a-day life.

It is a clean sport and a healthy one.

Bald Heads

G. H. LOCKWOOD, in his splendidly written and witty book, "How to Live 100 Years" contributes the following article.

It is full of meat, vital and to the point.

If men would read this and do accordingly, there should be many less applicants for Bald Head Row:

"The spectacle of a bald-headed man buying a 'hair restorer' from a bald-headed druggist is one of the sights that must make the gods laugh and all the little fishes in the sea wiggle their tails in ecstacy, but for all that, it is a thing that often actually happens.

"We have become so accustomed to doing foolish things that we do them without any appreciation of the absurdity of the matter, though in reality it is not so very much more absurd to buy 'hair restorer' from a bald-headed druggist than from a 'hairy' one—you will get stung in the same place under either circumstance.

"The fact is, the only way to buy hair is to buy a wig or a switch—it doesn't come put up in bottles. And right here I might remark in passing, that the men haven't much on the women who buy their hair in visible chunks and wads, while the men purchase only a 'hope'—and it's just as 'false' as any rat or switch manufactured.

"Of course, there is some good that may come from the use of a hair restorer; it takes some 'rubbing' to apply it, and the 'rubbing' is all right.

"Now let's apply a little ordinary 'hoss sense' to this question.

"Men have bald heads, women do not. What's the answer?

"Man's hair is short and woman's long. It is not found, however, that cutting the hair tends to destroy, but rather the reverse. It is not, then, because the hair of man is short that his head eventually becomes bald, nor is it as many would like us to believe, because man works his brain unduly. The fact is that we haven't worked our brains enough or we would have solved this problem sooner and saved our hair.

"Here is the solution in a nutshell. The fact that woman's hair is long requires considerable combing, and the length and weight of the hair itself means considerable pulling; this tends to agitate the scalp and feed the hair with blood. A man's hair being short needs little attention, and unless he is a married man it seldom gets pulled, and it is not long enough to 'pull itself,' so the scalp is not agitated and naturally gets thinner until it can't support a good crop of hair.

"A bald skull has a thin skin stretched over it like a drum head; the thinness of the scalp is the cause of the loss of the hair; you can rub 'ointments' and 'hair food' and all manner of dopes and washes on such a scalp and not help a bit, except the good that comes from rubbing.

"The following remarks apply chiefly to those who still have their hair and who do not want to get bald. The only hope is that you at once start in to giving your scalp vigorous massage treatments and pull it frequently, eliminating every loose hair you can. Do not worry about the hairs you pull out, new ones will grow in their place, but if you let them fall out of their own accord, your name is 'baldy' whether you like it or not.

"Get a couple of good stiff hairbrushes and give your head a very strenous rubbing until the scalp fairly burns and is red with the new blood that is called up by the friction. This massage will thicken the scalp and the blood will feed the hair; but you mannot feed what 'isn't' and a bald head is past the feeding stage, unless there might be some live hair roots that could be coaxed back.

"Keep your scalp clean with regular washing, and well cultivated with frequent and vigorous brushing and pulling, and open to the wind and the sunshine with frequent outdoor airing—and trust to Allah for the rest; for you have done all that mortal man can do to save what hair you have and by good behavior you can even hope to cultivate more, but this hope must be before you have neglected it too long.

"If you already have a bald head, cultivate resignation and yearn to use a fly swatter gracefully, but don't waste any good money buying hair restorer from a bald-headed druggist."

The Open Hearth

IT IS raining out-of-doors. The sky is leaden. It is cold and dismal.

Inside burns a fire—a fire in the open hearth. Crackling and sputtering, its flames give forth fantastic shapes. They weave a spell. Imagination's a-flutter, flying forth on the wings of fiery flames.

Outside, turmoil, stress and a storm swept world.

Inside, peace, serenity and harmony of soul.

Be an open hearth to those about you. Help the storm swept soul of your neighbor. Bring peace to his mind and gladness to his heart. Give forth the inner warmth of your open hearth.

Eating For Your Complexion

"THROUGH years of careless eating, wrong kinds of food, too much food, you have made your complexion what it is.

"These dietetic errors break a good constitution, effect the strength and color of the hair, the texture of the skin and control the complexion. Fresh air and exercise are of course among the essentials that control and preserve health and beauty, for proper oxygenation must take place. The inner-organs govern us externally through the food given them and are therefore more important than the outside of us. Yet we allow them to become flabby or loaded with toxemias and poisons until they forcibly express themselves through pain.

"Be as careful in the selection of your food as you are of your cosmetics. Blemishes will be banished—sallowness will be eradicated—the skin will take on a healthy glow full of youth and life and a strong constitution as well as increased mental forces will result.

"Some people suffer from the lack of iron, others need more lime—here will be a super-acid condition, there the very opposite. The anemic is the best example of an under-nourished condition caused through improper diet.

"Too-plump; too-thin; too-pale; too-highly colored; blemished skin; muddy complexion; the dull-eyed laggard; all are influenced directly by the food consumed.

"A very wise person once remarked, 'Half the food we eat nourishes us, the other half kills us.' Starting right now, make a mental reservation to discontinue the practice of abusing your stomach."

The above from Healthy News, a splendid little commercial publication put out by the Health Foods Product Company.

Besides catering to the actual physical wants of those interested in health, this concern is doing some splendid educational work in propagating the ideas of health by natural methods—good food and sensible hygiene.

Your Body

"SURELY you might take esthetic pleasure, and an esthetic pride in your own bodies, and not mope over their processes in fear of disease, nor defile them by indulgence, but study to make them fair and sweet, inside and out, always swept and garnished, literally, what they were meant to be, temples of the soul. Disease is but bad body keeping, slovenliness and uncleanliness account for the most of it."—[Health Culture.

[illegible] of the trip. No man can [illegible] and then remain an ordinary individual.

In the person of an enterprising business man the spirit of a magician seemed rampant, and night after night he made dollars become quarters, flags become roses, and something appear where nothing had been before. The decisive and businesslike leader of the party in the evening left the planning of the trip behind him and would stand, unconscious of everyone, singing, "I Love You, Honolulu," until we saw it all materialize before our eyes.

Then Comes the "Steerage"

THEN the "steerage" was organized. Twenty men, varying in weight and age, but united in one common purpose, that of self-expression, came to the foreground just before we arrived in Honolulu. They sat isolated and alone in one corner of the deck and sang volubly on all occasions, and—wonder of wonders!—they sang well. Wives who had served long years by their husbands' sides looked on in open-mouthed amazement as they struck dashingly forth on "Sweet Adeline," collecting keys as they went. There are few things in the world half as interesting as the business man looking soulful—nor few things half as dear!

By the time Honolulu was sighted off in the dreamy distance of the early morning light, we were pleasantly interested in the welfare of our fellow-passengers. To be sure, we weren't above criticism. Some we didn't exert ourselves to like and some we couldn't remotely get interested in, nor they in us. But the warming glow of a common experience was beginning to bind us together.

With the landing of the City of Los Angeles in the Honolulu harbor with its blue water, its welcoming rainbow, its dreamy loveliness, its—oh, well, why go on?—you know what I mean; anyway, when we landed we eagerly scattered, happily unconscious of our fellow-passengers.

The only ache came in leaving the boat. It had been our six days' home and its cosy, roomy interior looked gapingly lonesome and still as we heartlessly clamored down the gangplank hilarious to be away. The captain, jolly and smiling, the purser, charming and polite, the various stewards, all were friends. Casting my civilized reserve to the winds, I recklessly waved to the whole crowd as I left. And my badge waved with me.

How I wish that Sinclair Lewis could have made his observations for his book watching the American business man at Honolulu. His book then would have remained in the realm of the unwritten, where it rightly should have stayed! The lapping waves in the sunlight, the lapping waves in the moonlight were equally devastating. Crowds of business men, thoroughly disguised by this time as gentlemen of leisure, gathered in the morning out at the end of the small pier from the Moana Hotel at Waikiki and having gathered, did nothing else.

With feet propped up against the railing, they would spend hour after hour looking thoughtfully, earnestly, out over the many-colored waters to the far line of breakers beyond. What they were so thoughtful, so earnest about no one knew, for their efforts at conversation were throttled at the source.

Nature had them by the throat. Their dreamy eyes and limp quiet hands waved a mental white flag of unconditional surrender. They had given up the struggle, and nature, having won her six days' battle with business and the affairs at home, was discreet enough not to flaunt her victory brazenly in their faces. She simply sat quietly by and enjoyed the sight, with reinforcements ready in case of a return attack.

Drugged with sunlight, with moonlight, with lapping waters, the men made futile efforts to enter the study of business conditions for which purpose they had come, but it was merely an effort. What right had business to show its face where a long stretch of beach winked diamond eyes in the sunlight and the thud of falling cocoanuts could be heard dropping on the soft grass from highly arched palms overhead.

The only inharmonious note in my stay in Honolulu was the copy of "Babbitt" reposing on my desk. It mentally taunted me with weakness for yielding to the call of the badge, for shouting breathlessly when I saw my fellow-excursionists on the streets or in passing motors. It reminded me that I had boosted with ruthless and strident pride when asked about my home city. In short, it informed me that I was showing all the earmarks of a female Babbitt on the hoof.

The island of Maui brought further revelations. What hadn't been accomplished already in the demoralization of the Chamber of Commerce men became noticeably apparent that night. There was little in the native luau, with its quaintly cooked and uncooked dishes, to awaken this new symptom. Certainly the poi tasted as badly to the men as to the women, but after the luau, when the native hula dancers and singers swayed gently in the soft light, we women of the party felt strangely alone. The men had mentally left us and turned native.

No Time for Wall Street

IN THAT hour, if someone had advanced to read a radio report of the New York stock market, it would have been as hopelessly ignored as were we women. The soft whang of ukuleles, the low, full-throated lilt of native voices, the sparkle of bright Hawaiian eyes, and the Island of Maui with its beautiful women atrociously clothed in bright red and yellow Mother Hubbard dresses became a spot so bright that everything else on the trip faded into insignificance.

Later we entertained the women with a dance on board the steamer. Brightly waving flags, long, many-colored streamers all added to the scene, while the men raced frantically about asking for dances from native girls. The president of a large and flourishing business in Los Angeles battled wordlessly with the vice-president of a large and flourishing bank for the joy of stepping out on the deck with a small Chinese girl under the jealous eye of her Chinese husband. And, off in one corner, the handsome, gray-haired bachelor of the party, who had ramained tantalizingly aloof from feminine wiles, sat gazing admiringly at a Hawaiian lady of scattering gray hair whose charm held him enthralled.

Half-smothered in leis, half-choking with tears, I stumbled back on the good old steamer City of Los Angeles when our stay was over. An hour before I had threatened to remain behind, but with my first glimpse at the boat with its slim lines, its shining decks, its immaculate officers, I was homeward bound mentally, with "my" boat beneath my feet.

Then it was that my badge and my heart beat double time, for all around me clamoring over the decks were the 165 arriving back on their steamer home. The haughty, high-brow lady, who had looked at me on the trip over with uptilted eyebrows and down-tilted enthusiasm, now was a friend to embrace. The man whose restless walking of the deck had driven me frantic I now rushed to greet and join on his fourth trip around.

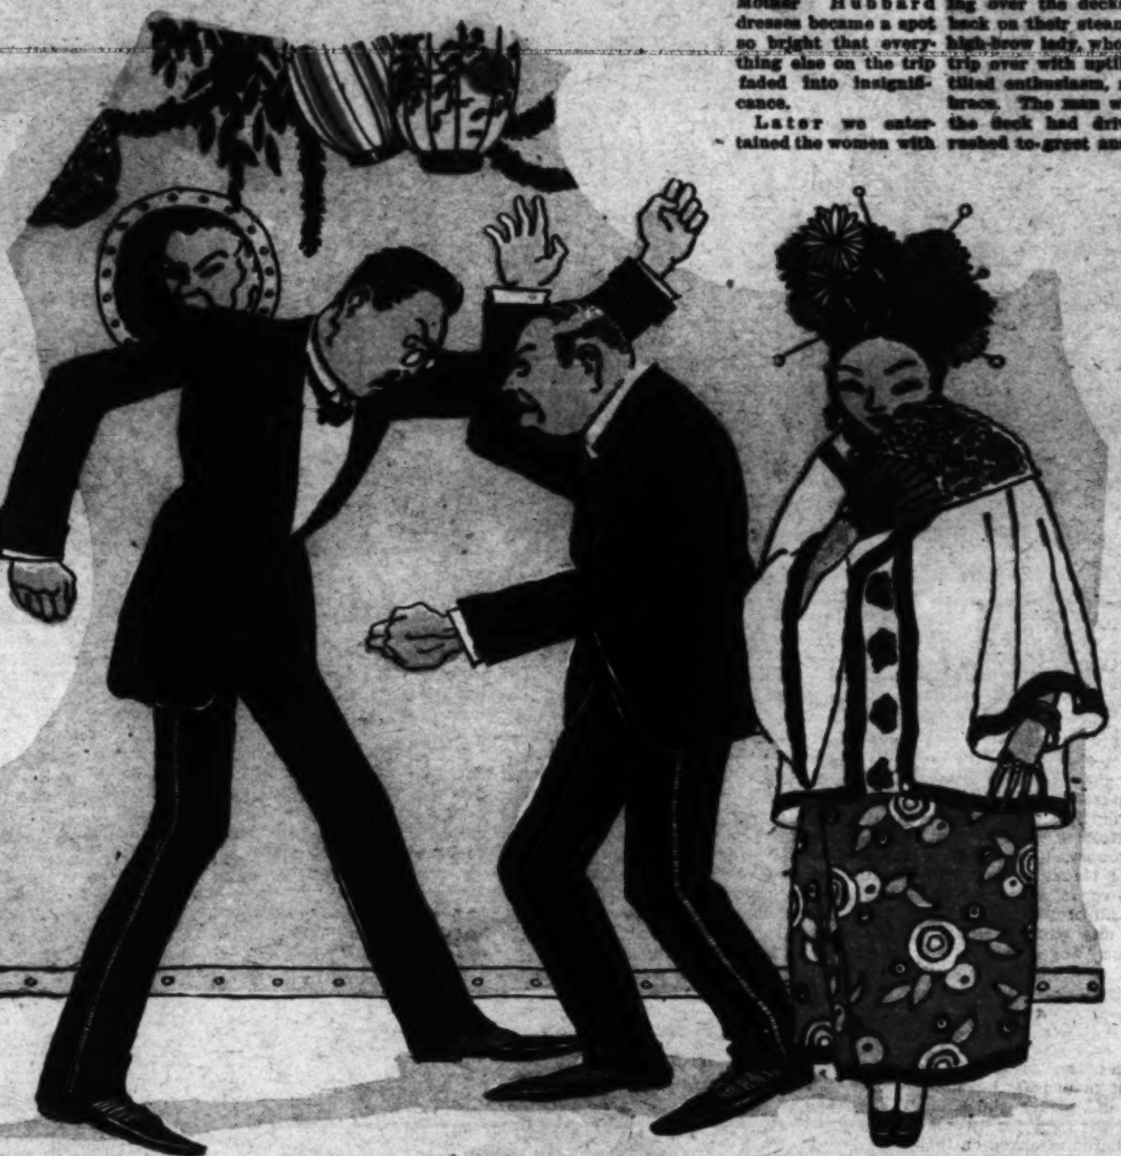
Each and every member of the party was frantically friendly to everyone else. It was old home week with all the brothers and sisters, aunts and uncles in evidence. After greeting everyone with wholesome enthusiasm, I slipped away and went to my stateroom. There in the bottom of my bag, I found it. "Babbitt!"

Tucking it firmly under my arm, I advanced deck by deck until I stood at the far end of the boat. Ripples of white foam were eddying beneath me, and Honolulu was already a dim outline in the distance. I waited until it was completely out of sight and then raised Sinclair Lewis's brainchild by its stiff and stubborn cover and hurled it into the mighty deep. I was through!

And then a strange phenomenon took place. Dark and forbidding waves began to form and high angry billows rocked the boat until I could hardly stand. Clouds gathered overhead and sullen pelting rain came beating down. Deck hands ran hastily about, taking down awnings and covering chairs while they talked among themselves of the strange unforseen storm.

Standing in my sheltered niche on the back deck while the rain made futile efforts to reach me, I began feeling guilty. The rest of the boat might wonder at the angry lashing storm, but I knew.

The ocean and all nature were simply having indigestion after a meal of "Babbitt"!



Battled . . . for the joy of stepping out on the deck with a small Chinese girl.

One of Socrates's Parties

It was the custom of the immortal Socrates to forgather with a circle of philosophers and geometricians about a convivial bowl, drawing inspiration from the vintage of Bacchus, nevertheless having a corking time. After the tenth round he would rise—for it is written that he always could rise—and address the symposium.

"I move," he would say, "that this circle go home and square itself."

And so seriously did the multitude take him that the squaring of the circle grew to be considered impossible, yea, even unto this day.—[Everybody's Magazine.

Old Lace Supplies Stencil

The latest development in the art of stenciling is to use a piece of old lace in place of the usual cut from stencil board. The lace gives exceptionally delicate results when properly used, especially for the wall panels that are now so popular.

The lace is prepared by giving it a coat of shellac to stiffen it, says Popular Science Monthly. It is fastened firmly against the wall and the color is applied with a stiff stencil brush in the usual way, except that great care must be taken to prevent the design from becoming blurred. When dry, the panels are framed with panel molding.

Mission Santa Barbara

The chimes of Santa Barbara
  Through the twilight softly play,
As of old the sweet refrain
  That tells a wedding day.

The Padres chant a Latin hymn,
  As by the crumbling wall they pass;
In hooded robe and sandal clad,
  Their shadows fall upon the grass.

Beside the altar steps we kneel,
  With cherished vows our lives to blend;
The hallowed saints from silent shrines,
  A sacred benediction send.

The Angelus our fathers knew
  Repeats from belfries worn with time;
And we have found this closing day
  The peace of God and love sublime.

—Helen F. Kelly.

A Home-Made Lancet

A good surgical needle of the lancet type for home use can be made from a large darning needle. The point is ground and whetted to the shape of a spear-head, which gives a keen, penetrating and cutting edge, says Popular Science Monthly. A cork pushed on the eye end serves as a handle. Before using the needle, sterilize the point by holding it in the flame of a gas jet or match.

[illegible] his [illegible] brain. He ran his own hand through his [illegible] hair and [illegible] eyes. This thing was becoming serious. This was the clearest, sharpest impression of all.

But to Jane it seemed the realest thing that life had thus far brought her. She ran to George—openly weepy now—and put her hands on his wet shoulders.

"O my dear, my dear," she said, "this is the loveliest thing! I shall keep it all my life. I wish I had waited to put it on. I should like to put it on now."

Converse was smiling, and she turned to him defiantly. "I suppose you know George has my vote," she said. "I distinctly limited this contest to those men who would make me a gown. Snooping around another woman's dressing cabinet was not included."

Converse's smile changed to a grin. It wasn't easy. It required real effort to keep in countenance while he stood by and watched this melting process. The death of his hopes. The adjustment wouldn't be accomplished without some bad moments.

"Never mind," he finally said. "I think I've known who had your vote even longer than you have, Jane. I might remind you [illegible] ated party."

He turned frowningly to George. "You're a fine dressmaker," he said. "You look a lot more like some harassed blacksmith that they forgot to kill during the Stone Age. I acknowledge, but I don't pretend to understand her preference, you big, red, lacerated, turkey-necked biped. I'm glad you're all scratched up. I wish some wild varmint had bitten you, but, of course, there wasn't a chance. They'd have taken one look and run, howling, to their lairs. That's what any creature in the world would do, except Jane."

Then he grinned again. "You scragged me horribly, didn't you? Well, I still claim the doubtful honor of being best man. I suppose I must continue to serve your ingratitude. I know where to find everything we need—including Scotch and soda."

And thus did Converse Wyle, starting in the direction of his precious path, render unto Caesar—and to God—his greatest earthly desire.

Jane and George followed most unhurriedly. They were walking hand in hand. George was wearing the tree-box.

big one, galloping over the open behind me, in order to get into the other broad part of the nullah, which was full of trees and bushes.

A Leopard Charges

THERE was time for only one shot, and as I pulled the trigger I thought that I had missed him behind, just as sometimes, when shooting at a fast crossing bird, one feels instinctively that the gun at the moment of firing is not pointed far enough forward. Examination of the ground showed the mark of the bullet, and as there was no blood from that point up to the edge of the ravine where the leopard had entered it, I was convinced that I had missed.

The villagers went around to the other end of the ravine, in order to beat it up from the reverse direction. When they had gone about half way, there was a lot of shouting and commotion and it was evident that the leopard had charged the beaters. He had, in fact, knocked down one man and clawed him, though not very badly. I went and looked in the nullah and found some blood spots, which showed that the leopard had been wounded by my first bullet.

Now, there is an unwritten rule among sportsmen in India that one must not send unarmed beaters after a dangerous animal, when wounded. If this is done, some one is almost certain to get hurt. If the animal gets away wounded, it is the duty of the sportsman himself to follow it up.

Beneath Outstretched Claws

FOLLOWING wounded carnivora on foot was never one of my favorite pastimes, but it has to be done sometimes. I was much annoyed to think that I had unwittingly allowed the beaters to go in when the leopard was wounded. It was "up to me" to find him and finish him off.

I therefore started down the middle of the ravine. The cover was not very thick. It was full of willow trees with low branches with a number of green bushes growing under them. I was carrying my gun at the hip and had just got under a low branch of a tree when from a small bush, just in front of me, the leopard sprang at me with the usual grunting roar.

I had a vision of him in the air, right above me, with outstretched claws and waving tail, and just had time to fire the gun from the hip in his face while in the air. He must have swerved while actually in the air, as, instead of landing on me, he landed close to my feet on my right, and as he touched the ground swerved round and darted back into the jungle.

I ascribe my escape to the use of black powder, as the bullet did not hit him. I hit him with the left barrel as he fled. We picked him up dead later and I found that my first bullet, the one which I thought had missed, had gone through the fleshy part of one thigh. The wounded man was treated with disinfectants and rapidly recovered.

A Ghastly Tale

IN ANOTHER district I was in camp one afternoon, at the base of the low hills which form the southern range of the Himalayas. I was listening to reports on the various matters which a district officer has to mismanage. An excited villager rushed in with the news that a tiger had killed two women on the hillside, close to a path which led from the plains to two or three little hamlets in the low hills. He said it was about a mile away.

A horse was rapidly saddled and I rode quickly up the path with a rifle in hand. After going about two miles, I met another villager and asked him if he knew anything about the women. He said, "Oh, yes, the tiger killed two women and has eaten the whole of one, leaving only the bones, and has partly eaten the other one." He added that I should find the bones about half a mile farther on.

Their ideas of distance are rather elastic. I rode another two miles or more and finally met some men from the village to which one of the women belonged, and found one of the women. What happened was that the two women had been out gathering wood or cutting grass on the hillside and had come across a leopard—probably a leopardess with small cubs.

Raked by Claws

THE leopard attacked them, clawing the first woman across the face and biting the second one severely. The latter had apparently run away and been overtaken by the leopard. The men said the animal had bitten about two pounds of flesh off her. This was no doubt an exaggeration. The second woman had been taken to another village.

I told the men to bring both women to my camp for treatment immediately. The woman who had been clawed across the face was an unpleasant sight, as the leopard's claws had raked right through her face, removing one eyelid and cutting through the bridge of her nose. It was an awful mess. Her lips were cut to rags.

I returned to camp and prepared disinfectants, but no one arrived until the next morning, when the woman with the clawed face was brought in by some of her relations on a charpoy, or string bedstead. When I asked them why they had not come on the previous evening, they said it was getting dark and they were afraid that the "tiger" would smell the blood of the wounded woman and would attack them.

On examination I found that they had plastered up the unfortunate lady's wounds with a thick paste made of tobacco and other substances. It took a lot of bathing with warm water to remove all of this before I could apply disinfectants. The case was obviously one which needed care for some time, so I told the woman's relatives they must take her to the hospital, about eight miles off on the main road.

She was a widow. Widows are not regarded as of much value in India. In olden days a Hindu widow used to form part of the funeral pyre of her deceased husband, but the brutal and bureaucratic British stopped this custom.

Her relatives were not at all anxious to take her to the hospital. Her brother-in-law said, "Suppose we take her to the hospital, who is going to bury her when she dies there?" However, I eventually persuaded them to take her to the hospital, sending one of my own men with them to see that she arrived safely, and she eventually recovered.

The people of the other village to which the second woman belonged, simply refused to produce her. I marched on that day, but heard a week or so later that she had died, no doubt from blood-poisoning.

Employing Gipsies

I ALWAYS used to go after a leopard whenever I heard of one. In one district in which I was stationed there was, on the banks of the Ganges River, a large tract of "Kadir" or low-lying country, full of grass, swamp, and tamarisk jungle. Leopards were numerous there. Above the low-lying country was a belt of ravines on high ground. When the Ganges came down in flood in the rainy season, the leopards were swamped out of the low-lying ground and took up their abode in the ravines, where they could be tracked down and shot, as the cover consisted only of small patches of thorny bushes and here and there a little grass. I shot a number of leopards on foot in these ravines.

There were some Banjaras (Gipsies) in a village in the neighborhood, who used to track down the leopards for me. The main occupation of these men was to keep down the wild pigs, which abounded in the swampy ground along the Ganges and damaged the villagers' crops. They used to run them down with dogs and spear them. The villagers paid for them, and they ate the pigs.

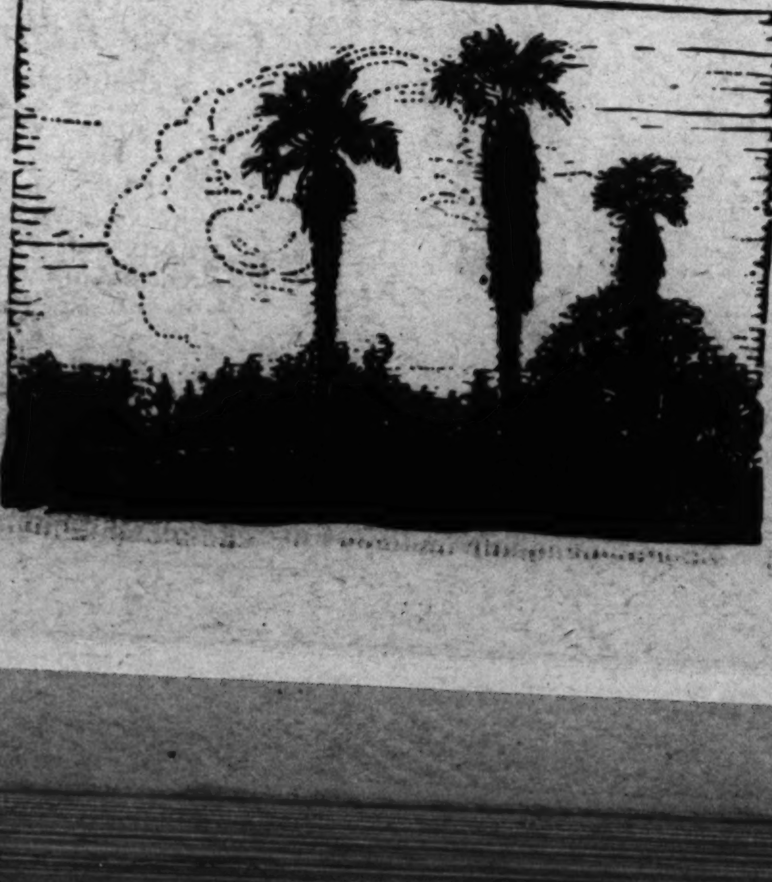
A wild boar which is held up by five or six dogs, jumping around, barking and snapping at him, will sit down to protect his hind quarters and can be approached from behind and speared on foot without much difficulty. These Banjaras, who were very fine-looking men and wonderful runners, were very careful of their dogs and did not as a rule take them out when there was a leopard about.

In the Path of a Leopard

ONE day we located a very large leopard in some thorn bushes in a small, deep ravine, which had two branches. I thought he would break up one branch and went and stood on the bank, but when the Banjaras aroused him by throwing stones into the thorn bushes, he ran up the other branch and got away unseen.

We tracked him in intense heat, under a blazing sun, up and down over ravines and finally came to a place where the ground was so hard that we could find no more tracks. There were only three or four little bushes left in a depression between us and open, cultivated country.

I stood in a very exhausted state on the high ground and told the Banjaras to go around and see if they could find any tracks. As they were wandering about, one of them hit one of the bushes with his bamboo stick and the leopard jumped on him, knocked him down, worried him for a second or two [illegible] little path on which I was [illegible].



Too Close for Comfort

HE WAS a very large leopard, evidently very much annoyed by having been hunted about and disturbed so much, and was traveling at a high rate of speed. It flashed through my mind that if I fired at him when coming straight toward me, I might only wound him, in which case he would certainly pick me up on his way, with unpleasant consequences, and even if I missed him, I was in any case standing directly in his path.

Recollections of problems in dynamics in which a moving object impinges on a stationary one flashed across my mind. I did not in the least desire to be impinged on by a heavy and rapidly moving object. I therefore stepped off the path, behind a small bush about four feet high, and stood absolutely still. The leopard, keeping to the path, galloped past me so closely that I could easily have touched him with my rifle. I do not believe he saw me at all.

As soon as he had passed me, I swung round and put a .400 bore high velocity expanding bullet into his ribs, at a range of about ten yards, which knocked him over. I then went to investigate the wounded Banjara. He had picked himself up, but was bleeding profusely from wounds on head and shoulders.

All he said was, "If I had had my little dog with me, this would not have happened." The dog, of course, would have scented the leopard in the bush and would have given his master warning. The man had no very serious wound, and, being healthy and in hard condition, recovered rapidly after being treated with disinfectants.

As a man-eater, the leopard is more dangerous than the tiger and very much bolder. A tiger, as a rule, will avoid human habitations, but a leopard has no hesitation in prowling close round and even entering a village. In this respect he rather resembles the African lion.

A Relieved Mahout

I HAVE never been in any tiger country where one could not with perfect safety leave the cart bullocks, horses, etc., tethered in the camps without protection, but I have had a goat killed in my camp by a leopard and my cook once had a small dog taken off by a leopard, close to the door of the kitchen. This was in a hill station, and there were several instances there of leopards carrying off pet dogs, which were following their owners along the paths of the hillsides in the station.

I think a leopard can jump better than a tiger. In the Muzaffarnagar district I once had a leopard jump right up on top of my elephant's head, which must have been a

In NANKING, CITY of KINGS

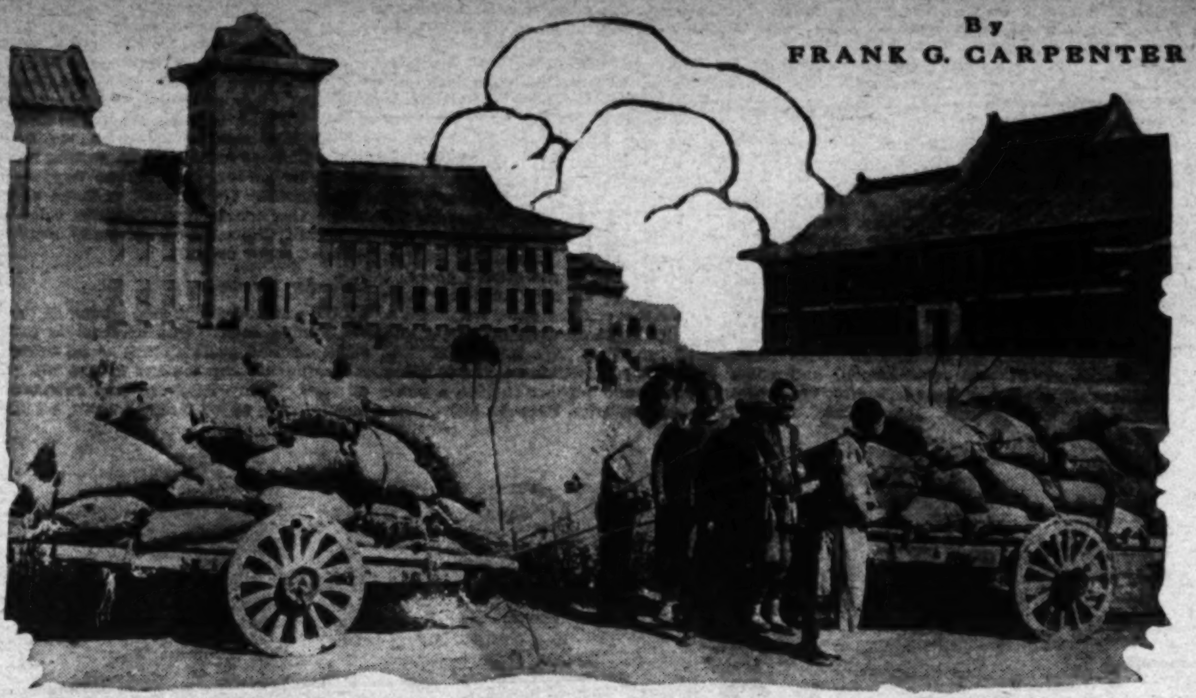
By
FRANK G. CARPENTER



The agricultural department of Nanking University has about two hundred acres of land under cultivation, and experiments with various crops are carried on for the improvement of Chinese agriculture.

CARPENTER VISITS ANCIENT CAPITAL OF THE MING DYNASTY WHICH DID BIG THINGS FOR CHINA

The World's Biggest Walled City That Was Hundreds of Years Old When Christ Was a Baby—Where the Great Pirate Fought—Why the Chinese Want to Be Nearly Run Over by Automobiles—School Children Who Sing Their Lessons. The Fortune Teller—In the Confucian Temple—Examinations That Used to Kill Those Who Took Them—The University of Nanking.

NANKING (China)—In a luxurious car of the fast Shanghai Express, I have come to Nanking, the biggest walled city in all the world and one of the most famous in history. Here the modern improvements of the twentieth century are making their way in a place that was 600 years old when Christ was a baby. The city is surrounded by walls that were more than 100 years old when Columbus, while seeking a short route to trade with the ancestors of the present day Chinese, discovered America instead.

Nanking is the capital of Kiangsu province, and is located 193 miles north from Shanghai on the south bank of the Yangste River. It is one of the oldest cities in all China and for 120 years before the reign of the third Ming Emperor, Yung Lo, served as the capital of the empire. Previously Nanking had been seven times the seat of a kingdom, and for 800 years before the Ming Dynasty was a city of great political importance. The name Nanking means "southern capital," just as Peking means "northern capital."

About Nanking is wrapped all the splendor and grandeur of China of the past. Here lived and died some of the famous Ming emperors. Here were staked some of China's numerous rebellions of the past, and it was here that Dr. Sun Yat Sen took his oath of office as the first President of the Republic of China. But one today sees little of the glorious Nanking of a thousand years ago. In its stead is a shrunken city set in a vast area of land made up for the most part of farms, and having a population of only 400,000 that does not anywhere near fill up all the space within its walls.

Soldiers Halt Him

WHEN I arrived at Nanking, a Chinese captain with a squad of eight grinning, undisciplined soldiers halted me in the railroad station. He demanded that I show my special passport, which it is necessary to have in traveling in the interior of China, and inquired if I possessed any firearms. It was with much difficulty that I dissuaded him from examining my baggage in search of weapons, and he finally permitted me to proceed.

An automobile took me from the station to my hotel just outside of the entrance gate of the city. We drove first through the small suburb of Siakwan, which lies immediately outside the walls surrounding Nanking on the side toward the river. On the opposite, or north shore, is Pukow, the southern terminus of the railroad from Tientsin. It is connected by a ferry service with the Shanghai-Nanking Railroad. Most of the foreign business houses have their establishments in Siakwan, but foreigners are also permitted to reside and do business in Nanking proper. Ocean steamers call at the port of Nanking, and until the building of the two railroads I have mentioned practically all of the freight entering or leaving the city was handled by boats and barges on the Yangste River.

As I drove along, I saw the electrically lighted houses, the open shops, and the busy throngs in the streets as in contrast with the countless wars and revolutions which had been fought out on this spot. It was in the year 1657 that the great pirate Koxinga in an attempt to unseat the Manchus from the throne and restore the Ming dynasty laid siege to the city for twenty days only to have his horde attacked on the night of the twentieth and several thousand of his pirate followers massacred, I thought, too, of the Taipings who captured the city and held it as their capital for eleven years.

The Walls of Nanking

NANKING has been a walled city since the fifth or sixth century, the present walls being built about 500 years ago. They are twenty-four miles long, from forty to sixty feet high, and so broad on top that two automobiles could pass on them without danger of touching each other.

It is stated that there are no less than 4000 walled towns in this country, and I can readily believe this is so from what I have seen. All are built in about the same manner. The materials used are stone and large burnt bricks of a bluish-gray color. These bricks are each about fifteen inches long, five inches wide and three inches thick. They are put together in a solid masonry in the shape of two walls running parallel with each other and the space between them filled in with earth and stones. This is stamped down upon its top and a paved roadway is made, along which armed guards used to walk and upon which cannon were mounted. Before the Chinese had guns, they used to keep piles of stones on top of the walls ready to be thrown down upon the enemy

The length of these walls is much greater than is necessary to inclose the cities. I have seen none less than ten miles long, and this wall of Nanking is twenty-four miles in length. The city occupies only a small part of the inclosure, and the wall runs up and down over a rolling country, taking in small farms and market gardens, many of which stand upon the site of the greater Nanking of the past. The distance across the inclosure from one wall to the other is more than eight miles and there is room enough to accommodate double its present population of less than one-half million. In the days of the Ming Emperors the city had more than twice as many people, and land that is now farmed is sprinkled with archways, that mark the sites of bridges in the greater Nanking. The ancient city has for the most part crumbled away to dust, and one feels that he is in the open country rather than on the site of one of the great capitals of China.

Ride Through Nanking

BUT suppose you join me in a ride through the Nanking of today. I have engaged an American car, which is now waiting outside the hotel door. Our Chinese chauffeur is dressed in a white coat, and a chauffeur's cap fits snugly on his closely shaven head. He is accompanied by a footman who sits by his side and whose chief duty seems to be to see that the passengers do not escape without paying cumshaw or a tip.

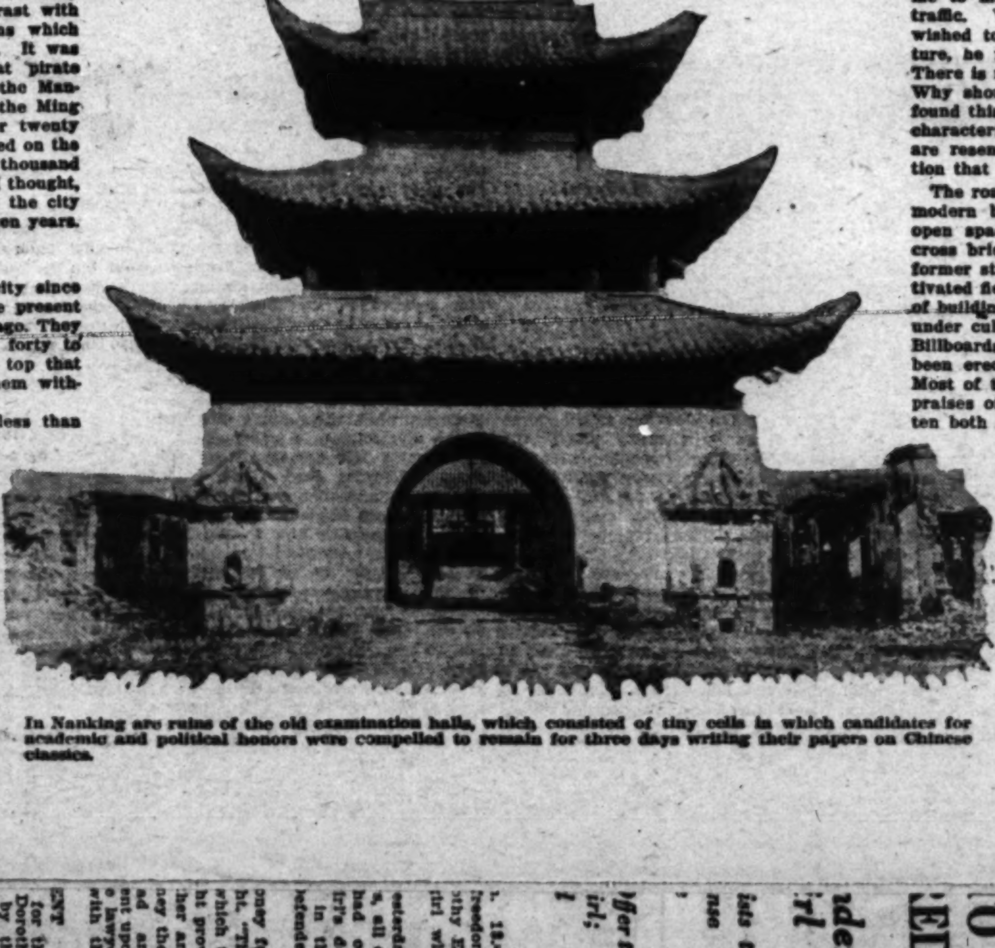
As we drive from the hotel I am constantly frightened, for we narrowly miss several pedestrians, who seem to be even more reckless than jaywalkers at home. My guide explains to me that in China there is a superstition that every person has a devil constantly following him, and that if he crosses before an automobile just in time to save himself from injury the car will run over and kill the devil which is dodging his footsteps. The people on foot seem to view with haughty disdain the many vehicles in the road and make it necessary for the chauffeurs to sound their horns every five seconds and to turn this way and that to escape injuring a Chinese. Sometimes they even have to bring their cars to a dead stop, so little attention is paid by the pedestrians to keeping out of harm's way.

As we pass through the principal gate to the city over a fine macadamized road, I recall that in an earlier visit I rode from the river to the town on a donkey, which climbed up hill and down half swimming in pools and wading in mud all the way. Then beggars lined the roadside near the gate. Today there are none, and everyone seems to be working. Neatly uniformed policemen are now stationed at the busiest street crossings. When I had the car stopped to photograph one, he directed me to move on as I was holding up the traffic. When I explained that I only wished to stop a moment to take his picture, he remonstrated: "I am just a man. There is no difference between you and me. Why should you take my photograph?" I found this argument unanswerable and it is characteristic of the new Chinese. They are resenting more and more any implication that they are curiosities.

The road is lined on either side with new modern buildings, but we are soon in an open space that is thinly populated. We cross bridges marking the intersection of former streets which have now become cultivated fields and in place of rows and rows of buildings there are patches of vegetables under cultivation, or clumps of bamboo. Billboards displaying lurid posters have been erected here and there in the fields. Most of them advertise cigarettes, and the praises of a popular American brand written both in English and in Chinese characters make an incongruous picture.

Shortly we arrive again at a more populated and busier section. Here trade of all kinds is going on. In the open shops are hung up cooked fowls and various kinds of vegetables are for sale.

We stop for a moment at a schoolhouse, a darkened one-room structure in which some thirty boys and girls of about 10 years of age are studying the classics of the time of Confucius. There are fifteen desks with two



In Nanking are ruins of the old examination halls, which consisted of tiny cells in which candidates for academic and political honors were compelled to remain for three days writing their papers on Chinese classics.

"She ain't goin' tew sink through this yer ice, boys, might as well git sail off her," said Jethro. He glanced doubtfully at the calm sky, already looming heavy with the threat of more snow.

"Come on, bullies!" roared Jed Roach. "Leggo all yer halliards tew once an' git them sails rolled up."

Noel Pease led his men too. But his bear cub wanted to help, and clung to his jacket with sharp teeth. Noel glanced around like a schoolboy meditating mischief. Slippy, the cook, was tending the flare barrel. Noel shoved the bear inside the galley and shut the door. Then lent his weight to the job of dragging down yards that should have come down of their own weight.

"C'm on now" he roared. "Hay, ay, ay, oh Hay! Oh, bust that rope! Now boys! One pull!"

"It's no use!" puffed Seth Noakes, picking an icy Manilla splinter from his gnarled hand. "Got tew git hot water an' thaw them blocks an' ropes afore them sails 'll stow."

"Put yer big copper on th' flare, Slippy," said Jethro. "Be dummed ef I ain't half a mint tew git out on the ice and try to git tew thet thar camp, or whatever 't is. Any of yew keer tew try it?"

The first soft flakes of snow fell. The flare lit up a wide expanse of rough field ice which heaved weirdly over the breathing sea. The old Gayhead had heeled over until her port channels were beneath the ice, her starboard channels three feet clear above it. Grim faced ancients looked, and shivered. They thought of old Eph, perhaps out there now, lacking, even if he lived, the solid security of the ship, or its warmth. That made them uneasy. They wanted to follow Jethro, but the impulsiveness of youth was wanting.

"Come on Chips," urged Jethro, clambering on to the rail. "We kin take a look at her side, anyhow. Mebbe we kin git tew th' leak." Chips was hard on Slippy's heels as that important member of the ships' company stepped to the galley for his copper. There was likely to be hot coffee inside, and Chips liked hot coffee on cold nights, whether he had to venture out on the ice or not.

"Jest a minit, Jethro," he replied. "I'll borry Slippy's lantern, fust, then—"

Slippy opened the door. Something butted him hard in the stomach and bowled him over on to Chips, who had a fleeting vision of something big and soft and boisterous trampling over him as he went down.

The bear cub headed for the men around the flare. Amos scrambled on to a cask and perched there on hands and knees, glaring pop-eyed at the frolicking cub, reaching around blindly for something to poke it with. Other old men groped for places of refuge while they roared with glee at Amos' predicament.

"Noel!" yelled Amos. "Git this yer dumblasted critter away frum me afore I hit it a poke!"

Noel was too busy. His hoarse guffaw filled the echoing spaces of the frozen sails. Even Jethro sat comfortably on the rail grinning at the uproar. Saul Rowe stood on tottery feet on the pump, balancing himself with a pump brake, roaring with merriment to see Amos properly treed.

"Go on, Amos, tickle him an' he'll dance!" yelled Saul. "Yew allus wuz one fer pets. He likes yew. He— Hey! Noel! Ef yew let thet or'nary varmint come anigh me I'll—"

Saul tottered, overbalanced, and fell on top of the cub, and the baby bear seized his new playmate joyously. His sharp teeth clamped on Saul's fearnaught trousers and he began to drag the swearing old man around the deck. The snow was falling thickly, the ice crackled and crashed, but none of the Gayhead's crew noticed any of it. The decks resounded with real, blusterous enjoyment, and the bear seemed as merry as any of them.

"'Tarnal Fire!" bawled a voice from the ice; "yew don't pear tew be downhearted none, yew don't! Hey, Gayhead ahoy!"

Instantly the uproar was hushed. Old men looked into each other's faces queerly. That voice shocked them, much as they had hoped to hear it again. They recalled the mock suns, and the flaming Aurora, and then that voice.

"'Tarnal Fire!" it roared again. "Be yew all dead an' dancin' at yewr own wake? Somebody gimme a mossel o' tobacker. I ain't blowd a cloud fer days!"

And, followed by his haggard, grinning boat's crew, and four strangers as haggard but grinning less, old Eph Brower tumbled in over the rail and stood staring at the spectacle of Cap'n Jethro seated on the main pinrail with his knees drawn up, trying to smile a greeting while he fought off a baby bear which had fallen desperately in love with his sea boots. Saul Rowe stood open-mouthed, glaring at the apparition of [illegible] trousers.

"Why, yew troublesome old critter, yew 've brung us lotsw plenty trouble, ain't yew!" roared Cap'n Jethro, daring the bear cub in order to stand on both feet while he shook his fist under old Eph's red nose. "Hobs Boots! I be a dummed good mint tew disrate yew, Eph Brower!"

"Call yewrself a whaleman, don't yew?" growled Seth Noakes, thrusting tobacco plug and knife into Eph's fist. "Hellfire old noosance!"

"Here we be, stuck fast—" chattered Amos.

"All account o' yewr—" another took up the strain.

"Gangway!" bellowed Slippy, the cook, charging from the galley with a flaming stick of wood for Eph's pipe. "Git yewrselves inside the galley, yew froze sailormen, an' fill up wi' coffee 'fore yew waste breath on these yer old barnacles. Hell's delight! Git inside! Ain't yew been enough trouble a'ready?"

Jethro cuffed the bear cub away, and old Eph grinned broadly, leading his crew and the strangers into the warm sea kitchen. There was no need to shut the doors to keep the cold out. Every inch of open space commanding a view of the interior was crowded with single features or whole faces, according to the luck of the owner. Cap'n Jethro himself was driven to open the skylight in order to get his head inside. The bear cub, abandoned, found the cabin pantry, discovered therein a gallon of molasses, and curled himself up with it quite contentedly in Jed Roach's bunk.

"We picked up three Eskimos, Eph, es told us yew'd stood no'th after cuttin' adrift frum th' whale," said Jethro in the skylight. His grizzled old head and weathered old face with the keen, hard eyes were framed in the grimy oaken setting like an old, old painting. "What in 'tarnation made yew sail no'th? Here we be, cracked open an' leakin', nipped fast fer th' hull winter, 'count o' yewr dum foolishness!"

"You're lucky, Cap'n," laughed one of the strangers through the steam of his coffee. "Our ship cracked open and sunk under us. Took all hands but us four, too."

"More'n six months ago," added another.

"We see these yer fellers' went a-flyin' to th' no'rad," said Eph. "We seen them Eskimos, too, but we wuz fast tew th' whale then. Meant tew pick 'em up comin' back. But by th' time we hed tew cut loose or bust tew bits against th' ice we wuz right nigh these fellers' camp an' went tew look see. We lost our boat landin' an' wuz stuck. Found these yer chaps 'most froze an' nigh starved; been thar on thet little hump o' rock six months, livin' on blubber, raw, an' waitin' fer th' ice tew git thick enough tew walk on. Dunno what we'd hev done now th' ice hes set in heavy. Started off somewhar, likely. Now we be here."

"Yew're right!" grunted Jethro. "Here yew be, an' here we be, wi' seven extry bellies tew feed, an' grub gittin purty low es 't is. 'Sides bein' nipped in th' ice an' leakin' like ol' Shark Perkin's quart feed measure."

The old Gayhead suddenly lifted a foot, groaning and creaking alarmingly, while the ice outside reverberated away to the far horizon with terrific reports under the pressure coming in from seaward. Again the Gayhead jerked, this time straightening up almost to a level, but another foot out of the water.

"You are lucky, Cap'n," said the stranger who had made the same remark previously. "There is scarcely a chance now for you to come to more harm. Your ship is raised above the bends. More pressure may force her higher, but can scarcely break her. My ship was deep laden when we got caught, and the ice got us fair, like taking a nut in the crackers. You ought to be able to get at your leak and stop it before the ice lets you through again. But thanks for your warm up, and the coffee. We won't add to your burden if you're short o' grub. Come on, boys."

"Yew jest bring yewrself tew anchor right here, Mister," growled Jethro. "Whar did yew git th' idee es we Gayheads tarned men adrift? Ef yew lived six months on raw blubber, we kin live on it, too, a little while. Hob's Boots! What yew fellers gawkin' at? Get yew out on th' ice 'long o' Chips, an' see ef yew kin find thet thar leak! An' yew strangers, yew come aft wi' me. Mebbe we kin find yew quarters somewhars."

Daylight revealed the ice definitely frozen solid for the winter. There was no longer hope of release before the long arctic dead season was past. Daylight, too, bore out what Eph's castaways had affirmed; that the hummock of land they had been marooned upon was merely a spot of solid land in a vast expanse of sea, far from any other shore. The three Eskimos accepted the situation with stolid patience; they borrowed harpoons and fishing gear, axes and knives, and departed from the ship, to return in a few hours loaded down with walrus meat and fish.

Jethro was on the ice under the Gayhead's bow, examining the leak, now well within reach, when the hunters appeared. His face lit up brightly with the surety of a food supply. The progress Chips was making on the leak added to his contentment. He and old Eph had already set in motion a plan for the occupation of all hands during the dark, dull days, to prevent them growing surly and quarrelsome from inaction. And when things were looking rosier than at any time in more than a week the leader of the four strangers dropped to the ice beside Jethro and Eph, and suggested they go with him to the place he had lately existed upon.

"Yew go, Eph," suggested Jethro. "Yew be younger 'n me."

"How much?" retorted Eph. "'Tarnal Fire! Yew make much of a few months, yew do. Yew better come, too, Jethro. Mebbe yew'll thank me arterwards."

"Thank yew? Huh?" Jethro grunted. "Look here what I got tew thank yew for! Empty holds, too. Hobs Boots!"

"Jest th' same, yew better come," persisted Eph.

Jethro went. As they plodded over the ice, squinting their eyes against the white glare of it, the stranger had something to say. He and the survivors of his crew hailed from Scotland and had been out from home nearly two years.

"I owned half share in the Rorqual," he said. "Brother had the other half, and sailed mate with me. He was lost when the ship slipped through the ice and sank. By then we had taken almost all her blubber and bone out. We carry blubber home frozen, instead of trying it out. So there's—"

They reached the barren, ice-clad shore, with its pitifully amateurish snow hut, and its laboriously spliced pieces of broken oars and boat planking that served as a signal staff. The castaway stepped ashore, waved his hand toward a hummock of snow that stood behind the snow hut, and concluded: "There's our full cargo of frozen blubber, Cap'n Scraggs, and baleen enough to double the value. You've saved our lives, and it's yours. I can't move it. If you want to give my lads a small share of it—"

Jethro stared. Then he switched his gaze to old Eph.

"What in 'tarnation yew grinnin' for, Eph Brower?" he blurted out. "Hob's Boots! Ef yew say a word about luck I'll—"

"Whenever you're ready to ship it, say the word, Cap'n," the skipper of the Rorqual concluded.

"Got plenty o' time tew try it out, anyway," put in Eph.

They marched back to the old Gayhead with Jethro leading, setting such a pace as had them all sweating. As they neared the nipped old whaler a full throated chorus of more or less rusty harmony rang out toward them.

"And when we came tew far Greenland,
And tew Greenland cold came we,
Whar thar's ice an' thar's snow, an' whale fishes blow,
We found nawthin' but frozen seas, me
boys,
Nawthin' but frozen seas!"

"Our captain stud on his quarterdeck,
An' a mad little man wuz he,
'Hob's Boots, sech luck! Wuz thar ever
sech luck?
We be froze for a year!' sez he.
'Not a whale for a year,' sez se."

Aboard the Gayhead much work had been done. The sails had been thawed out and sent down from aloft to be stowed away. There was already the frame over the waist which was to be covered with canvas to keep the ship free from snow during the long winter. Chips with his gang at the bows were beginning to hammer caulking into the new seams. Jethro's face was red with exercise and perhaps a little human thrill.

"O, Greenland is an awful place," the song went on.

"Whar daylight's seldom seen,
Whar thar's ice an thar's snow; and no
whale fishes blow,
But thar's mountains o' fat an' baleen, me
boys,
Jest mountains o' fat an' baleen!"

Seth Noakes stood on the bulwarks and waved his greasy old cap. Slippy, the cook, hauled him down and waved his own cap, far greasier than Seth's.

"Come on, boys. Three cheers for Cap'n Jethro's luck!" he bellowed. And like a thunderclap the response came. Every rusty old pipe that had cussed at Jethro for keeping on, every throaty old bellow that had growled and counseled rebellion blared out in one ear-splitting yell, three times repeated, and three times yet again.

Old Eph grinned at Jethro's red face. And slowly a twinkle crept into Jethro's eye, too. He stood creakily, picked up a huge lump of snow, and crowned Eph with it before he could dodge.

"Yew or'nary, grinnin' old grampus, yew told 'em about it afore yew told me!" he roared, while a full whaler's crew, four castaways, and three Eskimos, to say nothing of the bear, stood by and whooped at the sight of two ancient, frosted mariners pummelling each other in the snow.

tered and covered with perspiration and scratches. His feet were cut and swollen, and he looked indeed like some forest monster.

He was carrying an unusually bulky package that bore a crude resemblance to those square affairs that are placed around tender young trees as a protection. It was made of bark, held together with strippings from green twigs that were laced through jagged holes.

It had shoulder straps of the same twig material and was altogether quite complete, in its way. There was even an attempt at ornamentation, since the bottom was draped with a frisky fringe of half dried seaweed. George dropped his precious handiwork and stared at Jane's lovely vision. Of course, the whole affair was simply another of his dreams. This was not the first time her lovely radiance had burst upon him when she was not actually present.

He had wakened in his tent, back in the jungle, under the tropic stars, and had seen her standing beside him. He had stopped his camel under the moon to hear the desert talk, and it had talked of her and he had visualized her against the pale background of the night.

Once, while rotten with fever in a Pathan village, with some hostile Kye Kheens taking pot shots at their position day and night, it was her image, as she sat beside him in fancy, that had made him wish to continue living. At times it had seemed as though her cool hand was on his forehead, pupils at each one, and their voices rise in a singsong chant as they study aloud. I pick up one of the books and notice that it is printed in the new language of One Thousand Characters.

Nanking is one of the great educational centers of China, and here is located the University of Nanking, established by American missionaries. Mr. Carpenter is talking to some of the Chinese students, who are learning to be teachers.

At the Drum Tower

WE SOON reach the Drum Tower, a large red two-story building with a tower, on the top. The first tower, located in what is now the center of the city, was erected in 1092 A. D., less than thirty years after William the Conqueror landed in England. The present massive structure was built by Emperor Hungwu of the Ming Dynasty in preparation for a battle against a force of rebels. He placed in it an enormous drum, which could be heard at a great distance and served as a signal for his soldiers to march against the enemy. Near this tower is the North Star hill, surrounded by a Taoist temple. We climb up this hill over a beaten path worn smooth by the feet of countless worshipers of past generations, and from there get a view of the whole city. We can see the distant hills, shaped like a dragon's back, which caused Chu Hung Wo to build his capital here.

Chu started life as a beggar, but he organized a rebellion, which enabled him to conquer China. He founded the Ming Dynasty, under which were accomplished the greatest things that the Chinese have ever done in architecture and public improvements. The dragon, you know, is the imperial animal of China, and it is supposed to bring luck. According to the ancient beliefs, a dragon can do anything. It can make itself as big as an elephant, or as small as a gnat, can build up empires, and throw down kings. Some years ago I was in China just before an eclipse of the moon was to occur. The Peking Gazette soberly announced that the people should turn out and make a great noise on the night of the eclipse, as it was said that the dragon would then try to swallow the moon, and he should be scared away. Well, the country here at Nanking is shaped just like a great dragon, and the emperor said: "If I can build my capital on the dragon's back it will last forever." The result was that he moved to Nanking and made it for a time the greatest city of China. He built the present walls, and planned also an outer wall which should be ninety miles long, but he got no further than the first pillars of this before he died.

The Fortune Teller

NOT far away lies the south gate, just inside of which remains all that is left of the Nanking of old. Let us saunter through this old city. We shall find that here, as elsewhere in China, the new is subtly replacing the old.

Here you will see a dentist's shop fitted up with the newest of western equipment, while on the sidewalk across the street an old medicine man is peddling his wares, consisting of herbs and bits of wild animals. We inspect the bears' claws and the tigers' heads which he has for sale. How they are to be used I do not know. Noticing a crowd at a booth next to him we edge our way through and find it centers around a man who is telling the fortunes of the passers-by for 2 cents a fortune. The crowd presumably thinks this the better and cheaper way of assuring themselves as to their good health.

I ask to have my fortune told. After juggling little sticks on which are written many Chinese characters, the seer hands me about a dozen of them, of which he tells me to select one. I do this, but am unable to understand him as he makes known the result of his reading of the stick I chose.

Next we come to an old Confucian Temple. As we approach the gate, we notice a large fire burning in an oven of mortar and clay about ten feet high and eight feet wide. See that young Chinese girl toddling up to the oven and placing therein a piece of paper covered with Chinese characters. Every temple of Confucius has one of these fires burning before it, and those who feed its flames with paper on which is any kind of writing in the Chinese language do so to "accumulate merit." Entering the temple we are struck by its simplicity. Across the back are three large tablets with seventy-two smaller tablets around the sides of the room. In front of one of them an old man is offering up prayers and burning incense. On the tablets in Chinese characters there are inscriptions such as:

> "Most Holy Teacher, Confucius"
> "From the Creation of Man there is Never One Like Him."
> "Without Equal on Heaven or Earth."

The temple itself is no more than a barn-like structure in front and back of which there are small flower gardens.

Many Quaint Shops

THE streets of this old city are wide, much unlike the narrow thoroughfares of Canton. We pass many quaint shops, some displaying the clothing of the Western World, straw hats, suits, shirts and leather shoes; in others I see the clothes of China, long gowns, or richly embroidered silk trousers and jackets for the women, and shoes of purple and blue cloth, beautifully embroidered. The street barber, who can be seen on the sidewalks shaving the heads of his patrons, competes with a modern barber shop near by that is furnished with every up-to-date appurtenance.

Some of the merchants call out, asking us to buy, but we pass on until we come to a teahouse, where we go in for a rest and a drink. The tea houses are the clubs of China. Here the business men gather at all hours of the day to talk and drink tea. We climb to the second floor of a large building, and sit down in a room furnished with a number of plain wooden tables and chairs. We see about thirty Chinese men sitting about, laughing and excitedly waving their hands as they clatter. They may be merchants who deal in curiosities or clothing, or clerks from the banks.

No sooner have we seated ourselves than we are besieged from all sides by boys selling watermelon seeds, cakes, peanuts and fans and other articles of various description. For one copper I buy a package of watermelon seed upon which we munch in the Chinese fashion while waiting for our tea to be served, and for two coppers get from another boy a small package of peanuts. Our tea is a green-white color and is served Chinese style in small cups and without sugar or milk.

Cells for Scholars

BUT watch the four men sitting at the adjoining table. One of them is talking earnestly and gesticulating as he evidently is urging his companions to see his point of view. They listen to him interestedly and intently as he make known his ideas. They are dressed alike in black jackets reaching to the waist and wearing gowns of gray silk, from which peep the small feet clad in black cloth slippers. All of them have fans in their hands. The one talking at times waves his excitedly, but the others fan themselves slowly, with the languidness of the East. The speaker frequently makes his companions laugh. The Chinese laugh heartily and at times violently; they take life as it comes and seem always to have time to enjoy a joke. On the other hand, they have also a great respect for learning, and will listen attentively to one who speaks with knowledge of the Chinese classics.

Here in Nanking we are in one of the great educational centers of China, both old and new. This morning while strolling about, I came to an old structure now partly torn down, in which 20,000 students formerly took their examinations for government positions. These were the famous examination halls, built during the Ming Dynasty, when the famous civil service of China was started. I was just about to go in when I felt someone tugging at my sleeve. Looking down I saw a small boy of 8 years or thereabouts who is addressing me in perfect English. He was eager for me to come with him to see his schoolteacher, an American missionary, and proudly displayed his knowledge of the English language by reciting the alphabet.

Entering the examination halls I inspected the many stalls in which the candidate had to remain during the entire period of their examination. In another visit to Nanking, some years ago, there were 10,000 boys at work in them, taking examinations that lasted three days and three nights. Once the students had entered a small compartment where they prepared their papers of the classics they were compelled to remain until all were completed. These stalls are not much larger than one of our telephone booths, yet in them the students often lived for days. Guards were stationed outside, and food was passed in through a little cubby hole. Sometimes, after the examination periods were over, it was found that some luckless candidate for academic honors had died in his cell. Today, this great structure was deserted save for two Chinese youths who were painting a work of modern art, and a few private schools in the city are all that survive of the educational system of the past.

In modern education also Nanking has become one of the leading cities of China. The last time I was here, the then viceroy of the province was pushing ahead on a big program relating to schools in Nanking, all supported by the government, and a normal training school where 500 young Chinese were studying to become teachers of the new learning. That viceroy had also elaborate schemes for establishing a system of playgrounds and gymnasium for the physical education of the youth of the city, and had inaugurated a series of athletic meets. He put boys and girls to study together in the same classrooms, which was at that time a startling innovation in China. Among the higher educational institutions established here were the government military and naval academies.

Besides the institutions under the direction of the Chinese, Nanking has a number of schools and colleges established here by American missionaries. This city is in fact one of the most important centers of missionary activity, which has been a great factor in the development of schools throughout the whole of Kiangsu province. The largest and most interesting of the foreign educational institutions is the University of Nanking, maintained jointly by four Protestant denominations in the United States. Including all departments it had last year more than 1500 students in attendance upon its courses, and it is recognized all over China as one of the vital forces that is helping to create the New China.

Practical Education

THE university is situated in Nanking proper, not far from the ancient Drum Tower. Its campus comprises about eighty acres of land, about which are scattered numerous buildings of modern construction, including dormitories, laboratories, lecture halls and homes for members of the faculty. It has also forest nurseries and experimental farms. I visited it today, looked over its buildings and grounds and had talks with several of its officers and instructors.

Both Americans and Chinese take part in the teaching at Nanking University, the Chinese instructors being for the most part men and women who have studied either in the United States or at some American institution in China. The university departments include junior and senior departments, colleges of arts, sciences, agriculture and forestry; junior colleges of business, education and science, nursing and medical schools, schools for training missionaries and teachers, and a model school with kindergarten, primary and grade departments. In addition there are special language schools, a summer school and short courses in sericulture, agriculture and forestry.

Another interesting feature of the University of Nanking is the hospital for the care of foreign patients only. It is a thoroughly modern institution, with a staff of highly competent American doctors and nurses. One of its buildings is given over entirely to women patients. The equipment of the hospital includes operating rooms and laboratories, and it is, in fact, prepared to render service as complete and up to date as the best of similar institutions in the United States. Besides providing hospital facilities for Americans and other foreigners in this part of China, it serves as a training school for Chinese physicians and nurses, and is the directing center of a great deal of invaluable work in hygiene, sanitation and medical relief among the Chinese of Nanking and vicinity.

The college of agriculture and forestry has about 200 acres of land under cultivation. On these farms it experiments with various crops, and methods of cultivation for the improvement of Chinese agriculture. It distributes tested seeds, issues bulletins for free distribution and gives demonstration on its own and Chinese farms, and works out improved designs of Chinese and American agricultural implements.

[NOTE: This is the last of Mr. Carpenter's letters.—Editor.]

[illegible] 'fraid yew'll run her off yewrself."

"I ain't buckin' yewr orders," grumbled Jed. "So long as th' hands don't vote yew down, I be here tew take yewr orders. But jes' th' same, Jethro, 't is gittin' mighty dangerous—"

"Until I be satisfied as old Eph's gone, Jed, this yer ship ain't goin' nowhere but no'th. So yew kin shet up."

Jethro changed into dry clothes. And he held his course right through another night until the blizzard ceased and the sky cleared. When the human eye was able to scan a mile wide circle of sea, all hands gasped. Even Jethro was staggered. The dangling tip of the broken jib boom was an eyesore to a seaman's eye; but it faded into insignificance. The old Gayhead had gotten herself into a predicament, indeed, and as if she realized it she slowed up in a vast area of small floes, swerving from thick ice to thin, and then came to a dead stand with a pack of small cakes piled up to her hawsepipes.

Everywhere was ice. Back on the course she had traversed the ice had closed behind her. North lay a serrated ridge of small bergs, stretching in a line broken in only a few places. To the south and east the sea was heaving gently under free ice that only wanted absolute calm to freeze solid. Cap'n Jethro gazed darkly at the situation. Old men muttered about the decks. Every eye flashed toward him when he looked elsewhere. He knew what they were saying about him. He cared little for that. He knew that so long as there was a swell to the sea there was a chance of forcing his ship through. And somwhere beyond that field of glittering white old Eph had disappeared. He had known old Eph a long time.

"Set both courses, Jed," he ordered sharply.

"Ain't no use doin' that, Jethro," protested Jed. And the weary old crew grumbled.

"Set them courses! Hob's Boots! Be I tew tell old Eph es yew refused—"

"I ain't refusin', Jethro!" Jed hurried to affirm, a bit ashamed. "Only wisht I thought yew'd hev a chance tew tell Eph anything again. Hey, yew old barnacle! Let them courses fall! Yew froze stiff?"

Creakily the great sails tore adrift from their icy bands as buntless, clewlines, and leachlines were overhauled. There was still a fresh, chill breeze. The added sail made the old whaler groan and tremble; then, as most ships do when beset by ice not yet solid, she crushed her way through the thinness of it, finding the way by simply following the line of least resistance; and as she gained headway moving faster until she began to hurl the cakes aside from her stout old stem.

Men who had watched Jed Roach, only waiting for him to lead them to demand of Jethro a change of course, went back to the snug corners they had found during the bitterest hours, grumbling uncertainly. Not one of them hoped to see Eph Brower again. Not one of them dared voice their fear so long as the ship went forward. But, as yet unspoken aloud, the determination grew in all of them that the very next time the ship encountered a halt they would force Jethro to turn back before too late. As they glanced gloomily around the ice clad sea there was not one of them but felt sure it was too late already.

Jethro had returned to his lofty perch to scan the prospect. Abruptly his hoarse old voice roared out.

"Jed! Set yewr flyin' jib an' gaff tamps'l!" Now the showdown was nigh.

"Ef thet ain't dum foolishness!" roared Seth Noakes. Then he shut up and moved showly aft to help with the gaff topsail, for Jethro was coming down and shouting as he came:

"Thar's somebuddy adrift on thet thar big berg! Hob's Boots! Ain't yew got them sails set yet?"

A buzz filled the decks. Men hauled at frozen ropes like maniacs, for none doubted that old Eph was in sight. The ship moved as if she, too, believed so, for she sheared her way through ice with a tinkling, crashing, roaring force, and luck was with her. She neared the berg and found the ice all loose and broken small. Soon it became less certain that Eph and his boat's crew were in sight. Presently Jethro, again aloft with his glass, shouted:

"Git a boat out, Jed! 'Tain't our fellers. It's three o' them Eskimos, seemin'ly, an' a half growed dawg."

Grumbling, as became them, the old whalemen lowered a boat and forced their way through the floes. The half growed dawg Jethro had reported crouched in a strange fashion for a dog, swaying his shoulders heavily, with head hung low. The three fur muffled figures ran into the floating ice to reach the boat, chattering away and pointing to the swaying animal.

"Why, dummed ef 't ain't a ba'r!" exclaimed Noel Pease, in charge of the boat.

"They be scared of it," cried Amos. "Give that thar feller a wide berth, Noel!"

"Huh! 'Tain't nothin' but a babby," retorted Noel. "It'll likely die left alone thar. Shove 'r further, lads."

As unconcernedly as he would handle a sheep, Noel grabbed the heavy bear cub by the scruff and hauled it into the boat. The frightened beast clawed him, ripping his heavy jacket and stinging his skin.

"Yew or'nary cuss!" roared Noel, cuffing the bear heavily, dumping him into the bottom of the boat. "I'll larn yew tew hev better manners soon's I get yew aboard. Shove off, fellers. Mebbe Jethro kin understand what these yer funnies is sayin'. Be dammed ef I kin."

"Mebbe somebuddy'll be able tew make him understand that ain't no use gittin' froze in no more," grumbled the midship oar.

They reached the Gayhead and hauled up the boat, letting it hang at the tackles. Noel Pease dragged his bear cub forward, tied it to a stanchion, and gave it a piece of frozen salt cod. Then he borrowed Slippy's ax and went to cut his pet's claws while all hands stood by waiting for Jethro to reappear from the cabin, where he was trying to make something out of the Eskimos' jargon.

The sun had shone out. Men peered up at it fearfully. Fine weather surely meant freezing up. Only by an increase of wind, even to the extent of bad weather, could they hope to see the ice keep loosely moving.

"Jumpin' mack'rl!" yelled Saul Rowe, with outflung arm. "Look thar! Jumpin' mack'rel!"

Another sun had appeared below the first. Ancient whalemen who had never before seen a mock sun stared in awe:

"Thar's another!" shouted Amos.

"Four of 'em, by th' 'tarnal!" chattered Saul. And in a body they marched aft, their minds made up at last. They wanted no more of those frozen seas where there was no sun at all one day and a family of them the next. They'd show Jethro Scraggs where he stood. Jethro came on deck as they trooped up the ladder. He was smiling all over his fine old red face.

"We'll git old Eph, fellers!" he announced. All their intended protests died for the moment under the spell of that hope. "Can't make much o' what them pore natives sez, but by signs they make out es they see Eph's boat away no'th of their driftin' berg. They see him cut loose frum th' whale arter he'd got 'way inside the ice. Then he sot sail an' stood no'th. I can't make 'em say how many days ago. They be 'most starved. How'ndever, no'th we goes. 'S long es this breeze holds th' ice won't freeze right solid."

Jethro got out his sextant to try for an observation. Then he saw the mock suns. His mouth fell down and he almost dropped the sextant. Slowly a queer grin wreathed his lips and he stared hard at Jed Roach. Jed, his mind set on the ship's course, looked ever ahead and had not seen the fictitious suns. Jethro was about to speak about them, but slowly they melted away as the real sun gained brilliance with the dissipation of the haze, and then the sky was normal again.

But in the forecastle men hammered at the subject. Noel's bear had no power to attract them from it once the spell of Cap'n Jethro's enthusiasm was off them. The dark, reeking interior was thunderous with the crash of ice at the bows. More frequently now the heavier ice struck her with a terrifice force that was little less than disastrous, and there was the matter of those extra suns.

"Lookout th' little growler!" cried Noel, backing away from his claw clipped pet in a grotesque attitude of boxing. The old whaleman seemed unable to believe that a half grown, wild polar bear might give him serious opposition. "Lookut th' white hope!"

"Yew take th' dumblasted critter aft, Noel Pease," came a sore voice from forward. "Yew don't b'long here anyway. Yew b'long aft."

"Only ontil we pick up Eph, me lad," retorted Noel, whacking his bear on the snout with his mitten. The bear seemed to like the rough play.

"That'll be long enough," the same voice growled.

Noel departed, dragging the cub. Then the men entered into solemn conclave. They grumbled, they growled, they criticized. One or two of them had seen mock suns before, and their ridicule abashed the others. But all the while the roaring and crashing of ice at the bows filled the old Gayhead's hull with ominous thunder. The relieved helmsman, coming below for his ten minutes' smoke at four bells, told of wonderful lights in the sky as darkness approached, and they forgot the ridicule over the mock suns in wonder at the Aurora Borealis. They feared again. They heard the mate bawling excitedly to the watch on deck, and crept up to see the cause.

"Hev tew take a spell at pumpin', fellers," Jed shouted. He was examining the sounding rod. Jethro was coming down from his self-chosen lookout, looking as if he had news to tell but could not tell it until he knew more about the leak that had developed.

"Makin' much, Jed?" he asked.

"Smart bit, Jethro, smart bit. Some o' them hefty bits hit her hard." Then to the slowly moving old men he yelled:

"Git a move on yew! Ship them brakes, an' pump. Great Irons! Be yew gone clean daffy?"

The watch below swarmed up and mingled with the others, and rusty voices made an uproar.

"Ain't no use carryin' on, Jethro!" yelled one.

"We'll pump, but yew'll have tew tarn back!" another roared.

"We kin make out wi' this breeze," Seth Noakes put in. "But ef it once draps calm, yew're stuck here for six months, Jethro. Not even old Eph would—"

"Jest a minit, boys, jest a minit," said the skipper, holding his telescope aloft. "Ain't no call tew delay th' pumpin' while yew rakes me fore an aft wi' yewr tongues. Git tew work. I jest see a bit of a wisp flyin' on what looks like hard tew th' no'th-west'ard. Pump her out. Gimme ontil we kin make out what thet thar wisp is, an' ef 'ts none o' Eph's crew I'll tarn fer home. That's fair, ain't it?"

"Yew'll be lucky ef yew kin tarn then," growled Saul Rowe; but Saul was first man at the pump brakes. It was Saul Rowe who disputed with Seth Noakes the privilege to start up that wonderful chanty which famous musicians have called of classic quality as a tune.

"O Shanandore I long tew hear yew."

And lustily went the refrain:

"Away, yew rollin' river!"

Then Saul and Seth, still striving for precedence as soloist:

"Across thet wide an' rowlin' river—" with the gang pumping full stroke:

"Ah, ho, we're bound away, 'cross th' wide
Missouri."

Voice after voice joined in. Water gushed from the pump lip. "Growl you may, but work you must!" That's a maxim as old as seafaring. Those ancient mariners could growl; none better; but they were sailormen to the last crooked finger joint, and that weirdly beautiful chanty went right down to the sound hearts buried under their mossy breasts.

"Missouri she's a mighty river,
Away, yew rowlin' river!
The Injuns' camp lies on its borders —
Ah, ho, we're bound away, cross th' wide
Missouri."

"Oh, Shanandore I love yewr daughter.
Away, yew rowlin' river!
F'r her I'd cross th' stormy water—
Ah, ho, we're bound away, cross th' wide
Missouri."

That old love song moved the pump brakes. Amidships Slippy, the cook, tended a big flare again, and it poured a wonderful light upon the scene. The old whaler shouldered her way sturdily through heaving masses of breaking ice that stretched away far across on all sides. The light shone upon weather beaten, wrinkled old faces lit with brilliant, brave eyes; on [illegible] of visible vapor [illegible] And Cap'n Jethro Scraggs [illegible] to hide under a frown the real feelings [illegible] in him.

"Yew mossgrown old barnacles!" he chuckled; "yew be all out tew bailing me intew tarnin' home, but thar ain't one of yew es 'ud let me give up old Eph es long es th' old Gayhead'll float."

Into the night they pumped. None noticed that a spell at the pumps had developed into constant pumping; for the lookout at the foremast head had reported a light, dim, flickering, eclipsed at times, but still a light undisputably, and the ship was drawing nearer to it all the while.

But the breeze dropped. The ship moved sluggishly. Soon she stopped altogether, and the dim light was still a mile away across ice that might stop a ship, but yet could not be depended upon to bear walking men.

Then the distant light went out. The pumps stopped. At last weary old men were made aware of aches and pains, of sweat that turned chill as soon as work ceased. There was a tremendous jarring beneath the ship; she listed, and the ice, driven against her stout old sides with a force that came from a gale a hundred miles away, crept up and fell back in masses until it topped her battered rail. The hanging sails, bereft glance, then put on his pilot jacket, pulled on a woolen storm cap, and pushed past out of the cabin. When Amos reached the deck, carrying over his arm the suit of underwear, Cap'n Jethro was half up the fore rigging, bound for the lookout barrel.

"Wal, yew riled th' old grampus, didn't yew?" grinned old Eph.

"Go tew grass!" growled Amos sharply, and wandered forward like a man dreaming, gazing aloft fixedly until he was brought up by almost capsizing Slippy, the cook, bearing a full bucket of galley garbage to the lee rail.

"Hey. Yew struck blind doin' lookout?" chattered Slippy.

"Go tew hell!" snapped Amos, and tumbled into the forecastle.

Twelve old men crouched over their supper under the rays of a swinging oil lamp. Fish hash, potatoes, boiled tea, and soft biscuit comprised their fare. They favored food that needed little chewing, those ancient mariners of the Gayhead. Here and there parted lips revealed some scattered teeth; it was old Eph's boast that he owned the only two teeth that actually met. But they made up in earnestness what they lacked in masticating ability, and whiskered old jaws wagged, stooped shoulders swayed with the lift of arms, and heads dipped and rose in rhythm with the movement of spoon or fork.

"'Bout time tew tell Jethro es we don't agree with him, I guess," stated Saul Rowe, his keen blue eyes glittering from behind the wrinkles of a face that looked like a dried apple that had retained its color magically.

"Thet's so," mumbled another ancient, scraping the hash kid with a crooked forefinger. "Ain't no fish up here. Nawth'n' but cold an' snow. He hadn't no call tew desart th' sparm grounds."

"Why, yew hungry ol' walrus, yew wuz all hell bent tew try right whalin' yewrself!" retorted Seth Noakes, rescuing the last biscuit from the old marauder's fist. Seth had been foremost of those suggesting that Jethro be voted down. But it was another matter when somebody else stuck in his oar.

"Yew ain't no more like a giddy weathercock than a giddy weathercock is, Seth," growled Amos. "A mite ago yew wuz all for tarnin' south."

"Ain't I allus stood by Jethro?" snapped Seth, illogical as a girl. "I sez give him a chance tew prove—"

"Ain't he had his chance?" chorused the others noisily.

"I claims es it should be put tew vote," grumbled the hungry one sulkily. He stuck his pipe over the lamp chimney, tamped down the red coal of tobacco with an impervious finger end, and puffed reeking cloudlets across the table. Under the low beams, in an atmosphere already almost tangible with the steam of food, wet clothes, and fed men, faces were all but invisible unless the owners were seated. Forward, where the massive bowsprit heel was faintly to be seen, the old barque groaned and creaked as she put her sturdy bows to the swells. Dim shapes of swinging oilskins hung from the beams, like bodies. Under the densest of the smoke a pair of gnarled, brown hands, industriously tore the fly leaf of a mail order automobile catalogue into squares.

"Put it tew vote, I sez," came from above the hands.

"Ain't no call tew git flustered," Amos put in. "Longest way round es quickest way hum sometimes. Mebbe ef yew all goes aft an' gits yew some warm gear from Jethro's spare slop chest yew won't be so hasty 'bout tarnin' back."

"Wall, ef yew old mossbacks ain't th' beat of anything I ever see I'll eat th' galley mop!" taunted Slippy, the cook. He gathered up the supper empties. "A mite ago yew wuz all yammerin' ezzackly opposit from what yew be sayin' now. Yew ought tew be suckin' candy in an Old Man's Home, 'stid o' up here whalin'. Do yew happen tew know, any of yew, who's up in th' crow's nest at this minit? Betcha yew don't. Not yew. 'Growl yew may but work yew must' has been rule o' the sea's long es I kin remember; but here yew be a growlin' like greenhorns an' leavin' th' work tew—"

"Blohow, ah blo-o-ow!" came the penetrating whisper from aloft, and in a flash Slippy was up the ladder, with every one of the growling old sea dogs hard at his heels. Beside the foremast they stopped, waiting breathlessly while Jed Roach on the poop took a bearing of the whales from word called by Cap'n Jethro already on his way down from aloft.

"Small pod o' cows, headin' no'th," the skipper hailed as he dropped from the sherepole to the deck. "That's ice purty thick thatway," he remarked with a frown at the gang about the foremast; "so of any of yew soft sailors feel es it's mebbe, too cold tew be out all night, yew stay aboard." Which piece of biting sarcasm off his stout old chest, Jethro stumped aft, shouting as he went:

"Lower away, Jed, an' yew, too, Eph. Yew'll mebbe git fast afore dark ef yewr crews ain't froze wi' fright."

Two boats went away. The mates had to drive men from them, instead of to them. The men remaining, under the direction of the loquacious Slippy, set a great blubber scrap flare all ready to be lighted when darkness fell. And three of the keenest eyed of them all clambered eagerly aloft to the three mastheads to keep a lookout for the boats, never thinking of the cold, nor caring that it was their rightful watch below.

In half an hour the short twilight was nearly gone, and just before it failed Amos, at the main royal masthead, bawled lustily:

"Jed's fast tew a hundred bar'ler!"

And as if in echo:

"Eph's headin' dead tew windward, in tow!" the foremast lookout howled.

Then darkness came. The flare sent its red and black broadcast, lighting up the sea for 200 feet all around the ship. Little cakes of ice tinkled along the sides and hissed crisply at the shearing stem. Soft, dry flakes of snow fell increasingly; an hour after darkness set in the illuminated part of the sea was dancing with flurrying flakes as large as feathers. Through the hours of the first watch the old Gayhead sailed slowly on a wind, eating the windward but poorly in her light trim. The lookouts were relieved every hour, and Cap'n Jethro now and then took his glass aloft to scan the opaque wall of darkness for any sign of the boats.

"Thars one of 'em!" he bawled down near midnight, when a tiny speck of light suddenly bobbed out of the darkness in the northwest. "Bear away a mossel!" to the helmsman. "More yit—that's yew. Stiddy es she goes!"

In half an hour the big flare amidships crept over the motionless shape of Jed Roach's boat, lying moored to a dead whale.

"See anything of Eph?" the skipper roared when the ship rounded to beside the kill.

"Jest afore dark he wuz steamin' plumb intew a wall of ice as high as th' mainmast, towed by th' dumbdest whale I ever see at th' end of both tubs o' line," Jed Roach shouted back.

"'Bout how fur off is thet thar ice, Jed?" Jethro inquired anxiously.

"Yew 're right in th' broken bits of it now!"

"Startin' tew snow bad, too," muttered Jethro. He went aloft once more and stayed there so long that the whale was fast in the chain slings when he reached the deck again.

"Yew reckon tew look for Eph afore yew cut in?" Jed wanted to know.

"Wisht I knowed," returned Cap'n Jethro gloomily. "Yew kin see jest tew the end of the flare light frum aloft, and thet's with a glass, Jed. 'T is a purty bad night fer them old men tew be adrift; yit we might lose 'em fer good by carryin' on blind arter 'em. What d' yew fellers say?"

He glared around, not very hopefully, and every weathered old visage his gaze fell upon was turned to avoid him. The men who would have voted as one man against him when only the matter of ship's business was concerned balked at uttering an opinion when a boat's crew of shipments was the stake.

"We be wi' yew, Jethro," blurted Saul Rowe.

"Ain't yew got no more sense 'n tew 'spect a helpful answer from sech old barnacles?" exclaimed Slippy, the cook. "Yew be skipper, Jethro. Keep all on bein' skipper, an' tew hell wi' 'em."

"Yew shet up!" growled Amos, sticking a horny elbow into Slippy's belt. "Ef we respecks Jethro's jedgment, 't ain't tew say es we be bustin' tew hear yewr foghorn. Old Eph's out thar. 'T ain't no matter tew cackle about."

Jethro was gazing into the seemingly solid wall of snow. So dense was it now that the spars and sails of the old barque cast shadows against it on that side away from the flare. Fresh fuel had been thrown into the barrel, and the red glare formed a cavern of light in which the ship swam like some impish Argosy manned by flame touched Ancient Mariners. Slippy brought more oily scraps of splintered wood and Jed Roach shoved him over to the tryworks.

"Light up!" the second mate said shortly. He had only anticipated Jethro's order.

"Eph 'll hev a bigger chance o' seein' us ef we starts tew try out," the skipper said. "We couldn't see his lantern ten fadom away in this. Git all hands aft, Jed, an' give 'em a snort o' rum apiece, then start cuttin' in."

Through the night and into the dawn the old whalemen sliced and hauled, ripping the dripping blankets of blubber from the fat whale. All through the chill, lonesome hours Cap'n Jethro kept his post far up in the crow's nest, never ceasing to scan the pall of snow for sign of his old shipmate.

He never realized that he was cold. Hours had passed and he knew nothing of the passage. Somebody climbed to the barrel and called to him to get out and go to breakfast, and he was glad when the relieving lookout helped him drag his numbed old limbs over the edge of the barrel.

The snow was thicker than ever; thick as the make believe snow of the stage. Jethro found the cutting in finished; the vats head of the whale lay on deck, ready to give up its store of whalebone when the men had eaten.

"See anythin'?" Jed asked, concealing his own anxiety for old Eph under an apparent curtness.

"Only snow," returned Jethro sharply. He went to the cabin and made poor pretense of eating.

At 9 o'clock the carcass of the whale was cut adrift and there was a course to be set.

"Carry on tew windward o' course!" Jethro snapped in reply to Jed's question. "Wind hevn't changed, hev it?"

"No, but thar's ice, Jethro."

"Thar's old Eph,tew. Th' dum old loon, tew go kitin' right intew ice arter a blessed whale!"

After breakfast Jethro went aloft again, doubly wrapped against the cold. There was a swirl in the snow now; the old barque sailed faster as the wind rose; ice cakes piled at her stem and fell noisily. Just before noon, while gazing intently through his glass, Jethro saw the snow solidify. It came toward him like a wall. He took the glass from his eye and vigorously polished the lens. Then he rubbed his eyes and looked again. He felt the old Gayhead quiver as the ice thickened around her, then the truth flashed across his brain.

"Down hellum! Down hellum, Jed!" he yelled. "'Bout ship like light! We 're aboard o' th' ice!"

In ten seconds the decks were in confusion. Gear and canvas thrashed and thundered as the ship came up to the wind. Her lee yardarms scraped against some vaguely visible solid thing as they swung around.

"Haul yewr heads'ls over. Stick 'em out!" bellowed Jed. He leaped clumsily but with the certainty of experience to the spankersheet, the helmsman leaving the helm to lend a hand. From high up among the loftier spars great pieces of ice tumbled down. There was a rasping jar under the old hull as she scraped over a ledge. Then she paid off, out of disorder came orderliness and as suddenly as it had appeared the ice vanished, leaving nothing but a splintered yardarm and a ton of ice to prove that ice had ever existed there.

"Send a man aloft, Jed, and relieve him every hour," said Cap'n Jethro, wiping his forehead. "I never see that ice ontil we wuz on top of it. Yew want fresh sight up thar. Guess I been keepin' awake too long."

"Yew goin' tew run off?" Jed asked.

"Yew call me when we've run ten mile. That'll be sleep enough for me," Jethro returned. "Mebbe th' snow'll let up by thet time an' we kin git sight o' th' sea to th' no'th."

By mid-afternoon Cap'n Jethro was on deck again and the ship labored heavily against a blizzard driven on a screaming half gale.

"Git th' courses hauled up an' stow 'em, Jed," said Jethro after a brief glance at the weather.

"Main-clew-garnets!" bellowed Jed, and ran down to 'tend the main tack himself. Old men tumbled out from snug corners and faced the icy gale.

"Hey-hey-hey-hey-y-y-y!" they howled, and hauled the heavy clews up to the yards.

"Hey, hey, oh hey!" they screamed, and manned bunt lines and leach lines. The great sails crumpled up and rose in billowing folds to the tug of the lines, showering the men with icicles and snow.

"Aloft an' furl it!" roared Jed, and was first man in the rigging. Jethro held the deck; he took the helm, sending the sailor to help.

Out on the yard they swarmed, those ancient shellbacks.

"Start a tune!" shouted Jed. He took the heaviest place in the bunt. Amos started the one and only furling chanty:

"We'll heave, with a will,
An' we'll pay Paddy Doyle fer his boots.

There was a rousing response to that. It seemed as if every man on the yard had something on his mind he wished to forget, and put every pound of pressure his lungs held into the furling song.

"To my way-a-ay-ah!
We'll pay Paddy Doyle fer his boots!
We'll haul, an' we'll furl,
We'll pay Daddy Doyle fer his boots!"

When they had the ship snugged down, and she still drove against the blizzard, still held to the northward, fighting the bitterness of it when she might have turned and run from it in fair comfort, old graybeards mutttered against Jethro again.

"Eph's shorely gone afore now!" was the opinion of one old salt with a grievance. His tobacco was all wet. His bunk would have kept dry had the ship been running instead of beating.

Jed Roach came forward to tell Noel Pease he was promoted temporarily to keep old Eph's watch. Noel's bunk was dry. His tobacco was excellent. He was once more going to stand his watch on the poop, an officer.

"Yew give me a belly ache, yew do," he told the grumbler. "Time enough tew say Eph's gone when Cap'n Jethro sez so. Yew young squirts ain't got no guts no more, thet's th' trouble."

The young squirt was only sixty-two. Noel boasted of sixty-four winters. Difference enough.

Seas piled up green and icy as the old whaler thrashed north. She was too light for much heavy water to board her; but such seas as did top her bulwarks carried lumps of ice with them and made her decks a place of scant safety. The snowflakes had ceased to fall light and feathery. They were points of ice that came on the breath of a sixty-mile gale and stung bitterly. Lookouts at each masthead and far out on the jib boom were changed every hour. Cap'n Jethro paced the short poop restless as a caged bear. Every few minutes he would climb to one or other of the lookout stations; but his eyes were no more able to penetrate that wall of blank whiteness than those of the lookouts.

Twice the Gayhead smashed her way through heavy ice. She charged for a third time an invisible berg, breaking off her jib boom and hurling the lookout into the bitter sea.

"Hold yewr course! I see him!" bellowed Jethro, seeing Noel Pease motion to the helmsman. The shattered ice swept past; Jethro tumbled over the rail into the mizzen chains, hooked an arm about a chain plate, and was plunged beneath the ice strewn sea. But when he emerged, dragged by the old barque's next soaring heave, he held on like a pit bulldog to the half drowned lookout.

"Take him below an' warm him up," he ordered when they pulled him over the rail with his burden. He stood shivering, as if undecided. Jed Roach thought he saw signs of weakening; though a change of course must come

"Goin' tew run her off?" he asked.

"Yew hold on yewr course!" snapped Jethro. "'Tain't that es is botherin' me. I

AN EVENING IN A VIENNA CAFE

Another Entertaining Episode in the Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters

THE dreamy after-dinner hour in a Viennese cafe!

The sidewalk tables, festive awnings, and wicker chairs. Coffee, cordials, tall-glassed ices, and passing trays of pastry. The drone of foreign voices and the throbbing waltz from the orchestra within.

Entranced by the exotic charm of it all, Helen silently sipped her coffee, while Warren and Mr. Goldschmidt, a book collector, talked "first editions."

They had dined at the Imperial. A distinctive dinner of Austrian specialties and light Hungarian wine.

Afterward, a stroll along the tree-shadowed Opera Ring to this famous cafe, with its crowded outdoor tables.

Apparently, it was Mr. Goldschmidt's usual after-dinner rendezvous, for now a waiter called him in to the telephone.

"Dear, don't you love this?" glowed Helen, when they were alone. "You read so much about the Vienna cafes."

"That was a great dinner," Warren lit a fresh cigar. "What'd he call that sweet omelette? Salzburger nockeral, wasn't it? He tipped us off to some darn good dishes. Knows Vienna, all right. Used to live here."

"He's lived all over Europe, hasn't he? Speaks how many languages? Oh, dear, that poor old woman! Yes, do give her something."

From a bulging wallet he extricated two 5000 kronen notes, as the flower-woman gave Helen a bunch of violets.

"What're you doing tomorrow evening?" Mr. Goldschmidt returned from the telephone. "A friend just gave me this box at the Johann Strauss—a new light opera."

"Fine! Then you dine with us at the Bristol."

"We'd better make it supper afterward. All the operas start here at 6:30."

Vienna! A Viennese opera! A box at the Johann Strauss Theater! Helen fairly purred.

"How far is Prague from here?" demanded Warren abruptly. "Thought we'd run up there for the week-end."

"Why not Budapest?" Mr. Goldschmidt ground his cigarette in the ash-tray. "That's the place you want to see."

"Too far. I looked it up. Eight hours."

"That's by rail. Why not fly? Only two hours by plane."

"Fly?" Helen leaned forward breathless.

"Would you be afraid, Mrs. Curtis?" with the slight condescension of the book-worm bachelor toward all femininity.

"No, I'd love to! Dear, can't we?"

"Don't know about that. Got to close some important deals over here 'fore I take any chances."

"It's quite safe now. Three air lines here—Austrian, German and French. They all run a daily service. Safer than your New York traffic."

"That's not saying much," grinned Warren.

"Oh, dear, not after all that dinner!" restrained Helen, as the pastry woman paused at their table with her heaping tray.

"Long time since dinner," belligerently, choosing a nut-incrusted crescent. "Don't get a chance at Vienna pastry every day. Whole lot better'n French."

"No, no, none for me. Dear, if it's only two hours—we can't go back without seeing Budapest! We may never be here again. Oh, we will go, won't we?"

"Not so fast! I'll make no promises till I look into it." Then, dismissingly, "What about a Jensen's Plutarch? Any chance of digging up a copy here?"

"I'm afraid not. A fine copy in a nice old binding sold at Lugano last year for 7000 Swiss francs. There was one in Munich—"

As they rambled on about books, Helen again turned to her enthralled contemplation of the cafe and its patrons.

That man over there—what was he writing? A music score? The accommodating waiter had brought pen and ink. At another table, a studious-looking youth, sipping coffee and cognac, was correcting a bulky manuscript.

Many were reading. A rack just inside held the Continental newspapers and highly-colored comic weeklies clamped on long rods.

The Viennese came here not only for their coffee, but to spend the evening—to read, write letters, even to play chess.

Why was there nothing like this at home? Restful, leisurely, clublike cafes with good music, where one could linger all evening without being hurried on by a rapacious, table-wiping waiter.

"Oh, isn't he wonderful?" Helen made eager overtures to a haughty Russian greyhound, who followed his master inside.

"That's Count ——," Mr. Goldschmidt had bowed to him. "His family was one of the richest in Vienna before the war. Now he works in a weschelstube."

"By George, I remember him! Changed some money for me yesterday—that office below the Bristol. Nice fellow. Thought he was an Englishman."

"He went to Cambridge. We were in Trinity together. That's his cousin—with that girl in black. He's in one of the air-line offices. The hyoroplane."

"The hydroplane? That flies over the water, doesn't it?" thrilled Helen.

"Yes, if you go to Budapest—you can fly over the Danube all the way."

"Oh, that would be ideal! Must we engage passage in advance?"

"Yes, they're well booked up. Most of them small four-passenger planes."

"Oh, I'm wild to go! Dear, we will. Say we will!"

"I'll say nothing of the kind," shrugging her pleading hand from his arm. "And I've got it in for Goldschmidt for getting you all lit up."

"You Americans are way behind on flying," he laughed. "Everybody flies over here. You've no passenger planes in the States, have you?"

"Not yet. We can kill people fast enough by running over 'em."

"Very few accidents here—these pilots are experts. You really ought to see Budapest. Good hotel there, too—the 'Hungaria.' The best food in Europe."

"Now you know you'll go!" urged Helen, at this appeal to his gastronomic proclivities. "And only two hours! We'll never have a better chance for our first flight."

"Nothing doing," grimly. "You can't vamp me on that. Been traveling pretty fast. I want to rest up this week-end. No new stunts."

Then drawing out Helen's wrist watch, a tiny substitute for his own, temporarily out of commission—

"After 11! We'd better trot along. Which of these Johnnies served us?"

The very moderate bill was paid with a sheaf of notes, enough, in prewar value, to have bought the whole cafe.

A "gut nacht" to the bowing waiter, and they strolled down the moonlit Ring.

The fragrant night air, the prowling cabs, the shadowy side streets leading off to the dark unknown. The foreign spell of it all was strong upon Helen.

At the Bristol Mr. Goldschmidt left them, promising to come by tomorrow at 6. They would have a cup of chocolate before the opera and supper afterward.

Inside, while Warren paused at the desk for their key, hastily Helen scanned the rack of sight-seeing and travel leaflets.

Yes, there was one of an air line! "Wien-Budapest."

"What've you got there?" demanded Warren, as they entered the lift.

"An airplane circular. Tells all about it. This one is only an hour and forty minutes in the air! Five hundred thousand kronen—how much is that?"

"'Bout $7. Cheap enough," out of the elevator, he strode briskly down the hall.

"Why, it's nothing! And the office is on the Karntner Ring—just below here," running after him. "Dear, the first thing in the morning—we'll get the tickets."

"How d'you work this blamed thing?" struggling with the heavy door.

"They leave at 10 and 3," intent on the circular by the dim hall light. "We'll go Saturday morning and come back—"

"Now I'm not keen on risking my neck just to give you a thrill! Here, hold this!" The lock still obdurate, he thrust at her his cane.

"Dear, you put the key in too far—let me try."

"These confounded locks—heavy enough for a vault. There!" as he flung wide the double doors.

The moonlight from the long Franch windows flooded the great paneled room.

"Look, dear, how wonderful in this light! It's like a dream! All Vienna seems dreamlike tonight. The dinner and sitting out in that cafe and—"

"Corking dinner!" touching the wall button that switched on the chandeliers. "That Salzburger nockeral was great. Have that again. He says the Sacher's a good restaurant. We'll lunch there tomorrow. I bank on his tips 'bout food."

"Then why not about Budapest? He said we shouldn't miss it. And we're so near—"

"Button loose," ripping off his coat. "Top one."

"I'll fix it in the morning. We can go by airplane and come back by hydroplane—over the Danube all the way. Dear, think what a glorious experience!"

"Where're my slippers? That darn maid puts 'em in a different place every day. Room's so big—got to walk a mile to find anything."

"I'll look—in just a moment," unclasping her antique garnets. "And if they've a daily service—it must be safe. Here're your slippers."

"How 'bout the plane that fell while we were in Paris? Papers full of it."

"That wasn't Vienna to Budapest?" slipping off her gown over her head.

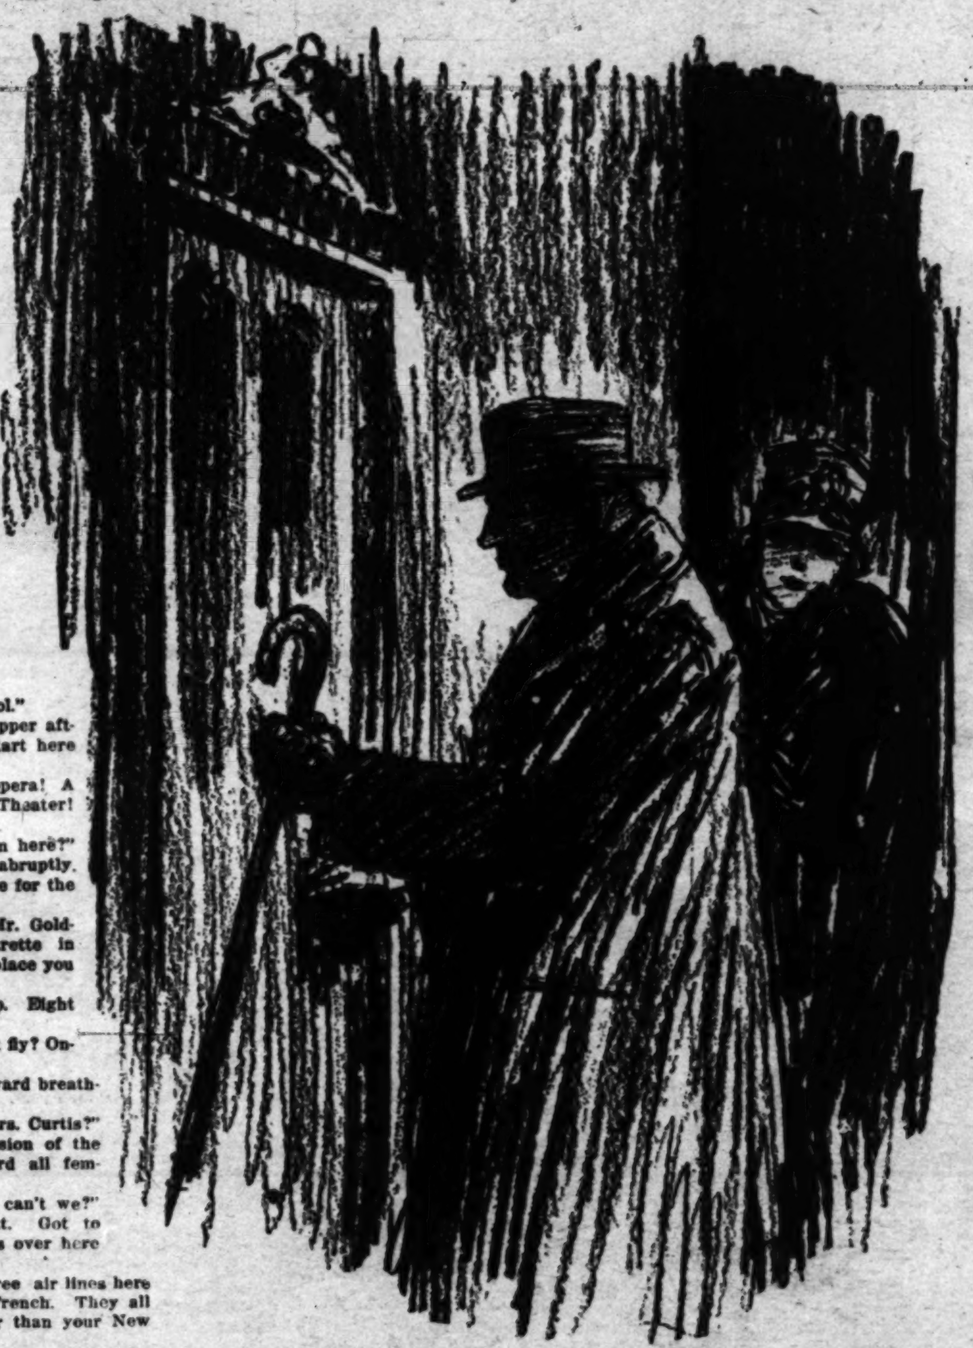
"Might've been. Now stop harping on it! How d'you wind this dinky thing?" taking her watch from his pocket. "Now you get mine fixed tomorrow."

"I'll put it in my purse now. Wait, I'll wind that. Dear, you always say the things you regret are not what you do—but what you don't do. And now to miss this trip to Budapest! When it's only two hours—and only $7. Why at Atlantic City, just to go up for a few miles, they charge twenty!"

"For the love of Lulu, change that record! Once you start on a thing you keep it up till the cows come home. Drop it, I tell you," girdling on his bathrobe. "I'm not taking any chances in the clouds. Not till I know a lot more about it—or sprout wings. Seven dollars!" with a snort. "That cut rate clinched it with you."

Then, as he stalked belligerently across the huge room to the bath.

"Now that's a bargain you'll have to pass up. We're not going to break our necks—just 'cause we can do it on the cheap!"



"How d'you work this blamed thing?" struggling with the heavy door.

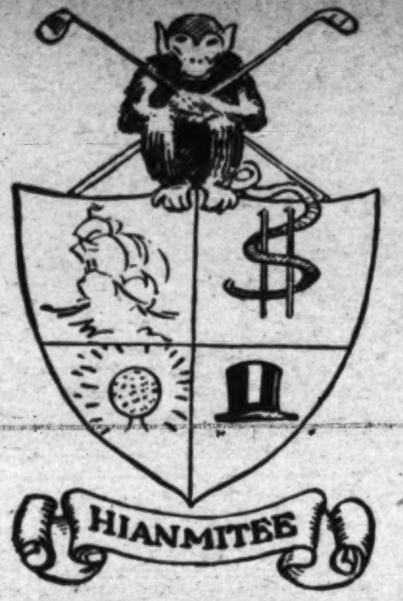
GOLFSMITH'S DESERTED VILLAGE

BY BARRIE PAYNE



His pedigree must show an unbroken record of gentlemanly conduct, free from moral strain, from the applicant clear back to the monkeys.

THE LOCATION of the club in question doesn't matter. Suffice it to say that I stumbled on it by accident while making a motor tour. It was the condition of the course that first aroused my curiosity. An ideal natural layout, with little need for artificial hazards, but covered with weeds four feet high! When I saw the palatial clubhouse the mystery increased. The building was the length of three city blocks and the cheapest material in the whole structure was marble! But the whole place seemed deserted, except for a caretaker. I called the man out and questioned him.

"This is the Hianmitee Country Club," he explained. "It's the most exclusive golf club in the world. Piping Rock is a municipal course compared to this."

"Who plays here?" I asked.

"Nobody. It's too exclusive!"

"Whom does it exclude?"

"Everybody."

"You mean—?"

"Listen. The twelve men who first organized the Hianmitee Club were leading figures in the social life of America. They planned to make it an upstage and Ritsy-nth-power-super-exclusive outfit. A coat-of-arms-on-silver organization and I don't mean 'the family Kress.' The qualifications for membership would make your hair curl into a permanent wave. 'The applicant must be worth a hundred millions. He must be from a First Family. He must furnish proof that his ancestors were first-cabin passengers on the Mayflower. His name must appear on the first page of the Social Register in large red type. His pedigree must show an unbroken record of gentlemanly conduct, free from moral stain, from the applicant clear to the monkeys. And proof must be given that the said ancestors were monkeys, of the very highest type.' And so forth. The idea was to limit the membership to 100."

"Where did they find the hundred?"

"They didn't. Nobody could pass the test. At the end of a year's time the membership still consisted of the original twelve. A little later the roster had dwindled to ten. Reginald De Puyster III and Montmorency K. Jackson-Jackson-Jackson had been eliminated. It came out that Reggie's great uncle had once run for Congress, and Monty's cousin had sung (though the critics said not) in vaudeville.

"Other scandals came to light as time went on and one by one the membership dwindled. Well, to make a long story less boresome, the club finally reached the point where it had a large and flourishing membership named Cornelius J. Rockerstall. Being the only member he was naturally the president of the club. It was a pitiful sight to see the old boy playing alone, trying to defeat himself in the final round of the club championship, and yelling 'Fore' for no reason in particular."

"And what became of him? He doesn't play here now, and—"

"No. In looking through some old documents he discovered that his distant cousin, Pauline De Razzle-Tazzle, had once eloped with a garbage man. Being a conscientious man, he felt it his duty to kick himself out of the club. So Cornelius J., member, submitted the case to the membership committee consisting of Cornelius J., and by the unanimous vote of Cornelius J. decided to ask for the resignation of Cornelius J. Accordingly, Cornelius J., president, wrote a letter to himself demanding his own resignation, with the postscript, 'I hope this will cause no hard feeling between us,' and the next day Cornelius J. resigned."

The Antigolfer

EMERGENCY hints on "What to Do Till Payne's Golf Articles Come" having been requested by a trillion or so readers, I offer this suggestion: Read the other side of the argument occasionally. Yeah, the antigolf side. Even an antigolfer is entitled to his own wrong opinion. No law is in effect forbidding him to be wrong, so let him go it. It might not be amiss to print here a few samples of the chatter handed out by those who scorn golf. Then maybe you can tell me how they get that way.

"A golfer looks like a polo player that has lost his horse."

"Croquet is a better game because you don't have to walk a mile between strokes. The only reason the average American prefers golf is because it affords him a better opportunity to throw his money away."

"Too much walking to make a good game and just enough game to spoil a good walk." (This was a good line the first ten years they used it.)

"A golf course is a colorful place—the green grass, the black looks, the blue air, the dark brown taste, the yellow sand, etc."

"I won't flatter it by calling it an old man's game. It's an old woman's game."

"If you MUST spend your time digging holes in the earth, why not join a construction gang and get paid for it?"

"A golfer spends half an hour waiting for a train, one hour on the train, two hours waiting for the first tee, three hours of actual play, another half hour waiting for the train, another on the train, loses $20, spends ten and thinks he's had a whale of a fine time. Golfers seem to be past masters at the art of self-kidding."

"They pay $400 a year for the privilege of knocking a chunk of rubber into a tin can with a lopsided stick."

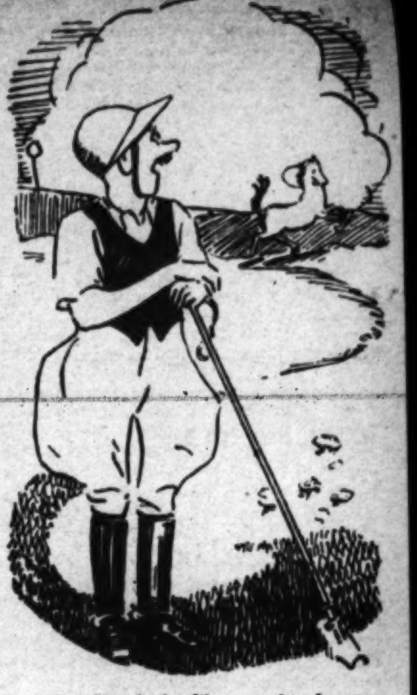
"No, thanks. I'll do my hiking on the roads and save my money."

"I'll take tennis for mine. It looks like bad sportsmanship to hit a ball when it's sitting still—like hitting a mother rabbit on her nest."

"No golf for me. I've bought a second-hand automobile and I need all my profanity for that."

"It takes ten years to learn it—and life's too short. Each stroke subtracted from your score costs you a year's time and a thousand dollars."

"Thanks. I think I'll stick to some game where you don't have to buy three counties and a township to play it."



A golfer looks like a polo player that's lost his horse.

"No. I have enough troubles with my wife as it is, without trying to sneak away to a golf course every Sunday."

"Why should I go to a golf course and hire a caddy to laugh at me when I can stay at home and have my wife do it free of charge?"

"I hate a game where you have to keep silent. I'd rather attend a nice lively funeral."

"If I leave off golf and do my drinking at home I won't have to give away three quarts out of every gallon. That's the way I figure it."

"The average modern golf club distributes its funds in a foolish way, it seems to me. It spends a hundred thousand or more on the course and a million on the clubhouse—and you can't play golf in the clubhouse."

"It's a game played by rich men—and by poor men who were rich when they took it up."

I-D-E-A-S

By NORBERT SAVAY

THE dawn of ideas is coincident with the dawn of reason.

When Adam and Eve clothed themselves with fig leaves, that was the dawn of reason and of ideas.

Since then man has ransacked the earth, raked the sky, and ravaged the sea, pursued by the relentless force of the Idea.

Our mighty civilization of today stands a collossal monument to ideas.

We have outstripped the falcon in his flight, outdone the whale in his submarine stratagems. We have turned the whole earth into a living museum which exhibits the progress and growth of ideas.

Were we to pause to consider what mankind would be today but for ideas, only one conclusion could be reached: mankind would be a horde of naked savages, preying on one another, destroying one another, and forever sinking into lower depths of degradation.

We need no stretch of the imagination and no mental effort whatsoever to realize the importance of ideas.

Just consider—look about you. Observe, see. Review history and wonder.

And then ask yourself: How much have I contributed to the upbuilding of the mighty edifice that forms our civilization?

FOR everyone is under obligation to contribute something. Just as everyone must pay some tax for the upkeep and maintenance of roads, of local and federal governments, for protection of health, life and property.

It is not being a brilliant figure intellectually, nor in keeping your name in the public eye which renders you a contributor to this marvelous cause, this carrying on the work of the world for the world's betterment.

What is it, then?

Ideas. That is the most desired contribution.

How can I contribute what I do not possess, you may ask?

Why, the very fact that you are alive, able to read this, shows that you have at least a rudimentary intelligence which can harbor ideas.

Ideas are everywhere about you. Go forth and get them. Take from the raw material at hand and work it over into something which shall fairly represent you.

The air is surcharged with ideas. The universe teems with them. You cannot escape the impact of them on your faculties.

Ideas mean fame, love, fortune, life. The lack of them spells poverty, starvation, misery, death.

No matter how small, how insignificant it may seem, each idea has some part to play in moving the world and keeping it in motion.

• • •

A NOVELTY in advertising, a new way of presenting an old idea, a clever touch added to a stale device, a subtle way of conveying a compliment to a friend, all these stand for something . . . an idea,

And a good idea is bound to pay.

Success is due to ideas. Nine-tenths of failure is caused by mental sterility—the absence of ideas.

Get busy. Think.

You don't have to be a Christopher Columbus, a Marconi, an Edison, to have ideas. Your idea need not be big in order to be profitable. Ford is the richest man in the world today because he had the idea that it is better to make innumerable small profits than a limited number of large ones. So he sold his cars by the tens of thousands when the other fellow was only selling his car by hundreds.

But ideas do not drop like manna from the sky. You have to hunt for them. You have to observe, to study, but above all to think, think and think . . . and then think!

It is only by perpetually thinking about a subject that one gets ideas on it.

By this incessant contemplation of a thing something gets into the back of the head and sticks there. You have to pull it out, and the way to pull it out is to think about it actively. And then, when you least look for it, something snaps, and lo! an idea is born! Your own! Something to be cherished and nourished by you, and that may perpetuate your name worthily.

Try it. You will find it pays you well!

Sudden Money

The Jenks family had worked hard all their lives. After oil had been struck on their land, they hardly knew how to spend the large amount of money that came to them. The father and sons got together to plan a surprise for mother's birthday.

One thing after another was suggested, but nothing good enough for mother could be found. At last they bought mother a new ax "so's it'll be easier for her to cut the wood."—[Everybody's Magazine.

Little Brown Feet

Little brown feet that are Everyman's joy,
Treading the footsteps of Everyman's boy,
Guiding a soul on its frail little way,
Nestled by Faith at the close of the day.

Little brown feet they dally and dart,
Poised on the doorstep of Everyman's heart;
Dimpled and lowly, wooing our trust,
Little brown feet kiss the velvety dust.

Little brown feet, the journey is far,
Life's sunny portal is only ajar.
As you go drifting down Everyman's street,
Follow God's finger, little brown feet.

PUZZLING PARTNERSHIPS

Five boys, whom we will designate as A, B, C, D and E went fishing, and entered into certain agreements regarding the division of the spoils. B, C and D agreed to pool their catches and each take one-third. A and E formed a partnership to divide their fish equally.

Now, at the end of the day's sport, they compared catches and found that A and B together had caught 14 fish; B and C together 20; C and D together 18 and D and E twelve. Then came the division, as originally agreed upon, which peculiarly enough gave each of the five boys the same number of fish.

From the facts given who can tell how many fish each of the boys caught?

BARGAIN HUNTING

Here is a problem that illustrates the feminine instinct for shopping. Mrs. Bargainhunter purchased $1.30 worth of plates at the great china sale on Saturday, when 2 cents was marked off from each article. Then she returned them on Monday at regular prices, exchanging them for cups and saucers, one plate being worth a cup and saucer, so she got sixteen more articles; but as saucers were worth only 3 cents, she took ten more saucers than cups.

Who can tell how many cups she could have bought for her money on Saturday?

IN NEW ENGLAND

Each of the sentences following contains the name of a Connecticut town:

We would be the last to rise, though first at table.

We will see Caleb anon, if not sooner.

With neither friends nor folk he was a lonely soul.

Will you have lady fingers or angel cake with your tea?

A CHARADE

My first is four-sixths of a step that is long,
My second a person of state;
My whole is a thing that we know to be wrong,
As showing a symptom of hate.

AN OLD ROMAN

Take a month of the year, add a pointed tool, subtract a ship's jolly-boat, add an uncivilized person, subtract a barrier, subtract another barrier, and the resulting letters will spell the name of the Roman Emperor called The Apostate.

ANSWERS TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLES

"GRANDFATHER'S AGE"

Grandfather must have 12 upper and 7 lower teeth. Such combinations as 2 and 42, or 4 and 21, which multiplied together, produce 84, are of course out of the question, since the full compliment of teeth allows but 16 teeth to either jaw. Six and 14, multiplied, produce 84, but this combination is barred out because the old man has plainly lost 2 upper teeth and several lower teeth, so that he could not have had 14 in either jaw.

"MONEY FROM UNCLE"

John's age was 49 and 5-6 months; James's 26 and 5-6 months and Joshua's 23 and 5-6 months.

"NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS"

If at first you don't succeed try some other way.

Trapper Drives Wolf Team

A trapper of Northern Ontario, Canada, Joe La Flamme, recently succeeded in what is said to be the first attempt to tame and harness a team of timber wolves, according to Popular Science Monthly. He obtained the two wolves when they were young, raised them carefully, and at last tried them out, at first securely muzzled.

After several trials he removed the muzzles, and the wolves, sensing freedom, bit fiercely at the harness in order to break away. But La Flamme, anticipating this, had substituted chains for leather, and after ineffectual biting, they submitted.

Radio "Gyps" Reap Rich Harvest

"MAYBE you've noticed that there aren't as many radio stores as there used to be. Do you know why? It isn't that public interest in radio is dying. Far from it! The number of fans is increasing every day. But the gyps—the cheaters—who jumped into radio on a 'fly-by-night' basis when broadcasting began and reaped a golden harvest for a couple of years selling bad parts and sets for good money—they're beginning to close up shop.

"The public is getting radio-wise, and the high-class musical instrument stores and electrical shops have come into the industry with real business methods and are taking the trade away from the gyps fast," writes Newton Burke, reporting the confessions of a radio gyp in Popular Science Monthly.

"One of our best tricks was to make up some piece of junky apparatus, put it in a good box with a pretty wrapper, and then label it 'patent pending,' or 'patent applied for.' We'd invariably sell thousands of such articles whether they had any place in a radio set or not. As soon as a manufacturer offered a new device, we'd copy it in cheap materials. We were able for a few cents. Our 'beautiful mahogany cabinets' were stained pine. Our 'hard rubber' panels were 'mud'—cheap powder molded in a form. Instead of aluminum we used tin or lead. We wound our coils on cardboard and called them 'Genuine bakelite.' And the fans thought we were public benefactors because of our prices!

"One thing that has hurt the gyp stores is the number of broadcasting stations installed in the big cities. Receivers made by gyp manufacturers are never strong on selectivity, and, if two or three local stations happened to be on the air at once when the customer was getting a demonstration, it would be impossible to sell him the set. Then along came somebody with the wavetrap idea. It didn't take us long to see that wavetraps were what we needed to sell our bad receivers. So when giving a demonstration, we'd hook a wavetrap up in the aerial where the customer couldn't see it, and let a clerk operate it while another clerk was demonstrating the set.

"Then, if the customer came back to complain that his set wouldn't work as well at his home as it did in the store, we'd blame it on the location he was in—and sell him a wavetrap. A good wave-trap was an efficient device, but the imitations that the gyps put out destroyed public confidence in it, and now you seldom see one.

"Radio sets are the big sellers now. But many a patented set has been sold over a gyp counter that never saw the factory of the company whose name and serial number is carried."

Too Sharp

PRESIDENT JULIUS H. BARNES of the United States Chamber of Commerce said at a dinner in New York:

"I am for commercial honor. Some day commercial honor will be as high and pure as any other kind. Then there will be no such contretemps as befell the new-rich profiteer.

"A new-rich profiteer was playing bridge in a charity tournament. His partner, a bishop's wife, left the call to him, and he made it diamonds; but when he laid his hand down it contained only two diamonds, both low cards.

"'Why in the world,' said the bishop's wife, 'did you go diamonds on such a hand as that?'

"'I thought I seen you twiddle your diamond ring, ma'am,' explained the profiteer."

"The people who oppose preparedness—the people who say that, if an unprepared nation were attacked, a million armed men would spring up in a night—well, those people remind me of Uncle Cornelius Husk.

"Uncle Corn Husk refused to insure his barn. For seventeen years he was adamant to the insurance agents' pleas. Then one night smoke and flame were to be seen gushing up from the barn into the black sky, and Uncle Corn Husk was to be seen galloping down Main street and yelling at the top of his lungs:

"'Where's that insurance feller? Consarn his buttons, you can never find that insurance feller when you want him.'"

"'That means, Burleigh, that a war correspondent must always say he was on the spot, whether he was or not.'"

POLICE COMMISSIONER ENRIGHT of New York was praising the skill of a recently captured criminal.

"A young lady met a young gentleman informally at Coney Island, and they took a bath and a long walk on the beach, and then they sat down on the white, clean sand.

"The spot was a lonely one, and the young gentleman began to talk of love. He drew nearer and nearer. Finally he reached out his arm to clasp the young lady's waist.

"But she drew back sharply, and at the same time she took a pair of long white cotton gloves, soiled as with much usage, from her handbag.

"A spendthrift? One who spends more than we do. A miser? One who saves more.

"EDUCATION is an ever-present problem," declared Dr. J. G. Semple at a recent lecture, "and there is a continual cry for reversion to the so-called old-fashioned methods with the three R's as the basic elements. The claim is advanced that in this age of specialism our curricula are too general.

"The greatest educators are divided on the point and one can easily sympathize with little Johnny of the fourth grade when he asked:

She Couldn't Marry Both of Them, So She Proposed a Wager Concerning the Delivery of an Evening Gown to Decide It

THE BREEZE came directly from off the shore and was freshening. The heavy Indian waters were beginning to heave somewhat lazily, and each time that the wrecked plane rose with the swell and dropped downward into another oily trough it slid slightly farther from the land. To the east there were occasional suggestions of whitecaps and no sign of navigation—not even smoke.

It wasn't altogether a pleasant situation for the plane's three occupants, especially since one of them was a woman. But unusual situations were not new to any of them. Each had been bred in—and reared of—a school where things happened; and each was the product of an environment where, in times of difficulty, the natural human emotions were carefully locked away in the family closet.

George Crumlie and Converse Wyle were Englishmen. They had been schoolhouse and Sandhurst mates and had one trait in common with most Englishmen of the better class that is frequently misunderstood by their racial cousin across the Atlantic. He supposes them to be taciturn animals; and so they are, except where any crisis is concerned that invites a display of their real feelings. In that case they can, when necessary, hide behind a conversational camouflage that is as voluble as any Latin's. The real difference lies in the fact that the Latin bares, while the Englishman conceals.

The woman, Jane Morton, was an American, the companion of a father whose life had been spent among the best of the dwellers of the "out-of-the-way" places, and with the versatility of her race she had made the best of their qualities hers. So she was really a cosmopolite, with a background of inherited character.

Crumlie found a precarious footing at the highest point of the inclined wing and examined the radius of the landscape within his vision. Then he worked his way back to the motor and again went over every part of it. When he finally stood erect and scratched his head, he was covered with grime and perspiration.

"I assume you are ready to announce you have now fixed this thing, and we will arise and soar upon our way," said Converse gently.

George smiled ruefully. "In the words of the Evening Post," he said, " 'we think the time has come when a committee should be appointed to take drastic action.' And when I say 'we' I don't speak editorially. Converse, you have a drawing-room reputation as a rough and ready wit. Can't you suggest something to relieve this painful pause? I have never heard of your being at a loss before."

But Converse was engaged in drying some damp cigarets, which he had spread, like soldiers, in orderly array along the lower canvas, and he seemed entirely concerned with restoring his line, as the motion of the plane caused them to roll about.

"I offered my suggestion this morning," he said indifferently, "but you were too busy parking the eats and the cold wets to pay any attention. When we tuned up at Calcutta your motor was sputtering like some old angry tabby cat. Now it's stopped sputtering, but that hasn't helped the peace and quiet. You've taken up the job right where it left off."

George grinned again—sheepishly. "I don't understand," he said. "Those spark plugs are as clean as a hound's tooth. Everything is in place and perfectly hooked up, and the petrol has been tested. Have either of you any idea how far we are from the line of the Chittagong boats? No other shipping would come anywhere near this far inland."

"Did you say boats?" asked Jane. "Why flatter it with a plural? My experience with the Chittagong boat doesn't lead me to feel that this 'island of unrest' is any good place on which to wait for it. I've starved and perished from exhaustion while waiting for it in a perfectly good waiting-room. Has it occurred to you two amateur aviators that we are rapidly becoming old sea dogs? While you are settling your private differences we are bound oceanward, and neither of you has remembered to reserve me the proper accommodations. I can't even go steerage. I believe that if we adjourned this stormy meeting and started right now, I, for one, might be able to swim ashore. That may be a bleak and barren coast yonder, but it is beginning to look to me like a picture of 'The Cotter's Saturday Night.' "

George considered the distance to the shore narrowly. Then he looked out to sea, where the whitecaps were becoming increasingly active.

"All right," he said. "Suppose we start now." Then he turned to Jane quietly. "It's a good bit of a swim," he added, "and I'm going to peel off well down to my skin. I suggest you do the same."

Their preparations were made in as much seclusion as possible, which was probably why they didn't realize that Converse continued to sit quietly in his place, fooling with his precious cigarets. It was not until they were ready to start that they noticed him.

"What's the matter with you?" asked George. "Aren't you coming?"

"No," he replied calmly. "This isn't my hour for a bath. This is my usual lunch time, and I'm going to explore that basket you were so fussy about. I won't go now, but when you arrive just ask anybody you find about to come out for me, will you? I'll be waiting around."

George suddenly sensed the situation. "How far can you swim?" he asked.

"The question isn't relevant," returned Converse indifferently. "If it were I should answer it; but I'm not going in swimming now. I'm comfortable where I am. I suggest that you start without further loss of time." He grinned at Jane. "If I could achieve your national nasal twang I should say, 'Give my regards to Broadway.' As it is—"

George interrupted him with an impatient upraised hand. "Can you swim half way?" he demanded. "It's only a mile."

"I never have, but I probably could in a pinch."

"All right, this is a pinch. You may not be going in swimming, but you are going to be thrown in swimming. Now get off your clothes, if you don't want to feel very wet."

The first half mile was achieved easily, steadily. They breasted the swells side by side, and Converse was beginning to congratulate himself when all of his motive power suddenly left him. His face became gray and his breath came in great gasps. George, swimming just a little ahead, immediately saw his distress and came alongside.

"Put your hand on my shoulder and take a cat nap," he said, matter of factly. "Just keep one eye open and kick a leg or an arm occasionally."

For the next quarter mile their progress continued, at a slower pace but steadily. Then George's endurance gave way.

"Jane," he called, "hold Converse up a minute. I will relieve you then."

Converse looked at them both appraisingly. "No you don't," he said, and sank suddenly. George anxiously watched the surface until he had, perforce, reappeared. Then he grabbed him by the hair and pounded his head.

"You fool," he yelled, "I know how to rest in the water." He beat him until his face was black from exhaustion, and Converse finally became docile—uninterested; and when George guided his hand to Jane's shoulder he let it rest there naturally.

George turned over on his back and practically floated, and as his stentorian breathing ceased he gradually regained his strength. When he swam over and relieved Jane, who had forced her will to take her far beyond her ordinary physical endurance, Converse was completely waterlogged and unconscious.

The last quarter mile was a nightmare, but they made it, because they were what they were, and it was a half dead pair that hauled Converse up on to the bleak, untenanted beach.

"Another giddy triangle, with all the frills gone," gasped Jane, as she leaned, panting, against a big bare rock with the sunlight flooding it. Her one pitiful little bit of body covering, a silken undergarment, was dripping wet and clung to her and glistened in the brilliant light rays. The picture she made bore no cubist earmarks.

George Crumlie, clothed in B.V.D.'s, quite as exhausted, looked up at her from the warm sand with distinct approval. Converse—party of the third part—was still lying, full length, eyes closed, and with no more apparent motion than if dead.

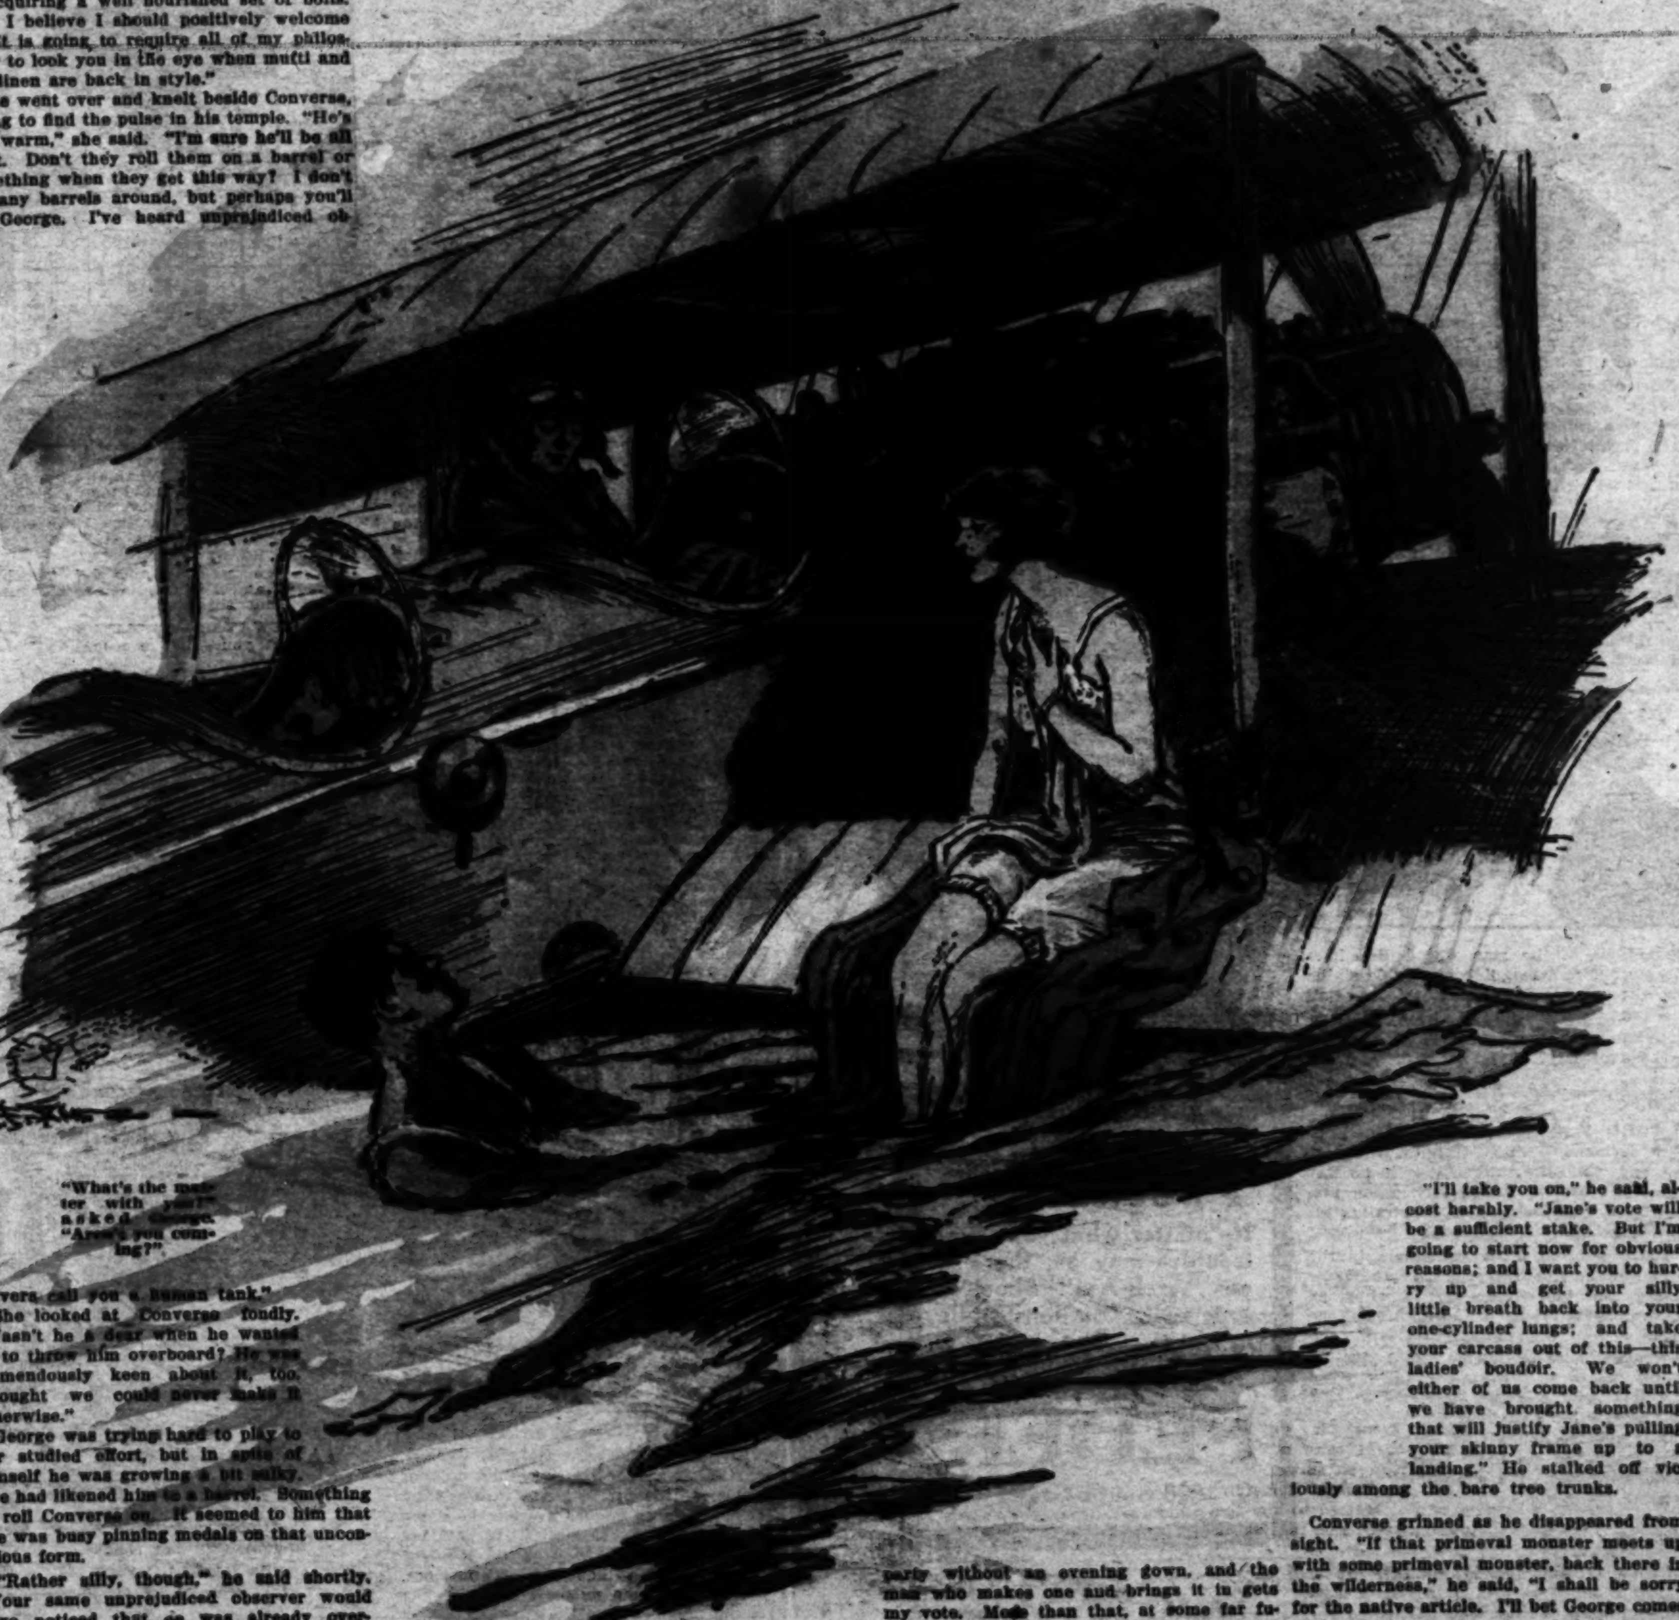
It occurred to George that it was much like Jane to make the first gamy attack on the situation. "What a wonder you are," he muttered, half to himself, with admiration growing and glowing in his eyes. Her blush emphasized the sunlight.

"Please look the other way when you hand out compliments," she returned. Then added sharply, "and keep on looking the other way even when you don't."

She was beginning to feel weepy and was trying hard to deny that indulgence. She almost never wept, except when attending a matinee for that blissful, specific purpose. She sought control through persiflage.

"I hadn't supposed I could ever wish to be blasted with the curse of Esau," she complained. "I recall that in my Sunday-school days it seemed a much more dreadful punishment than being swallowed by whales, or acquiring a well nourished set of boils. Now I believe I should positively welcome it. It is going to require all of my philosophy to look you in the eye when mufti and fine linen are back in style."

She went over and knelt beside Converse, trying to find the pulse in his temple. "He's still warm," she said. "I'm sure he'll be all right. Don't they roll them on a barrel or something when they get this way? I don't see any barrels around, but perhaps you'll do, George. I've heard unprejudiced observers call you a human tank."



"What's the matter with you?" asked George. "Aren't you coming?"

She looked at Converse fondly. "Wasn't he a dear when he wanted us to throw him overboard? He was tremendously keen about it, too. Thought we could never make it otherwise."

George was trying hard to play to her studied effort, but in spite of himself he was growing a bit sulky. She had likened him to a barrel. Something to roll Converse on. It seemed to him that she was busy pinning medals on that unconscious form.

"Rather silly, though," he said shortly. "Your same unprejudiced observer would have noticed that he was already overboard."

Jane smiled. "Perhaps in these barren wastes it may be my good fortune to discover an illiteral Englishman. Then I shall occupy a proper place in the halls of fame—next door to Columbus. Have you noticed that Converse still has his glasses. We might use the lenses to start a fire, like in 'Wings of the Morning.' "

But George was still unappeased. "I'll bet they wouldn't work," he said. "They'll be too mild. Everything about him is too mild. Mildness is Converse's distinct outstanding, all pervading feature. He oozes mildness."

"You're a big liar," came startlingly from the still form on the sands. "You're a big, ugly, wooden-headed, barrel-shaped, hairy liar."

Converse's eyes were opened now, but he remained entirely motionless. "I've never claimed to be a deep-sea animal," he went on calmly. "I don't even eat fish. But if you'll give me an hour to get my breath I'll bet you my last pound I can beat you doing anything you name—here on shore."

Jane took him up promptly. "You're on," she said, "I will arrange a match. I want an evening gown. I'm not coming to your party without an evening gown, and the man who makes one and brings it in gets my vote. More than that, at some far future date I shall insist that my husband and my children—thank him."

George looked about him doubtfully. "That's quite a sporting proposition," he said. "About the only things in evidence are Cashew nuts and dried sticklac. They eat the nuts, when they are fresh, and use the lac to make canned music. Those little round discs with the red centers, you know, that register 'His master's voice.' You buy the accessories in Regent street for 10s down and 2s 6 per week as long as you live. I'll bet you didn't even know that," he added belligerently.

He continued to examine the prospect. "The green has all died out of the foliage," he mused. "It's so brittle it crumbles in your hand." Then he turned to Jane. "I'm sorry I let you in for this mess. I have evidently been careless somewhere along the line. If that other sample of inadequacy would just lay off of me for a few moments I could offer a more gracious apology."

Then he pointed abruptly at Converse.

"I'll take you on," he said, almost harshly. "Jane's vote will be a sufficient stake. But I'm going to start now for obvious reasons; and I want you to hurry up and get your silly little breath back into your one-cylinder lungs; and take your carcass out of this—this ladies' boudoir. We won't either of us come back until we have brought something that will justify Jane's pulling your skinny frame up to a landing." He stalked off viciously among the bare tree trunks.

Converse grinned as he disappeared from sight. "If that primeval monster meets up with some primeval monster, back there in the wilderness," he said, "I shall be sorry for the native article. I'll bet George comes back with its petticoat and jacket, even though he has to leave it dead upon the field. Anyway, I outsat him this time, and that's some stunt, wherever you are concerned."

Jane sighed. "It's been a rather unusual experience," she said. "I think I'll write a story about it, and use other names."

"Don't do it," advised Converse promptly. "It's the finest way I know about to pulverize backbone. If there's any other disease more malignant than printer's ink, I haven't observed it; and certainly no other is as weakening. I've met up with lots of chaps who try to tell tales, and most of them were strong, healthy-minded specimens in their salad days. They are elated and exalted throughout the period of construction. Then they stuff their manuscript into a self-addressed envelope bearing an uncanceled, ill-afforded stamp, send it to some hard-boiled editor, and settle down into mere hopeful atoms, feverishly watching the mails. When are you going to fall in love with me, Jane?"

"When India has annexed the Fiji Islands and the Irish have lost their love of fighting," she returned promptly. "Besides, I recall that you proposed a wager—and were accepted. I think that you should at least go to the post, even though you stop to bite the fence in the home stretch."

Converse got to his feet. "All right," he said, still good-naturedly. "I suppose you understand I am still somewhat windbroken, and to that extent somewhat handicapped. But I don't crib, and when I come through the stretch I shall have my ears pinned back and lard in my hair." He smiled somewhat ruefully. "I shall be glorious, even in defeat, Jane," he said, and struck off inland.

Jane, buried—unostrich like—all but her head in the sand, was thinking of the two men who had gone their separate ways, each on the same mission. It occurred to her that while they were utterly different types, they were much alike in the essentials.

To a young, personable unmarried girl, India—even the India of the British barracks—was a difficult place in which to avoid the accession of a hardening cynicism. Jane realized this, and clung desperately to the best of all the heritages of girlhood—the natural, unlived girlish enthusiasms. In this effort Crumlie and Wyle each offered their help and sympathy with a shy chivalry that both strove to conceal.

Converse understood, and fitted in with her infinite variety of moods with all of the delicacy and clean-mindedness of a woman. On their frequent excursions together he arranged for her comfort of mind and body with exquisite tact. On the other hand, George never seemed to sense the necessity for anticipating inconveniences. So far as he was concerned personally, he wouldn't have recognized even a lively hardship as something to be sidestepped. He took things as he found them, without the slightest whine of complaint. But she recalled that on a certain occasion she had found herself in an embarrassing, uncomfortable situation and for reasons that she was unable to explain even to herself she had not gone to her father, or to Converse, but had taken her perplexity to George, and he had tackled that condition with everything he had—bluntly, perhaps, but effectively, and with no thought of self; and when he had finished, he had put people and things in their proper places, and had carved a road for her guidance that was straight, and white, and clear. Jane thought it might be rather exhilarating to call a person of that sort "her man."

She smiled commiseratingly to herself. "I sometimes wonder if I have not somewhere acquired the instincts of a male Mormon," she mused. "I should like to marry both of them."

Converse, with that sureness of instinct that actuated all his movements, immediately looked about for some height from which to study the country roundabout. It occurred to him instantly that his first effort should be along the line of finding help rather than attempting to carve comfort out of that wilderness.

He noted that the land sloped upward, to the north, and that some mile and a half away in that direction was a distinct eminence covered with a greener, more luxuriant growth. At this point the land swerved inward sharply, and then out again, forming a natural little harbor; and his keen perception indicated that if life was to be found in this immediate neighborhood it would be here.

He worked his way wearily toward it. He was very tired, and each step was an effort. The sun blistered his arms and neck, and the heat held that quality of shimmering quiveriness that was making him dizzy. And added to his physical discomfort was a keen sense of personal loss; the loss of hope in the only real desire that life had so far held out to him. It was nothing tangible. Nothing definable. It was simply the acute working of subconsciousness in a soul attuned.

He had proceeded probably a mile in the direction of this eminence when he discovered a well defined path, and followed it eagerly. It led him semicircularly back toward the shore, still in a northerly direction, and presently into a bungalow he knew quite well. It belonged to Col. Goodrich. Lucy Goodrich was asleep in a hammock on the veranda, and he walked past her and into the hall, where he secured and covered himself with a raincoat. Then he came out and shook the hammock.

"Lucy," he said, "I'm man Friday and I want white folk's help. I want an evening gown, and all of the undertrimmings, from the time one steps out of her bath."

He held up his hand to check her astonished inquiries. "Please," he said. "I'll tell you all about it later, and you'll like the story, but I haven't a minute now. Carry on, Lucy, dear, and throw in a necklace or something."

Mrs. Goodrich went into action. This was India, and in India those whose ears are attuned to the lyres of the socially elect have learned never to repeat an unanswered question. Converse didn't even wait to clothe himself beyond raincoat and shoes—and some slight moist attention to the inner man—but hurried back down the path with his bundle.

Half an hour later he appeared before Jane and presented his spoils with a bow. "I believe the conditions of this contest called for the delivery of an evening gown. To this particular point," he said, "I have fulfilled those conditions. I can, however, furnish a more suitable place in which to try it on. You will find in the bundle a wrap and some serviceable shoes. I suggest that you let them suffice for the moment and come with me."

But Jane, after recovering from her astonishment, was perverse. "No," she said, a little defiantly, "I made a sporting proposition and I'm going through with it. I shall put on these things here and await George's return."

Converse bowed again. "As you please," he said. "I shall go and dress, and bring you some refreshments."

Jane and Converse were seated near their landing place by the shore, waiting for Crumlie. Jane was radiantly dressed to the last detail, including silk stockings and slippers. Also she was wearing a pearl necklace. But she felt uncomfortable. A little guilty, a little selfish, and she was growing increasingly concerned at George's long absence.

"Converse," she said peevishly, "you say you don't care for the water, but you should really learn to fish. I'm sure you'd have wonderful luck, especially at that kind of fishing where one just sits still and waits for the fish to come around."

Converse smiled. "Shall I cast about and try to find that idiot of yours?"

"No," said Jane primly. "I'm sure he doesn't require any help."

Time went by in a rather strained silence. Converse also was getting just a little bit worried.

"See here, lovely lady," he said, "that anthropoid may be in process of being boiled over a slow fire, to satisfy cannibalistic appetite. I'm not at all sure that these natives observe Friday. Don't you think I'd better strike out through the wilderness and shout around for him?"

But Jane was still perverse. "No," she said, a little maliciously. "He probably wouldn't hear you, anyway. Your voice would be too mild." Converse decided for the moment that George might die and rot back there, for all of him.

The sun was taking its last round, red, brazen, almost baleful stare at Bengal Bay when George appeared. He was an unlovely sight. His arms and shoulders were blis-

OH BOY- HERE'S MY PAPA'S CHECK BOOK- ANY TIME HE WANTS ANY MONEY ALL HE HAS TO DO IS WRITE OUT A CHECK AND THE MAN AT THE BANK GIVES HIM ALL THE MONEY HE WANTS-
THE WHOLE BOOK IS FULL OF BLANK CHECKS- I KNOW WHAT I'LL DO- I'LL MAKE OUT A CHECK FOR EVERYBODY I KNOW- PAPA SAYS NOTHING MAKES A PERSON SO HAPPY AS TO OPEN A LETTER AND HAVE A NICE CHECK DROP OUT-
I'LL SEND A CHECK TO SANTA CLAUS- EVERY CHRISTMAS HE GIVES ALL THE LITTLE CHILDREN A NICE PRESENT- HE NEVER FORGETS ME- I ALWAYS WANTED TO DO SOMETHING NICE FOR HIM- I'LL GIVE HIM A THOUSAND DOLLARS-
I'VE MADE OUT A CHECK FOR EVERY KID IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD- NOW THEY CAN BUY EVERYTHING THEY WANT- AND I'LL SEND A CHECK TO UNCLE BIM FOR A MILLION DOLLARS TO PAY HIM FOR ALL THE NICE THINGS HE DID FOR ME WHEN I WAS IN AUSTRALIA-
GEE WHIZ! I FORGOT ALL ABOUT MAMA- I'M GLAD I REMEMBERED- THIS IS THE LAST CHECK IN THE BOOK AND AFTER I MAKE OUT THIS CHECK I WON'T HAVE ANY MONEY LEFT-
WHEN MOTHER GETS THIS CHECK FOR $500.00 I'LL BET SHE'LL BE GLAD- I CERTAINLY AM GLAD I FOUND THIS NICE CHECK-BOOK- I LOVE TO GIVE MONEY AWAY-
WHAT ARE YOU DOING WITH MY CHECK-BOOK?
WHAT DO YOU MEAN WASTING ALL THOSE GOOD CHECKS?
I WASN'T WASTING THEM, PAPA- YOU SAID TO ALWAYS TRY TO MAKE PEOPLE HAPPY SO I WAS GOING TO GIVE EVERYONE A CHECK AS I THOUGHT THAT WOULD MAKE THEM HAPPY-
I DON'T WANT YOU TO EVER TOUCH ANOTHER PERSON'S CHECK-BOOK- THAT'S JUST LIKE STEALING MONEY- OF COURSE A CHECK SIGNED WITH YOUR NAME IS WORTHLESS- BUT THE PRINCIPLE IS ALL WRONG-
WOULDN'T THE MAN AT THE BANK PAY MONEY FOR MY CHECKS?
YOUR SIGNATURE WOULD BE WORTHLESS ON A CHECK AS YOU HAVE NO MONEY IN THE BANK- BUT WHEN I SIGN "ANDREW GUMP" ON THE SOUTH-WEST CORNER OF A CHECK IT MEANS "WELCOME BROTHER" AT THE BANK-
I WISH I COULD DO THAT-
WHAT A DELIGHTFUL SURPRISE-
THAT CHECK MADE OUT TO MINERVA GUMP FOR $500.00 WAS NOT WORTH A PENNY TILL I SIGNED IT- NOW IT'S WORTH $500.00 IN ANY BANK IN THE UNIVERSE-GEE-

The Wonderful Stories of "OZ"

by L. Frank Baum

Ojo and Unc Nunkie

"WHERE'S the butter, Unc Nunkie?" asked Ojo.

Unc looked out of the window and stroked his long beard. Then he turned to the Munchkin boy and shook his head.

"Isn't," said he.

"Isn't any butter? That's too bad, Unc. Where's the jam then?" inquired Ojo, standing on a stool so he could look through all the shelves of the cupboard. But Unc Nunkie shook his head again.

"Gone," he said.

"No jam, either? And no cake—no jelly—no apples—nothing but bread?"

"All," said Unc again stroking his beard as he gazed from the window.

The little boy brought the stool and sat beside his uncle, munching the dry bread slowly and seeming in deep thought.

"Nothing grows in our yard but the bread trees," he mused, "and there are only two more loaves on that tree; and they're not ripe yet. Tell me, Unc; why are we so poor?"

The old Munchkin turned and looked at Ojo. He had kindly eyes, but he hadn't smiled or laughed in so long that the boy had forgotten that Unc Nunkie could look any other way than solemn. And Unc never spoke any more words than he was obliged to, so his little nephew, who lived alone with him, had learned to understand a great deal from one word.

"Why are we so poor, Unc?" repeated the boy.

"Not," said the old Munchkin.

"I think we are," declared Ojo. "What have we got?"

"House," said Unc Nunkie.

"I know; but everyone in the Land of Oz has a place to live. What else, Unc?"

"Bread."

"I'm eating the last loaf that's ripe. There; I've put aside your share, Unc. It's on the table, so you can eat it when you get hungry. But when that is gone, what shall we eat, Unc?"

The old man shifted in his chair but merely shook his head.

"Of course," said Ojo, who was obliged to talk because his uncle would not, "no one starves in the Land of Oz, either. There is plenty for everyone, you know; only, if it isn't just where you happen to be, you must go where it is."

The aged Munchkin wriggled again and stared at his small nephew as if disturbed by his argument.

"By tomorrow morning," the boy went on, "we must go where there is something to eat, or we shall grow very hungry and become very unhappy."

"Where?" asked Unc.

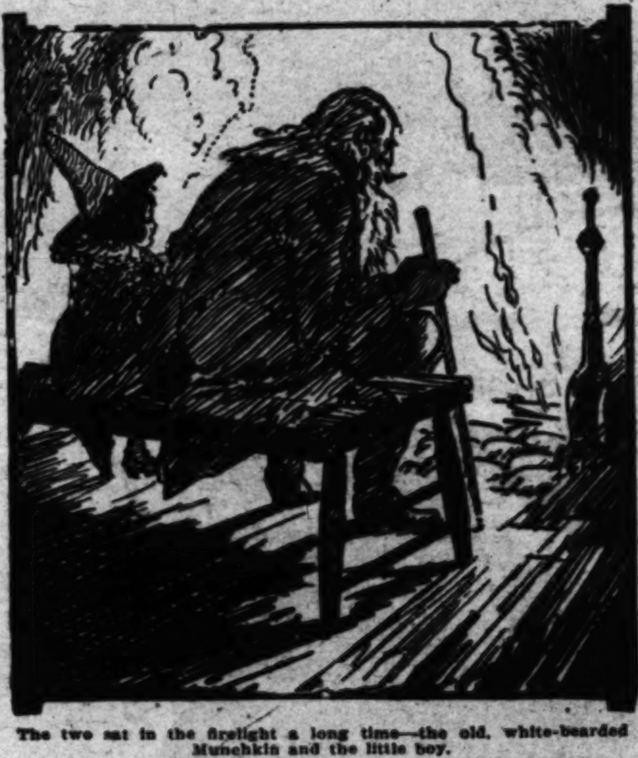
"Where shall we go? I don't know, I'm sure," replied Ojo. "But you must know, Unc. You must have traveled, in your time, because you're so old. I don't remember it, because ever since I could remember anything we've lived right here in this lonesome, round house, with a little garden back of it and the thick woods all around. All I've ever seen of the great Land of Oz, Unc dear, is the view of that mountain over at the south, where they say the Hammerheads live—who won't let anybody go by them—and that mountain at the north, where they say nobody lives."

"One," declared Unc, correcting.

"Oh, yes; one family lives there, I've heard. That's the Crooked Magician, who is named Dr. Pipt, and his wife Margolette. One year you told me about them; I think it took you a whole year, Unc, to say as much as I've just said about the Crooked Magician and his wife. They live high up on the mountain, and the good Munchkin Country, where the fruits and flowers grow, is just the other side. It's funny you and I should live here all alone, in the middle of the forest, isn't it?"

"Yes," said Unc.

"Then let's go away and visit the Munchkin Country and its jolly, good-natured people. I'd love to get a sight of something besides woods, Unc Nunkie.'



The two sat in the firelight a long time—the old, white-bearded Munchkin and the little boy.

"Too little," said Unc.

"Why, I'm not so little as I used to be," answered the boy earnestly. "I think I can walk as far and as fast through the woods as you can Unc. And now that nothing grows in our back yard that is good to eat, we must go where there is food."

Unc Nunkie made no reply for a time. Then he shut down the window and turned his chair to face the room, for the sun was sinking behind the tree-tops and it was growing cool.

By and by Ojo lighted the fire and the logs blazed freely in the broad fireplace. The two sat in the firelight a long time—the old, white-bearded Munchkin and the little boy. Both were thinking. When it grew quite dark outside, Ojo said:

"Eat your bread, Unc, and then we will go to bed."

But Unc Nunkie did not eat the bread; neither did he go directly to bed. Long after his little nephew was sound asleep in the corner of the room the old man sat by the fire, thinking.

Just at dawn next morning Unc Nunkie laid his hand tenderly on Ojo's head and awakened him.

"Come," he said.

Ojo dressed. He wore blue silk stockings, blue knee-pants with gold buckles, a blue ruffled waist and a jacket of bright blue braided with gold. His shoes were of blue leather and turned up at the toes, which were pointed. His hat had a peaked crown and a flat brim, and around the brim was a row of tiny golden bells that tinkled when he moved. This was the native costume of those who inhabited the Munchkin Country of the Land of Oz, so Unc Nunkie's dress was much like that of his nephew. Instead of shoes, the old man wore boots with turnover tops and his blue coat had wide cuffs of gold braid.

The boy noticed that his uncle had not eaten the bread, and supposed the old man had not been hungry. Ojo was hungry, though; so he divided the piece of bread upon the table and ate his half for breakfast, washing it down with fresh, cool water from the brook. Unc put the other piece of bread in his jacket pocket, after which he again said, as he walked out through the doorway: "Come."

Ojo was well pleased. He was dreadfully tired of living all alone in the woods and wanted to travel and see people. For a long time he had wished to explore the beautiful Land of Oz in which they lived. When they were outside, Unc simply latched the door and started up the path. No one would disturb their little house, even if anyone came so far into the thick forest while they were gone.

At the foot of the mountain that separated the Country of the Munchkins from the Country of the Gillikins, the path divided. One way led to the left and the other to the right—straight up the mountain. Unc Nunkie took this right-hand path and Ojo followed without asking why. He knew it would take them to the house of the Crooked Magician, whom he had never seen but who was their nearest neighbor.

All the morning they trudged up the mountain path and at noon Unc and Ojo sat on a fallen tree-trunk and ate the last of the bread which the old Munchkin had placed in his pocket. Then they started on again and two hours later came in sight of the house of Dr. Pipt.

It was a big house, round, as were all the Munchkin houses, and painted blue, which is the distinctive color of the Munchkin Country of Oz. There was a pretty garden around the house, where blue trees and blue flowers grew in abundance and in one place were beds of blue cabbages, blue carrots and blue lettuce, all of which were delicious to eat. In Dr. Pipt's garden grew bun-trees, cake-trees, cream-puff bushes, blue buttercups which yielded excellent blue butter and a row of chocolate-caramel plants. Paths of blue gravel divided the vegetable and flower beds and a wider path led up to the front door. The place was in a clearing on the mountains, but a little way off was the grim forest, which completely surrounded it.

Unc knocked at the door of the house and a chubby, pleasant-faced woman, dressed all in blue, opened it and greeted the visitors with a smile.

"Ah," said Ojo; "you must be Dame Margolotte, the good wife of Dr. Pipt."

"I am, my dear, and all strangers are welcome to my home."

"May we see the famous Magician, Madam?"

"He is very busy just now," she said, shaking her head doubtfully. "But come in and let me give you something to eat, for you must have traveled far in order to get to our lonely place."

"We have," replied Ojo, as he and Unc entered the house. "We have come from a far lonelier place than this."

"A lonelier place! And in the Munchkin Country?" she exclaimed. "Then it must be somewhere in the Blue Forest."

"It is, good Dame Margolotte."

"Dear me!" she said, looking at the man, "you must be Unc Nunkie, known as the Silent One." Then she looked at the boy. "And you must be Ojo the Unlucky," she added.

"Yes," said Unc, "I am."

Next week Dame Margolotte will introduce you to "Dr. Pipt, the Famous Crooked Magician"—the maker of the magic Powder of Life compound.—[The Editor.

Removing Rusted Screws

To remove a rusted machine screw from metal parts, put a little oil on the screw. Heat a long iron wire over an alcohol burner or other heater to red heat and hold the wire on the screw head for a minute or two. Let the screw cool, adding more oil if all has evaporated. When cold, the screw usually can be removed with ease. If it still refuses to loosen, heat again and supply more oil.—[Popular Science Monthly.

PRESENTING ANOTHER ALL-FICTION NUMBER

WORKERS ONLY NOW WANTED!

NOT HOW MANY MEMBERS, BUT WHO, IS NEW RULE OF "JUNIOR" CLUB

As we are publishing another all-fiction number this week, our usual story on club activities will be made brief, so that we may devote our space to our many literary aspirants. First, let us emphasize that no more free memberships are being issued, as we wish to keep a closer tab on those enrolled than was heretofore possible. We have 250,000 at present; now it is not how many more we obtain, but who? What are the characters surrounding us? Who are our representatives in New York, Wyoming, Chicago and Seattle? This is the query we now apply to each letter filed in our office.

Weak, selfish members are not a credit to our organization, therefore we ask that each new child be sponsored by some reliable registered member of the club. This person automatically becomes responsible for their actions, and in assuming such a role learns to meet, perhaps for the first time, one of life's problems in a fair and square manner.

Let us, however, offer these suggestions: If you cannot locate an officer or a "backer" in your immediate neighborhood, notify us at once, and we will tell you where you may locate them. If the district you live in is out of the way, or possibly without a representative, get in touch with Aunt Dolly, and see if she will let you take over the territory. A representative must enroll fifty desirable members before they receive their official badge, cards, buttons, and the book in which they keep reports.

After you have proved up on this point, you may open a regular district office, a place where children may come and be enrolled, receiving their cards and badges. You must keep all records in a systematic businesslike manner, or we cannot allow you to retain this important post. Later you may win a captaincy if we find you are a good worker. Who knows but a generalship will follow, so get busy, and learn a few important facts about your neighborhood. Also remember we are paying dues from now on, anywhere from 10 to 25 cents a month, funds being used for picnics and benefits among newsboys and orphan children.

Our first business meeting, held on the 10th inst., proved an unquestionable success, the "House Committee" passing on many important rules and problems. We are now organized upon a solid basis, a juvenile democracy that has for its slogan, "Pep, punch and progress!"

GETTING ON THE MAP

A little city with a large spirit is Davenport, Iowa. It has a population of 56,000, and it is building a theater with a seating capacity of 10,000. In this theater the feature will be a huge organ, to cost $180,000, and to rival, if not surpass, any similar instrument in the world. The town-folk are congratulating themselves on the possession of what has already proved a tremendous advertising asset in the publication of the details of the prospective installation; and already the radio-casters are arranging, through the use of powerful apparatus, to give concerts which shall attract the listeners of all the country to the music which is in tonal output the equivalent of an orchestra of 325 players.—[Philadelphia Ledger.

ONLY FOURTEEN DAYS REMAIN!

HURRY IF YOU WOULD ENTER AMERICAN BOY OR MARY PICKFORD CONTESTS

As we are forced to reserve space this week for our all-fiction number, stories regarding the American Boy and Mary Pickford silhouette contests will be continued next Sunday.

Remember, there are but fourteen short days left in which to enter the lists and try your luck, hoping, of course, to win the Indian trophy or the silver vanity, which will go to the girl who resembles, even remotely, our lovely "Mary" of the films.

Hurry and send in your photo and keep an eye on this column, of course!

"JUNIOR" MEMBERS ASKED TO PICK WINNER

Aunt Dolly Seeks Your Aid in Literary Contest; Good Stories Piling Up; You Can Help Decide Which One is The Best

Just another little innovation—we are going to allow our members to pick the literary contest winner this week. Next week wp may do the same thing, for we have so many good stories on hand that it is nearly impossible to read them all, then pass judgment in a wink as to the best. So we are asking our club members to help us out. Just write the name of your choice on a slip of paper and mail to Aunt Dolly, The Times Junior Club, care of The Times, 223 West First street, Los Angeles. It would help also if you would give your second and third choices.

TOMMY TOES' REBELLION

By Beatrice Prudhomme, 794 Irving Street, Portland, Or.

In a little vegetable garden on the outskirts of a big city, there lived a happy little family of tomatoes. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Toe, Sally Toe and Tommy Toe, Jr., made their home on the little tomato vine.

One dark cloud threatened the peaceful little tomato family. Tommy Toe was of a rebellious nature and was bound and determined to have his own way.

One day this unruly little tomato was talking to Jeremiah Onion.

"It's dreadfully dull in this old garden," pouted Tommy. "I want to see the world."

"Well I do declare, Tommy, I never heard of such a notion," said the onion.

"Of course you never heard of it," retorted the impolite tomato, "you're old and stupid; I don't believe you know anything much."

He ran back to the tomato vine, and going to his mother he said, "Mother, I'm going out into the world and seek my fortune. You needn't say 'No' because I'm going. I've been penned up here all my life, and I rebel."

Mrs. Tomato stood dumbfounded. "Tommy!" she gasped.

Tommy rushed from her presence before she had time to say more. He ran out upon the highway and went toward the city. That evening he arrived at the city gates, and, seeing a small opening, he slipped through.

Next morning Tommy was out bright and early. The shops were just opening, and Tommy Toe was having a grand time taking in the strange sights. Presently a storekeeper caught sight of him and rushed out into the street to pick him up.

Tommy saw him just in time to take to his heels. He no sooner escaped from the store-keeper than he fell into a well. Fortunately, there was no water in it, or the bad little tomato would have been drowned. There were rats in it, though, and when this tomato landed in their midst, they were terribly frightened and ran screaming in every direction.

Finally a little grandma rat came up and patted his head, saying, "Never mind, little tomato, I'll take you home. How did you come here?" She won Tommy's confidence by her kind manner, and he told her his story.

"Come, I'll take you home now," she said, "but we must hurry.

Soon they reached the top of the well and made their way toward the city gates. But alas! A wicked cat was roaming about the well, and when he saw the rat come out he pounced upon her. When Tommy saw his friend taken from him he sat down and wept bitterly.

Presently some children came upon the sad little tomato crying.

"Look at the tomato," cried one. "Let's take him home."

Tommy tried to escape, but they caught him and took him with them.

Tommy was very unhappy in his new home. After a while he hit upon a plan by which he might gain his freedom.

One night he went to the hen-house, took all the eggs he could find and returned to the house. He broke them on the table, chairs and walls, and even broke a window. The next morning the household was in an uproar. Tommy Toe was accused and was punished accordingly.

The children took him to a near-by creek and threw him into the black icy depths. He went bobbing along on the surface, not enjoying himself in the least.

He had not floated far when he bumped into a log and climbed on top of it.

"Merciful goodness!" shrieked the log, "whatever is on my back?"

"Only me," squeaked the frightened little tomato, "please let me stay. I was most drowned when I climbed up here."

"Certainly you may stay," replied the log, "but you frightened me terribly."

Tommy was just about to thank the log when something pushed him and he fell into the water.

Above his screams he heard the log shouting, "Get up!"

He awoke to find his mother shaking him.

"Oh, mother," he cried sleepily, "I had such an awful dream!" And with this exclamation he tumbled out of bed.

THE ENDING

By Lila Lord, 211 South Sixth Street, Alhambra, Cal.

An end must come to all things whether they be good or bad, cheerful or sad, and so an end finally came to that beautiful, joyous, carefree, hilarious, happy-go-lucky June day spent in the woods.

We started for home, walking on the green and brown forest turf that yielded gently beneath our feet, and through the long green aisles of the forest.

I did not feel like talking and gradually the others, too, fell silent, for they were both tired and hungry, and the quiet of the forest cooled and soothed our feverish veins.

Not for long, though, was the forest silent. Soon after these human beings intruded upon their forest solitudes it awoke to small bits of life and action. First of all I heard the trees above and about me sighing and whispering to one another as if resenting the presence of the strangers and intruders, and yet curious to know why they were there, like old neighbors who like to gossip about the new family that has just arrived.

I was walking a little behind the others and so reached a beautiful chestnut grove after the others had passed through. I knew that I could easily catch up with them whenever I wanted to and so I sat down on an old, fallen chestnut tree. About three feet from me ants were busy about their hill. I saw a brave little chipmunk, after eyeing me a few minutes from the foot of a tree, suddenly make a dash and disappear into an old stump. I saw an inquisitive squirrel peeping from the branches of a lone maple tree. The scent of honeyed blossoms was borne to me on the breeze. I followed up the scent and incidently the droning, mellow bass of the wild bee. It was a beautiful, pink-laden Hawthorne tree which filled the woods about it with a sweet perfume, and there were many brown, black and yellow butterflies that sipped the nectar sweet.

I stayed until I knew I must follow the others.

As I went along a frightened wood mouse scurried from almost under my foot. The azure coat and ruddy vest of a bluebird and the singing of a cheerful robin stopped me awhile. The trailing arbutus, the flaming colombine and the sweet, woodsy violets each claimed a minute of my time.

I came to a brook that sang like a robin as the tinkling waters slipped through the water-cress, over the sand and pebbles and around the velvety mosses. I stood by a lichen-covered rock and watched the sparkling trout as they leaped into the air and fell to the water again with a gentle splash.

Then I went on. The daisies smiled up at me, the golden daffodils and the cowslips all caught my eye. I heard the bobolink "bobbie" and the blackbirds sang the best they knew how, while their coats glistened in the sun.

I breathed the breath of the summer evening and the light in the western sky began to fade. The blinking toad began to sing his solo and the feathery locusts to play their flutes, and then in the edge of the woods, the last voice to bid me good-night was that of the whippoorwill.

THE MOST THANKFUL THANKSGIVING

By Ruth Carmon, 154 South Euclid avenue, Pasadena, Cal.

Faith Felden looked very sweet and sedate in her clean, gray dress with the stiff, white cuffs and collar on it. The stiff, white cap also contrasted with her solemn-looking face and the lovely, long, brown curls.

"Oh, mother!" she called. "I wonder if Big Chief Pawapse will be there. He was the one that gave me that pretty rabbit skin."

"Thou must not make so much noise," said her mother. "It does not become a girl of thy age."

Although Faith was 10 years old she was not allowed to do what the girls of today can do.

Mistress Felden was not feeling well that glorious day and she feared she would not be able to go to the Thanksgiving feast at Jamestown. Her husband, she knew would be expecting her, but he would not wish her to come if she was not feeling well. Faith had been counting on going ever since it had been announced, but Mistress Felden told her very sorrowfully that she would not be able to go. Faith bore it bravely, but as soon as she was out of her mother's hearing she ran to her bed and wept till her eyes were very red.

Soon after she heard her mother calling her so she wiped the tears away and ran to her.

"Mother knows how her little girl feels," said her mother, "but wouldst thou not stay at home for thy mother?"

"Oh, yes, mother! I would do anything for you," she said, kissing her. Mistress Felden felt very glad that Faith was such an obedient child.

"I would like to have some hot tea to soothe my headache," said Mistress Felden to Faith.

Now, Faith loved to cook, especially for her mother; so in a short while a cup of hot tea was waiting for her which she drank and then lay down to sleep. Faith knew she must be quiet so she took the doll that she had brought from England with her and went to the edge of the woods, which was near the house.

Not very long after she had been there she heard a twig crack not far off. She jumped up and started to run home. She did not want to wake her mother, so she tiptoed quietly into the house and softly ran to the window. A brightly painted face appeared in the distance and Faith realized with horror that she had just escaped an Indian. Soon she heard wild yells and six Indians appeared. Faith was now very frightened, but ran to the kitchen door, jumped on a stool and grabbed the gun that was hanging on a nail. Then she ran to the window where a small hole had been bored beside it. A cork was in it, but she soon pulled it out.

Mistress Felden still slept and Faith heard her move as an arrow struck the floor of her bedroom. In sudden realization of the danger her mother was in, Faith propped the gun up against the wall and tiptoed as fast as she could into her mother's room. A saintly smile was on her mother's lips and in haste Faith shut the window as silently as possible. Then hearing arrows strike the outside wall she closed the bedroom door and ran back to her station.

There were fourteen reds now, so Faith mustered up courage and pulled the trigger. To her surprise an Indian fell and tears began to creep into her bewildered eyes, for in her heart was a sad thought that she had killed someone. But then she realized she must defend her home because her father had gone to hunt game for the feast and her mother was sleeping.

Again she pulled the trigger and another red fell. The Indians began to retreat because they feared the white man's gun.

Mistress Felden now awoke and with a thumping heart was told of the danger she and her daughter had been in. Amid embracing and kissing Father Felden appeared on the threshold and was soon told of the danger his family had encountered and of the bravery his daughter had displayed.

Mistress Felden felt very much better, now, so they prepared to go to the feast. One can imagine Faith's joy on being told she could go! They soon were off with some of the neighbors who were going also.

Father Felden gave thanks to God in his heart and the Feldens all thought that it would be the most thankful Thanksgiving they would ever experience.

WHEN THINGS GO WRONG

By Rosemary Wiess, 447 South Breed street, Los Angeles.

This morning I got up. I get up every morning, but bumping my head against the sharpest corner of the dresser is not generally included in the usual formula of arising. I sat on the edge of the bed, rubbing the bruised portion of my anatomy, and glared at the offending piece of furniture with what in story books is called a look of supreme indignation and reproach. The bright glass knobs made it appear as though that dresser were laughing at me. I wanted to kick it, but there was no sense to that. It would only get scratched, and then mother'd make me stay home from the movies on Saturday afternoon and varnish the old thing.

I was planning to move it into May's room, when mother called for the second time. "Just," I said to myself, "as though I didn't have sense enough to know that if I didn't hurry I'd be late for school. I'm 13 years and 2 months and 6 1-2 days old. Girls in their teens ought to be treated with dignity. Some families haven't got no understandings."

The other day my chum told me a brand new way how to curl your hair. But by the time I got home I forgot whether she said to twist the rag around the hair, or twist the hair around the rag. Anyway, I twisted a lot of rags around my hair, and it must have been the other way 'round, because, when I took them out this morning, I looked most awful funny, with my hair sticking out all over my head in long, straight, shiny tails. But that was no reason for May to titter at me, when she opened her door and peeped in. Her hair wasn't naturally curly either until she had a permanent wave put into it.

Mother called me a third time. It was awful. I was simply petrified with haste. One of my shoe strings bust—I mean burst. I came late for breakfast, just in time to see Bill devour the last hot cake. Mother had a headache and wouldn't make any more, and May wouldn't either.

She doesn't like hot cakes and sirup because they're fattening. It's just like father says: "When a girl is old enough to stand on her feet she begins to get silly."

When I'm as big as May and have lots of money I'm going to eat heaps of hot cakes, mashed potatoes with gravy, and doughnuts and banana fritters, and nut cake and things like that. All I had for breakfast this morning was an orange, and two scrambled eggs, and four pieces of toast and half a glass of milk. I'll bet Bill had about ten hot cakes. How can I work out algebra examples correctly, when my family don't give me enough nourishing food like the book of knowledge says they should.

THE UNINVITED GUEST

By Eleanor Edith Crill

Box No. 191, Route No. 4, Anaheim, Cal.

Alice was quite happy one afternoon. She had invited all her little friends to come to her house, for under the big oak tree she was going to have a party. It was to be at 2 o'clock sharp. Alice's mother, who was very kind, told her that she was to greet everyone who came to the door with thoughtful courtesy.

While her guests were coming she saw a shabby old man turn in at their walk. Alice ran to the door as he hobbled up the steps and lifted his hat.

"Oh, go way! We do not want to be bothered with tramps!" Alice cried, sharply.

The little old man looked very unhappy as he turned away. Then Alice remembered what her mother had said. Quickly she ran down the street calling to him. He turned around when he heard her voice.

"Please pardon me for being so rude to you. I forgot what mother said, but now I remember."

"Why, certainly, little lady," said the stranger.

"What did you want?" asked Alice in a very anxious tone.

"My monkey and I wanted to entertain you at your party," he answered.

"Oh, goody, goody! That would be just wonderful! Where is he, and where is your hand-organ?" Alice clapped her hands and danced.

"Oh, just around the corner with my boy, Pietro. "I'll go and fetch them. Shall I?"

"Yes, but please excuse me for being so rude to you," begged Alice.

"Don't worry about that," he answered, with a smile, as he limped around the corner.

Alice skipped back to tell her great news, and the children sat down on the lawn in a circle. There were squeals of delight when the monkey appeared riding on his master's shoulder. A wonderful hour followed, in which the children danced to the music of the organ, and watched the monkey do tricks, as shaking hands, turning somersaults and passing his little red cap for pennies. The monkey seemed to enjoy the fun as much as did the children.

Just as the little man was about to leave, Alice brought plates of delicious ice cream and chocolate cake to him and to Pietro. They sat in the shade and rested and enjoyed the refreshments.

The little old man shook hands with Alice and said, "Good-bye, dear little lady, and thank you for your kindness."

Alice watched them go down the street, and as the monkey waved his cap, she gave a big sigh to think it was all over.

"Well, I'm sure I'll never again forget to be kind to strangers," she thought, as she turned back to her little guests.

Quaint old New England fishing town still has glamor of the past. This windmill at Nantucket, Mass., was built in 1746. It is covered with the hand-carved initials of thousands who have visited it. (Pacific & Atlantic)

Your Hair Appears Twice as Beautiful when Shampooed this way

Try this quick and simple method which thousands now use. See the difference it makes in the appearance of your hair.

Note how it gives new life and lustre, how it brings out all the wave and color. See how soft and silky, bright and glossy your hair will look.

THE alluring thing about beautiful hair isn't the way it is worn.

The real, IRRESISTIBLE CHARM is the life and lustre the hair itself contains.

Fortunately, beautiful hair is no longer a matter of luck.

You, too, can have beautiful hair if you shampoo it properly.

Proper shampooing is what makes it soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and lustre, all the natural wave and color and leaves it fresh-looking, glossy and bright.

When your hair is dry, dull and heavy, lifeless, stiff and gummy, and the strands cling together, and it feels harsh and disagreeable to the touch, it is because your hair has not been shampooed properly.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why thousands of women, everywhere, now use Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure. It does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

If you want to see how really beautiful you can make your hair look, just follow this simple method.

A Simple, Easy Method

FIRST, wet the hair and scalp in clear, warm water. Then apply a little Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo.

Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather. This should be rubbed in thoroughly and briskly with the finger tips, so as to loosen the dandruff and small particles of dust and dirt that stick to the scalp.

After rubbing in the rich, creamy Mulsified lather, give the hair a good rinsing. Then use another application of Mulsified, again working up a lather and rubbing it in briskly as before. After the final washing, rinse the hair and scalp in at least two changes of clear, fresh, warm water. This is very important.

Just Notice the Difference

YOU will notice the difference in your hair even before it is dry, for it will be delightfully soft and silky.

After a Mulsified shampoo you will find your hair will dry quickly and evenly and have the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it really is.

If you want to always be remembered for your beautiful, well-kept hair, make it a rule to set a certain day each week for a Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This regular weekly shampooing will keep the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store or toilet goods counter, anywhere in the world. A 4-ounce bottle should last for months.

Splendid for children —fine for men.

THIS IS THE DAY OF PREVENTION. Today, danger is marked wherever it exists—on railroads and highways, on land and on sea. Civil officials, as well as medical and dental authorities, are designating Danger Lines that demand our constant respect and attention.

Safeguard your health at THE DANGER LINE

THROUGHOUT the world today, medical and dental authorities are seeking to safeguard health by warning us of danger. That is why dental authorities have pointed out The Danger Line on our teeth—a vital point where all should practice prevention.

For it is in the tiny V-shaped crevices along The Danger Line that food particles lodge and ferment, causing acids which lead to decay. The gums become infected, bleed and recede from the teeth. Pyorrhea often follows. Undermined health—even heart trouble, rheumatism and kidney disease—may be the result from infection due to decay at The Danger Line.

Your dentist will tell you that milk of magnesia is a safe, thorough, effective means of counteracting the acids of the mouth which cause decay. Squibb's Dental Cream is made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia. It cleans your teeth thoroughly and brings out all their natural beauty. It neutralizes the acids which attack the teeth. It stops Acid Decay. It reduces the peril of Pyorrhea. No dental cream can do more.

To get children to brush their teeth regularly, give them Squibb's Dental Cream. It is pleasant to use and safe for all—even for the baby.

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON

"FOR several years past great development has taken place on foothills and in canyons, whereas a few years ago these beauty spots were passed by as too expensive to be fit for residential sites and too unavailable by ordinary means of travel. The automobile has changed all this until it is amusing to read the following plea, one of many which appeared in this department a dozen years ago, when canyons for permanent residence were shunned.

"In the midst of all this mad rush to get a 'cottage by the sea,' real estate promoters have almost overlooked the fact that we have a large number of people who are soon tired of the monotony of seaside life and yearn to get closer to Nature's heart and its attendant charms. Ample provision has been made for the would-be investor in beach property, but what has been done to satisfy the taste of him who has gone to the mountains in preference? During the past season of beach-lot exploitation the writer has heard many express the wish that they might have a chance to procure a building site outside of any town or corporation and against the mountains, foothills or in a canyon.

"In view of this oft-expressed desire, it is strange that none of our foothill canyons have been utilized for such retreats. If such a canyon as Laurel received the proper treatment it would make an ideal spot for country bungalows. The main (and only) roadway should be at one side so that no cottages would face each other as in the city, and such roads should never be straight at any point, but always preserve a gentle curve. Lots should be of a sufficient size so that a few trees might be planted between the cottages that they would not be in too open view from one another; in fact, everything possible should be done to preserve and enhance the charms of the wildwood. The buildings should be unpretentious in style of architecture, rough in external appearance, built if possible of material from the surrounding hills, so that they would seem allied to the soil and surroundings, and blend harmoniously into the landscape."

An ideal frame for white walls, red roof and bright awnings.

For Garden Walls

"Grow Your Own Berries" is a slogan worthy of the attention of every person who has even a small piece of ground, for it is an easy matter to grow good crops of delicious berries in a small space. Berry growing is interesting and the time spent in cultivating and watering is a pleasure. This frequently is overlooked with the result that berries are not served as often or as fresh as they should be. In a few minutes one may pick sufficient berries for breakfast, lunch or dinner, fresh from the vines and full of rich flavor and healthful juices.

Ancient Gardens

We need more outdoor life for Southern California; gardens should be built to provide shelter and seclusion that we may have a private home life out-of-doors. This idea is by no means new, for gardens of this sort existed many centuries ago. It is related that Epicurus built the first garden in Athens, that in it he passed his whole life, studied, exercised, taught and perhaps slept, for he seems to have considered a house only as a refuge during inclement weather. The gardens of King Solomon were also noted as much for the time he spent in them as for the fruits and flowers there produced. It is said that all his leisure time, and this was much, was spent in his garden with his favorite wives. Fruit gardening became quite a craze in ancient Rome, for wherever her conquering hordes invaded they most invariably carried back to Rome the fruits of all countries conquered. Apples, peaches, pears, apricots and plums are often mentioned in records left from that period of history. Roses were then the general favorite in the flower garden, though violets, lilies, tuberoses and several others are frequently mentioned. Strange to say, vegetables were grown mixed with flowering plants, a style or lack of style affected by many people of today.

A Wintry Scene.
Snow in the Sierra Madre Mountains. Far below in the valleys, oranges are ripening.

Briar-Root a Heath

The pipes known as briar are not made from the roots of a briar and were not so named. The name is a corruption of Bryere, where the wood is found and the pipes were first made. The plant is a true heath, Erica aborea by name, and has been grown in California as an ornamental.

Fringed and Ruffled Petunias

This is the day of fancy single petunias, the double ones never having become very popular, much as the dealers have tried to boom them. The single fringed and ruffled types far surpass the doubles in amount of blooms, in colors and in general effect, for too many of the doubles are both double and solid, and look as much like colored turnips as they do like flowers when viewed from a little distance away from the bed. The colors and shades of the newer types leave little for the plant breeder to perfect.

Vegetable Relationships

The thoughtful gardener will be interested in the botanical relationship of his vegetables. To the mustard family belong the cabbage and its variant forms—cauliflower, brussels sprouts, kohl rabi and kale, also turnips, radishes, horseradishes and mustard. The nightshade group takes in the potato, tomato, pepper and eggplant. Peas and beans of all kinds are legumes; corn is a member of the grass tribe; while asparagus and onions are related to the lilies. The melons, pumpkins, squashes and cucumbers are members of the gourd family. The parsnip, carrot and parsley, as well as dill and several other pot herbs, belong to the parsley outfit. Beets, chard and spinach are related to the pigweed. Endive, lettuce and salsify are kin to daises and dandelions.

Plant Breeding

Some growers advocate sowing seeds of crossings so thickly that the weak ones will be killed by competition, but this method is entirely wrong if new types are wanted, because these latter may be so aberrant in some character or characters as to induce a weakly constitution. This weakness, however, may be bred out and the desirable aberrations retained. For this reason, scientific plant breeders choose rather to throw away the vigorous normal forms or sell them in a commercial mixture, and breed from those plants that have broken away from type.

Save the Camper

The State of California owns the California Redwood Park in the "Big Basin" in the Santa Cruz Mountains. Each season tourists, campers and visitors come into the park in ever-increasing numbers. This park is within fifty miles of one-third of the population of the State. On Sundays and holidays, during the summer-time, there are from 10,000 to 15,000 people in the park. The park constitutes a menace to visitors by reason of the possibility of forest fires. This arises from the fact that both of the present roads into the park come from the easterly direction, and only about a mile apart. With a strong wind and a rapidly traveling fire, and with burning logs falling across the road, campers in the park would be completely trapped. Some of these terrific forest fires with a strong wind blowing jump half a mile or more at a time. No number of men can stop their onward rush. The mind cannot picture the holacaust if a forest fire were to cut off the present exits! This was fully demonstrated this year, when the fire jumped both roads. This consideration of safety from fire makes imperative a new road from the park westerly to the coast. A bill for such a road passed the Senate at the last session of the Legislature, but was held up in the Assembly pending the investigation and report of the Committee of Nine. A bill will be again introduced at the coming session, for this "fire-escape road." The California Redwood Park Commission is most emphatic in its recommendation for the construction of this road. With so heavy a responsibility resting on the State for the safety of the visitors to this State park, nothing should be allowed to interfere with the necessary appropriation for the building of this road.

City and Country

Because of almost unrestricted opportunities, and natural advantages unique in the fullest sense of the word, we should be a land of suburban and country homes and gardens without parallel or duplication elsewhere. Lack of snow and ice, with their attendant low temperature, is in itself sufficient to invite the rapid, unrestricted spread of cities and towns. No sidewalks covered with snow, no impassable roads, no frozen water pipes and other like equipment, good roads and transportation facilities, telephones, electricity and gas everywhere, why should we have municipal boundaries? Why not consolidation of all cities and counties?

As for gardens, they should increase in size and beauty as one journeys from the "busy marts of trade" toward "where the poised lark his evening ditty chants." There is an enjoyment and charm in the suburban garden, where man treats nature as a work of art, merely assisting her to a better fulfillment, that is entirely absent and ignored in the building of cities. Our boxed-in city gardens lack strength and dignity that come from breadth and delicacy of finish that is ever present when man seeks only to aid and not despoil what Mother Nature has so bountifully bestowed. The country garden seldom offensively shows the mark of man's interference, but all smacks of freedom and sufficiency of earth and sky and light and air. No artistic soul ever found perfect happiness in a city garden, but an escape to the country is as cooling water to the parched tongue of the thirsty traveler.

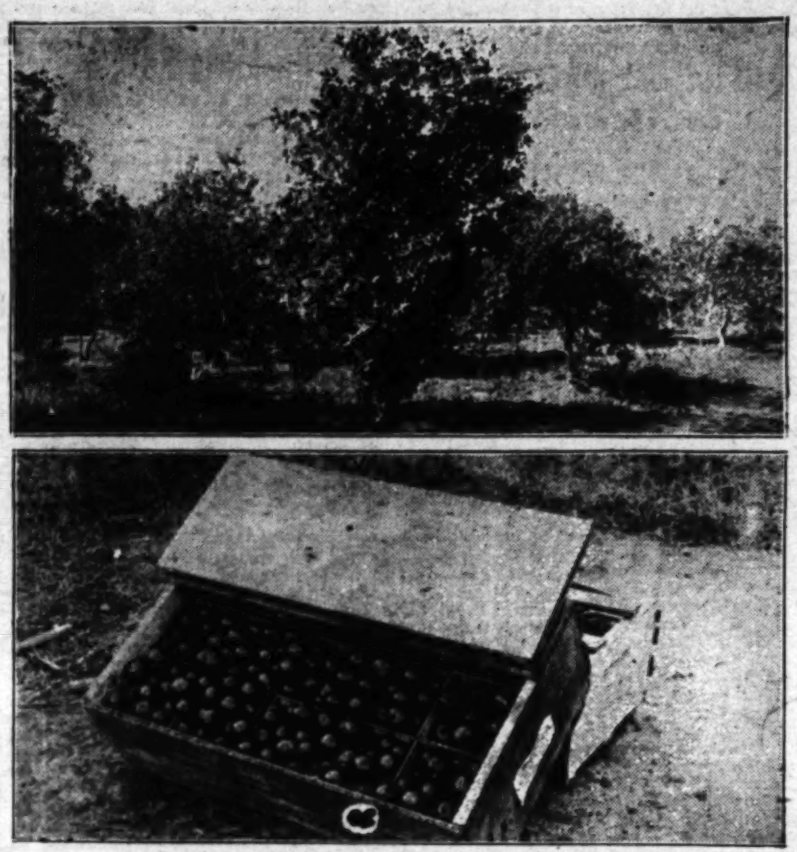
A Piquant Jelly Fruit of the Southland

Guava, Old-Time California Subtropical, Prized by Many Home Gardeners—Strawberry Type Easy to Grow, Lemon Variety More Exacting—Value As Ornamental Appreciated

By KNOWLES RYERSON
Los Angeles County Farm Adviser



Strawberry Guavas as Sold at Los Angeles Markets.
The fruit packed in strawberry baskets and shipped in strawberry crates. Above is shown an old grava planting formerly maintained on Signal Hill, near Long Beach, but which was sacrificed to oil development. Note upright growing habit of old trees.

ONE of the most attractive small fruits to be found in the fall in Southern California markets is the strawberry guava, which has long been grown in the State, having been one of the first subtropicals introduced into California by the early settlers. Commercial guava plantings were established here and there some twenty years ago; in fact, the records would indicate that such plantings were more extensive in the past than at the present time. The raising of the guava is carried on as a side line, and a very limited one at that, most of the fruit used coming from bushes in home gardens, where they are used for ornamental effects and for hedges. The fruit is nevertheless an interesting one and worthy of attention.

The guava belongs to the rather large myrtle family, many species of which are tropical in nature and find extensive place in the world's trade and commerce. Among those of particular importance are cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves and allspice. The family also includes many Australian species which have been transported to Southern California and now add a characteristic touch to our landscapes. Notable among these are the bottlebrushes and the eucalypti. The genus Psidium, to which the guava belongs, is made up mostly of tropical fruiting plants.

The strawberry guava is one of the hardiest of the group and a true subtropical. It has been planted throughout a large part of the State, particularly along the coast, as a garden shrub. It has shown a marked resistance to ordinary cold weather, and where injured by anything but the heaviest frosts, recovers quickly. The plant is an evergreen, with dark, fairly thick, glossy leaves. It is shrubby in habit of growth for the first few years, assuming an upright tree form in later years. The flowers are not conspicuous, being a pale yellow in color, with rather long stamens, and appearing in abundance in the spring of the year.

NATIVE OF BRAZIL

The strawberry guava is a native of Brazil from which country it migrated to many parts of the world, including China. From this oriental country it was introduced into the Mediterranean region probably by early Portuguese travelers, the name Chinese guava being given it. For a long time it was believed to have been a native of China. The fruits vary from an inch to an inch and a half in diameter, are round, rather smooth, with prominent calyx lobes at the apex, and are borne in abundance during the fall of the year. They are a rich purple-maroon in color, though there are at least two yellow forms that have developed. One of these is somewhat larger than the ordinary red variety and is sold under the name of Psidium araca by nurserymen; another is identical with the ordinary variety except for color. The pulp is juicy sweet in flavor, with a taste and aroma resembling that of the strawberry; hence the name by which it has long been known. The seeds are numerous and rather hard.

While the fruit may be eaten out of hand, this use is usually confined to the youngsters of the neighborhood. The guava is pre-eminently a jelly fruit, the product made from it possessing an attractive, clear, wine-red color and a characteristic, piquant flavor that distinguishes it from all other similar products. Guava jelly is highly prized and finds a ready sale.

CULTURAL REQUIREMENTS

From the behavior of the plant in many parts of the State it is evident that the guava is not at all particular as to the type of soil upon which it grows, but that it naturally responds better to the richer, loamy soils. It succeeds admirably on the heavy adobes, but not so well on those which are sandy and of little depth. It is fairly drouth-resistant, but if satisfactory crops of good-sized fruit are to be obtained, regular irrigation is necessary and sufficient water is required to prevent the soil from drying out during the growing season. An irrigation twice a month is recommended in all but the heaviest of soils.

The use of barnyard manure as a fertilizer is also advised if the guava is to produce the best kind of fruit. The application of fertilizer should be made yearly, either in the spring or fall. The shrubs may be grown in hedge form, but, if it is to be cultivated in a commercial way, a distance of at least ten feet between plants is advisable. The rate of growth is slow and a closer distance can be maintained for the first few years, the alternate plants being removed as the bushes become larger. Little pruning is required, the plant naturally assuming a rather sturdy bushy growth at first and later becoming more tree-like.

The plants come into bearing young, some fruits being produced during the second and third years, but paying production can not be assured under five or six years, as the guava is not a rapid grower. The removal of the fruits for the first year or so would undoubtedly be of assistance in pushing vegetative growth, though little attention has been paid to this operation.

Propagation of the strawberry guava is ordinarily accomplished by planting seeds, since the fruit comes fairly true to seed, more so than many other small fruits. No named varieties have been developed. Two yellow-fruited strains or horticultural forms have already been mentioned. The seed is best planted soon after removal from the fruit, a mixture of half sand and half loam being a satisfactory medium, and the planting should be not more than a quarter of an inch deep. Care must be used in watering after the seed leaves appear, as they are subject to the damping-off fungus. After the second leaves appear, they are planted from the seed bed into two-inch pots and are not planted out or repotted from these until at least six inches high Budding is also successful, but is seldom used. If this means of propagation is followed, the stock plants should be young seedlings about a quarter of an inch in diameter in thrifty growing condition. Older and more mature stock is not so successful. The buds used are from well matured but not old wood and are cut from one and a quarter to one and a half inches long. Cuttings are also sometimes used.

COMMERCIAL PLANTINGS FEW

The number of commercial plantings has been reduced so that few remain at the present time. One of the two largest and oldest succumbed to the oil development which took place at Signal Hill near Long Beach. This old planting covered several acres set out in orchard form. The fruit was sold on the Southern California markets. Probably the largest commercial planting at the present time is that of S. C. French, near Murray Dam, eleven miles from San Diego. It consists of about five acres of trees twenty years of age. The yearly production for the five acres is from thirty to thirty five tons, the individual trees producing from thirty to forty pounds. The fruit is packed in ordinary strawberry baskets and shipped in strawberry crates. On the retail market the fruit brings from 15 cents to 20 cents a basket, and the demand is good.

In addition to the strawberry guava, there have been several other types of guava planted in different parts of Southern California and these are found fruiting today in the warmer and more favored sections. They belong for the most part to the tropical species, Psidium guajava, a fruit widely distributed throughout the tropics and used in many ways in cooking, but particularly for jelly making. The famous guava jelly of the tropical Americas is made from this kind of guava. In many parts of the Tropics it has become almost a pest, as is evidenced both in Hawaii and Southern Florida, where it runs wild, forming dense thickets. It originated in the tropical Americas, according to investigators, probably in the region between Mexico and Peru. It is referred to in ancient Aztec records.

In habit of growth it is larger and more arborescent than the strawberry guava, reaching a height of from twenty-five to thirty feet. The foliage is not so thick, and is more prominently veined than that of the ordinary guava. Excellent specimens of this guava are to be found in Santa Barbara, Hollywood and San Diego and in the foothill belt of Orange and Los Angeles counties. It is far more tender than the strawberry guava and can only be grown in those districts which are practically frostless.

One of the finest specimens is to be found on the John Keith place in Hollywood, where so many tropical and subtropical fruits have long found a congenial environment. A tree there has attained a height of at least twenty feet. A collection of several types is being grown on the H. C. Oakeley Place at Brentwood Park. C. P. Taft of Orange has also long experimented with this fruit and has developed methods of propagating it by budding. W. A. Spinks, of Duarte, another enthusiastic grower of subtropical fruits, has a number of plants in bearing, while on the grounds of the Citrus Experiment Station at Riverside there is a fairly large-sized planting of some of the best types brought from Florida by Dr. Fawcett of the station staff. Valuation Gain Offsets Tonnage Loss for Last Year's Crops

THERE is much more optimism reflected in the production and valuation totals of California agriculture for 1924 than the gloomy prospects of early summer indicated there would be, according to E. E. Kaufman, agricultural statistician for the California co-operative crop reporting service.

The total production of field and fruit crops Mr. Kaufman's figures show, was about 1,994,000 tons, or 17 per cent, less than in 1923; but the total value for the same crops was less than 1 per cent below that of the 1923 crops. In 1924, the total value of all main crops was $368,427,000, while in 1923 the total value of these respective crops was $370,398,000. Increased prices for farm products are chiefly responsible for this situation. In Mr. Kaufman's official summary only the main field, and fruit crops are included. No account is made of vegetables, animals and animal products, which, of course, represent a large total both as to yield and valuation.

An unprecendented drought continued from the autumn of 1923 and endured throughout 1924. Rainfall in most of the valleys of the State was far below normal, resulting in the smallest grain crop that California has produced for many years. The small accumulation of snow at high elevations in the mountains resulted in an inadequate supply of summer irrigation water in some areas and reduced the flow in many rivers to such a degree as to allow the ground water supply for pumping to be lowered considerably in certain localities. Mountain water from melting snows usually impounded for electrical power development was so limited that the most careful conservation of electricity was necessary throughout the State during the summer months from June to September. The epidemic of foot-and-mouth disease temporarily closed to the California farmer some markets that he normally supplied.

The individual farmer was faced with conditions that seemed extremely severe. He practiced conservation of water and electricity and made expenditures with care. As harvest seasons approached and passed both yields and quality of products proved generally better than had been expected.

The crop reporting service summary was only 75.3 per cent as great as that of 1923. The acreage of tree fruits, nuts and vineyards of bearing age for the 1924 crop was eight per cent greater than the year before.

The Crop Reporting Service summary gives comparative figures for the years from 1919, to 1924, inclusive, as to total acreage, production and value of the main field and fruit crops. These are shown in the following table:

Year	Acreage	Production (tons)	Average value per ton	Farm value Dec. 1
Field Crops
1924....	3,953,000	6,853,145	$27.83	$190,716,000
1923....	5,248,000	8,264,382	23.84	197,032,000
1922....	5,321,000	8,147,186	22.47	183,041,000
1921....	5,208,000	8,231,916	17.60	144,863,000
1920....	5,690,000	8,282,526	28.44	235,553,000
1919....	5,876,000	8,134,749	35.91	292,146,000
Fruit Crops	(Bearing acreage)
1924....	1,418,500	3,015,530	58.93	177,711,000
1923....	1,313,900	3,598,580	48.18	173,711,000
1922....		2,997,500	66.93	200,611,000
1921....		2,153,300	83.58	179,964,000
1920....		2,640,550	88.07	232,557,000
1919....		2,651,050	91.14	241,628,000

The grand total tonnage of all main crops was 9,868,725 in 1924 and 11,862,962 in 1923, the total of last year being 83.2 per cent of that of the year before.

Farm and Orchard Magazine

Devoted to the multifarious agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Orchard Magazine is the only farm journal in the West printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

"Not So Bad"

THERE are those who think that the less said about California's agriculture in 1924, the better. Conditions were unusual and unfavorable, just about everything seemed to happen that could happen to discourage the farmer, orchardist and stockman and the results were distressing—inevitably so. That is what one hears from some of the more pessimistically inclined. The more optimistic (and logical) hold that things were "not so bad, everything considered." One and all, the gloomy, the cheerful, and those "on the fence," so to speak, and uncertain as to just how things do stand, are referred to the annual report of Agricultural Statistician Kaufman of the California co-operative crop reporting service appearing in boiled-down form in this issue of "Farm and Orchard." That report, the product of careful study and analysis by expert and unprejudiced observers, is well calculated to make thoughtful growers and the public generally feel good.

The report tells its own story and requires no particular comment. There is no use rehashing what the growers had to put up with in the year just ended—that is touched upon in Mr. Kaufman's observations, and is quite fresh enough in the memory of everyone. The big significant thing about this official summary of 1924 conditions is the fact that a total crop output of 17 per cent less than that of the year before should have brought the producers within less than 1 per cent of the amount of money returns realised from the larger volume of production of 1923. That tells the story of increased prices for agricultural products. It might be added that the total 1924 crop yield itself exceeded all expectations, showing that conditions were nothing near so bad as believed, but there is real cause for cheerfulness in the year's financial results. Cause for genuine optimism over the 1925 outlook is to be seen, too, in the improved price situation which developed in the unfavorable year which has now gone down into agricultural history.

"Bugs" on the Run

A recent summary of the Los Angeles county horticultural inspectors' monthly reports regarding the mealybug situation in their respective districts, particularly with reference to the Citrophilus species, shows a very encouraging situation. In all of the old infested areas where systematic liberations of Cryptolaemus have been made through the county insectary, and through the San Gabriel Valley Pest Control Association in the Pasadena area, it is difficult, according to the reports to find a mealybug. Most of the infestation to be found at the present time lies in the areas bordering the old infested areas and in newly infested orchard areas, such as Covina, North Whittier Heights, Whittier east of the San Gabriel River, and Pacoima where the mealybug was discovered late in the season. It is these areas which will require the greater part of the attention of the insectary during the coming season.

Use of Arsenical Ores in Agriculture

By WILL C. HIGGINS

Arsenic in ores was penalized by the smelters not so very long ago.

Now, however, the producer of arsenical ores is finding a better market, and for some time to come it will require a larger tonnage to supply the constantly-growing demand for this mineral product.

This demand comes, very largely, from the cotton growers of the South, as it has been demonstrated that calcium arsenate made from the former valueless ores, if properly applied, is death to the boll wevil, so destructive of growing cotton.

As a result of this demand, renewed activity has been recorded in the mining camps of the West in the development and operation of mines and prospects productive of arsenical ores, while reduction works all over this western country have been in the market for ores of this character.

The Southern Pacific Railroad Company, it is stated, uses 250,000 pounds of calcium arsenic, yearly, for the purpose of eradicating weeds along its right of way.

That the demand for calcium arsenate by cotton growers is largely in excess of the supply is shown in a report sent out by the United States Geological Survey, in which it is stated the supply of arsenic last year was sufficient only to treat 4.4 per cent of the cotton acreage of the country. The use of arsenic in various sprays for different purposes is familiar to all agriculturists.

In commenting upon the increased interest being recorded in the production of arsenical ores a writer of more than ordinary foresight says: "Arsenic is surely the Cinderella of the mineral family."

Farm News of the Great Southwest

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS

LOS OLIVOS.—Personal inspection of the cattle ranges of the county by members of the Santa Barbara county branch of the California Cattlemen's Association discloses that conditions are better now than at any time in a number of years. There has been sufficient early rain to bring the forage along in fine shape, and the fact that stock were removed from the ranges early last year because of drought conditions resulted in a heavy re-seeding of the natural grasses; consequently most ranges that have suffered for years from overstocking are now better supplied with forage than ever. In some sections, cattlemen report, the forage resembles that of years ago when abundant rains through several seasons brought a heavy vegetation. Some cattlemen do not expect to turn stock back on to their ranges until later in the season, in order to help in the replenishment of the native grasses.

PRUNING DEMONSTRATED

BEAUMONT.—M. M. Winslow, Riverside County Farm Adviser, opened the pruning program of the local agricultural extension service for 1925 with a service of demonstrations in Beaumont the first week in January.

Demonstrating for Growers.

M. M. Winslow, Riverside County Farm Adviser, pruning a Beaumont orchard peach tree.

With him was Prof. J. W. Gray of the Beaumont High School, who took occasion to give the boys of the High School Agricultural Club a lesson in pruning. Growers of the district were much interested in the work. Demonstrations were given in the peach orchard of Mont P. Chubbs, the young pear orchard of W. D. Halladay and the apple orchard of Rice & Elder.

FROZEN-WATER STORES

BAKERSFIELD.—Packed snow is accumulating great reserves of water in the Sierra Nevada Mountains, according to reports from John R. White, superintendent of Sequoia and General Grant national parks. Recent tests have shown that at 6400 feet, 7.46 inches of water is contained in 26.8 inches of packed snow. At 8500 feet elevation, 8.79 inches water content was estimated for 42 inches of snow. The seasonal snowfall at the first of the year was around 163.9 inches as compared with 26.7 last season; the rainfall in the mountains, 22.43 compared with 2.62 inches. The snow on the ground at Giant Forest on December 29 was 29.8 inches compared with 1.4 inches in 1923.

BEES SHIPPED NORTH

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—Exchange of alfalfa for cotton in the Salt River Valley has been hard on the beekeepers. Still, about 450 tons of extracted honey was produced in the local area during 1924. For several years flowers have been almost unknown on the plains and this, too, has contributed in keeping down the honey supply. The best of the local supply comes from the desert blooms, especially from the mesquite and similar plants. A number of Arizona beekeepers now are growing bees especially for shipment to northern points and are reported to be doing very well in the industry. Queen bees have been shipped in large number from Phoenix for many years.

GROWERS ARE BUSY

YUCAIPA.—The apple growers of the Yucaipa Valley, after a breathing spell following the big job of picking, packing and shipping their fruit, are tackling the next big job, the pruning of the trees. Most of the orchard owners plan to get all their pruning done in January, although some will wait until February. Expert pruners are now greatly in demand, as the orchard owners have found that the best are none too good. Next will come the spraying and then the thinning, so that the growers have plenty of activity to look forward to. The cold snap in December was welcomed by the apple growers.

GREEN PEAS POPULAR

CARPINTERIA.—The green pea-growing industry is becoming popular in Carpinteria Valley. The acreage is somewhat increased over that of last year, and already green peas are being supplied the market. December's cold weather had little result in curtailing the crop output, growers reporting the loss due to low temperatures as very small. Peas have been grown for cover crops by some lemon growers, but the greater acreages is for the market. Carpinteria is also seeing quite a new acreage to strawberries, a high quality of berry having been grown which finds a ready market locally as well as in neighboring communities.

DAMAGE IS SMALL

DINUBA.—Some damage was done to grape acreage in Tulare county through lack of water during the past summer, but it is not believed by vineyardists or officials interested that Prof. R. L. Nougaret of the State Department of Agriculture referred to Tulare county when he said a considerable acreage in San Joaquin Valley had actually died out because of the lack of water. Vines suffered generally, according to Farm Adviser W. E. Gilfillan, and in some localities more than others, but on the whole, by use of pumps, the crop in this county came through successfully. Vineyards in Tulare county without pumping plants are not the rule and some without this aid to irrigation were saved the generosity of neighbors.

NEW COTTON AREA

VISALIA.—Present plans call for considerable cotton planting near Visalia during the coming spring. Land owners in the Fisher tract northeast of Visalia are leveling newly acquired acreage with the idea of planting cotton. Growers west and northwest of here are also said to be considering cotton as one of next season's crops. Last season cotton in small plantings did well in this district and the Visalia Chamber of Commerce is encouraging the project along with greater concentration on dairying and the raising of poultry.

BIGGEST PLANT SHIPPER

POMONA.—L. C. Johnson of this city enjoys the distinction, according to the State Horticultural Department, of being the largest shipper of vegetable plants out of California. Mr. Johnson has propagated vegetable plants here for the past eight years, having specialized since 1919 in tomato plants, although having grown the past year 1,000,000 individual plants other than tomatoes. Most of his plants have been shipped to the cannery sections of Utah, several canning companies there distributing them to farmers who grew tomatoes for the canneries. Mr. Johnson says he received a single order from one firm for over 800,000 tomato plants. Orders for 500,000 plants, he says, are not unusual.

REPORTS GOOD HATCH

ONTARIO.—J. J. Cox, a poultryman residing at 1037 East D street, this city, obtained something of a record recently when his incubator produced [illegible] chicks from [illegible] eggs, an average of [illegible] per cent, which he declares to be unusually high. In making the setting, Mr. Cox tested [illegible] eggs and eliminated 101. The poultryman attributes his success to steady heat and an electric fan running constantly.

Heavy Division Leads for December

SANTA CRUZ.—The third month of the Sixth California Farm Bureau Egg Laying Contest closed with a flock production of 48.9 per cent. The heavy division surpassed all other divisions during December for high production. The flock in general is well out of the molt and in fine condition. The feed consumed has been as follows:

	Lbs. Mash	Lbs. Grain	Percent Prod't'n
Light Division	3.2	3.0	47.4
Heavy Division	3.7	3.4	59.3
Clubs Division	3.1	2.9	41.2
Two-Year Division	3.3	3.1	48.0

The pen of H. M. Leathers' tock first place in the pullet light division, but was closely followed by Sea Breeze Poultry Farm and R. E. Burton, who tied for second place. John F. Stone's entry won third place in this division. V. H. Guthrie, Petaluma, is first to date with 652 eggs, Sea Breeze Poultry Farm, Capitola being second with 600 eggs. Alberta Ranch has high hen, with 675 egg production.

A. C. Anderson's Rhode Island Reds led the pullet heavy division of December, G. & A. Dryselius's Barred Rocks taking second place, and Dryden's Barred Rocks, third. Dryden's has high hen to date, with a 72 egg total and high pen, with 507 eggs.

John L. Davidson, San Francisco, led in the two-year contest at the close of December, with a total of 1648 eggs for the 15 months. The Collins Trapnest Farm, Santa Cruz, was second with 1465 eggs for its pen.

Arizona Layers Making Good Records

TUCSON.—Notwithstanding the fact that there were nearly twice the number of birds involved, and that December, 1924, was colder than December, 1923, the average monthly production of 48.4 per cent for last month was 6.9 per cent higher than for the corresponding month of the year before in the Arizona Egg Laying Contest. This production is even more creditable when it is considered that 22 birds in the contest have not yet come into production because of immaturity.

The percentage production of 74.7 per cent for the high pen is extremely good for the month of December. The high individual for the month produced 93.5 per cent, another good record for the period.

Highest honor for the month in pens goes to E. R. Johnson's S. C. White Leghorns, which produced 278 eggs. Lee Apel's S. C. White Leghorns took second place with 272 eggs, and Del Rio Poultry Farm came in third with 262 eggs. All pens consisted of 12 birds.

In pen totals to date, E. R. Johnson's S. C. White Leghorns are leading with 512 eggs. Lee Apel's S. C. White Leghorns are second with 489 eggs. Del Rio Poultry Farm's S. C. White Leghorns are a close third with 465 eggs.

S. M. Brimberry's R. I. Red No. 35 leads all individuals for the month with 29 eggs to her credit. Four other individuals tied for second place with 26 eggs. Six others with a 25 egg production tied for third place. Mr. Brimberry's "Red" also has the honor of having the highest individual record to date, with 52 eggs. Del Rio Poultry Farm's No. 57 is second with 49 eggs, while Sunnyside Poultry Farm's No. 81 is third with 48 eggs. This is for a period of 61 days.

Some trouble is being experienced with birds laying eggs on the roost at night,

Some Timely Planting Observations by a Home Orchardist

By W. H. BACH

DURING the past two or three years thousands of acres of land in the vicinity of Los Angeles has been cut up into building lots and now that the holidays are over the principal topic of conversation in many homes will be what to plant on them. The fear that there would be an insufficient quantity of water to properly irrigate them prevented many from planting home orchards last season, but the rains and the promise of a good supply of water for the coming season stimulated the planting idea and for three months the demand for nursery stock is bound to be enormous.

There is a mistaken idea on the part of many home owners that a tree is only a tree and that all one has to do is to get one and stick it in the ground. Trees, like people, have to be acclimated and climates have different effects on them as they do on people. The best informed planters have always condemned importation of trees from a distance. Two principal reasons for this exist: One, the danger of introducing some new disease and the other that the nursery stock is raised under different conditions and as a result has to accommodate itself to its changed environment.

A few years ago a man came through our section selling trees from another State. The writer objected to it seriously as there was prevalent in that State a disease that we were trying hard to keep out of this section. One neighbor said: "If I can save from 5 to 15 cents each on my trees I'm going to do it." Several orders were given, but today there is not a tree of those orders that has not been taken out on account of the disease. Had these trees been bought from one of our home nurseries there would have been some chance of redress, but as it was the trees, freight, planting and care for three years, not to mention the loss of time, constituted a complete loss.

In planning the home orchard care should be taken to procure trees and varieties that are suitable for the location. There is no use in planting sweet cherries in our dry, interior valleys of Los Angeles county for they seldom bear fruit. We have a tree in our home orchard near Burbank that is nine years old and it has produced seven cherries in its lifetime. But the English Marello bore fruit the second year in the orchard The Early Richmond also bears fruit.

Many trees are "self-sterile," that is, they will not pollinate themselves, making it necessary to have two varieties in order to get fruit. In places where there are many home orchards this is not so serious, as neighbors may have pollenators; but this condition is common and orchard workers run across it continually.

YOU'LL WANT PEACHES

Of course, the home orchard is limited for space and must be carefully considered. Everybody wants peaches. The very early ones such as the Mayflowers are not as good as the later varieties. Alexanders are a little better and the next best is Early Imperial. But the earliest real peach is the Early Crawford ripening in July. The late peaches are not of such good flavor, but if one wants a later freestone the Salway is usually for sale at all nurseries. A peach known as the "November free" ripens in October and November, but we have not found it to be very good flavor. For a very late, the Late Champion appears to be the best for flavor and texture. This variety ripened with us the first week of November the past season. For a cling for home use, there is no superior to the old Lemon Cling. For an early one, the Tuscan and for a late, the Phillips give best results.

Three varieties of plums give good results in almost all parts of this section: Green Gage, Santa Rosa and Satsuma. When fully ripened, the Green Gage is a fairly good table plum, but not equal to the Santa Rosa. It is fine for jellies and tart preserves, but its principal feature is its utility as a pollinator. Both the Santa Rosa and Satsuma are self-sterile and should not be planted alone. As they interpollinate, the two make an ideal planting, for the Santa Rosa is a good eating and canning plum, while the Satsuma is one of our best plums for home canning. For jellies, the fairly green Green Gage, juice colored with juice from the Santa Rosa or Satsuma, makes a superior product. These trees are all thrifty and will do well in a variety of soils.

Apples do not do especially well in the valleys, but we have an early harvest that produces as fine fruit as I have ever eaten in Michigan, New York or New England. The Delicious does fairly well in most sections, but is liable to sun scald if heavily watered just before a hot spell. The winter banana also does reasonably well.

A NEW PRUNE

For general use in home orchards, the Italian prune is more desirable than the French, as it is larger, with better flavor either for eating out of hand or canning. The Papagone prune, a recent introduction of the United States Department of Agriculture, is superior to any of them, but not many of these are available and any desiring that variety had better plant a tree of either the Italian or French and then topwork one or two of the main branches after a year or two when the grafts of the Papagone will be available in quantity.

The quince is coming to the front rapidly since the introduction of the Smyrna varieties that are quite similar to the apple. They are good keepers, a specimen that laid out on a shelf on our porch last season keeping till along in April. The pineapple quince is also a good variety. Quince trees require considerable attention when young in order to strengthen the scaffold branches, as the tendency is to grow up long, spindling whips that will not carry the load of fruit. As the tree is ornamental, it is not out of place in a front yard.

It is a question if it is advisable to plant pears. Blight affects many trees and they are a long time in coming into bearing.

HACHIYA BEST PERSIMMON

The persimmon will flourish in nearly all sections. It is a tree with beautiful foliage, waxy leaves, symmetrical growth and magnificent fruit. It is especially beautiful in the fall when the leaves are off and the tree is covered with the orange and red-colored ripening fruit. The Hachiya variety is practically seedless and has very little astringency. There are in the neighborhood of 175 varieties of the Japanese persimmon listed, but only three varieties, of which the Hachiya is the favorite, are common in California. Mr. Morrow, superintendent of the United States experimental station at Chico, however, says that he believes the Fuyu will supersede all others when fully tested.

On account of its beauty and utility the pomegranate is rapidly growing in favor. It, too, is a hardy ornamental that will grow most anywhere. It has a beautiful bloom in the spring, waxy foliage during the summer and fine, ornamental fruit ripening from September to November. A new variety with double flowers has lately been introduced, but its fruiting qualities have not yet been tested. The Wonderful is the favorite for a medium-sized fruit and Negro Monstruso for a large one. New varieties are now being tested, but the Wonderful is the best for the home orchard.

Of course everyone wants an apricot tree. The Royal is the leading canning variety. The Blenheim is also good for canning. The Moorpark is much later than either. Two new varieties ripening in June are being tested, but are not at present available as nursery stock.

For a hardy ornamental, bearing fruit, the Feijoa is a "winner." It will stand 14 degrees of cold and can be grown anywhere in this section. It has a beautiful bloom that lasts sometimes three months and its fruit, about the size of an egg, with a distinctly pinapple flavor, ripens in the late fall. The leading variety is the Choiceana. Strawberry Guavas can be grown anywhere. There are two varieties and either make a neat border plant.

THE SUB-TROPICALS

Unless you are in an almost frostless region it will not pay to plant many of the sub-tropics. The Satsuma orange will stand quite a heavy frost; the lemon and orange will stand a matter of 26 to 28 degrees without serious injury. The Lemon Guava will stand scarcely any frost. Figs will stand about 14 degrees and probably the best variety for the home is the mission. If you have little room, do not get any of the Smyrna varieties as they require the capri fig and fig wasp to pollinate them. The Adriatic types are all self pollinating.

If not in an almost frostless region with a bountiful water supply, it is almost useless to plant avocatos. The Mexican varieties will stand about as much frost as a lemon, but the hybrids and Gautemalan types have to carry their fruit over the winter and the frost chills the fruit, making it fall off the trees. We lost our entire crop of Fuertes in the frost of 1922 when the temperature reached 22 degrees. If your temperature does not reach below 28, Fuertes will hold their fruit. The Ganter is a reliable bearer and as it blooms in April and matures its fruit from September to Christmas, is a pretty sure fruiter as well as being an ornamental tree. But don't let it get dry in the entire season if you want it to fruit.

A CHINESE FAVORITE

The Jujube is an ornamental tree of upright growth and a desirable fruit when dried or made into glace fruits. The Chinese use it as we do prunes.

Nectarines, while a magnificent fruit both for eating fresh and canning, are unreliable bearers and where one's space is limited are not desirable.

The Loquat will bloom and fruit is nearly all sections of Southern California. A Persian or a Weeping Mulberry produces good fruit and if a small summer house with shade is desired, the Weeping Mulberry makes a fine shrub. It grows up a straight stem and when topped throws outa a multitude of lateral branches which bear a fruit sub-acid and similar to a blackberry.

Prepare your soil, dig deep holes, set the trees so the bud union is not covered and cut the nursery stock back to about thirty to thirty-two inches above the ground. I don't believe in cutting them to eighteen or twenty inches as so many nursery men advocate. This is particularly the case in home orchards. Let them grow the first year and then train to three or four scaffold branches. When the time comes to cut them back for the scaffold branches if you don't know how to cut them, get someone to do it who does know.

Successful farmers are generally willing to learn and adopt new practices.

County Crop Reports Are Encouraging

SANTA BARBARA.—Crop reports for last year for Santa Barbara county as compiled by Horticultural Commissioner E. S. Kellogg show up encouragingly despite untoward conditions due to drought. The 1924 lemon crop set a new record with 245,386 boxes, an increase over the crop output of the preceding year and 100,386 boxes over 1922. The year also saw 625 boxes of grapefruit and 1440 boxes of oranges go from this district. During the year seventy-two acres were added to the lemon orchard area, making 1365 acres out to lemons in this county. Of the total, 200 acres are nonbearing. The orange groves cover 135 acres of bearing trees and forty-five acres of nonbearing. There was an increase of 15 acres in oranges in 1924. Though the county has 375 acres to olives, none of this crop was marketed during the year, due to market conditions. Mr. Kellogg's orchard report for the county follows:

	Bearing	Nonbearing	Planted 1924
Apples	180	54	23
Apricots	290	180	18
Cherries	35	15	3
Figs	16	11	0
Grapes, wine	50	50	20
Grapes, table	65	40	20
Grapefruit	8	00	00
Lemons	1365	200	72
Olives	375	00	00
Oranges	135	45	15
Peaches	200	75	8
Pears	30	40	6
Persimmons	25	12	4
Plums	27	00	2
Prunes	00	15	1
Walnuts	4800	450	210

Irrigation Field Day

Because of the growing interest in overhead irrigation and the number of persons contemplating installation of such systems prior to the 1925 irrigation season, a special field day for study of this practice is being planned by the Agricultural Extension Service of Orange and Los Angeles counties, in co-operation with the Citrus Growers' departments of the farm bureaus of these two counties. On January 27, it is planned to visit a number of installations in both counties to study types, arrangements, costs and results.

CENSUS IS STARTED

DELANO.—H. I. Howland, county horticultural inspector, has begun the work of taking the government farm census in the section which covers the Delano, McFarland, Wasco and Jasmine districts. Mr. Howland recently passed examinations in Bakersfield to qualify for the census work.

The Livestock Bulletin

By ROBERT T. LYANS

Steps were taken at the close of the recent Pacific Slope Dairy Show at Oakland to incorporate an organization to take over the annual show, which, since its inception at Stockholm in 1921, has been directed by the staff of the California Dairy Council. Frank T. Murphy, former Farm Adviser of San Luis Obispo county, has been chosen as permanent manager of the show under the new arrangement; Dr. C. L. Roadhouse has been re-elected president; W. E. Haley, San Francisco, R. A. Condee, Chino, George W. Prising, San Francisco, M. H. Adamson, Los Angeles, J. N. Gilman, San Francisco, vice-presidents; Sam H. Greene, secretary-treasurer. Directors of the show were elected as follows: Albert Meister, Sacramento; D. M. Dorman, Los Angeles; C. E. Gray, San Francisco; George H. Frampton, Artesia; George W. Prising, San Francisco; C. L. Roadhouse, Davis; George Platt, Los Angeles; Robert E. Jones, San Francisco; M. H. Adamson, Los Angeles; W. E. Haley, San Francisco; A. Johnson, Los Angeles; J. W. Coppini, Ferndale; P. H. Davis, San Anselmo; H. W. Low, Oakland; Robert A. Condee, Chino; Frank M. Helm, Fresno; W. T. Cole, San Francisco; J. J. O'Neill, Oakland; J. H. A. Jorgensen, Riverdale; Walter A. Hass, San Francisco; F. J. Bowden, Hanford; George H. Ball, Fresno; W. H. Scott, Hanford; Sam Greene, San Francisco; William Regan, Davis.

Members of the California State Veterinary Association devoted the last three days of the old year in attendance at their annual convention, which was held in Pasadena, December 29 to 31. The convention was marked by an excellent attendance, with J. M. Arbura, San Francisco, president of the organization, in the chair. Other officers assisting were Dr. Leslie M. Hurt Pasadena, vice-president; J. P. Bushong, Los Angeles, secretary, and James Boyd, San Jose, treasurer. Joseph E. Leddy, vice-president of the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce, delivered the welcome address in behalf of the Crown City. Dr. Hurt and Dr. Robert Jay addressed the gathering on feeding of live stock. Other speakers were Dr. J. Traum of the University of California; E. M. Dobbs, Nevada State Live-stock Board; Dr. W. R. Carr, Los Angeles, M. Rosenberger, and O. A. Langley. The annual banquet was held on December 30 at the Hotel Vista Del Arroyo, Pasadena, and the final day was spent at the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards. Officers elected for the coming year are as follows: Dr. L. M. Hurt, president; Dr. Oscar Kron, San Francisco, vice-president; Dr. J. P. Bushong, Los Angeles, secretary and Dr. James Boyd, San Jose, re-elected treasurer.

The month of January is being marked by numerous important western live-stock events. The Ogden live-stock show was held at Odgen, Utah, January 6-10, while the National Western Stock Show opened yesterday in Denver and closes on January 24. The twenty-eighth annual convention of the American National Live-stock Association was held at Albuquerque, New Mexico, January 14-16, and the annual convention of the National Wool Growers' Association is to be held January 21-23 at San Francisco.

Tuberculosis is shown to be a prominent cause for losses in swine by a recent report of the meat inspection division of the United States Department of Agriculture. Of about 54,000,000 hogs federally inspected during the year ended June 30, 1924, a total of 232,670 dressed hog carcasses were condemned for various causes. Nearly one-half of this number were condemned because of tuberculosis infection. In addition to the 100,110 whole carcasses there were 1,099,253 parts of carcasses condemned because of tuberculosis. This represents a great loss to the swine raisers of the country which, according to specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, can be prevented to a large extent. Following infected cattle in feed lots is said by the government specialists to be a chief means of swine becoming infected. Avian tuberculosis has been shown to be another important cause of infection in swine. Fowls that have died from tuberculosis, when fed to swine, pass the disease on to the swine.

Far-reaching changes in the world-dairy industry in recent years are vitally affecting volume and course of international trade in dairy products, and directly or indirectly exerting an influence upon American markets, declares the United States Department of Agriculture in a special review of the situation. The foreign butter market just now is exerting a strengthening influence upon the market in this country, the department says. On the other hand, it is pointed out, the prospect of increased supplies from New Zealand, Australia and Argentina, together with continued recovery of the dairy industry in Europe during the coming year, may make it possible for British markets to find such ample supplies as to react unfavorably upon the butter market of the United States. Foreign production is said to be the heaviest it has ever been, likewise dairy production has been increasing in virtually all countries the world over, due to the general profitableness of dairying as compared with other farm enterprises. Due to this continued increase, the department says more consideration will have to be given the demand side of the situation.

Following a spectacular show-yard career, the remarkable Jersey cow, Sociable Sybil, recently completed a 365-day record of 855.16 pounds of butter fat and 15,334 pounds of milk as a senior 4-year-old. This good cow is owned by Ogden Mills, proprietor of Inderkill Farms, Staatsburg, New York, and has to her credit seventeen grand championships in the show ring, including that of the National Dairy Show of 1923. The sire of this outstanding Jersey is the famous bull, Sybil's Gamboge, while her dam, Eminent's Jersey Skater, is a daughter of Imp. Combination's Premier. Sociable Sybil is reported to be the highest testing national grand champion cow of the breed, and is regarded as one of the greatest living Jersey cows.

Many a valuable bull is rendered useless by improper care and management, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The importance of exercise is often underestimated, and many bulls, after their value has been proven, are found to be sterile or slow breeders, due largely to close confinement and lack of activity. This is more true of dairy bulls, perhaps, because of their temperament, which makes them more difficult to handle. Regular exercise helps materially to keep the bull in good condition. Any method that will make the sluggish bull take exercise regularly and without overwork is satisfactory.

Crown City's Annual Poultry Show Is Featured by Quality

By ROBERT T. LYANS

ECLIPSING all previous Crown City exhibits both as to quality and number of birds on display, the fifteenth annual Pasadena Poultry Show, held January 6-10, marked another forward step by breeders of standard bred poultry on Southern California farms.

The determination of the management of the Pasadena Poultry Association to make this year's show an open event tended to create much interest among poultrymen all over the Southland, and resulted in an avalanche of earies that taxed the association show space to the limit. In fact, many entries could not be accepted on account of a lack of accommodations. The show room on Union street, the only available place which could be found, was far too small for an event of this character, but by double-decking the coops, and in many cases placing two females in ordinary individual coops, something over 1100 birds were placed on exhibition by Secretary H. W. Adams and his corps of capable assistants. By another year it is expected that the new Pasadena auditorium will be available for staging the annual poultry show, thus eliminating such an inconvenience. That the show this year was a splendid success was evidenced on every hand, not only by the exceptional quality to be seen in many of the classes, but by the many visitors in attendance, and by the enthusiasm of the exhibitors themselves.

In numbers, the Wyandottes and Plymouth Rocks displayed about equal strength, with approximately 170 specimens of each breed on exhibition. These breeds were followed closely by the Rhode Island Reds, with around 160 birds. The Cornish breed displayed remarkable strength both in numbers and quality, with approximately 120 specimens on exhibit and with an array of fine birds that was one of the real features of the show. The Anconas came next with 80 high-class speckled beauties, many of them good enough for any show. Breeders of S. C. White Leghorns and Jersey Black Giants sprung a real surprise by entering no less than 50 birds of each breed, and in the writer's estimation a finer exhibit of White Leghorns has not been seen in Southern California in many years. Buff Orpingtons were out as usual in full force, with about forty quality birds on hand to uphold the standard of this worthy English breed.

The judges who placed the awards in the various classes were as follows: J. L. Harrison, Pasadena, who judged Minorcas, Blue Andalusians, Black Langshans, Lakenvelders, White Faced Black Spanish, Dark Brahmas, Faverolles and Dorkings; William C. Tallant, Edmond, Oklahoma, Barred Plymouth Rocks, White Plymouth Rocks, White Wyandottes, S. C. Rhode Island Reds, White Leghorns and Anconas: W. M. Wise, East San Gabriel, Buff Orpingtons, Silver Laced, Buff, Partridge, and Columbian Wyandottes, Partridge Plymouth Rocks, Jersey Black Giants, Light Brahmas and R. C. Rhode Island Reds, and Fritz Thott, Glendale, Cornish classes and all of the bantam classes.

The best pen in the show was selected from the strong exhibit of Rhode Island Reds, the first prize pen exhibited by the veteran breeder and judge, J. L. Harrison of Pasadena, being chosen for this coveted honor. The best cock, cockerel, hen, pullet and pen was shown by Colby and Merwin, Pasadena, who have succeeded in capturing this award with Dark Barred Plymouth Rocks at the Pasadena show for three years in succession. For the best male in the show, the first prize White Plymouth Rock cock exhibited by Platt and Wise, San Gabriel, was selected, while the honors for best female in the show went to a Dark Cornish hen shown by Williams Bros., Fullerton. The best display in the show also was awarded to Williams Bros. on their exhibit of White Leghorns, while the award for best display of bantams went to O. A. Ford, Redlands, on an exhibit of Buff Cochins. The first prize White Plymouth Rock pullet exhibited by Platt and Wise and the first prize Dark Cornish cock shown by Williams Bros. are deserving of special mention because of their outstanding quality and almost faultless type, and in the writer's estimation would have made a more popular choice for best female and male, respectively, in the show than the birds selected for these honors.

Following is the list of awards:

DARK BARRED PLYMOUTH ROCKS

Colby and Merwin, Pasadena—1st and 5th cock; 1, 3, cockerel; 1 hen; 1, 3 pullet; 1 pen. H. E. Sholl, Long Beach—3 cock; 4, 5 cockerel; 2, 3 hen; 2, 5 pullet; 3, 4 pen. Stanley S. A Troublesome Disease of Citrus Fruits

BY M. B. ROUNDS,

Agricultural Extension Service, Los Angeles County

The grower of oranges and lemons is confronted by so many things to fight and control in order to keep his trees in a healthy growing condition that when it is suggested that he carry on a practice which is a preventive measure only, he frequently hesitates. But just as is business policy to have insurance of all kinds as a protection, it is also good business to practice prevention of certain recognized pests and diseases.

One of these troubles which in some years causes severe losses of citrus fruits, is the brown rot. During seasons of considerable rainfall and much damp weather, especially December, January or February, it is very severe, causing a considerable percentage of the fruit to decay and drop from the trees. During dry seasons, very little loss from this disease is experienced because the conditions are not ideal for its development.

Brown rot is caused by a fungus which is present in the ground at all times and in all soils, but does not affect the fruit until the ideal conditions for it exist. These are standing water on the surface of the soil and a generally moist orchard. Under such conditions the fungus arises from the soil, comes to the surface and reaches the lower hanging fruits probably largely by splashing rain drops. On a sandy soil, standing water is seldom present and as a consequence, there is less danger on this type of ground.

When the conditions are ideal and the organism is present on the surface, the fruits are quickly and easily infected. It is not necessary for an abrasion to be made in the rind for infection to take place, as the spores of the fungus are able to penetrate the epidermis of the skin when it is in a normal state. The disease is manifested by a small dark brown spot in the rind spreading rapidly throughout the fruit, causing it to rot.

After infection has taken place and decomposition has started, it is too late to accomplish much by the application of a spray. Prevention is the remedy and the usual practice is to spray the lower parts of the trees and the ground with a bordeaux mixture, starting early enough so that the application can be completed before the late fall rains. The formula being used in some parts of the county is the 3-3-50, that is, 3 pounds of bluestone and 3 pounds of unslaked lime added to 50 gallons of water as a spray mixture. This is made on the ranch by taking two barrels, to both of which is added nine four-quart pails of water. In one, the bluestone is dissolved by suspending 45 pounds of bluestone in a sack in the top of the water so that it does not extend much below the surface. This must be done at least twenty-four hours preceding the time when it is to be used. To the other barrel is added 45 pounds of quick lime. The contents of each barrel should be stirred well before using. When ready to use, take three pails of tthe bluestone solution, adding this to the spray tank, which is partially filled with water with the agitator going; then add three pails of the lime mixture to the bluestone solution in the spray tank, filling the tank up to 250 gallons. Spray the lower parts of the trees, both foliage and trunks, also the ground around the trees.

As already stated, the brown rot does not give the grower much concern in light, gravelly soils. On silty and heavy soils, however, there is frequently considerable loss. Through a period of years, there is no question but that this preventive measure pays, although some years it does appear to give no return for the expense incurred.

Lemons and navels appear to be more susceptible than Valencias, although on heavy soils where drainage is not very good it may pay to treat the Valencias. January is not too late to apply the spray, providing heavy rains do not occur and periods of very cool damp weather do not prevail.

Prominent Bee Man to Teach at Chaffey

UPLAND.—That the recent dry season had a very detrimental effect on the honey business was seen in the recent announcement of William Atchley, Upland bee man, to the effect that his company during the past year turned out only 40 tons of honey, or less than one-fourth the normal crop. Ordinarily, Mr. Atchley ships considerable quantities of honey to New York City, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other eastern cities, but the past year's crop fell so far below normal and the local demand was so heavy that there will be none of the product for shipment this season, he says.

Mr. Atchley is said to bear the distinction of being the largest individual producer of honey in California. He has been in the bee and honey business for more than forty years and still finds it a fascinating as well as a paying occupation. Formerly, in Texas, he devoted a great part of his time to the breeding of imported strains of queen bees and his success along this line was so great that his queens were in constant demand, not only throughout the United States, but in foreign countries as well.

When he located in Upland six years ago, he decided to devote his energies to the production of fine honey. Starting in a small way, the Atchley Company has grown until it has some 1400 colonies of bees scattered over the Southland as well as a modern extracting and packing plant in this city. During the busy season in May and June as many as five tons of honey are sometimes processed in a single day.

Mr. Atchley has specialized in a fine grade of orange honey, but also produces black and purple sage and wild buckwheat honey. The orange blossom, he says, has proven by far the most popular. The Upland bee man says that only in Southern California can pure orange-blossom honey be produced. In Florida, when the orange trees are in bloom, a wild plant which grows in the orchards is also in flower and the bees cannot be prevented from mixing the two, he declared. In addition to his other duties, Mr. Atchley has just entered into a two-year contract to serve as instructor in bee culture in the agricultural departments of Chaffey High School and Junior College at Ontario.

NEW POTATO CIRCULAR

STOCKTON.—New laurels have been added to those won by Frederick H. Rindge on his 1500-acre potato "patch" in the San Joaquin River Delta last fall, when the Southern California land owner broke the world's record for spud production on a single acre with a yield of 962 1-2 bushels. This achievement was celebrated on "Potato Day," held here in October. Final results in the digging of 100 acres in the best part of Mr. Rindge's great tract were recently announced. These, the findings of licensed surveyors, show that the average yield for the hundred acre plot was 46,353.35 pounds, or 772.56 bushels. Such a yield per acre has been obtained a few times on single acres, but it is phenomenal on so large a tract.

Banks May Take Over Farm Accounting

BAKERSFIELD.—Proposing to establish a novel plan in farm accounting in Kern county in 1925, Farm Adviser L. W. Taylor will ask the banks to take over the job of keeping books for the farmers. Owing to manifold duties on the farms it is notorious that the important job of accounting is neglected. So the thought has come to the farm adviser, "why worry the farmers with a job which the bankers are natural adepts in handling?" The bankers will be invited to install accounting departments, to accommodate their farmer clients.

In co-operation with the banking officials, Mr. Taylor hopes to work out such a system of farm accounting in the county in the near future. Each bank where the farmer keeps his deposit, and where he may be financed, will be interested and it is said that much rivalry may be anticipated in the accounting service. Use of the checking account exclusively, in which each check will contain an inventory of things for which it is expended, will be a feature of the system.

Experts in farm accounting to whom the plan has been suggested have expressed enthusiasm over the proposal.

Pecans Finding Favor With Ranchers

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—Fourteen years ago, Thomas Hall, a Phoenix fruit grower, bought some seed pecans that cost him about one cent each. In 1924 one of the resultant trees produced 235 pounds of nuts, about 45 to the pound, that sold at $1 a pound. In 1923 the yield was 157 pounds and sold at 45 cents; in 1922 it was 103 pounds and in 1921, 94 pounds. The high price last season was for seed. The Hall family is putting out 35,000 nuts in a nursery for future operations.

Large numbers of trees have been bought in Texas and California, while two carloads of budded pecan trees are on the way from Florida. Many farmers plan to substitute pecans for cottonwoods, umbrellas, eucalypts and ash, on their ranches, since the nut trees will grow under like conditions, doing especially well along ditch banks. They furnish good shade in summer and are bare in winter.

Dates are also being planted to some extent under the same conditions as pecans, as ditch bank revenue producers, with an unusual degree of success attending the growth of palms from seeds. Approved offshoots are eagerly bought, at good prices. Much of the date crop during the late season was sold by farmers at the roadside. Late offerings in the city brought from 40 to 70 cents a packed pound.

A PIQUANT JELLY FRUIT

commercial plantings have been tried, and it is not at all likely that such ventures would be successful.

FRUIT VARIATIONS

The fruits of the tropical or lemon guava, as it is commonly known, vary in size, shape, color of skin, color of flesh and flavor to a marked degree, and because of this great variation, several have been considered separate species and considerable confusion has arisen. They are generally conceded now to belong to but the one species. In size, the fruit varies from one to four inches in diameter, and in shape from round to pear shape, the latter form being known as the pear guava in some places. The flesh may be white to red in color. The fruit is eaten fresh, served sliced, cooked, or made up into pastry and pies. Its most extensive use is for the making of guava jelly, characterized by the peculiar and altogether individual musky flavor possessed by the fruit. The quality of muskiness varies greatly in different types. In some it is so strong that it is objectionable. Another product according to Wilson Popenoe, United States Department of Agriculture explorer, who has spent much time in the study of this fruit in the tropics, is a thick jam, used extensively in Brazil and in the West Indies.

The Strawberry Guava.

As an ornamental the lemon guava can be used to advantage in gardens in the mildest parts of Southern California. It requires no special cultural care and no pests attack it seriously here. In Hawaii and other parts of the world it is one of the favorite host plants of the dreaded Mediterranean fruit fly. The plants are grown from seed, though they do not come true to the extent that is common with the strawberry guava. The best sorts are propagated by budding.

The Lemon Guava.

In addition to the two different guavas discussed, several other species have been introduced into California, particularly by the late Dr. E. O. Fenzi (Franceschi) of Santa Barbara, but these have been too tender for extensive planting and are not superior to those now grown.

The agricultural outlook in the United States has not been so bright in years as it is at this time.

Labor-Saving Devices Interest Growers

STOCKTON.—The Henning tract, a 2700-acre island in the San Joaquin delta, owned by Zuckerman Bros., is considered one of the best handled holdings in the entire delta region, and the methods used by Roscoe Zuckerman, the manager, are studied by many other growers. His operations are a good example of working land to the limit, but at the same time keeping it at a high productivity standard, for he returns to the land at least a portion of what has been taken out by each crop. He is an expert in crop rotation and fertilization, having made a real study of both. He practices careful selection of seed for his crops, grades his products carefully, controls the weeds that are such a menace in the delta and keeps books on everything. Incidentally, in managing a big ranch planted to potatoes, corn, onions and other crops, he has found time to perfect agricultural appliances that have been wonderful labor-savers in his own operations and which have attracted wide attention.

Mr. Zuckerman, who hails from Los Angeles, is something of a mechanical genius. Two inventions he worked out last year were of particular interest to all delta growers. One was a mechanical outfit which picks up, grades and sacks onions and the other a machine which picks up and sacks potatoes. With both he has cut down the labor demand appreciably, an item of importance in a district where much of the work must necessarily be done by hand. Onions, for instance, must be set out by hand and weeded by hand and the common practice is to pull them and sack them by hand.

Last year his new onion outfit, the outcome of five years experimenting, enabled fifteen men to accomplish what it would take 100 men to accomplish under ordinary circumstances. A crew of men is turned loose in the field to pull up the onions and leave them in windrows on the ground to cure. Then, instead of sending the men back to sack the onions, Mr. Zuckerman sends in a mechanical loader which runs along the windrow picking up the onions and dumping them into a cart. This loading outfit operates on the same principal as a potato digger with its continuous belt, conveying the onions from the ground to an elevation from which they drop into the cart. The outfit is pulled by a light tractor.

The two-wheeled cart attached behind the loader and into which the onions drop is so designed that a tractor can easily be attached to it to haul it away when it is filled. Another cart is at once pushed in place. It takes but three men to complete this part of the harvesting operation. One man drives the tractor pulling the loader, another keeps the loader running smoothly and the third operates the tractor which handles the loaded carts.

Mr. Zuckerman has also devised an outfit that will grade and sack over [illegible] sacks of onions a day and which requires less than a dozen operators. Four different grades are used. The onions are dumped from the carts into large bins from which they are fed onto a cleated belt carrier and conveyed to the top of the machine. From off the conveyer the onions start rolling downward into the grading bins, which are automatically kept shaking. By the time the onions reach the bottom they are ready to sack. Onions of various sizes fall through the slats and are automatically graded. Chaff also falls through leaving the onions clean. The inventor says the outfit turns out a uniform grade that is free from all foreign material. Such a product commands a better price on the market, he pionts out.

Mr. Zuckerman is still working on his potato digging and sacking outfit, although it has been successfully demonstrated. Under the common practice potatoes are now automatically dug, but are dropped on the ground to be picked up and sacked by a large crew of men. Mr. Zuckerman's outfit will be arranged to handle the potatoes as they are dug, grading and sacking them and dropping the sacks off behind, much as a modern harvester handles grain. The practice will cut down the labor demand per digger about twenty men, it is declared.

No agricultural college has as yet announced whether it is worse to give good feed to scrub cows or scrub feed to good cows.

LAST YEAR'S CROP

The relative importance of the sixteen most valuable crops in California during the past two years is shown in the table that follows. (The value of cotton is for that grown only in California, taking no account of the crop from "below the line" in Lower California.)

Rank	1923 Crop	Value
1	Hay (tame)	$73,710,000
2	Oranges	48,200,000

	1923	11,000	204.00	2,244,000	Pounds	0.16	359,000

In the above table alfalfa seed is included in the figures for tame hay acreage. The cotton and cotton seed totals include the crop grown in the Lower California side of Imperial Valley, which is usually marketed through California channels. The sugarbeet valuation figures are also subject to revision, as final prices to the grower had not been fully determined at the date the table was prepared.

In the following table production and valuation data for all main fruit crops for 1924 and 1923 are given:

Crop		Production	Unit	Farm Value—December 1 Per Unit	Total
Apples	1924	7,370,000	Bushels	$ 1.22	$ 8,991,000

	1923	25,000	Tons	400.00	10,000,000

The table grape figures for 1924 in the above table include 180,000 tons of grapes of raisin varieties, while those for 1923 include 130,000 tons of raisin grapes.

The California crop report in full for 1924, including all available data on acreage, production and value of field and fruit crops, and statistics relative to livestock, will probably be published and ready for distribution during late February, Mr. Kaufman announces.

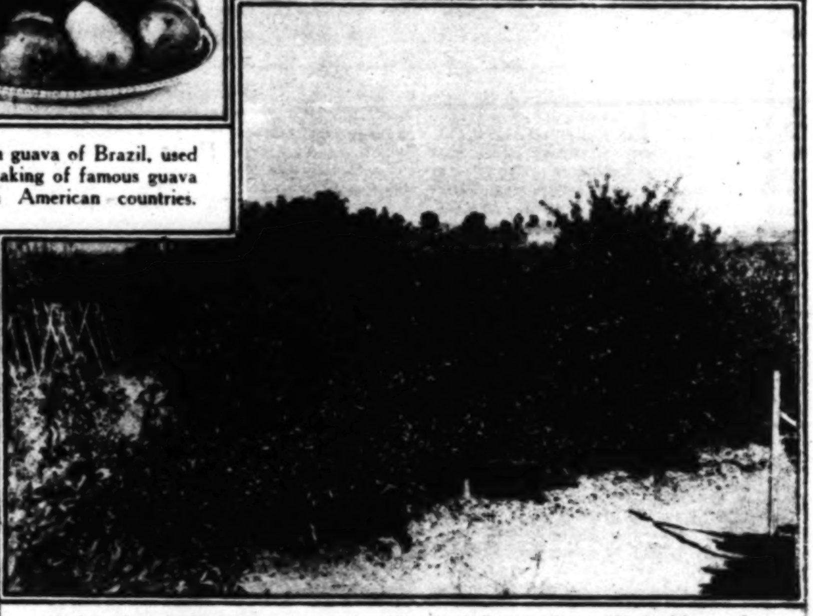
The Guava — An Old-Time California Garden Favorite

(Illustrating article by Knowles Ryerson in this issue)

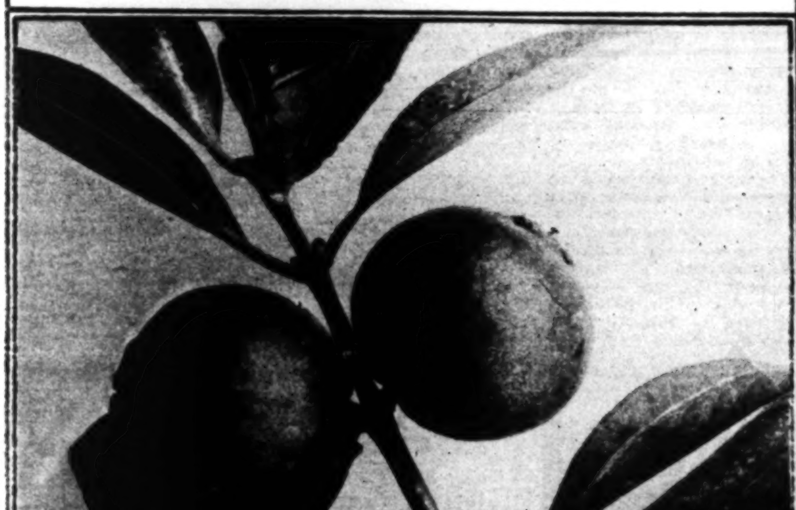
This fine lemon guava tree on the John Keith place in Hollywood is one of the largest, if not the largest, in Southern California.

The old guava planting of S. C. French, near San Diego. It comprises five acres of twenty-year-old trees.

The large lemon guava of Brazil, used extensively in making of famous guava jelly of South American countries.



Hedge of strawberry guavas on the W. A. Sallmon place, Chula Vista, San Diego county. The guava is admirably suited for this purpose.



A yellow form of the strawberry guava, which is grown to a limited extent as an ornamental, but which is not found on the markets.

What Happens When the Mountains Are Denuded by Fire

Water and power companies and cities and counties are spending millions constructing great works for storing water and preventing floods, whereas unmolested nature has provided effective means to both ends in the shape of brush and forest coverings for the hills and mountains. The photograph at the left shows a thick growth of scrub oak and brush on an unburned hillside. The thick mat of leaves that covers the ground is anchored to the soil by grass and other plants. When it rains the water soaks in and is absorbed into the soil before enough has accumulated to run off. Dry winds after the rains do not stir the air beneath the surface layer of leaves, consequently the ground remains damp a long time and there is little evaporation. Under such conditions the earth itself becomes a perfect reservoir. The picture at the right shows a hillside gashed and gutted with washes following the burning of its brush covering. Every rain runs off without being absorbed into the ground, as there is nothing to hold back the water, while every freshet takes away its quota of soil.

At the left is shown a bit of valley land washed out by repeated freshets rushing down from fire-denuded slopes. No water is stored here and air admitted to the base of the strata bared by the constant washing away hastens the drying out process after each rain. The photograph at the right shows big gulches in the making. There is no hope of keeping soil in place after destructive brush fires. The fool who tosses lighted matches and cigarettes into tinder-dry brush, like the imbecile who leaves a camp fire burning in a forest area, could never possibly receive punishment commensurate with the actual enormity of his crime. The rains of the present winter, however generous they may be, cannot be of the benefit they might have been but for the destructive and uncalled-for forest and brush fires of the past summer and fall.

Landslides as well as floods follow in the wake of mountain fires.

Ledge of rock torn away by floods following disastrous fire in mountains.

Every Orchard Needs to be Plowed

Keeping orchards healthy by the proper use of a good plow is the time-proved method. Good plowing feeds the soil with cover crops, banishes mice and insects, kills weeds and conserves moisture.

Do the Job Right—With These John Deere Plows

Only 26 inches high when plowing six inches deep and only 37 inches wide, they work under the low limbs up close to the row.

Hitch of each is widely adjustable for offsetting the plow. (Note this hitch feature, also narrow wheel base, in views at left and right.) Stiff hitch tends to hold plow steady when offset.

Both plows have unusual clearance for handling cover crops; simple, positive power lift, sturdy construction, and they pull unusually light.

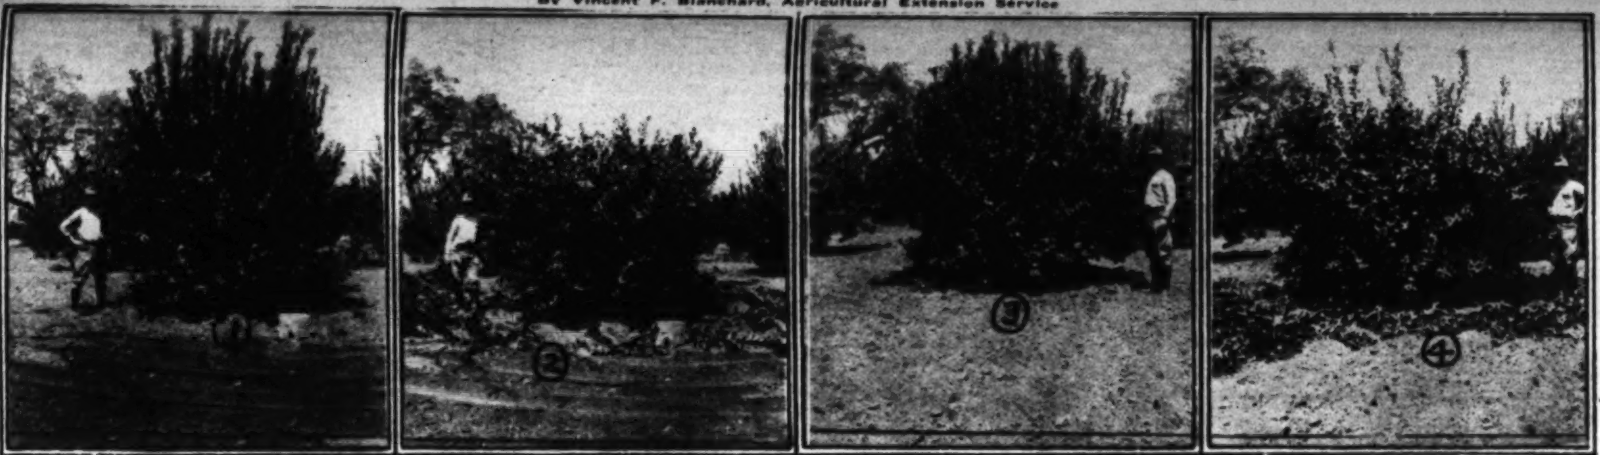
Changing from Severe to Light Pruning of Lemons

By Vincent F. Blanchard, Agricultural Extension Service



The pictures on this page illustrate the method advocated by the Agricultural Extension Service of Los Angeles county for changing lemon trees over from the "heading back" system to the "thinning" system. The trees are in a pruning plot on the Azusa Foothill Ranch at Azusa and have been pruned by V. F. Blanchard (formerly of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau, and now Farm Adviser of Ventura county) and M. B. Rounds, assistant Farm Adviser for Los Angeles county, and formerly superintendent of the big Azusa citrus holding. No. 1 has been pruned each year by cutting back the tops. The picture shows the vegetative shoots produced in the top following such cutting. No. 2 is the same tree after being pruned by the "heading-back" system on May 4, 1923. No. 3 is a tree that prior to May, 1923, was pruned by the "heading-back" system. No. 4 is the same tree after the first treatment in the process of changing over from the "heading-back" to the "thinning" system. Shoots on the main leaders have been left, all the others being removed.

ALMOST from the beginning of the lemon industry in California, it has been a practice to prune the trees severely, and it has only been in recent years that lemon growers have begun to change over to a more moderate system of pruning. There are, however, still many thousands of acres of lemons in California that are pruned too severely. During the past seven years the Agricultural Extension Service staff of Los Angeles county has given many field demonstrations on pruning of lemons to encourage growers to prune more moderately. Test and demonstration plots have been maintained during that time to show the importance of not pruning too severely.

In University of California Bulletin No. 363, entitled, "The Pruning of Citrus Trees in California," by Robert W. Hodgson, there are three paragraphs under the title of "Physiological Considerations," that set forth clearly certain of the principles involved in pruning. If these principles were better understood by growers and pruners, there would be less butchery in lemon orchards today. Here is what Mr. Hodgson says:

"It is a general axiom of plant physiology that those factors, climatic and otherwise, which favor vegetative growth are in the main antagonistic to fruit production. This principle has long been recognized, although until quite recently it was but poorly understood. Practical applications of this principle are many and varied. Thus it is the common observation that plants excessively luxuriant in growth set fruit but sparsely; in warm, humid climates trees and vines frequently grow to great size and have much foliage but bear little or no fruit; severe winter pruning of the type which favors a vegetation response is usually followed by decreased fruit production.

"On the other hand, it is equally true that those conditions which in general act as a check to vegetative growth, increase the tendency to fruit production. A decrease in water supply may accentuate the fruit-bearing tendency; certain types of summer pruning tending to check vegetative growth appear to favor fruit production. The chief function of life is reproduction and fruit trees seem to be no exception to the rule. It appears that as long as conditions favor vegetative growth the reproductive tendency is but little expressed, but that when conditions change, becoming less favorable to vegetative growth, the reproductive tendency becomes more and more apparent.

"Other things being equal, the amount of fruit produced depends on a relation which exists between those factors favorable to vegetative growth and those conditions favoring fruit production. This equilibrium varies considerably for the same variety in different localities and also from season to season in the same district. Where no artificial interruptions occasioned by man or other agencies intervene, the season fluctuation in equilibrium between these two opposing sets of factors is reflected in the amount of crop produced."

Cutting back the tops of lemon trees has the effect of forcing the trees into vegetative growth at the expense of fruit production. Much of the energy of the tree is wasted in the production of top growth which is later cut off.

It is far more desirable to so train a tree that there is a minimum amount of top removed, to moderately open up the tree to enable sunlight to penetrate to a maximum of foliage and to remove branches out of place. Such a method of pruning results in a minimum of stimulation of vegetative growth, and yet there are more leaves actually produced for the manufacture of plant food, with a consequent effect in increasing fruit production. It also has the effect of securing a better distribution of fruitwood, thus increasing the total fruit-producing area of the tree.

If trees in the same grove are pruned from the beginning by the two systems of pruning mentioned, it will be found that those trees pruned by the thinning system will produce paying crops much earlier in life than those with the tops cut back each year. That is an important factor in establishing an orchard, as it reduces the cost of bringing an orchard into bearing.

It is really a simple and easy process to establish a lemon orchard by the thinning system. The procedure is to refrain from using the pruning shears except for the removal of interfering branches and water sprouts, during the first three or four years. Occasionally a branch becomes long and spindly and should be shortened in to a lateral branch. Lower branches should not be removed during the first three years, unless they came in contact with the ground. These are needed to manufacture plant food and aid in developing the tree. The time to remove them is when the tree becomes so large that branches above tend to shade them.

It is desirable with the thinning system to train up four to five main limbs or leaders. An excess number of leaders results in too great a diversion of growth with weak limbs and too dense a tree.

It was mentioned that there are still thousands of acres of lemon trees pruned by the cutting-back system. There is, therefore, a problem in changing trees trained in that way over to the thinning system. Several mehods have been tried for accomplishing this, come of which have proved very satisfactory, while others have not been so convincing.

The method used very successfully by the Agricultural Extension Service men in Los Angeles county is as follows: After a lemon tree which has been pruned by cutting back its top made its season's growth with the production of vigorous, vegetative shoots in the top, select the main limbs which seem to be the most desirable to be continued as framework leaders. Remove those main limbs which seem to be in excess. Remove all upright shoots in the top except one on each of the main leaders left. There should not be over six of these on a moderate-sized tree. Do not cut these shoots back, but allow them to remain until they develop lateral branches. If then they appear to be too long and weak, shorten them in to a good lateral branch. With With such a severe thinning out of these top shoots, sunlight can come in contact with all of those left, with a consequent stimulation of lateral-growth development.

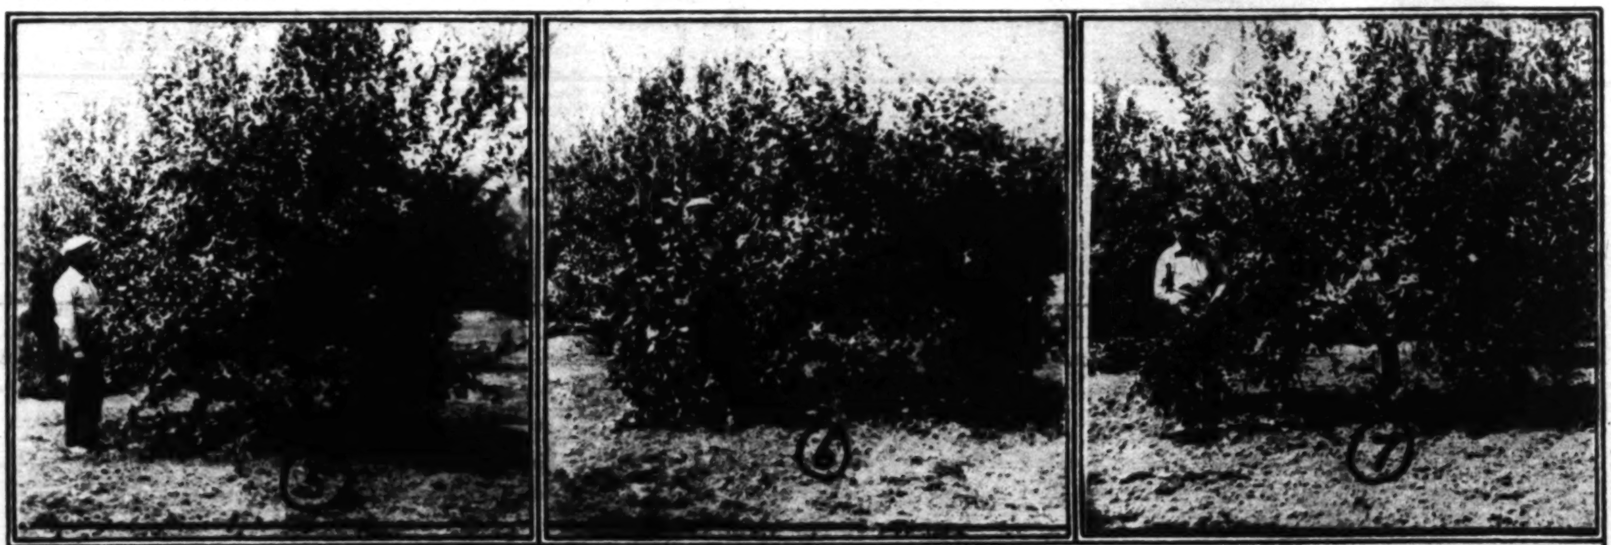
A mistake sometimes made in attempting to change from cutting back to the thinning system, is that too many shoots are left and that consequently they shade each other and there is but very little lateral branch development. By all means thin enough at first and it will save much trouble later on.

The shoots which are left to continue the main leaders should not be allowed to produce fruit too soon, as it tends to bend them over before they become sufficiently strong. It may even be necessary to cut some fruit off. This becomes necessary more with trees which are still below maximum size. With old trees it is desirable to let the shoots bend over with fruit as soon as possible.

It takes from one to two years for a tree to discontinue making excessive vegetative growth, and the grower should not expect the job to be completed in one operation. The grower also should not consider that his pruning bill is over when his trees regain their balance, as it then becomes necessary to practice a moderate thinning and removal of inefficient parts to stimulate the renewal of fruit wood and keep the inside foliage alive.

Plenty of oyster shell and grit helps keep the texture of egg shells good.

The man who can do the most generally gets farthest.



No. 5 is the same tree as Nos. 1 and 2 above, taken in May, 1924. Note that the vegetative top growth has again been produced. No. 6 is the same tree after pruning in the same month. Note the amount of wood removed. No. 7 is the tree (No. 4) which was changed over to the thinning system, taken a year later. The top has filled in, but there has been little additional length growth. The man is holding the prunings, which are very much less than those from the "headed-back" tree. During the third year's pruning branches which are too long will be shortened into laterals, and a small amount of thinning will be done.

Grain Grower Makes Lettuce Profitable Side Issue

BY GEORGE LAW

Mr. Buccheim watches his lettuce closely during the ripening stage.

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO.—For eighteen years Aaron Buccheim has made and lost money growing grain and some beans on an extensive area of leased land in the hills between Capistrano and El Toro. This is of course dry farming. Early experience as a wheat grower in Minnesota launched him naturally into grain growing when he moved his family to California. A few years ago he developed water for his sixty acres of choice land at Serra, three miles south of Capistrano, where he lives. Then, five years of home experimenting with lettuce suggested, in view of the big lettuce deals of recent years, that he go in for a slice of the Eastern money paid for winter salad. So he planted lettuce in the fall and winter of 1923. Just as this was ready for the market in the spring, Imperial lettuce went out and the price began to rise. The more he shipped the higher the price went, until finally, he says, he had netted around $20,000. It was rumored that his New York commission man had made $2 to Mr. Buccheim's one; at any rate, he sent Mr. Buccheim a neat bonus at the windup of the deal.

So it is quite understandable when we find this grain man again growing lettuce in the winter of 1924-25. He has a good deal to say about both lettuce and grain, and his discussions are invariably illuminating. Aaron Buccheim might be classed as a farmer of the old school. But if so, he is open to everything pertaining to better crops discovered and taught by the new school. He works hand in glove with the Orange county farm bureau, carrying on a big part of their experiment work with new types of grain. He follows the farm and market news regularly and thoroughly, either he or his son always being present when Uncle John tells the universe over KHJ what the California farmers and farmers elsewhere are doing and getting. Hence he is in position to plan his own operations accordingly; and the timely marketing factor is the secret of big money with such a crop as lettuce. We will look at his lettuce enterprise first.

Mr. Buccheim's home property lies in a very attractive cove looking out upon the sea. The cooler autumn weather enables him to plant lettuce earlier than Imperial growers dare plant it; also to keep on planting it for later maturity in the spring. He raises two crops of lettuce on the same land, one right after the other, and has it ripening at such intervals as he desires from early November until May. The main deal for the desert areas, Imperial and Salt River Valley both, occurs from December to the last of March.

Mr. Buccheim has found that lettuce planted early in September will mature in sixty-five days; planted early in October, it takes seventy days; November and December plantings require 100 days. His five years of experimenting in the home garden proved that New York Special (or Los Angeles Market) lettuce is the best variety for that region. But from May to September the weather is too warm for the making of good solid heads. Iceberg lettuce has been boosted as an all-year-'round head lettuce; but according to Mr. Buccheim this is an exaggeration; and for the coast he considers New York Special preferable; he says it makes larger heads and is susceptible to thicker cultivation. From twenty-one acres, in the spring of 1924, he harvested thirty-nine carloads. He says he counts on an average of one and one-half cars to the acre.

His cultural methods are not different from the usual practice. The seed is planted by a wheel seeder operated by hand. The furrows are 36 inches apart, and upon the ridges between, two rows of lettuce are planted 12 inches apart. The plants are ultimately thinned to 12 inches apart in each row. Irrigation and cultivation are kept up at suitable intervals. The only insurance against bitter lettuce is care in keeping it growing, and finally ripening, steadily. When the bright green begins to dull down the heads are beginning to quit growing, and the cutters are turned into the field. Old hoe heads, which have served a decade or more of bean hoeing, are straightened out and sharpened for use as cutters. The men who do the cutting, now experienced in the job, pick out the ripe heads by their dull color, rest one hand upon the head, and, if it is solid, snip it off with an easy thrust at the surface of the ground. Each man manages the double rows either side of a furrow, and the heads from two or three double rows are tossed into one furrow, to be picked up by the men following with the crates. The field has to be gone over several times at intervals of about a week. Some cull lettuce is always left, and this is fed to stock.

Crates are made on the spot from shook shipped down in quantities. The heads of lettuce are so big and hard that only three dozen can be packed in the field. But in the packing house which Mr. Buccheim has erected on the Santa Fe siding at Serra, a quarter of a mile away, the lettuce is sorted and repacked in paper-lined crates, four dozen to the crate. The cars are loaded, iced and started for their destination, which is usually New York, the same day the lettuce is cut. There are 320 crates to a car.

Mr. Buccheim has figured that the cost of producing his lettuce up to the harvest is $50 to $65 per acre, the variation being due to the labor factor. The men he has trained harvest the crop as efficiently, in all probability, as Japanese; but Mexican or American field hands new to the job are slow and run up the cost. Mr. Buccheim believes that lettuce or any other garden crop can be raised as well by American farmers as by Chinese and Japanese.

The area he has under irrigation from his private pumping plant is not through after it has raised two crops of lettuce. With the lettuce out of the way in April or early May, the land is rapidly put in shape for lima beans. The crop, carried rapidly along by plenty of water, makes an additional return at the rate of from fifteen to twenty sacks of limas per acre. The bean crop, moreover, acts as an excellent tonic to the land.

This irrigated area will be the limit of his bean activity, unless the rainy season produces eight inches or more of rain by the last of March, in which event he will plant 400 acres of land back in the hills to blackeyes. This dry-farmed crop of blackeyes is a means of utilizing and improving grain land during the summer fallow. That is to say, the land is sowed to grain every other year, being left fallow for a year between, unless the rainfall is sufficient for a crop of beans. The beans are of course grown in rows about 30 inches apart and their effect upon the fertility of the land is such, Mr. Buccheim says, that he can trace the rows the following year in the taller lines of grain. A wavy effect is produced, with the grain about six inches taller where the beans were grown.

Although not a big producer of beans, Mr. Buccheim figures importantly in the Orange county bean harvest by means of his threshing outfit, which is the biggest in the county. The threshing machine turns out 1500 sacks a day, keeping eighteen wagons and sixty-two men rustling.

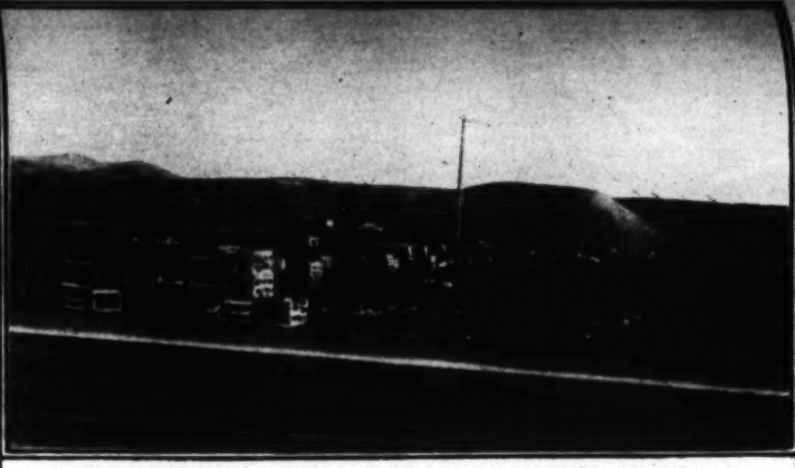
Of grain he expects to have in 2250 acres this season. Before the 1st of December 1000 acres had already been planted to "4000" barley a variety improved upon the old common. Another thousand acres will go into twenty different kinds with which he is experimenting for the Farm Bureau and the Agricultural Extension Service, while 250 acres are being planted to Early Bart and Defiance wheat. Of these wheats Mr. Buccheim says, Early Bart, the most popular with the mills, will often make a crop on scant moisture when barley won't. Defiance is a newer experiment in the county.

In 1923, from ten acres planted to Oregon Select Mariout barley at the rate of 100 pounds of seed to the acre, 253 sacks were threshed. He is planting back 200 acres with this seed, while neighbors are planting the rest to fifty acres. His newest experiment will be with 1000 pounds of Hero barley planted to ten acres.

The grain business last year was a failure. With only about five and one-half inches of rain in the Capistrano region, few of the fields made crops and most of the grain men lost money. In Mr. Buccheim's opinion uncertainty is the keynote of the dry-farming industry. One year, about 1910, he made lots of money; sold 48,000 sacks at $1,30 F. O. B. on the flatcars. But during the past seven years he has lost many thousands, he declares, dry-framing grain.

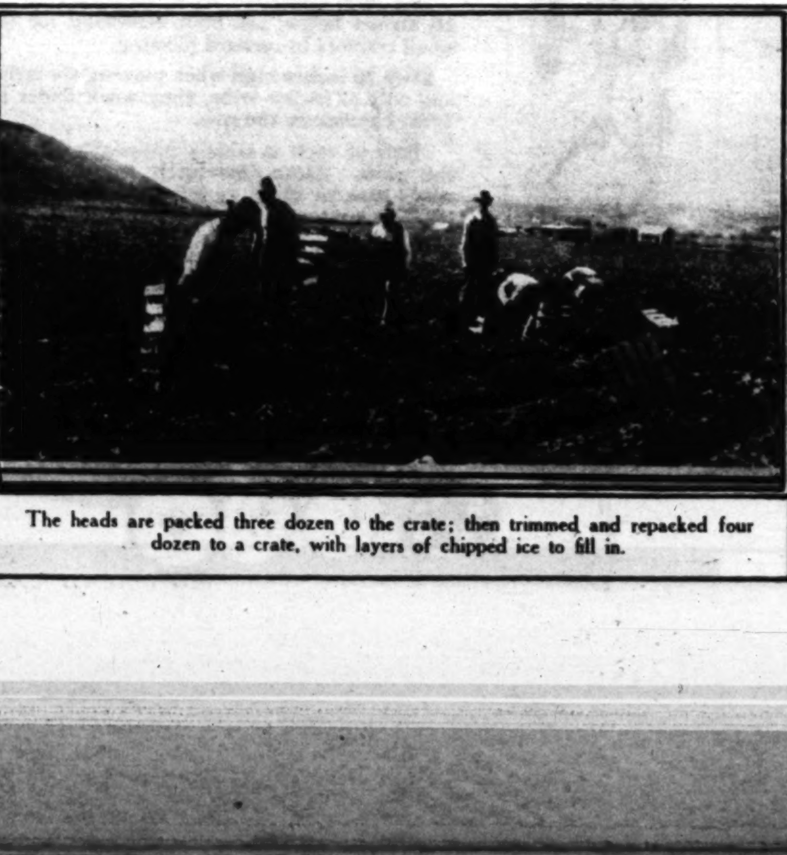
"For one thing," he says, "the dry farmers can't compete with the grain growers in the desert, who have plenty of water for irrigation. These grain growers in Imperial Valley, the Salt River Valley in Arizona, and in Southern Nevada and Utah can pasture their grain fields during the winter and then make ten to twenty sacks per acre earlier in the spring than the dry farmers can; and even with the cost of the water, they can grow the crop for less money. The dry farmers, even on the best level land, can't expect to do anything without at least eight inches of rain, and on the hilly land the cost of production is nearly doubled. Then there's the deduction of one-fourth for the landlord. The dry farmer has to farm at least 600 acres in order to make a living, and his investment for equipment alone is $6000 at the very lowest figure. He had better take the money and make a first payment on a small irrigated ranch."

Mr. Buccheim added that he knew a number of men who had been made paupers by dry-farming. So far as his own enterprises in dryfarming go, they are only a part of his farming activity. During the eighteen years he has been in the business he has accumulated a great deal of machinery and is equipped to make all his own implements, thus greatly reducing his expenses. But he has no faith in dry farming in Southern California as an industry which can stand alone. Sooner or later it is bound to ruin a man, he believes. The only hope for the great tracts of land which can now be used only for that purpose is, in Mr. Buccheim's opinion, to wait until water can be developed for them, when they can be subdivided into small irrigated ranches capable of supporting the people who live upon them.



Glimpses of Buccheim Ranch, near San Juan Capistrano, where lettuce and lima beans are grown on irrigated land and grain on the dry-farmed areas.

The cutters go first, piling the heads from five rows in one trench. The packers follow



The heads are packed three dozen to the crate; then trimmed and repacked four dozen to a crate, with layers of chipped ice to fill in.

Will Visit Station

A special trip of Los Angeles county citrus growers to the Citrus Experiment Station at Riverside is being arranged by the citrus growers' department of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau and the Agricultural Extension Service for Friday, January 23. Special emphasis will be placed upon the study of the fertilizer plots at the station.
